Reissiger, Karl Gottlieb (n. Wittenberg, 1798–1859, Dresden). Saxon conductor and voluminous composer, pupil chiefly of Schicht and Winter, from 1821 bringing out operas at Vienna and Munich, in 1824 visiting Italy as government-agent to study music-education (reporting a plan for a conservatory at Berlin), then teacher at the Institut für Kirchenmusik in Berlin, in 1827 founder of the conservatory at The Hague, from 1826 Marschner's successor as opera-conductor at Dresden and soon after Weber's successor as court-director. His extreme facility as composer was not supported by originality or force. Wrote the operas Das Rockenweibchen (1821), Didone Abbandonata, 1823, Der Ahnenschatz, 1824, Yelva, 1827 (melodrama), Libella, 1828, Die Felsenmühle von Étalières, 1829, Turandot, 1835, Adèle de Foix, 1841, and Der Schiffbruch der Medusa, 1846, the oratorio David, 1850, 10 masses, Psalms, motets, other church-music, popular songs (akin to those of Abt), a symphony, an overture, concertos for clarinet and for flute, 2 quintets, 14 quartets, over 25 piano-trios, sonatas for violin, for 'cello, for clarinet and for piano (2 and 4 hands), piano-rondos, variations, waltzes, etc. His brother Friedrich August (1809–1883), in 1840–50 conductor at Christiania and then bandmaster in the Norwegian army, also composed in all forms. G.

Reissmann, August (Frankenstein, 1825–1903, Berlin). Industrious Silesian writer on music-history and biography, trained chiefly by Mosewius, Baumgart, E. L. Richter, Lüstner and Kahl, with much contact with Liszt, living from 1852 at Halle, in 1863–80 and also later at Berlin, from 1880 at Leipzig and Wiesbaden. In 1866–74 he lectured at the Stern Conservatory. Ph.D. of Leipzig Univ. in 1875. Author of Von Bach bis Wagner, 1861, Gesch. d. deutschen Lied, 1861 (revised, 1874), Allgem. Gesch. d. Musik, 3 vols. 1863–65, Grundriss d. Musikgeschichte, 1865, Die königliche Hochschule für Musik in Berlin, 1875 (polemic), Musikgeschichte in 12 Vorlesungen, 1877, Zur Aesthetik d. Tonkunst, 1879, Illustrierte Gesch. d. deutschen Musik, 1880, Die Oper in ihrer kunst- u. kulturhistorische Bedeutung, 1885, Die Hausmusik, 1884, Die Musik als Hilfsmittel d. Erziehung, 1887, Dichtkunst u. Tonkunst in ihrem Verhältnis zu einander, n. d., Brennende Fragen auf d. Gebiete d. Tonkunst, 1889, Die Kunst u. d. Gesellschaft, 1892, Was wird aus unserer deutschen Musik, 1899, biographies of Schumann (1865, 3d ed. 1879), Mendelssohn (1867, 3d ed. 1893), Schubert (1873), Haydn (1879), Bach (1881), Handel (1882), Gluck (1882), Weber (1883) and Lux (1888), textbooks in singing (1853, based on Sieber), general theory (1864) and composition (1866), with an elementary method for piano and singing (1876). He also did useful work in issuing the 3d ed. of Gathy's Lexikon (1871) and in completing that of Mendel (vols. vii-xi and Supplement 1877–83), besides making a brief Handlexikon (1882). Wrote the operas Gudrun, 1871, Die Bürgermeisterin von Schorndorf, 1880, and Das Gralspiel, 1895, the ballet Der Blumen Rache, 1887, the choral melodrama König Drosselbart, 1886, the dramatic scenes Drusus and Lorelei, the oratorio Wittekind, a symphony, a violin-concerto, a suite for violin and orchestra, 2 violin-sonatas and many smaller works, besides an edition of Bach's St. John Passion. Sketch by Göllerich, 1884. G.

Reiter, Ernst (Wertheim, 1814–1875, Basel). Badense violinist, from about 1835 teacher in the Würzburg Conservatory, from 1839 conductor at Strasburg and from 1841 director at Basel. Wrote the opera Die Fee von Elverhoe, 1865, the oratorio Das neue Paradies, 1845, 2 string-quartets, a violin-sonata and many songs. Memoir by Nef, 1907 (in Basler Nachrichten).

Reiter, Josef (Braunau, 1862). Popular Austrian vocal composer, self-taught, from 1886 school-teacher in Vienna, in 1908–11 director of the Mozarteum in Salzburg and then in Vienna again. Has written the operas Der Bundschuh, 1892, Klopstock in Zürich, 1894, Der Totentanz, 1908, Ich aber preise die Liebe, 1912, and Der Tell, 1917, the effective choral works Meine Göttin, Freie Kunst, Daheim, Liebesfrühling, Bergwanderung, Hymne in memory of Schiller (1905), Mondnacht, etc., a Requiem, many choruses and songs, over 20 ballades, the melodrama Löwenritt, 5 string-quartets and some orchestral waltzes. He has also prepared versions of Handel's Messiah and Hercules with full orchestra. In 1899 a Reiter-Verein was formed in Vienna. Sketch by Morold, 1904.

Rékay, Ferdinand (Pest, 1870). Hungarian composer of the operas A Nagy-Idai Czigányok, 1906, and Frater Georg, 1911, the suite Im Walde, 1901, Ungarische Ouvertüre, 1903, 2 string-quartets, a Theme and Variations, etc.

Reilstab, Heinrich Friedrich Ludwig (Berlin, 1799–1860, do.), son of the following. Noted Prussian novelist and critic, pupil of Berger and Klein, from 1823 active in Berlin, where from 1826 he was editor of the Vossische Zeitung, with much influential musical criticism. In 1830–41 he also edited the Iris, besides writing for several other journals. His satires on Sontag and Spontini in 1826–27 aroused much debate and even led to his arrest and imprisonment. From 1823 he published a series of musical novels. In his Aus meinem Leben, 2 vols. 1861, and Gesammelte Werke, 24 vols. 1860–61, are numerous sketches and critiques of value, some of which had been separately published earlier. See extracts edited by Kossak, 1846, and essay by Plengert, 1918. G.

Reilstab, Johann Karl Friedrich (Berlin, 1759–1813, do.). Prussian printer at Berlin, pupil of Agricola and Fasch, from about 1780 active in music-printing and publishing, from 1783 maintaining the pioneer musical lending-library and for a time from 1787 fostering a concert-society, besides writing some critiques for the Vossische Zeitung. His business was ruined by the French invasion of 1806, and he then turned to teaching. Wrote considerable instrumental and vocal music, an essay on the union of speech and song (1785), an elementary piano-method (1790) and a retort to Reichardt's remarks about Berlin music (1789). G.

Reményi, Eduard (Heves, 1830–1898, San Francisco). Eminent Hungarian (Jewish) violinist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory by Böhm, in 1848 forced to leave Austria because of revolutionary activity and to begin a wandering life (in 1851 visited America). In 1853 he had a short contact with Brahms and fruitful assistance from Liszt. In 1854 a trip to England led to his being named violinist to the Queen and from 1860, when he was amnestied in Austria, he held a similar honor there. From 1865 he began a strenuous concert-career that ultimately took him to all parts of the world, with considerable sojourns at Paris and in America. Everywhere his astonishing technique, his temperamental intensity and his command of the whole range of violin-literature secured applause. But he was eccentric, vain and apt to indulge in mannerisms. Yet, like Ole Bull, he had extraordinary power over audiences. Wrote a concerto, some pieces and fine transcriptions from Bach, Schubert, Field, Chopin, etc. Memoir by Kelley and Upton, 1906. G.

Remmert, Martha (n. Glogau, 1854). Able Silesian pianist, pupil of Kullak, Tausig and Liszt, from 1878 becoming widely known throughout Europe and finally establishing her own school in Berlin. She is an authorized representative of Liszt's methods and holds distinctions from the Prussian court.

Rémusat [Rémuzat], Jean (Bordeaux, 1815–1880, Shanghai). Noted French flutist, pupil of Tulou, from about 1840 employed at the Queen's Theatre in London and from 1853 at the Lyrique in Paris. Wrote various flute-pieces and a method.

Remy, Alfred (Elberfeld, 1870). Able Rhenish critic and writer, educated in New York in philology and literature, but also trained musically. Besides teaching at several institutions, lecturing on music-history and giving lecture-recitals with his wife, he has written critiques for papers, articles for the International Encyclopedia and summaries for its Year-Book and prepared the 3d ed. of Baker's Dict. of Musicians, 1919. A.

Rémy, W. A. See Mayer, Wilhelm.

Rénard, Marie [name originally Pözl] (Graz, 1863). Styrian operatic soprano (soubrette rôles), appearing in 1882 at Graz, from 1883 at Prague, from 1885 at Berlin and in 1888–1901 at Vienna, then marrying Count Kinsky and retiring.

Renaud, Albert (Paris, 1855). French composer, pupil of Franck and Delibes, for a time organist at St-François-Xavier in Paris and critic for La Patrie. Has written the operas À la Houzarde, 1891, and Aladin, 1891 (fairy-tale), 2 ballets, an operetta, music for Sardou's Don Quichotte (1895), some works for orchestra, for organ and for piano, a mass and choral pieces.

Renaud, Maurice Arnold (Bordeaux, 1862). Eminent French operatic bass-baritone, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1883 at the Brussels Opera, in 1890–91 at the Opéra-Comique in Paris, from 1891 at the Opéra, in 1906–10 at the Metropolitan, New York, and since then mostly at London and Paris. His versatility and intelligence make him impressive in all kinds of rôles, serious or comic. G.

Rendano, Alfonso (n. Cosenza, 1853). Gifted Italian pianist, trained at the Naples and Leipzig Conservatories, from 1872 favorably known in London and later at Paris, in Germany and throughout Italy. Has written the opera Consuelo, 1902, and salon-pieces. G.

Renner, Adam. 16th C.

Renner, Josef (Landshut, 1832–1895, Ratisbon). Bavarian choral conductor, pupil of his father, Mettenleiter and Proske, in 1858-92 teacher and leader at the Aula Scholastica in Ratisbon, director of several choruses and in 1865-82 head of his own music-school. He formed a Madrigal Quartet and for it edited several collections of early German madrigals and of later part-songs. Wrote masses, Requiem, motets, an organ-suite and other pieces.

Renner, Josef (Ratisbon, 1868), son of the above. Able Bavarian organist and church-musician, pupil of Rheinberger, since 1893 cathedral-organist at Ratisbon and from 1896 teacher at the Music School, gaining the title of royal professor in 1912. Has written an organ-sonata, 2 organ-suites, trios, preludes, variations, many masses, motets and other choir-music (partly a cappella), men's choruses, songs, the singspiel Josef Haydn, etc. Author of essays on Moderne Kirchenmusik u. Choral and on Rheinbergers Messen, 1909.

Rensburg, Jacques E. (Rotterdam, 1846-1900?, Bonn). Dutch 'cellist, pupil of Giese, D. de Lange and Hegar, from 1868 in the Gürzenich Orchestra at Cologne and teacher at the Conservatory, in 1872-74 successful in concert-tours, but then forced to give up the virtuoso-career. After 1880 he was in business at Bonn. Wrote a 'cello-concerto, a Konzertstück for 'cello and orchestra and some pieces.

Respighi, Ottorino (Bologna, 1879). Italian violinist and composer, trained at the Bologna Liceo, from 1913 professor there and later at Rome. Has written the operas Rè Enzo, 1905, Semirâma, 1910, Maria Vittoria, and Belfagor, 1923, the puppet-play The Sleeping Princess, 1923, the scena Aretusa, the symphonic poems Fantane di Roma and Primavera, 1923, an orchestral suite, a suite for strings and organ, a Nocturno and Burlesca for orchestra, a piano-concerto, 2 string-quartets, violin-, organ- and piano-pieces, besides arrangements for violin, strings and organ of works by Bach and Vivaldi and an edition of Monteverdi's Lamento d' Arianna.

Ress, Luise (Frankfort, 1843-1907, Berlin). From 1872 a famous singing-teacher in Berlin, forming a long series of fine operatic artists.

Restori, Antonio (Pontremoli, 1859). Since 1897 professor of Romanic languages at Messina University, author of Notazione Musicale dell' Antichissima Alba Bilingua, 1892, Musica Alegra di Francia nei Secoli XII e XIII, 1893, La Musique de Chansons Françaises, 1895 (in Petit de Juleville's Histoire), and many other studies in the period of the Troubadours, etc.

Reszké, Édouard and Jean. See De Reszké.

Reubke, Adolf (Halberstadt, 1805-1875, do.). Saxon organ-maker at Hausneindorf (n. Quedlinburg), establishing a business in which from 1860 he was joined by his son Emil (1836-1885), the later proprietor being Ernst Röver. They built the organs in Magdeburg Cathedral, in the Jacobikirche there.

Reubke, Julius (Hausneindorf, 1834-1858, Pillnitz), son of Adolf above. Gifted Saxon pianist, pupil of Kullak, Marx and Liszt, writing a piano-sonata, other piano-pieces, an organ-sonata on Psalm 94 and some songs.

Reubke, Otto (Hausneindorf, 1842-1913, Halle), son of Adolf above. Saxon conductor, trained at the Stern (Berlin) and Leipzig Conservatories, in 1867-1910 conductor of the Franz-Singakademie at Halle and from 1892 also music-director at the University. He edited several works by Franz.

Reuchsel, Amédée (Lyons, 1875), son of the following. French organist and composer, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory and of Fauré, for many years organist at St. Denis Cathedral. In 1908 he won the Prix Chartier for chamber-music. Has written the opera La Moisson Sanglante, 1913, the oratorio Daniel, a sextet for piano and wood-wind, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, a Poème Héroïque for 'cello and orchestra, a Fantaisie Appassionata for clarinet, a Ballade for oboe, 3 organ-sonatas and other pieces, piano-works and about 40 men's choruses, besides editing the Conservatory solfeggi and a text-book in theory.

Reuchsel, Léon (Vesoul, 1840). French church-musician, pupil of Batiste, long director of the Cécilienverein at Lyons, in 1861-1915 organist at St.-Bonaventure and composer of masses, motets, the cantatas Cécile et Valérie and À l'Éternel, etc.

Reuchsel, Maurice (Lyons, 1880), son of the preceding. French violinist, pupil of his father and the Paris Conservatory, from about 1900 touring in France, England and Italy and since 1903 editor of the Express Musical at Lyons. Has written a Suite dans le Style Ancien for strings, a Konzertstück, the suites Italienne and Romantique and a Poème Élégiue for violin and orchestra, a string-quartet, a string-trio, a violin-sonata, organ-pieces, motets, Psalms and songs. Author of La Musique à Lyon, 1903, L'École Classique du Violon, 1905, and Un Violoniste en Voyage, 1908.

Reuling, Ludwig Wilhelm (Darmstadt, 1802-1879, Munich). Hessian conductor, pupil of Rinck, Seyfried and E. Förster, in 1830-54 active at the Kärnthnertheater in Vienna, writing nearly 40 operas and operettas, 17 ballets, etc., with overtures and chamber-music.

Reusner, Esajus (1636-1679). 17th C.

Reuss, August (n. Znaim, 1871). Able Moravian composer, pupil of Thuille, since 1903 living mostly in or near Munich. In 1906-07 he served as conductor at Augsburg and Magdeburg. Has written the opera Herzog Philipps Brautfahrt, 1909, an orchestral prologue to Hofmannsthal's Der Tor und der Tod, the symphonic poems Johannisnacht and Judith, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, the choral works Waldied, Weihnachtslied and Gotenzug, the melodramas Seegespens and Bergidyll, many beautiful songs (often with orchestra), men's choruses and piano-pieces.

Reuss, Eduard (New York, 1851-1911, Dresden). German-American teacher, educated in Europe, pupil of Krüger, Savard and Liszt, from 1880 active at Karlsruhe, from 1896 at Wiesbaden, where after 1899 he was head of the Conservatory, and from 1903 in the Dresden Conservatory. In 1885 he married the singer Luise Belce (see below) and in 1902-03 went with her to America. He was a Liszt enthusiast, publishing a fine biography (1898), Liszt's Lieder, 1906, articles in journals and an arrangement of his C min. Konzertsolo for piano and orchestra. A.

Reuss-Belce, Luise (Vienna, 1863). Eminent Austrian operatic soprano, pupil of Gänsbacher and Planck, from 1881 appearing at Karlsruhe (where in 1885 she married Ed. Reuss), in 1896-99 at Wiesbaden, in 1900 in London, in 1902-03 at the Metropolitan, New York, from 1903 in Dresden and after 1911 in charge of a school for Wagnerian interpretation at Berlin. Since 1882 she has been regularly engaged at Bayreuth, not only as one of the prominent singers, but as a sort of vocal and dramatic supervisor. In 1913 she was stage-manager for the festival performances at Nuremberg. She sang at the premières of d'Albert's Rubin (1893) and Schillings' Ingwelde (1894). Her repertory includes a wide range of works outside of the Wagnerian series.

Reuter, Florizel von (Davenport, Ia. 1893). American violinist, pupil of Max Bendix, Sauret, Thomson and Marteau, from about 1910 becoming widely known through tours in Europe and America, for a time during the war director of the Zurich Akademie and since 1918 active in Germany. Has written 3 operas, various orchestral pieces, 2 books of Rumanian dances and other violin-pieces and a Gesch. d. Solo-Violinliteratur, 1923.

Reutter, Georg (Vienna, 1656-1738, do.). Austrian organist and conductor, from 1686 organist at St. Stephen's in Vienna and in 1715-28 Fux' successor as choirmaster, besides in 1697-1703 playing the theorbo in the court-band and in 1700-30 being court-organist. Wrote choir-music and works for organ or clavier. G.

Reutter, Johann Adam Karl Georg (Vienna, 1708-1772, do.), son of the above. Noted Austrian organist and conductor, pupil of his father, in 1730 succeeding the latter as court-organist and also as choirmaster at St. Stephen's. In 1746 he became assistant-director at the court and finally held the place of chief. In 1740-49 the young Haydn was choirboy under him at St. Stephen's. Wrote over 30 operas and other stage-works, 9 oratorios, cantatas, masses, motets, etc., of no special value. See study by Stollbrock, 1892 (in Vierteljahrschrift). G.

Révész, Géza (Siófok, 1878). Able Hungarian physiological psychologist (Ph.D. 1905, Göttingen), in 1910-21 lecturer or professor at Pest University, then removing to Amsterdam. Author of numerous essays and monographs on problems in tone-psychology.

Rey, Frédéric Le. French composer of many light operas and operettas (1885-1900) at Rouen, Tours and Paris, including La Redingote, 1895, and Sœur Marthe, 1898.

Rey, Jean Baptiste (n. Montauban, 1734-1810, Paris). Able French conductor, trained at Toulouse, from 1751 choirmaster at Auch Cathedral, from 1754 theater-conductor successively at Toulouse, Montpellier, Marseilles, Bordeaux and Nantes, from 1776 Franceur's assistant as conductor at the Paris Opéra and in 1781 his successor, besides in 1781-85 directing the Concerts Spirituels, from 1779 being chamber-musician to Louis XVI, in 1795-1802 professor at the new Conservatory and after 1804 courts director under Napoleon. He was intimate with all the leading composers of the period and directed the initial performances of many important works by Piccini, Gluck, Paisiello, Grétry, etc. Wrote 2 short operas, some ballets, church-music, etc., besides completing Sacchini's Arvire et Evelina (1788) and supplying ballet-music for other operas. G.

Rey, Jean Baptiste (Tarascon, ?1760-1822?, Paris). French 'cellist, from 1795 engaged at the Paris Opéra. Author of text-books in harmony. Wrote 12 'cello-sonatas. G.

Reyer [Reyl], Louis Étienne Ernest (Marseilles, 1823-1909, n. Hyères). Eminent French composer, pupil of Mme. Farrenc (his aunt), from 1850 gradually pushing his way into high regard through the poetic quality of his genius, combined with marked skill in instrumentation. He early made his mark, also, as writer for various Paris papers, especially (from 1866) the Journal des Débats. In 1862 he entered the Légion d'Honneur and in 1876 the Académie, taking David's place. In many ways he is counted as the successor of Berlioz, though without the latter's tendency to extremes of effect. Wrote the operas Maître Wolfram, 1854 (short comedy), Sacountala, 1858 (ballet), La Statue, 1861 (his finest work), Érostrate, 1862, Sigurd, 1884, and Salammbô, 1890, the scena La Madeleine au Désert, 1874, the cantata Victoire, 1859, the symphonic and choral ode Le Sélam, 1850, the choruses L'Union des Arts, 1862, L'Hymne du Rhin, Le Chant du Paysan, Chœur des Buveurs and Chœur des Assiégés, some sacred music and many songs. His critical essays were collected as Notes de Musique, 1875. Memoirs by Jullien, 1909, and Roujon, 1911. G.

Reznicek, Emil Nikolaus von (Vienna, 1861). Eminent Bohemian-Austrian conductor and composer, pupil of W. Mayer (Remy) and the Leipzig Conservatory, from before 1885 theater-conductor at Gratz, Zurich, Stettin, Berlin, Jena, etc., from 1889 living at Prague, in 1896 for a time court-director at Weimar, in 1896-99 court-director at Mannheim, from 1901 settled at Berlin, where in 1902 he founded a series of orchestral concerts and from 1906 taught at the Scharwenka Conservatory, in 1907-08 also directing the Opera at Warsaw and the Philharmonic there as well, and in 1909-11 conductor of the Komische Oper at Berlin. Since 1920 he has taught at the Berlin Hochschule. Has written the operas (all to original texts) Die Jungfrau von Orleans, 1887, Satanella, 1888,

Emmerich Fortunat, 1889, Donna Diana, 1894, (his greatest success), Till Eulenspiegel, 1902 (comic), Eros und Psyche, 1917, and Ritter Blaubart, 1918, the operetta Die Angst vor der Ehe, 1914, music for Strindberg's Dream Play (1906), a Requiem (1894, for Schmeyskal), a festal mass (1898, for Franz Joseph's Jubilee), the choral works Der Sieger, 1914, and In Memoriam, 1916, a setting of Nietzsche's Ruhm und Ewigkeit for tenor and orchestra, 3 symphonies (Tragische, 1904, Ironische, 1905, and in D for small orchestra, 1919), 2 overtures (Lustspiel and Idyllische), the symphonic poems Peter Schlemihl, 1912, and Friede, eine Vision, 1915, orchestral suites in E min. and D, a Prelude and Fugue for orchestra, an Introduction and Valse-Caprice for violin and orchestra, Nachtstücke for 'cello, harp, 4 horns and strings (or orchestra), a serenata for strings, string-quartets in C min. and C-sharp min., various piano-pieces and songs. He has also made a version of Gounod's Médecin malgré lui. Sketch by Taubmann, 1907 (in Monographien moderner Musiker). G.

Rhaw, Georg (1488-1548). 16th C. G.

Rheinberger, Josef Gabriel (Vaduz, 1839-1901, Munich). Distinguished Liechtensteiner organist, conductor, composer and teacher, precociously developed, trained mostly at the Munich Conservatory and by F. Lachner. He was organist at the Vaduz parish-church when but seven to eleven. From 1854 he was accompanist for the new Oratorienverein in Munich and in 1864-77 Perfall's successor as conductor. From 1859 he taught at the Conservatory, continuing there in the reorganization of 1867 and becoming one of the inspectors. In 1860-66 he was organist at the Michaeliskirche and in 1865-67 chorusrmaster at the Opera. In 1877 he declined a call to be director of the new Hoch Conservatory at Frankfurt, and King Ludwig thereupon put him in charge of the court-choir with the title of court-director and also admitted him to the Order of St. Michael. He had already been named royal professor in 1867. In 1894 he was ennobled and in 1899 was made Ph.D. by Munich Univ., besides being elected to the Berlin Akademie. These honors indicate the esteem that he won by his native ability, his prodigious industry and his mastery of all branches of musical art, combined with his genius as a teacher. As a composer he is counted greatest in his choral and organ-works. Elsewhere he achieved great distinction without reaching the highest levels of inspiration. A summary of his works includes the following (opus-nos. in brackets):

Vocal Works

Operas—Die sieben Raben, 1869 [20], Die arme Heinrich (comic singspiel for children) [37], Türmers Töchterlein, 1873 [70], Das Zaubervort (children's singspiel) [153]. Music for Calderon's Der wunderthätige Magus [30] and for Raimund's Die unheilbringende Krone [36]—both for piano, 4 hands.

Choral Ballads—Das Thal des Espingo (men's voices) [50], König Erich (with piano) [71], Toggenburg [76], Die tote Braut [81] Johannisnacht (men's voices)

[91], Klärchen auf Eberstein [97], Wittkeind (men's voices) [102], Die Rosen von Hildesheim (do. and wind-instruments) [143], Montfort [145], Hymnus an die Tonkunst (men's voices) [179].

Sacred Choral Works—Jairus' Tochter (children's cantata) [32], Christophorus [20], Osterhymne (a 8, a cappella) [134], Der Stern von Bethlehem [164]; 2 Stabat Maters [16, 138]; 3 Requiems [60, 84, 194]; Passion [46]; 14 masses [62, 83, 109, 117, 126, 151, 155, 159, 169, 172, 187, 190, 192, 197]. Also 23 motets [40, 133, 163, 176], and 29 hymns [35, 58, 69, 96, 107, 118, 140].

Choruses and Part-Songs—Die Wasserfee [21], Lockung [25], Waldbächlein; about 175 others [2, 17, 24, 31, 44, 48, 52, 56, 63, 64, 73-5, 80, 85-6, 90, 95, 100, 103, 106, 108, 116, 124-5, 130-1, 141, 144, 160, 170, 173, 185-6].

Solo Songs—the cycles Marianische Hymnen [171] and Vom Goldenen Horn [182]; about 120 others [3-4, 22, 26, 41, 54-5, 57, 128-9, 136, 152, 157-8, etc.].

For Orchestra

Symphonies—Wallenstein [10]; Florentiner [87].

Overtures—The Taming of the Shrew [18]; Demetrius [110]; Akademische (fugue with six themes) [195]. Also Fantasia [79].

Concertos—for piano, in A-flat [94]; for organ, in F [137] and G min. [177]. Also suite for organ, violin, 'cello and strings [149].

Chamber-Music

Nonet for wind and strings [139]; wind-sextet [191b]; string-quintet in A min. [82]; piano-quintet in C [114].

String-quartets in C min. [89] and F [147]; piano-quartet in E-flat [38]. Also Variations in G min. for string-quartet [93].

Piano-trios in D min. [34], A [112], B-flat [121] and F [191].

Violin-sonatas in E-flat [77], C [92] and E min. [105]; violin-suite (with organ) [166]; 6 violin-pieces (do.) [150]; horn-sonata [178]. Idylle for 'cello; Rhapsodie for flute.

For Organ

Sonatas—I, C min. [27], 2, Fantasia, A-flat [65], 3, Pastoral, G [88], 4, A min. [98], 5, F-sharp [111], 6, E-flat min. [119], 7, F min. [127], 8, E min. [132], 9, B-flat min. [142], 10, B min. [146], 11, D min. [148], 12, D-flat [154], 13, E-flat [161], 14, C [165], 15, D [168], 16, G-sharp min. [175], 17, B [181], 18, A [188], 19, G min. [193], 20, Zur Friedensfeier, F [196].

12 Meditationen [167]; 22 trios [49, 189]; 24 Fughetten [123]; 36 pieces [156, 162, 174].

For Piano

Sonatas—Sinfonische [47], in D-flat [99], in E-flat [135], Romantische, in F-sharp min. [184]; for 4 hands or 2 pianos, in C min. [122].

Prelude and Fugue [33]; Étude und Fugato [42]; 3 Toccatas [12, 104, 115]; Toccata [119]; Fantasia [123]; Capriccio Giocoso [43]; 4 Humoresken [28]; 30 Preludes [14, 67]; Variations [61]; Improvisation on theme from Die Zauberflöte [51]; Waldmärchen [8]; about 85 other pieces [1, 5-7, 9, 11, 29, 39, 45, 53, 59, 66, 68, 78, 101, 113, 180, 183]. Also Tarantella [13] and Aus den Ferientagen [72] for 4 hands; and Duo [15] and arrangement of Bach's 'Goldberg' variations for two pianos.

In 1867 he married Franziska Jägerhuber (1822-1892), who was both singer and poet, and she wrote the texts of many of his best choral works [often using the pen-name 'Frau von Hoffnaass']. Memoirs or studies by Kroyer, 1901 (in Bettelheim's Jahrbuch) and 1916 (in Kirchenmusik), and Molitor, 1904. Kistler has edited his system of counterpoint (1903-04). G.

Rhené-Baton (Courseulles, 1879). French conductor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of A. Bloch and Gédalge, for a year chorusrmaster at the Opéra-Comique, then conductor of concerts in Angers, Paris and Bordeaux and since 1914 at Scheveningen. He has given French programs at Munich (1910) and Rome (1915) and led Russian opera in London (1914). Has written an opera, a ballet, an orchestral suite and other pieces, a piano-suite and various songs.

Rheineck, Christoph (Memmingen, 1748-1797, do.). Württemberger vocal composer, writing 2 operas (1774, '79) and many songs of historic importance.

Riccatti, Giordano (Castelfranco, 1709-1790, Treviso). Italian nobleman, author of various essays on harmony, counterpoint and acoustics (from 1762) and a life of Steffani (1779).

Ricci, Corrado. Superintendent of the Royal Galleries in Florence, author of I Teatri di Bologna nei Secoli XVII e XVIII, 1888, and Vita Barocca, 1904.

Ricci, Federico (Naples, 1809-1877, Coneglione). Italian composer, trained (with his brother Luigi below) at the Naples Conservatory, from 1835 producing 19 operas (4 with Luigi) in Italy or at Paris. From 1853 he was inspector of the Petrograd theaters and from 1869 was in Paris. Of his own works the chief were Le Prigioni d'Edinburgo, 1838, Corrado d'Altamura, 1841, and Una Follia a Roma, 1869, and, of those written jointly, the notable Crispino e la Comare, 1850. Also wrote 6 masses, a cantata, etc. Memoirs (of the brothers) by Villars, 1866, and Rada, 1878. G.

Ricci, Luigi (Naples, 1805-1859, Prague), brother of the foregoing. Able Italian composer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, from 1823 producing about 30 operas, including Il Colombo, 1829, L'Orfanella di Ginevra, 1829, Ciara di Rosenberg, 1831, Un'Avventura di Scaramuccia, 1834, Chi Dura Vince, 1834, Il Colonello, 1835 (with Federico), Il Birrajo di Preston, 1847, the highly successful Crispino e la Comare, 1850 (with Federico), La Festa di Piedigrotta, 1852, and Il Diavolo a Quattro, 1859. From 1836 he was maestro at Trieste Cathedral and also chorusmaster at the theater. Also wrote masses, a Requiem, etc. Memoirs (see Federico above). G.

Ricci, Luigi (Trieste, 1852-1906, Milan), son of the preceding. Italian composer of about 10 operas and operettas (from 1870), including Cola di Rienzi, 1880, Don Chisciotte, 1881, Donna Ines, 1883, Frutto Proibito, 1888, etc., a string-quartet, songs, etc.

Ricci, Pasquale. Italian composer, maestro at Como and from about 1750 active in London, publishing string-quartets, trios, violin-sonatas, sinfonie a 8, a piano-method (1788), etc.

Ricci-Signorini, Antonio (n. Lugo, 1867). Italian composer, pupil of Parisini, Busi and Martucci, the Bologna Liceo, writing an orchestral suite, various characteristic orchestral sketches, many sets of piano-pieces and songs.

Riccio, Antonio Teodoro (?1540-1603?). 16th C. G.

Riccus, August Ferdinand (n. Herrnhut, 1819-1886, Karlsbad). Saxon conductor and critic, from 1849 conductor of the Euterpe at Leipzig, from 1854 at the Opera there and from 1864 at the Hamburg Opera, besides being critic for the Nachrichten and a successful vocal teacher. Wrote an overture to Schiller's Braut von Messina, music for various plays, the cantata Die Weihe der Kraft, Psalm 130, 3 arias with orchestra, choruses, songs, etc.

Riccus, Karl August Gustav (n. Herrnhut, 1830-1893, Dresden), nephew of the above. Saxon violinist and conductor, pupil of Wieck, Krägen, Schubert (of Dresden) and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1847 playing in the Dresden court-orchestra and in 1858-89 engaged at the Opera, at first as assistant-concertmaster, from 1863 as chorusmaster and from 1887 as one of the conductors. In 1889 he followed Fürstenau as chief of the music-section in the Dresden Library. Wrote the comic opera Es spukt, 1871, ballets, music for fairy-plays, a setting of Schiller's Dithyrambe (1859), songs and piano-pieces.

Rice, Fenelon B. (Greensburg, O. 1841-1901, Oberlin). American educator, trained in Boston and at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1871 the highly efficient director of the music-school of Oberlin College in Ohio. A.

Rice, William Gorham (Albany, N. Y. 1856). American civil official, author of The Carillons of Belgium and Holland, 1914, The Carillon in Literature, 1915, and articles on campanology. A.

Richafort, Jean. 16th C. G.

Richards, Henry Brinley (Carmarthen, 1817-1885, London). Welsh pianist, trained at the Royal Academy, London (King's Scholar, 1835, '37), from about 1840 active in London as player, teacher and promoter of Welsh music. Wrote a symphony, 2 overtures, a piano-concerto, the band-marches Albert Edward and Carmarthen, part-songs, songs and many light piano-pieces. G.

Richardson, Alfred Madeley (Southend, 1868). Able English organist, trained at Oxford University (Mus.D. 1897) and the Royal College, London, from 1889 in church-service at Worcester, in 1891-92 in London, from 1892 at Scarborough and in 1897-1908 at St. Saviour's, Southwark (from 1905 becoming Southwark Cathedral), where he made the choir-music notable. Since 1909 he has been active in America, at first as organist at St. Paul's in Baltimore and since 1912 as teacher at the Inst. of Musical Art in New York. Has written many organ-pieces, anthems, part-songs, etc. Author or editor of Choir-Training, 1897, Church Music for the Clergy, 1902, The Psalms, their Structure and Musical Rendering, 1903, The Southwark Psalter, 1904, Modern Organ-Accompaniment, 1907, The Choir-Trainer's Art, 1914, and The Southwark Canticles, 1918. A.

Richault, Charles Simon (Chartres, 1780-1866, Paris). Founder of a noted music-publishing business in Paris in 1805, in time acquiring much of the stock of Nadermann, Sieber, Pleyel, Érard and others, besides issuing editions of both standard and new works of many schools. He was succeeded by his son Guillaume Simon (1806-1877) and his grandson Léon (1839-1895), each of whom extended the range of the firm's substantial publications. In 1878 they won high recognition at the Paris Exposition. G.

Richter, Alfred (Leipzig, 1846-1919, Berlin), son of Ernst Friedrich below. Saxon theorist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1872-83 teaching there, then active in London, from 1897 again at Leipzig and finally at Berlin. Besides preparing new editions of his father's works, author of extensions of the latter's Harmonie und Kontrapunkt, and original textbooks in Elementarkenntnisse (1895, 4th ed. 1911), Thematische Arbeit (1896), Klavierspiel (1898, 2d ed. 1912) and Form (1904, 2d ed. 1911). In 1898-99 he led the Arion at Leipzig. Wrote the men's choruses Trinklied and Der Postillon, etc.

Richter, Bernhard Friedrich (Leipzig, 1850), brother of the foregoing. Saxon organist and historical student, trained at the Thomasschule in Leipzig and by his father, from 1876 playing at the Jakobskirche and from 1890 at the Lutherkirche, besides teaching singing at the Thomasschule. He gained the title of royal professor in 1917. Author of many notes in the Monatshefte, Bach-Jahrbuch, etc., on points in the music-history of Leipzig, especially as to Bach.

Richter, Ernst Friedrich Eduard (n. Zittau, 1808-1879, Leipzig). Distinguished Saxon organist and theorist, largely self-taught, but with lessons from Weinlig, from 1843 associated with Hauptmann as teacher at the new Conservatory, besides in 1843-47 following Pohlentz as leader of the Singakademie and serving as organist from 1851 at the Peterskirche, in 1862 at the Neukirche and soon at the Nikolaikirche. In 1868, at Hauptmann's death, he became cantor of the Thomasschule, including the supervision of music in the leading city-churches. He then received the title of royal professor, to which was later added that of honorary music-director at the University. He is best known by his Lehrbuch d. Harmonie, 1853 (30th ed. 1920), Lehrbuch d. Fuge, 1859 (9th ed. 1921), and Lehrbuch d. einfachen u. doppelten Kontrapunkts, 1872 (15th ed. 1920), all of which, especially the first, have been translated into other languages, besides a Katechismus d. Orgel, 4th ed. 1896. Also wrote the oratorio Christus der Erlöser, 1849, several masses, notable a cappella motets and Psalms, a Stabat Mater, a choral setting of Schiller's Dithyrambe (1859), string-quartets, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, organ-pieces, songs, etc. G.

Richter, Ernst Heinrich Leopold (n. Ohlau, 1805-1876, Steinau-on-Oder). Able Silesian teacher, trained in Breslau and at the Institut für Kirchenmusik, Berlin, from 1827 teaching at the Teachers' Seminary in Breslau (removed in 1847 to Steinau). Wrote a comic opera, a mass, motets, cantatas, men's choruses, a symphony, organ-works, etc.

Richter, Ferdinand Tobias (1649-1711). 17th C. G.

Richter, Francis William (Minneapolis, 1888), nephew of Hans below. American pianist, pupil of Leschetizky, Labor, Goldmark and Guilment, in 1909-10 appearing in many German cities and at London and Paris, from 1910 touring in the United States (Northwest and Far West). Has written the opera The Grand Nazar, a symphony (1916), a piano-concerto, piano-suites, études, etc.

Richter, Franz Xaver (Hollerschau, 1709-1789, Strasburg). Important Moravian composer, from 1740 in the service of the Abbot of Kempten (Swabia), from 1747 both violinist and singer in the electoral establishment at Mannheim, and from 1769 director at Strasburg Cathedral. He was prodigiously fertile as a composer, in his instrumental works representing the new style of the Mannheim school. Wrote about 70 symphonies, 6 clavier-concertos (with string-orchestra), 6 string-quartets, 12 trio-sonatas, 8 trios for flute, 'cello and clavier, flute-duets and solo-sonatas, the oratorio La Deposizione della Croce, 1748, 28 masses, 2 Requiems, 2 Passions, 16 Psalms, 2 cantatas, 38 motets, a setting of the Lamentations (Holy Week), etc. His works were highly esteemed at the time. Among his pupils was probably Karl Stamitz. Author of a text-book in composition (ms. in Brussels, French version by Kalkbrenner, 1804). Catalogue of works by F. X. Mathias, 1909 (in Riemann Festschrift). G.

Richter, Hans (Raab, 1843-1916, Bayreuth). Distinguished Hungarian conductor, trained as a boy in the court-choir at Vienna and then at the Conservatory, in 1862-66 playing the French horn in the orchestra of the Kärnthnerthor-Theater, in 1866-67 at Triebtschen (n. Lucerne), assisting Wagner in making the score of Die Meistersinger ready for the press, returning in 1870-71 to do the same with the score of the Ring cycle. Meanwhile, at Wagner's instance, from 1867 he was at Munich as chorus-master and later assistant-conductor at the Opera and in 1870 visited Paris and Brussels. From 1871 he was conductor of the Opera at Pest, but in 1875 removed to Vienna to succeed Dessoff as conductor at the Opera and of the Philharmonic, besides in 1880-95 leading the Gesellschaftsconcerts and in 1893 following Hellmesberger as court-director. In 1876 he was the chief conductor at the initial performances of the Ring at Bayreuth, continuing at all later festivals until 1912. From 1877 he was a regular visitor in London, at first joining Wagner in the festival of that year and then until 1897 giving an annual series known as the Richter Concerts, besides from 1882 directing various performances of Wagner's operas, including the English premières of Die Meistersinger and Tristan, and in 1885-1912 having charge of the Birmingham Festivals. At intervals from 1888 he also conducted the Lower Rhine Festivals. In 1899 he removed to Manchester to direct the Hallé Orchestra (succeeding Cowen), continuing there and somewhat in London until 1911. He then appeared at the Vienna Opera and once more at Bayreuth in 1912 before permanent retirement. His extraordinary genius, intelligence, breadth of sympathy and unbroken practical success made him the recipient of numerous honors and decorations, including a Mus.D. from Oxford Univ. It is evident that he was one of the potent factors in Wagner's final triumph, but he was also influential in securing due recognition for Brahms and others. Sketch in Musical Times, 1899. G.

Richter, Otto (n. Görlitz, 1865). Silesian choral conductor, pupil mostly of Haupt, Grell and Bargiel, from 1885 directing a Sacred Music Society in Berlin, from 1890 organist at the Andreaskirche in Eisleben and conductor of the Singverein, besides in 1891 starting a school for singers on the Wüller system and from 1903 teaching at the Gymnasium, in 1904-06 also conductor of the Fridericiana (society) at Halle and since 1906 Wermann's successor as cantor of the Kreuzschule in Dresden, holding the title of royal professor from 1911. Has written a mass, motets, antiphonal services for choir and congregation, etc., besides various essays advocating popular interest in choral singing and in church-music. He edited a Choralbuch for use in missionary churches in India.

Ricieri, Giovanni Antonio (Venice, 1679-1746, Bologna). Italian composer, pupil of Freschi and Alghisi, in 1701-33 active at Bologna (except for a sojourn in Poland in 1722-26), then at Venice, Padua and from 1741 town-director at Cento. Wrote 4 oratorios (1713-38), considerable church-music, madrigals, etc. A fugue of his is cited by his pupil Martini as a model. In 1701-16 he belonged to the Filarmonici, but was dropped because of his criticalness.

Ricordi & Co., G. A world-famous music-publishing firm in Milan, founded in 1808 by Giovanni Ricordi (1785-1853), an engraver trained in Leipzig, who was succeeded by his son Tito (1811-1888), his grandson Giulio (1840-1912) and now by his great-grandson Tito. Tito and Giulio displayed remarkable enterprise and ability in extending the business, so that now its publications number almost 120,000 numbers, including most of the greater modern Italian works. Since 1845 they have published the Gazetta Musicale, long the leading Italian musical journal. Giulio Ricordi was an effective composer of a ballet (1866), chamber-music and salon-pieces (using the pen-name 'J. Burgmeim'). The younger Tito is an accomplished pianist. G.

Rider-Kelsey, Corinne (n. Buffalo, N. Y. 1879). Brilliant American soprano, pupil of the Oberlin Conservatory and of Torrens and Toedt, since 1904 widely successful in oratorio, orchestral concerts and song-recitals. In 1908 and '14 she toured with the baritone Cunningham. In 1908 she was induced to appear for a time in opera at Covent Garden, London, but was not attracted to operatic work. A.

Riechers, August (in Hanover, 1836-1893, Berlin). Noted violin-maker in Berlin, author of a small treatise on the Stradivari model (1895).

Riedel, Fürchtegott Ernst August (Chemnitz, 1855). Saxon conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1878 in charge of a choral society in Leipzig and since 1888 director of the Musikverein in Plauen, town-cantor and teacher at the Realschule, gaining the title of professor in 1915. Has written the cantata Winfried, the choral Der Sachsen Festtagssang, a suite for piano-trio, etc.

Riedel, Hermann (n. Magdeburg, 1847-1913, Brunswick). Saxon conductor, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1874 chorusmaster at the Vienna Opera, from 1878 conductor at the Brunswick Opera and in 1882-1911 court-director there, succeeding Abt. He was famous for his settings of lyrics from Scheffel's Trompeter von Säckingen and other songs, besides writing the opera Der Ritterschlag, 1880. His son Wolfgang, theater-conductor at Erfurt, has written the opera Das Lösegelt, 1914.

Riedel, Karl (n. Elberfeld, 1827-1888, Leipzig). Eminent choral conductor, originally in the silk-business, but from 1848 pupil of Karl Wilhelm and the Leipzig Conservatory. In 1854 he took the first steps in forming what became the famous Riedel-Verein in Leipzig, at first designed to cultivate the older church-music, but soon developed into a choral institution of comprehensive scope. Besides directing this with extraordinary zeal he was also from 1868 president of the Allgem. Deutscher Musikverein and of its Leipzig branch, in 1871 one of the promoters of the Beethoven-Stiftung and from 1874 head of the local Wagner-Verein. In 1868 he received the title of professor and in 1883 was made Ph.D. by Leipzig Univ. Wrote some part-songs and songs, and edited old German and Bohemian songs, various works by Schütz, J. W. Franck, Eccard, Praetorius, etc. Memoir in Göhler's Der Riedelverein zu Leipzig, 1904. G.

Riedt, Friedrich Wilhelm (Berlin, 1712-1784, do.). Prussian flutist, pupil of Graun and Schaffrath, from 1741 in Frederick the Great's band and from 1750 conductor of the Musical Society at Berlin. Wrote symphonies, quartets, trios for flutes and bass, sonatas for flute solo or in duet, a treatise on intervals (1753) and articles for Marpur's Beiträge.

Riegel, Anton (perhaps brother of the next). Composer (from 1780) of the Mannheim school, writing string-quartets and violin-sonatas. From 1807 he lived at Mannheim.

Riegel, Henri [Heinrich] Joseph (Wertheim, 1741-1799, Paris). Rhenish composer, pupil of F. X. Richter and Jommelli, from 1768 active in Paris, becoming in 1782-86 conductor of the Concerts Spirituels and for a time also at the Loge Olympique. He was among the first to write chamber-music with piano (sextet-symphonies, quintets, quartets, violin-sonatas), besides some small operas and oratorios (from 1775). But his record may be confused with that of his son Henri Jean (see Rigel below).

Rieger, Die Gebrüder. The foremost organ-making firm in Austria (at Jägerndorf, on the Silesian border), founded in 1874 and now managed by Otto Rieger. Up to 1915 they had made over 2000 instruments, including notable examples at Vienna, Pest, Salzburg, etc.

Riehl, Wilhelm Heinrich (Biebrich, 1823-1897, Munich). Rhenish historian, from 1854 professor of political science at Munich University, and from 1885 director of the National Museum. He gave lectures on music-history at the Conservatory. Author of Musikal. Charakterkopfe, 3 vols. 1853-61 (6th ed. 1879), besides Hausmusik, 2 vols. 1856, '77 (original songs). Memoir by Simonsfeld, 1899.

Riem, Wilhelm Friedrich (Köllede, 1779-1857, Bremen). Able Thuringian organist, pupil of J. A. Hiller, with law-study at Leipzig University, from about 1807 organist at the new Reformed Church in Leipzig and soon leader of the Singakademie, from 1814 organist at Bremen Cathedral and city-director, besides in 1815 starting the Singakademie. Wrote an oratorio, a cantata (1830), a piano-quartet, 3 string-quartets, 4 violin- and 6 piano-sonatas, many organ-pieces, etc. G.

Riemann, Karl Wilhelm Julius Hugo (n. Sondershausen, 1849-1919, Leipzig). Distinguished Saxon theorist and musicologist, educated in law, history and philosophy at Berlin and Tübingen Universities (with military service in 1870-71), musically trained at Sondershausen and the Leipzig Conservatory, with further study at Göttingen (Ph.D. 1873). From 1873 he was teacher and conductor at Bielefeld, in 1878 began to lecture at Leipzig University, but turned aside to teach in Bromberg in 1880-81, at the Hamburg Conservatory in 1881-90, at Sondershausen temporarily and at the Wiesbaden Conservatory in 1890-95, and then returned to Leipzig, becoming professor in 1901, director of the Collegium Musicum in 1908 and head of the new department of musical research in 1914. He was a member of numerous learned societies and the recipient of various honors, including a Mus.D. from Edinburgh Univ. in 1899. His sixtieth birthday in 1909 was signalized by a Festschrift of monumental character. His work as scholar and thinker was colossal in amount, extent, thoroughness and profundity, so that through his extensive personal teaching and his voluminous writings he exerted an unparalleled influence upon the whole intellectual conception of music from about 1880 onward. In his hands musical science was in many ways revolutionized, if not brought into being. Some points in his system of thought or its codification have aroused debate and objection, but the significance of his stimulating impress as a whole remains unique. His publications include Theoretical text-books—Musikal. Syntaxis, 1877, Harmonielehre, 1880 (8th ed. 1920), Elementarmusiklehre, 1882, Schule d. Melodik, 1883, Vergleichende Klavierschule, 1883, Musikal. Dynamik u. Agogik, 1884, Anleitung zum Phrasieren, 1886 (rewritten 1900, 4th ed. 1920), Modulationslehre, 1887, Verein-

fachte Harmonielehre, 1893, Lehrbuch d. Kontrapunkts, 1888 (6th ed. 1921), Musikal. Aesthetik, 1900, Grundriss d. Kompositionslehre, 1897, Grosse Kompositionslehre, 3 vols. 1902-13, Musikal. Rhythmik u. Metrik, 1903, Musikwissenschaft, 1908 (2d ed. 1915). Catechisms—Musik, 1888 (7th ed. 1920), Instrumente, 1888 (8th ed. 1920), Klavierspiel, 1888 (7th ed. 1922), Orgel, 1888 (4th ed. 1919), Musikgeschichte, 2 vols. 1888 (7th ed. 1920), Kompositionslehre, 2 vols. 1889 (7th ed. 1922), Generalbassspiel, 1889 (3d ed. 1909), Musikdiktat, 1889 (6th ed. 1920), Harmonie u. Modulationslehre, 1890 (5th ed. 1914), Fugenkomposition, 3 vols. 1890-91 (4th ed. 1920), Gesangskomposition, 1891 (2d ed. 1911), Akustik, 1891 (3d ed. 1921), Orchestrierung, 1902 (4th ed. 1921), Partiturspiel, 1903 (3d ed. 1920), Musikästhetik, 1903 (5th ed. 1921). Dictionaries—Musiklexikon, 1882 (6th ed. 1904, 7th ed. 1909, 8th ed. 1915, 9th ed. 1919, 10th ed. 1922); articles in Meyer's Konversationslexikon, 3d ed. (at first terms only, after 1892 biographies also); Opernhandbuch, 1884, supplements in 1887, '93.

Historical studies—Studien zur Gesch. d. Notenschrift, 1878; Die Entwicklung unserer Notenschrift, 1881; Die Martyriai d. byzantin. liturg. Notation, 1882, Notenschrift u. Notendruck, 1896; Gesch. d. Musiktheorie im 9.-19. Jahrh., 1898; Epochen u. Helden d. Musikgesch., 1900; Gesch. d. Musik seit Beethoven, 1901; Handbuch d. Musikgesch., 5 parts, 1901-13, with a collection of 150 Beispielen, 1912; Kleines Handbuch d. Musikgesch., 1908 (4th ed. 1922); Die Byzantin. Notenschrift im 10.-16. Jahrh., 2 vols. 1909-15; Kompendium d. Notenschriftkunde, 1910; Folkloristische Tonaltätsstudien, 1916. Among very numerous essays and articles are Die Melodik d. Minnesänger, 1897+ (Wochenblatt), on a newly-discovered mensural code of 1494, 1897 (Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch), Die französische Ouvertüre, 1896 (Wochenblatt), Das Kunstlied im 14.-16. Jahrh., 1905 (I. M. G. Sammelb.), Zur Gesch. d. Suite, 1907 (do.), Das Problem d. Choralrhythmus, 1905 (Peters' Jahrbuch), Verloren gegangene Selbstverständlichkeiten in d. Musik d. 14.-15. Jahrh., 1907 (separate). His chief essays are collected as Präjuden u. Studien, 3 vols. 1895-1900. Edited works—Alte Kammermusik, 4 vols.; Illustrationen zur Musikgesch.; Reigen u. Tänze aus Kaiser Mathias' Zeit; Rococo (dances); extracts from the works of Abaco (Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern); Symphonien d. Pfälz. Tonschule (do.); 2 vols. of the stage-works of Steffani (do.); Mannheimer Kammermusik d. 18. Jahrh. (do.); Collegium Musicum (chamber-music); Hausmusik aus alter Zeit; selected works of Schubert (Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst), etc. Also revised edition of Marx' Komposition, 4 vols. 1887-90, revision or editing of vols. ii-v of Deiters' translation of Thayer's Beethoven (1907-11), and translations of Gevaert's Instrumentation (1887) and Origines du Chant Liturgique (1891).

His compositions include 2 string-quartets, variations for string-quartet on a theme from Beethoven, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a piano-sonata, numerous technical studies and exercises for piano and some for organ and for voice, various choruses, part-songs and songs. G. A.

Riemann, Ludwig (Lüneburg, 1863). Hanoverian vocal teacher, pupil of his father, Königs-löw and the Institut für Kirchenmusik, Berlin, since 1889 at the Gymnasium in Essen, gaining the title of professor in 1918. He has also been president of the Union of Academically Trained Music Teachers. Author of a manual of musical acoustics (1896), a discussion of scales in primitive and Oriental music (1899), an essay on piano-tone (1911), etc.

Riemenschneider, Georg (Stralsund, 1848-1913, Breslau). Pomeranian conductor and composer, pupil of Haupt and Kiel, from 1875 theater-conductor at Lübeck, Danzig, Basel, Amsterdam and Düsseldorf, in 1889-98 of the Breslau Orches-terverein, and then living in Breslau as teacher and critic. Wrote various orchestral tone-pictures, piano- and organ-pieces, the short opera Mondeszauber, 1887, and songs.

HUGO RIEMANN

Riemsdijk, J. C. M. van (1843–1895, Utrecht). Dutch railway-official, for some years president of the North Netherland Music History Society and leader of an a cappella choir at Utrecht. Author of a history of the Utrecht Music School from 1631 to 1881 (1881) and several valuable collections of old Dutch songs, dances and chamber-music (1882–96). G.

Riepel, Joseph (Horschlag, 1708–1782, Ratisbon). Austrian theorist, from about 1757 chamber-musician to the Prince of Thurn and Taxis. Author of notable manuals of harmony, counterpoint and composition (from 1752), the last of which was edited by his pupil J. K. Schubarth.

Ries, Ferdinand (Bonn, 1784–1838, Frankfurt), son of Franz Anton below. Eminent Rhenish pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father, B. Romberg, Winter, Beethoven and Albrechtsberger, from 1805 living a varied life of alternate want and artistic success at Paris (1806–08), North Germany, Sweden and Russia, from 1813 settled in London as a favorite player, teacher and industrious composer, from 1824 at his country-place near Bonn and from 1830 mostly at Frankfurt, but in 1834–36 serving as town-musician at Aix. In 1825–37 he acted as conductor of the Lower Rhine Festivals eight times. In 1837 for a short time he was head of the Cäcilienverein at Frankfurt. His intimacy with Beethoven gives importance to his Biographische Notizen über L. van Beethoven, 1838 (with Wegeler, additions 1845, new ed. 1906 by Kalischer). Wrote the operas Die Räuberbraut, 1828, Liska, 1831, and Eine Nacht auf dem Libanon, the oratorios Der Sieg des Glaubens, 1831, and Die Könige Israels, 1837, 6 symphonies, 3 overtures, 9 piano-concertos, a violin-concerto, an octet, a septet, 2 sextets, 13 quintets, 17 quartets, 5 trios, a trio for two pianos and harp, 20 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, 52 fine piano-sonatas and much other piano-music. His technical style is derived from Beethoven, but without much positive inspiration. See essay by Ueberfeldt, 1915, on his early development. G.

Ries, Franz (Berlin 1846), son of Hubert below. Able Prussian violinist and composer, pupil of his father, Kiel and Massart, from 1868 appearing as virtuoso, but from 1873 forced by overstrain to turn to music-publishing (as a member of Ries & Erler in Berlin). Wrote a Dramatische Ouvertüre, a Nachtstück for strings, an Adagio and Rondo for violin and orchestra, a string-quintet, 2 string-quartets, 4 violin-suites, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Ries, Franz Anton (Bonn, 1755–1846, do.). Able Rhenish violinist, pupil of Salomon, from 1774 in the electoral orchestra at Bonn, remaining there even after the disbanding of the establishment in 1794. In 1779 he had much success as player at Vienna. His special distinction arises from his having been Beethoven's teacher and always a faithful friend of the Beethoven family. G.

Ries, Hubert (Bonn, 1802–1886, Berlin), son of the preceding. Fine Rhenish violinist, pupil of Spohr and Hauptmann, from 1824 active in Berlin, becoming in 1836 concertmaster in the court-band, in 1839 a member of the Academy of Arts and in 1851–72 teacher at the Orchestral School. Wrote 2 violin-concertos and many excellent violin-studies. He was noted as a teacher. G.

Riesemann, Bernhard Oskar von (Reval, 1880). German-Russian critic and historical student, educated at Munich, Moscow, Berlin and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. 1907), settling in Moscow as critic (till 1921). Author of the monograph Die Notationen d. altrussischen Kirchengesanges, 1908, and biographies in the Russian editions of the Riemann Lexikon (from 1902).

Rieter-Biedermann. Prominent music-publishing firm, founded in 1849 by J. Melchior Rieter-Biedermann (1811–1876) at Winterthur (Switzerland), from 1862 with a branch at Leipzig, the latter absorbing the former in 1884. In 1917 the business was purchased by Peters. G.

Rietsch, Heinrich (Falkenau, 1860). Bohemian musicologist, trained at Vienna University, from 1895 lecturer there and from 1900 professor at Prague University, besides from 1909 being head of its Musical Science Institute. Author of Die Mondsee-Wiener Liederhandschrift, 1886 (with F. A. Mayer), Die Tonkunst in d. 2. Hälfte d. 19. Jahrh. 1900 (2d ed. 1906), Die deutsche Liedweise, 1904, Die Grundlagen d. Tonkunst, 1907, and Kurze Betrachtungen zum deutschen Volkslied, 1910 (in Liliencron Festschrift), and editor of works by Muffat and others for the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich. Has also written the opera Walther von der Vogelweide (parts given 1902 in concert), 2 orchestral serenades, a piano-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a two-piano fantasia, the choral works Das Walten der Liebe and Britische Werbung, choruses and songs.

Rietschel, Georg Christian (Dresden, 1842–1914, Leipzig). Saxon theologian, from 1889 professor at Leipzig University. Besides other works (especially his Liturgik, 1900–09), author of a history of organ-music in church-worship (1893) and a lecture on the present status of the same (1894). He was president of the new Bach Society at Leipzig and influential in promoting interest in church-music.

Rietz, Eduard (Berlin, 1802–1832, do.), brother of the following. Gifted Prussian violinist, pupil of his father and Rode, early playing in the court-band and singing in the Singakademie, but laid aside by ill-health in 1824. In 1826, however, he founded the Philharmonic Society and directed it for a time. He was Mendelssohn's closest youthful friend. G.

Rietz, Julius (Berlin, 1812–1877, Dresden), brother of the above and also an intimate of Mendelssohn. Eminent Prussian 'cellist, conductor and composer, pupil of B. Romberg, M. Ganz and Zelter, from 1828 playing at the Königstädter Theater in Berlin. In 1834 he became assistant to Mendelssohn at the Düsseldorf Opera, in 1835 his successor there and in 1836 town-director. In 1847-54 he conducted the Leipzig Opera and till 1860 also the Singakademie and (from 1848) the Gewandhaus Orchestra, besides teaching at the Conservatory. In 1860 he removed to Dresden as court-director and later also artistic head of the Conservatory. Between 1845 and 1873 he six times conducted the Lower Rhine Festivals at Düsseldorf or Aix. Ph.D. of Leipzig Univ. in 1859. As composer he was a scholarly follower of the Mendelssohn traditions. Wrote the operas Das Mädchen aus der Fremde, 1839 (singspiel), Jery und Bätely, 1840?, Der Corsar, 1850, and Georg Neumark, 1859, music for Holtei's Lorbeerbaum und Bettelstab (1833) and other plays, 3 symphonies, several overtures, concertos for violin, for 'cello, for clarinet and for piano, concert-pieces with orchestra for various instruments, sonatas for violin, for flute and for piano, masses, motets, Psalms, other church-music, the choral works Alteutscher Schlachtgesang and Dithyrambe (Schiller), etc. Editor of the standard edition of Mendelssohn's works (1874-77), of fine editions of Mozart's operas and symphonies, of Beethoven's symphonies and overtures, etc. See letters in Mus. Quarterly, 1915-16. G.

Riga, François [Frantz] (Liège, 1831-1892, Brussels). Belgian church-musician, long choir-master in Brussels. Wrote remarkable a cappella choruses, cantatas, masses, overtures and other instrumental works.

Rigel [Riegel], Henri Jean (Paris, 1772-1852, Abbeville), son of H. J. Riegel above. French pianist, in 1798-1800 conductor of French opera at Cairo and from 1808 pianist to Napoleon. Wrote 2 operas, 3 sacred cantatas, a symphony, 4 piano-concertos, a string-quintet, a quartet for flute and strings, trios for piano, violin and harp, violin- and piano-sonatas.

Righini, Vincenzo (Bologna, 1756-1812, do.). Noted Italian conductor and composer, pupil of Bernacchi and Martini, in 1775-76 a stage-singer at Parma and Prague, from 1780 at Vienna as teacher of the Archduchess Elisabeth and conductor of the Italian Opera Buffa. In 1788-92 he was court-conductor at Mayence and in 1793-1806 at the court-opera in Berlin, succeeding Alessandri, besides being a favorite vocal teacher. Wrote about 20 operas, including Tigrane, 1799, Gerusalemme Liberata, 1802, and La Selva Incantata, 1802, a Coronation Mass, a Te Deum, a Requiem, cantatas, arias, duets and fine vocalises, besides a flute-concerto, a quartet-serenade for horns and bassoons, 2 piano-trios, etc. G.

Ríhovsky, Adalbert (Dub, 1871). Able Moravian church-musician, trained at the Prague Organ School, at first choir-master at Dub and lately organist at the Chrudim (Bohemia) archdeanery and teacher at the Seminary. Has written many masses, 2 Requiems, litanies and many organ-pieces, besides an orchestral Festmarsch, a piano-trio, a violin-serenade, etc.

Rimbault, Edward Francis (London, 1816-1876, do.). Eminent English editor and writer, pupil of his father and S. Wesley, from 1832 organist at the Swiss Church (Soho) and other London churches, but soon absorbed in historical studies, from 1838 lecturing on the growth of English music, in 1840 joining E. Taylor and Chappell in starting the Musical Antiquarian Society and becoming secretary or editor of the Percy and the Motet Societies. His scholarly ability led to his enrolment in various learned societies and to several degrees (Ph.D. from Stockholm Univ. in 1842 and LL.D. from Harvard Univ. in 1848). He lectured frequently at the Royal Institution in London, in Liverpool and Edinburgh and elsewhere. Author of Who was Jack Wilson?, 1846, Bibliotheca Madrigaliana, 1847, The Organ, its History and Construction, 1855, The Piano-forte, its Origin, Progress and Construction, 1860, The Early English Organ-Builders and their Works, 1864, a life of Bach (1869), and text-books in playing the piano and the harmonium and in singing. Editor of manifold collections, as of Cathedral Chants of the 16-18th Centuries, 1844, Anthems of the Madrigalian Era, 1845, Cathedral Music (one vol. only), Services and Anthems, 3 vols. (adapted from Palestrina, etc.), Vocal Part-Music, Christmas Carols, 1847, '65, Ancient Vocal Music of England, 2 vols. 1846-49, The Rounds, Catches and Canons of England, and many others, including practical manuals for parish choirs and organists. He also edited the Daily Service of St. Peter's, Westminster (1844), Tallis' Cathedral and Daily Services, Lowe's Order of Chanting, Este's Whole Book of Psalms, Merbecke's The Booke of Common Prayer, Arnold's Cathedral Music, Morley's First Book of Ballets, Bateson's First Set of Madrigals, O. Gibbons' Viol-Fantasias, Purcell's Bonduca and Ode for St. Cecilia's Day, Parthenia, Musical Illustrations for Percy's Reliques, the Chapel Royal Cheque-Book, Roger North's Memoirs of Musick, besides versions of Handel's Saul, Messiah and Samson and of many operas. He edited The Choir for years and was a contributor to the Imperial and Grove's Dictionaries. Besides making many arrangements and transcriptions, he wrote 2 small stage-works (1838-39), a cantata, part-songs and songs. G.

Rimsky-Korsakov, Nikolai Andreyevitch (Tikhvin, 1844-1908, n. Petrograd). Distinguished Russian conductor and composer, from 1856 educated for a naval career and unable until 1873 fully to detach himself from it, though in youth he had lessons on the 'cello and the piano, in 1861 came into contact with Balakirev, Mussorgsky, Borodin and Cui and produced a symphony in 1865. From 1871 he was professor of composition at the Petrograd Conservatory and in 1876 was offered the directorship, as also in 1881 that of the Moscow Conservatory (both declined). In 1874–81 he followed Balakirev in directing the concerts of the Musical Free School, in 1883–94 was his assistant as conductor of the Imperial Chapel and in 1886–90 had charge of Belaiev's Symphony Concerts, besides appearing as guest-conductor at Paris (1889) and Brussels (1890, 1900). In 1873–84 he was also inspector of marine bands. In 1873 he married the gifted pianist Nadejda Pourgold, who, with her sister, equally gifted as a singer, co-operated powerfully in his lifelong devotion to the advancement of musical art in Russia. The list of his pupils includes such names as those of Liadov, Ippolitov-Ivanov, Gretchaninov, Glazunov and many others. As composer he illustrates the value of self-discipline, since, though his technical training was at first meager and much of it late, he yet made himself a true master of noble and beautiful expression, particularly through the orchestra. His genius lay strongly in the field of the symphonic poem, the opera and the song, in that where his imagination and sympathy could fasten upon definite objects and develop character or situation or mood with freedom. For many of his operas he wrote the librettos. The subjects of nearly all these come from Russian folk-lore or history. In them, as in all his works, he draws freely from the treasury of national folk-song and dance. His works include Operas—The Maid of Pskov, 1873 (revised 1894), A Night in May, 1880, The Snow-Maiden, 1882, Maïada, 1892 (fairy-ballet), Christmas-Eve, 1895, Sadko, 1897, Mozart and Salieri, 1898, Boyarina Vera Sheloga, 1898 (prologue to The Maid of Pskov), The Tsar's Bride, 1899, Tear Saltan, 1900, Servilia, 1902, Kostchei the Immortal, 1902, Pan Voyevoda, 1904, The Invisible City of Kitezh and the Maid Fevronia, 1907, Le Coq d'Or, 1910. Orchestrations of Dargomizsky's Stone-Guest (1872), Borodin's Prince Igor (1891), Mussorgsky's Chovanichina (1885) and Boris (1896).

Choral works—The Song about Alexis, Glory and the cantata Svitezanka (all mixed voices); Dragonflies and Aus Homer (women's voices); The Legend of St. Olga (men's voices); several others.

Arias and songs—the bass-ariosos (with orchestra) The Upr-tree and The Prophet; over 60 songs; about 20 duets.

For orchestra—symphonies in E min. 1865 (originally E-flat min.), Antar (or Oriental Suite) and in C (all remodeled after first production); Symphoniette in A min.; overtures in D and La Grande Pâque Russe (both on Russian themes); the symphonic poem Sadko; the suite Shéhérazade; 6 suites from operas; Capriccio Espagnol, 1887 (5 movements); Fantasia on Serbian themes; Conte Féerique; Chanson Russe; On the Tomb. Piano-concerto in C-sharp min.; concert-fantasia in B min. for violin.

Chamber-music—string-sextet in A; piano-quintet in B-flat; string-quartet in F; first movement of quartet on B-la-F (Belaiev) (the rest by Liadov, Borodin and Glazunov); 2 other single movements for composite works; cello-serenade.

For piano—3 sets of variations (one on B-A-C-H); 6 fugues; a few other pieces.

Collections of 140 Russian folk-songs (1877, '82).

Author of a manual of harmony (1888), a treatise on instrumentation (2 vols. 1913, edited by Steinberg), an autobiography (1909, edited by Stasyulevitch), and Essays and Sketches, 1911 (edited by Gniessin). Memoirs by Yasrebtsev, 1900 (2d ed. with list of works, 1908), Findeisen, 1908, Lapshin, 1911, and Montagu-Nathan, 1917, and see the latter's Russian Music, 1915, and Newmarch's Russian Opera, 1915. G. A.

Rinaldi, Giovanni (Reggiolo, 1840–1895, Genoa). Gifted Italian pianist, pupil of F. Asioli and the Milan Conservatory, from 1861 settled at Genoa. Wrote many highly characteristic piano-pieces somewhat after the manner of both Chopin and Schumann.

Rinaldo di Capua. Italian composer of the 18th century, writing some 25 operas (1737–71), mostly at Rome, but 2 at Paris (La Donna Superba, 1752, and La Zingara, 1753), the latter having importance in relation to the rise of French comic opera. G (with full list).

Rinck, Johann Christian Heinrich (Elgersburg, 1770–1846, Darmstadt). Eminent Thuringian organist, pupil chiefly of Kittel, from 1790 town-organist at Giessen and from 1805 at Darmstadt, at first as town-organist and teacher at the Seminary, from 1813 as court-organist and from 1817 as chamber-musician to the Grand Duke. He made various tours as virtuoso and received many honors, including a Ph.D. from Giessen Univ. in 1840. Both his playing and his composition were marked by technical solidity rather than artistic inspiration. Wrote very numerous organ-works, including a noted Orgelschule (new edition by Dienel, 1881), 2 Choralbücher, chorale-preludes and elaborations, postludes, variations, Der Choralfreund (7 annual issues), etc., a mass, motets, a Paternoster, other church-music, piano-trios, trio-sonatas, cello-sonatas and some piano-works. Autobiography, 1833, and memoir by Fölsing, 1848. See also Natorp's critique on his preludes, 1834, and Clément's Musiciens Célèbres, 1868. G.

Ringler, Eduard (Nuremberg, 1838). Bavarian choral conductor, pupil of Grobe and J. F. Dupont, becoming leader of the Nuremberg Singverein and Chorgesangverein (which he made notable), besides being choirmaster at the synagogue and critic for the Frankfort Kurier. Wrote the opera Frithjof and the volksoper Eppelein von Gailingen, 1896, songs, etc.

Rinuccini, Ottavio (1562–1621). 16th C.

Rio, Anita (Alameda, Cal. 1880). American operatic soprano, pupil mostly of Mme.d'Arona, J. A. Galloway (later her husband) and Mancinelli, appearing in oratorio and concert from 1901 and in opera from 1909, until 1914 on various European stages and then again in America. A.

Riotte, Philipp Jakob (Treves, 1776–1856, Vienna). Rhenish conductor and prolific composer, pupil of Joh. André, from about 1800 active at Prague and after 1806 at Vienna, where he was employed at the Kärnthnerthor and An der Wien theaters (the latter from 1818). Wrote in all about 50 stage-pieces, including the operas Nureddin, 1823, Euphenie von Avogara, 1823, Der Sturm, 1834, etc., a symphony, concertos for piano, for clarinet and for flute, a septet, quartets, trios, violin- and piano-sonatas, etc. G.

Ripa, Alberto de (? -1551). 16th C.

Rippl, Otto (Vienna, 1884). Austrian organist, pupil of his father, Schmidhuber and the Vienna Conservatory, from about 1900 playing in Vienna churches, then at Kremsmünster and Linz, from 1908 at Salzburg Cathedral and teacher at the Mozarteum, and since 1917 head of a music-school in Linz. Has written symphonies, chamber-music, church-works, choruses, songs, etc. Sketch by Hartl, 1918.

Rischbieter, Wilhelm Albert (Brunswick, 1834-1910, Dresden). North German violinist and theorist, pupil of Hauptmann, in 1862-1900 teacher at the Dresden Conservatory. Author of Ueber Modulation, Quartsextakkord u. Orgelpunkt, 1879, Die verdeckten Quinten, 1882, Zum Studium d. Kontrapunkts, 1885, Die Gesetzmässigkeit d. Harmonik, 1888, and many articles in journals. Wrote also a symphony, overtures and other works.

Riseley, George (Bristol, 1845). Eminent English organist and conductor, pupil of Corfe, from about 1865 playing at various Bristol churches and as deputy at the Cathedral, from 1870 giving weekly recitals at Colston Hall and in 1876 succeeding Corfe as cathedral-organist. In 1877 he started an orchestral society, in 1878 became director of the Orpheus and in 1889 founded the Choral Society, establishing them all as flourishing institutions. In 1896 he followed Hallé as conductor of the Bristol Festivals. In 1898 he gave up his place at the Cathedral and took charge of the orchestra at the Alexandra Palace in London and also the Queen's Hall Choral Society. Since 1893 he has taught at the Royal Academy, London. Has written choruses, part-songs and organ-pieces. G.

Risler, Joseph Édouard (Baden-Baden, 1873), son of an Alsatian father and a German mother. Highly gifted pianist, trained at the Paris Conservatory (many prizes) and by Klindworth, Stavenhagen and d'Albert, making his début at Paris in 1894 and soon entering upon wide tours throughout Europe, being recognized as an extraordinary executant and interpreter. He specializes in playing all the works of a single composer in series (Beethoven, Bach, Chopin, etc.). In 1896-97 he was one of the stage-assistants at Bayreuth. G.

Rist, Johann (1607-1667). 17th C.

Ristori, Giovanni Alberto (Bologna, 1692-1753, Dresden). Italian composer, from 1715 settled in Dresden, where he soon was composer for the Italian Opera and conductor of the Polish orchestra, from 1733 in court-service as chamber-organist, choir-composer and from 1750 assistant to Hasse as director. Wrote over 20 stage-works, including the comic Calandro, 1726, and Don Chisciotte, 1727 (among the earliest of their class), 3 oratorios, 15 cantatas, 15 masses, 3

Requiems, about 20 motets, a Stabat Mater, and some instrumental works.

Ritter, Alexander (Narva, 1833-1896, Munich), of German descent. Striking Russian composer, brought up in Dresden, pupil of Schubert (the violinist) and the Leipzig Conservatory. In 1854 he married Wagner's niece and in 1856-58 was opera-conductor at Stettin, where she was singing. He then lived at Dresden, from 1860 at Schwerin, from 1863 at Würzburg, from 1882 at Meiningen, where he played violin under Von Bülow, and from 1886 at Munich—always without official position. From the time of his marriage he was zealous in the Weimar circle, and in 1886 he exerted great influence in determining the course of Richard Strauss' development. Wrote the operas Der faule Hans, 1885, and Wem die Krone?, 1890, the symphonic poems Seraphische Phantasie, Erotische Legende, Olafs Hochzeitsriegen, Karfreitag und Fronleichnam, Sursum Corda and Kaiser Rudolfs Ritt zum Grabe, a string-quartet, Graf Walther und die Waldfrau (declamation with piano, orchestrated by Hausegger), about 60 songs and some piano-pieces. Memoir by Hausegger, 1907, and see article by Rosch in Musikal. Wochenblatt, 1898. G.

Ritter, August Gottfried (Erfurt, 1811-1885, Magdeburg). Eminent Thuringian organist, pupil of M. G. Fischer, Hummel, Berger, A. W. Bach and Rungenhagen, from 1837 at Erfurt, from 1844 at Merseburg Cathedral and from 1847 at Magdeburg Cathedral (following Mühl-ling). In 1844-48 he edited Urania and collaborated on the Orgelfreund and the Orgelarchiv. Wrote 4 notable organ-sonatas, many chorale-preludes, fugues, variations and other pieces, 4 books of chorales, 2 symphonies, 3 overtures, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, piano-sonatas, etc., besides editing well-known song-collections. Author of a valuable Gesch. d. Orgelspiels im 14.-18. Jahrh. 1884, Die Kunst d. Orgelspiels, 2 vols. and a text-book in harmony (1860).

Ritter, Christian. 17th C.

Ritter, Frédéric Louis (Strasbourg, 1834-1891, Antwerp). Noted Alsatian conductor, composer and writer, pupil of Hauser, Schletterer and J. G. Kastner, in 1852-56 teaching in Lorraine and then removing to America. At first he was at Cincinnati, where he organized and led the Cecilia and the Philharmonic, from 1861 directed the Arion and the Sacred Harmonic Society in New York and from 1874 was professor at Vassar College (Poughkeepsie, N. Y.). Mus.D. of New York Univ. in 1878. Wrote 3 symphonies, the overture Othello, the symphonic poem Stella, a piano-concerto, a 'cello-concerto, a fantasia for bass-clarinet and orchestra, a string-quartet, 3 piano-quartets, trios, an organ-fantasia and fugue, Psalms 4, 23, 46 and 95, over 100 songs, including the cycle Hafis, etc. Author of a History of Music, 2 vols. 1870-74 (2d ed. 1880), Music in England, 1883, Music in America, 1883 (3d ed. 1893), Music in Relation to Intellectual Life, 1891, and Musical Dic- tion. His wife, née Fanny Raymond (1840-1890), wrote Woman as a Musician, 1877, and Some Famous Songs, besides translating Schumann's Gesammelte Schriften (1877) and Ehler's Briefe über Musik (1877). G. A.

Ritter, Georg Wenzel (Mannheim, 1748-1808, Berlin). Badenese bassoonist, at first playing in the Mannheim orchestra and from 1788 in the court-band at Berlin. Wrote 2 bassoon-concertos and 6 quartets for strings and bassoon.

Ritter, Hermann (Wismar, 1849). North German violinist, pupil of the Berlin Academy and Hochschule, for a time playing in the Schwerin court-band and then studying at Heidelberg University and acting as town-director. Here he invented the 'viola alta', an improved form of viola, which secured Wagner's attention for use at Bayreuth and was then exploited widely elsewhere. From 1879 he was teacher of viola and music-history at the Würzburg Music School, receiving several honors, including the title of professor. In 1905 he formed the Ritterquartett (violin, viola alta, viola tenore and viola bassa), in which till 1914 he played second. Author of Die Gesch.d. Viola Alta, 1877, Die fünfsaitige Geige u. d. Weiterentwicklung d. Streichinstrumente, 1898, Orchesterstudien für Viola (new ed. by Parsch, 1913), a short manual of music-history (1880) and an elaborate treatise (6 vols. 1901-02), works on musical æsthetics (1886-94), instruments (1896) and folk-song (1896), a life of Schubert (1896) and sketches of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven (1897). See sketch by Adema, 1881 (2d ed. 1890). G.

Ritter, Peter (Mannheim, 1763-1846, do.). Badenese 'cellist and composer, pupil of his father and Vogler, from 1784 playing in the Mannheim court-band, becoming concertmaster and in 1803-23 court-director. In 1809 he declined a similar post at Karlsruhe. In 1787 he married the actress Katharina Baumann, who was engaged at the Mannheim theater in 1790-1819. Wrote about 20 effective singspiele, including Der Eremit auf Formentera, 1788, the oratorio Das verlorene Paradies, 1819, 2 symphonies, concertos for various instruments, much chamber-music, etc. Memoir by W. Schulze, 1895.

Ritter, Théodore [name properly Bennet] (n. Paris, 1841-1886, do.). French pianist, pupil of Liszt, from about 1860 touring as virtuoso and writing the dramatic scenas Le Paradis Perdu and Méphistofelès, 2 unsuccessful operas (1861, '65) and many popular piano-pieces.

Rivarde, Serge Achille (New York, 1865). Spanish-American violinist, pupil of Wieniawski and the Paris Conservatory, in 1881-84 in America, in 1886-91 concertmaster of the Lamoureux Orchestra in Paris and since 1894 in London, where from 1899 he has taught at the Royal College. Though a refined virtuoso, he devotes himself mainly to teaching. G. A.

Rivé-King, Julie (Cincinnati, 1857). Able American pianist, pupil of her mother, S. B.

Mills, Wm. Mason and Liszt, appearing in Leipzig in 1874 and from 1875 widely known in America, especially in connection with the Thomas Orchestra. In 1876 she married Frank H. King of Milwaukee. Latterly she has taught at the Bush Conservatory, Chicago. A.

Roberts, John Varley (n. Leeds, 1841-1920, Oxford). Eminent English organist, beginning church-playing when but twelve, from 1862 at Armley, from 1868 at Halifax and in 1882-1918 at Magdalen College, Oxford (following Parratt), and also in 1885-93 at St. Giles' there and conductor of the Choral Society and of the University Glee and Madrigal Society. Mus.D. of Oxford in 1876 and from 1883 repeatedly an examiner. Wrote the cantatas Jonah, The Advent, The Story of the Incarnation and The Passion, Psalm 103, several services, about 60 anthems, part-songs and organ-pieces, besides a Method for Training Choristers, 1898. G.

Robeson, Lila P. (Cleveland, 1880). American operatic contralto, pupil of C. S. Burnham, Mrs. S. C. Ford, Luckstone and Saenger, from about 1905 appearing in concert and from 1911 in opera (since 1912 at the Metropolitan, New York). A.

Robinson, Franklin Whitman (New York, 1875). American organist, trained at the National Conservatory and Columbia University, from 1897 assistant at St. Bartholomew's and in 1904-17 at St. Luke's in Philadelphia besides since 1908 developing at the Institute of Musical Art a novel method of teaching harmony by ear. Author of Aural Harmony, 2 vols. 1918. A.

Robinson, Joseph (Dublin, 1815-1898, do.). Irish choral conductor, in 1834-53 founder and leader of the Antient Concert Society in Dublin, in 1837-47 of the University Choral Society and in 1876-88 of the Musical Society, all important for the musical history of the city, besides serving as conductor at several festivals. In 1849 he married the pianist Fanny Arthur (1831-1879) and from 1856 they both taught at the Royal Irish Academy. G.

Robitschek, Robert (Prague, 1874). Bohemian conductor and composer, pupil of Dvořák, from about 1895 employed at the Prague Volks-theater and elsewhere, in 1902-04 in charge of the Tonkünstler-Orchester in Berlin and then proprietor of the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory, in 1914 becoming its director. Has written the opera Ahasver, the overture Esther, symphonic variations, a 'cello-rhapsody with orchestra, a piano-trio, a ballade for piano, etc.

Robyn, Alfred George (St. Louis, 1860). American composer of a symphony, the symphonic poem Pompeii, a piano-concerto, a piano-quintet, 4 string-quartets, several light operas (from 1903), 3 sacred cantatas, a mass, songs, etc. A.

Rochlitz, Johann Friedrich (Leipzig, 1769-1842, do.). Saxon writer and editor, pupil at Leipzig of the Thomasschule and the University, in 1798-1818 the first editor of the Allgem. Mu- sikal. Zeitung and a contributor till 1835. From 1805 he was on the managing-committee of the Gewandhaus concerts. Hofrat of Weimar. Author of Für Freunde d. Tonkunst, 4 vols. 1824-32 (3d ed. 1868), and editor of Sammlung vorzüglicher Gesangstücke, 3 vols. 1838-40 (choral music from Dufay to Vallotti), besides various non-musical books, some poems and the texts for operas, oratorios and cantatas. Wrote also a mass, a cantata, a Te Deum, Psalm 23 and men's choruses. His correspondence with Goethe was edited by Biedermann in 1887. G (with contents of the Sammlung).

Röckel, Joseph August (Neumburg, 1783-1870, Köthen). Bavarian tenor, from 1804 in operatic work at Vienna, from 1823 coach at the Opera there, in 1828-29 opera-director at Aix and then till 1835 manager of German troupes in Paris and London, continuing to live in England till 1853. With him were associated at first his sons August (1814-1876) and Eduard (1816-1889), both pupils of J. N. Hummel (their uncle), the former becoming theater-conductor at Weimar, Bamberg and Dresden (1843-48) and then imprisoned for thirteen years for revolutionary activity, and the latter from 1836 touring as pianist and from 1848 a teacher at Bath (England). August was about to produce his opera Farinelli at Dresden when association with Wagner led him to withdraw and destroy it. A third son, Joseph Leopold (1838-1923), was also a pianist, long well known at Clifton (England), writing several cantatas, the scena Siddhartha, 1896, effective piano-pieces and many songs. G.

Rockstro [Rackstraw], William Smyth (n. London, 1823-1895, do.). Energetic English historical student and writer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1846 teacher in London and at Torquay, from 1867 organist at Babbacombe and from 1891 lecturer at the Royal Academy and the Royal College in London. Author of two music-histories (1879, 1886, 3d ed. 1897), lives of Handel (1883), Mendelssohn (1884) and Jenny Lind (1891, '94), text-books in harmony (1881) and counterpoint (1882), many articles for Grove's Dictionary (1st ed.) and for the Musical Times and other papers, besides editing Gregorian choir-books. Also wrote the cantata The Good Shepherd, 1883, the ballet Flora's Path, 1891, some fine madrigals and songs, an overture, etc. He was an enthusiastic specialist in old polyphonic music, but apt to form erroneous conclusions about details. G.

Roda, Cecilio de (n. Granada, 1865-1912, Madrid). Spanish historian, trained at Madrid University (Ph.D. 1886), from 1904 head of the music-section of the Ateneo and teacher in its school. Author of Los Instrumentos, las Danzas y las Canciones en le Quijote, 1905, La Evolución de la Música, 1906, a discussion of Beethoven's sketches for opp. 130, 132-3 (1907) and works on his sonatas (1907) and quartets (1909).

Roda, Ferdinand von (Rudolstadt, 1815-1876, n. Kriwitz). A pupil of Hummel, from 1842 active at Hamburg, where in 1855 he started a Bachverein, and from 1857 music-director at Rostock University. Wrote the oratorio Der Sünder, a Passion, fine church-music, the cantata Theomela, the choral works Das Siegesfest and Szenen aus Faust, instrumental works, etc., besides a Liturgisches Handbuch, 1868, and a revision of the text of Beethoven's König Stephan.

Rode, Jacques Pierre Joseph (Bordeaux, 1774-1830, n. Damazon). Distinguished French violinist, pupil of Fauvel and Viotti, in 1790-94 second concertmaster at the Théâtre Feydeau in Paris, then, after tours in Germany, Holland and England, for a time professor at the Paris Conservatory and in 1800 appointed violinist to Napoleon. In 1799 he visited Spain and met Boccherini, in 1803-08 accompanied Boieldieu to Petrograd, where he was made violinist to the Emperor, and from 1811 for a few years was in Germany or at Vienna (in 1813 in contact with Beethoven), then retiring to Bordeaux, with one or two final and unsuccessful appearances at Paris. While at the culmination of his powers he stood as one of the finest players of history, but his career was short and his influence scattered. Wrote 13 violin-concertos, several fantasias or variations with orchestra or quartet, the famous 24 Caprices, 12 other études, 3 sets of duos, Romances Françaises and a method. Memoir by Pougin, 1874. G.

Rode, Johann Gottfried (n. Naumburg, 1797-1857, Potsdam). Saxon hornist, from 1827 bandmaster in the Gardejägerbataillon at Berlin. Wrote concertos for horn and for trumpet, pieces for military band, etc.

Röder, Carl Gottlieb (n. Leipzig, 1812-1883, do.). Founder in 1846 of the great Leipzig establishment for engraving, printing and binding music, succeeded in 1876 by Wolff and Rentsch. In 1889 Karl J. Reichel took the latter's place and in 1915 became chief proprietor. In 1896 they issued a Festschrift, including Riemann's essay on Notenschrift u. Notendruck.

Röder, Ewald (Waldau, 1863). Silesian organist, pupil of the Church Music Institute, Breslau, since 1891 organist and cantor at Lauban. Has written the oratorio Der Jüngling zu Nain, several motets and an organ-sonata, besides a dictionary of Silesian musicians (1890) and a vocal method.

Röder, Georg Vincent (Rammingen, ?1778-1848, Altötting). Würtemberger church-musician, in 1805-14 in court-service at Würzburg, from 1830 director at Augsburg and from 1843 at Altötting. Wrote the oratorio La Messiade, masses, motets, Psalms, a Te Deum, the cantata Cäcilia and 4 operas (from 1815).

Röder, Martin (Berlin, 1851-1895, Boston). Prussian vocal teacher and composer, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, in 1873-80 chorusmaster at the Teatro dal Verme in Milan, in 1875 starting the Società del Quartetto Corale and at times serving as opera-conductor. In 1880 he moved to Berlin, from 1881 teaching at the Scharwenka Conservatory, thence in 1887 to the Royal Academy in Dublin and in 1892 to teach at the New England Conservatory in Boston. Wrote a symphony, the symphonic poems Azorenfahrt and Leonore, the overture Attila, an orchestral suite, a quintet, a quartet, a trio, 3 operas (including Vera, 1881), the 'mysteries' S. Maria appiè della Croce and Maria Magdalena, etc. Author in 1881 of a book of essays (many contributed to the Gazzetta Musicale under the pen-name 'Raro Miedner'), a study of music-culture in Italy (in Waldersee's Vorträge) and travel-notes. A.

Rodio, Rocco. 16th C.

Rodrigo, Maria (Madrid, 1888). Spanish composer, trained at the Madrid Conservatory and under Beer-Walbrunn, writing the opera Bequeriana, 1915, zarzuelas, the choral work Caprichos de Goya, pieces for orchestra and for piano, etc.

Rogel, José (Orihuela, 1829-?). Noted Spanish composer of zarzuelas (65 in 1854-80) for Madrid.

Roger, Gustave Hippolyte (n. Paris, 1815-1879, do.). Noted French operatic tenor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1838 singing at the Opéra-Comique and from 1848 at the Opéra, but in 1861 obliged by an accident to retire. From 1868 he taught at the Conservatory. He sang at many premières, including those of Thomas' Perruquier (1838) and Mina (1843), Auber's Domino Noir (1837), La Part du Diable (1843), Sirène (1844), Haydée (1847) and Enfant Prodigue (1850), Meyerbeer's Prophète (1849), Halévy's Juif Errant (1852), David's Herculanum (1859), etc. G.

Roger, Victor (Montpellier, 1853-1903, Paris). French composer of about 30 effective operettas and other stage-works (from 1882). He was also critic for La France.

Roger-Ducasse, Jean Jules Amable (Bordeaux, 1875). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1902), writing the ballet Orphée, the symphonic poems Sarabande (with solo) and Au Jardin de Marguerite (with soli and chorus), Variations Plaisantes, 1909, Suite Française, Le Joli Jeu de Furet (scherzo) and other orchestral pieces, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, the choral work Sur Quelques Vers de Vergile, several motets, characteristic piano-pieces, etc.

Rogers, Benjamin (1614-1698). 17th C. G.

Rogers, Clara Kathleen, née Barnett (Cheltenham, 1844), daughter of John Barnett. English operatic soprano, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Goetz and Sangiovanni, from 1863 appearing in Italy, from 1866 in England and from 1871 in America, in 1873 settling as teacher in Boston, where in 1878 she married Henry M. Rogers and since 1902 has taught at the New England Conservatory. Author of various books on singing and speech (from 1893) and Memories of a Musical Career, 1920, besides a violin-sonata, many songs and some piano-pieces. A.

Rogers, Francis (Boston, 1870). Gifted American baritone, trained at the New England Conservatory, Boston, and by C. Cheney, W. L. Whitney, Vannuccini, Bouhy and Luckstone, since 1898 widely known in the United States in concert and oratorio, with one season in the Castle Square Opera Company. Author of Some Famous Singers of the 19th Century, 1915. A.

Rogers, James Hotchkiss (Fair Haven, Conn. 1857). American organist, pupil of Eddy, Loeschhorn, Ehrlich, Rohde, Haupt, Fissot, Guilman and Widor, from 1883 in Cleveland, where he is now at the Euclid Avenue Temple and the 1st Unitarian Church, leader of the Rubinstein Club and critic for the Plain-Dealer. Has written the cantatas The Man of Nazareth and The New Life, 3 synagogue-services, some 10 anthems, many effective part-songs and songs, 2 organ-sonatas, 2 organ-suites, an organ-overture and various other pieces. A.

Rogers, Roland (West Bromwich, 1847). Noted English organist, pupil of S. Grosvenor, holding his first church-position at eleven, from 1862 at Wolverhampton, from 1867 at Tetterhall and in 1871-92 and again since 1906 at Bangor Cathedral, in the interim making recital-tours and directing choral societies in Wales. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1875. Has written the cantatas Prayer and Praise, The Garden, 1896, and Florabel (women's voices), Psalm 130, part-songs, songs, a symphony, a string-quartet and organ-pieces. G.

Rognone-Taegio, Francesco and Giovanni Domenico. 17th C.

Roguski, Gustaw (Warsaw, 1839). Polish theorist and composer, pupil of Marx, Kiel and Berlioz, since 1865 professor at the Warsaw Conservatory. Has written a symphony, a quintet for piano and wind, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, 2 masses, various motets, many songs and piano-pieces. Author (with Zelenski) of a text-book in harmony and a translation of Prout's The Orchestra (1906).

Rohde, Eduard (Halle, 1828-1883, Berlin). Saxon organist and singing-master, long at the Georgenkirche in Berlin and teaching at the Sophien-Gymnasium. Wrote the cantata Schildhorn, motets and other choral music, part-songs, 'cello-sonata, etc. He was succeeded by his son (same name).

Rohde, Friedrich Wilhelm (Altona, 1856). North German violinist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1878-85 teaching in Chicago and playing in the Balatka Quartet, with one year as violist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and teacher at the New England Conservatory, then returning to Europe, where he has lived at Hamburg, Schwerin and Copenhagen. Has written a symphony, the orchestral Waldstille and Elfenreigen, a serenade for strings, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a Höllen-Galopp for mixed quintet, many choruses, part-songs, duets, songs, etc.

Röhr, Hugo (Dresden, 1866). Saxon conductor, trained at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1887 director at Augsburg, Prague and Breslau, from 1892 court-director at Mannheim and conductor of the Akademie concerts and since 1896 director of the Munich Opera, with some leadership of the Lehrergesangverein. Has written the operas Vater Unser, 1904, and Frauenlist, 1917, the choral work Ekkehard, choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Rokitansky, Hans, Freiherr von (Vienna, 1835-1909, in Styria). Austrian operatic bass, trained mostly at Bologna and Milan, appearing in concert from about 1855 and in opera at Prague in 1862, in 1864-93 regularly engaged at the Vienna Opera, with some trips elsewhere (as to London in 1865-67 and '76-77). From 1895 he taught at the Vienna Conservatory. G.

Rolla, Alessandro (Pavia, 1757-1841, Milan). Italian violinist, violist and conductor, pupil of Renzi and Conti, from 1782 player in or leader of the court-band at Parma, from 1802 conductor at La Scala in Milan, from 1805 viceregal violinist and from 1807 teacher at the new Conservatory. Wrote 6 ballets (mostly 1802-08), church-music, symphonies, concertos for violin and for viola, a string-quintet, quartets, trios, duets, etc. G.

Rolland, Romain (Clamecy, 1868). Distinguished French author, critic and musicologist, educated in Paris and at the École de Rome in Rome (Dr. ès Lettres, 1895), from 1896 professor of music-history at the Paris École Normale Supérieure and in 1903-06 also head of the music-section of the new École des Hautes Études Sociales and then continuing as lecturer. In 1900 he organized the first International Music History Congress and (with Combarieu) edited its proceedings. In 1901, with others, he established the Revue d'Histoire et Critique Musicales, Combarieu becoming editor. His remarkable blending of exact scholarship, literary and aesthetic culture and the power of masterly exposition has given him a unique place of influence. In 1896 he was made a member of the Florence Academy and in 1915 received the Nobel prize for literature. As a dramatist he is specially known by the cycles on the Revolution (Le 14 Juillet, Danton, Les Loups) and the Tragedies of the Faith (St. Louis, Aërt, Le Triomphe de la Raison). His musical novel Jean-Christophe, 1905-12, won the Prix Guérin in 1913 and has been translated into English and German. Among his writings, also, are lives of Michelangelo and Tolstoy. Author in the musical field of Histoire de l'Opéra en Europe avant Lully et Scarlatti, 1895 (Prix Kastner-Bourgault), Les Musiciens Italiens en France sous Mazarin et l'Orfeo de Luigi Rossi, 1901, Paris als Musikstadt, 1904 (in Strauss' Die Musik), Musiciens d'Autrefois, 1908 (2d ed. 1912), Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui, 1908 (6th ed. 1914), Voyage Musicale au Pays du Passé, 1919, lives of Beethoven (1907) and Handel (1910), many critiques in the Revue de Paris and other journals, and a chapter on 17th-century Italian opera in Lavignac's Encyclopédie, 1913. Sketches by Seippel, 1913, and Zweig, 1920.

Rolle, Johann Heinrich (Quedlinburg, 1718-1785, Magdeburg). Able Saxon organist and composer, pupil of his father, in 1732-36 playing at the Petrikirche at Magdeburg, then studying law and philosophy at Leipzig University, from 1741 violist in the court-band at Berlin, from 1746 organist at the Johanniskirche in Magdeburg and in 1752 his father's successor as town-director there. Wrote about 20 oratorios (a few secular), 4 Passions, several complete annual cycles of church-cantatas, many motets and other sacred works, the odes of Anacreon for solo-voice with clavier, a symphony, organ-pieces, songs, etc. G.

Röllig, Johann Georg (n. Pirna, 1710-1790, Zerbst). Saxon organist and composer, pupil of the Kreuzschule, Dresden, and of Zelenka, from about 1740 court-organist and chamber-musician at Zerbst, becoming Fasch's assistant and in 1758 his successor as court-director. Wrote 14 sinfonie, over 20 pieces for various instruments, trios for flute, violin and bass, cantatas, etc.

Röllig, Karl Leopold (Vienna, ?-1804, do.). After being connected in 1764-73 with the Ackermann theatrical troupe (mostly at Hamburg), from about 1780 noted as a player on Naumann's improved harmonica and after 1795 introducing his own 'orphica' and 'xänor-phica', for all of which he wrote pieces and songs. From 1797 he was employed in the Vienna Library.

Roman, Johan Helmich (Stockholm, 1694-1758, n. Kalmar). Important Swedish composer, often called 'the father of Swedish music.' From 1710 he was violinist in the court-band under his father, from 1714 studied in London with Ariosti and Pepusch, becoming musician to the Duke of Newcastle and winning applause as a player, but returned to Stockholm in 1720. In 1729-45 he was court-director there, but in 1735-37 lived in Italy, France and England for health reasons. In 1740 he was made a member of the Swedish Academy. Wrote over 20 sinfonie, 6 overtures, 5 suites, 2 concerti grossi, 5 violin-concertos, 17 trio-sonatas, sonatas for violin and for flute, many lesser pieces, a mass, motets, about 80 Psalms, other vocal works, etc. Memoir by Vretblad, 2 vols. 1914, with thematic catalogue.

Romani, Carlo (Avellino, 1824-1875, Florence). Italian composer, pupil of Palafuti, Picchianti and his uncle, Pietro Romani, writing the operas Tutti Amanti, 1847, Il Mantello, 1852, I Baccanali di Roma, 1854, Ermellina, 1856, and Gianni di Nisida, the oratorio S. Sebastiano, 1864, and many songs.

Romani, Felice (Genoa, 1788-1865, Nonglia). Famous Italian littérateur and librettist, originally trained for the law, early employed as playwright for the state theaters and from about 1814 producing over 100 opera-texts for all the composers of the day, including Mayr, Rossini, Donizetti, Bellini, Ricci, etc. For years he also edited the Gazzetta Piemontese until, becoming blind, he retired on pension. Memoirs by Lianovosani, 1878, Branca, 1882, and Paschetto, 1900. G.

Romani, Romano (Leghorn, 1881). Italian composer of the operas Rosana, 1904, Zulma, 1909, and Pedra, 1915.

Romaniello, Luigi (Naples, 1860). Gifted Italian pianist and fertile composer, trained mostly at the Naples Conservatory and for a time teaching there. He became leader of the Società del Quartetto and pianist for the Ferni Quartet, teacher at the S. Marcellino seminary and correspondent for Paris papers, besides making tours as player. In 1896 he visited Buenos Aires and settled there. Has written 3 operas, including Alda, 1896, 2 symphonies, the symphonic poems Corsair and Manfred, an overture, 2 piano-concertos, piano-trios, violin- and piano-pieces, a piano-method and songs.

Romanini, Romano (Parma, 1864). Italian violinist, pupil of the Parma Conservatory, from 1892 playing at the Teatro Regio there, then conductor at Savigliano, from 1890 teacher at the Istituto Venturi at Brescia and since 1897 its director. Has written the opera Al Campo, 1895, a symphony and other orchestral works.

Romberg, Andreas Jakob (n. Münster, 1767–1821, Gotha), son of the clarinetist Gerhard Heinrich (1745–1819) and cousin of Bernhard below. Eminent Westphalian violinist, appearing when but seven and at seventeen touring with his cousin and at Paris making the season at the Concerts Spirituels. In 1790–93 they played in the Bonn orchestra. Until 1800 he continued tours with Bernhard in Germany, Italy and France, in 1801–15 lived at Hamburg, where he married, and then became court-director at Gotha. Wrote the operas Die Grossmuth des Scipio, Die Ruinen von Paluzzi and Don Mendoza (comic, with Bernhard), other stage-works, the choral works Das Lied von der Glocke, Die Macht des Gesanges, Was bleibet und was schwindet and Die Harmonie der Sphären, 4 vocal solos with orchestra (texts from Schiller), a mass and much other church-music, 10 symphonies, 23 violin-concertos, over 30 string-quartets and a double quartet, a piano-quartet, quintets for strings and with flute or clarinet, violin-sonatas and many pieces, etc. Memoir by Rochlitz, 1824 (in Für Freunde d. Tonkunst). G.

Romberg, Bernhard (in Oldenburg, 1767–1841, Hamburg), son of the bassoonist Anton (1742–1814) and cousin of Andreas above. Eminent North German 'cellist, pupil of his father, appearing at Paris when but fourteen, in 1784–1800 touring repeatedly with his cousin, besides being engaged with him in 1790–93 in the court-band at Bonn (in contact with Beethoven). In 1799 he visited England and Spain, in 1801–03 taught at the Paris Conservatory, in 1804–05 was in the court-band at Berlin, where, after long trips in Russia, he was court-director in 1815–19, and then lived mostly at Hamburg, but with many further tours. He is counted as one of the founders of the modern school of 'cello-playing. Wrote 9 famous concertos, 3 concertinos, a fantasia, 4 sets of Russian airs, many fantasias on Swedish, Spanish and other national themes, a concerto for two 'cellos, a concertante for two horns, 11 string-quartets, trios, duets, etc., besides 6 operas (1790–1817) and music for several plays. G.

Römhild, Johann Theoderich (Salzungen, 1684–1756, Merseburg). Saxon church-musician, pupil of Joh. Jakob Bach and the Thomas-schule, Leipzig, from 1708 choirmaster at Sprenberg, from 1715 at Freystadt, from 1726 again at Sprenberg, from 1731 court-director at Merseburg and from 1735 also cathedral-organist there. Wrote a Passion, about 250 church-cantatas and over 20 chorale-preludes for organ. Memoir by Paulke, 1919, (in Archiv für Musikwissenschaft).

Ronald, Landon (London, 1873) [name properly Russell, son of Henry Russell, Sr., and brother of Henry Russell, the opera-manager]. Eminent English conductor, trained at the Royal College, London, in 1890 for a short time appearing as pianist, from 1891 accompanist or assistant at Covent Garden and on tour with Harris or Melba. From 1897 he became Tosti's helper at court-functions, in 1898–1902 was conductor at the Lyric, besides leading Sunday concerts at Blackpool, and in 1907–08 was guest-conductor with the London Symphony and then with orchestras on the Continent. Since 1908 he has conducted the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra (formerly the New Symphony), bringing it to high excellence, and also the Promenade Concerts in Birmingham, besides often leading other organizations as guest. Since 1910 he has been principal of the Guildhall School in London. At times he has also served as critic for London papers. Has written the symphonic poem A Winter's Night, the overture A Birthday, the ballets Britannia's Realm, 1902, and Entente Cordiale, 1904, an operetta, the scenas Adonais and The Lament of Shah Jenan, over 200 songs and piano-pieces.

Ronchetti-Monteviti, Stefano (Asti, 1814–1882, Casale Monferrato). Italian theorist, pupil of Neri, from 1850 professor of composition at the Milan Conservatory and from 1877 Mazucato's successor as director. Wrote fine church-music, 3 cantatas from Ossian, a National Hymn (1849) and the unsuccessful opera Pergolesi, 1857.

Ronconi, Domenico (n. Rovigo, 1772–1839, Milan). Noted Italian operatic tenor, from 1797 appearing at Venice and other Italian cities, in 1801–05 at Petrograd, in 1809 at Vienna, in 1810 at Paris and in 1819–29 at Munich, where he taught in the royal family. From 1829 he had a vocal school in Milan. His three sons, Giorgio (1810–1890), Felice (1811–1875) and Sebastiano (b. 1814), were all able stage-singers (especially Giorgio) and also excellent teachers. Giorgio was in America in 1867-74 and then at the Madrid Conservatory. G.

Rongé, Jean Baptiste (Liège, 1825-1882, do.). Belgian musician, trained at the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1851), for a time producing some cantatas, but turning (with Hasselt) to translating opera-texts and also songs. He specialized in the exact fitting of words to the musical form and wrote some essays on the subject. Also wrote the opera La Comtesse d'Albany, 1877, choruses, songs and vocal studies.

Röntgen, Engelbert (Deventer, 1829-1897, Leipzig). Excellent Dutch violinist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1850 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra, from 1869 Droyschok's successor as second concertmaster and from 1873 David's as first. From 1869 he also taught at the Conservatory. He edited Beethoven's quartets. G.

Röntgen, Engelbert (Amsterdam, 1886), son of the next and grandson of the above. Able Dutch 'cellist, pupil of the Amsterdam and Leipzig Conservatories and of Casals, appearing at Rostock in 1905, in 1906-11 active in Zurich at the Tonhalle and the Conservatory, in 1912-14 at the Vienna Opera and since 1916 in the New York Symphony Society, the Chamber Music Society and the Mannes School, besides making tours in both America and Europe. A.

Röntgen, Julius (Leipzig, 1855), son of Engelbert (1) above. Eminent Dutch-Saxon pianist, conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Fr. Lachner, in 1873-74 becoming prominent through tours with the singer Stockhausen and in 1878 settling in Amsterdam, where in 1886-98 he conducted the Maatschappij Concerts (following Verhulst) and in 1886-88 the Felix Meritis. From the first he also taught at the Music School and was one of the founders in 1885 of the new Conservatory, becoming director in 1913. Has written a piano-concerto, a 'cello-concerto, a symphony, orchestral pieces on Dutch and Norwegian themes, a serenade for wind, a piano-trio, 3 sonatas for violin and 3 for 'cello, a violin-fantasia, 2 piano-sonatas, a suite and many other pieces, the opera Agnete, 1914, the choral works Sturmesmythe and Gebet, songs, etc., besides editing old Dutch folk-songs and dances. He has also published Brahms' correspondence with T. W. Engelmann (1918) and has valuable material of like nature pertaining to Grieg. G.

Roosevelt, Hilbourne Lewis (New York, 1848-1885, do.). American organ-maker, as early as 1868 patenting his first electric action and in 1872 opening a factory in New York that soon gained prestige for great improvements in both voicing and action. He was succeeded by his brother and in 1893 the business was absorbed into Farrand & Votey of Detroit. A.

Root, Frederick Woodman (Boston, 1846-1916, Chicago), son of the following. Able American vocal teacher, pupil of Blodgett, Wm. Mason, Goldbeck, Flint, Bassini and Vannuccini, in 1863-69 serving as organist in Chicago and after 1870 prominent as teacher, besides in 1879-85 directing the Mendelssohn Choral Club, writing many articles and lecturing often. Wrote the cantata The Landing of the Pilgrims, 1875, a burlesque operetta, choruses and songs, besides manuals for singers. A.

Root, George Frederick (Sheffield, Mass. 1820-1895, n. Portland, Me.). Noted American song-writer and publisher, from 1839 associated with Lowell Mason in Boston, from 1844 active in New York and from 1859 in the music-dealing and publishing business in Chicago (ended by the fire of 1871). Besides being an organist in early life, he was famous for his popular songs, several cantatas and many collections of part-songs, anthems, etc., for church and school. G. A.

Rootham, Cyril Bradley (Bristol, 1875). Able English organist and composer, trained at St. John's College, Cambridge (Mus. D. 1910), and the Royal College, London, from 1898 at Christ Church (Hampstead) and since 1901 at St. John's College in Cambridge, where from 1912 he has also led the University Musical Society. Has written the choral works In Highland and Meadow, Coronach, The Lady of Shalott, Andromeda, 1908, and For the Fallen, 1915, the solo ballads (with orchestra) Helen of Kirkconnell, Albert Graeme's Song and 4 Dramatic Songs, incidental music for Bridges' Achilles in Scyros, the overture The Spirit of Comedy, the orchestral suite Pan, the rhapsody A Passer-by, a string-quintet, 3 quartets and a rhapsody for strings, Irish Sketches for violin and orchestra, a Fantasia Overture for organ and various other organ-pieces, part-songs and songs. Author of Voice-Training for Choirs and Schools. G.

Ropartz, Joseph Guy Marie (Guingamp, 1864). Gifted French conductor and composer, at first practicing as a lawyer, then pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of Franck, from 1894 head of the Nancy Conservatory and director of symphony concerts there and since 1919 director of the Strasburg Conservatory. Has written the short operas Le Diable Couturier, Marguerite d'Écosse and Paysages de Bretagne, the larger Le Pays, 1912, music for Loti's Pêcheur d'Island (1893), Psalm 36, 4 symphonies (no. 3 with chorus), the suites Scènes Bretonnes and Dimanche Breton, many other orchestral pieces (La Chasse du Prince Arthur, Fantaisie in D, Paysage Breton, Carnaval, Marche de Fête, etc.), Sérénade and Méditation for strings, Adagio for 'cello and Lamento for oboe (both with orchestra), 2 string-quartets, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, many characteristic pieces for organ and for piano, motets and songs (some with orchestra). Author of a sketch of music in Nancy in 1881-97, a memoir of Massé, 3 books of poems and the play La Batte. See Cœuroy, La Musique Française Moderne, 1922. G.

Rore, Cipriano de (1516-1565). 16th C. G.

Rorich, Karl (Nuremberg, 1869). Able Bavarian composer, trained at the Würzburg Music School, from 1892 teacher at the Weimar Conservatory and in 1904-09 also conductor of the Philharmonic Union, and since 1914 director of the Music School at Nuremberg. Has written a symphony, the overtures Märchen and Karnevalistische, the suites Waldleben and Weihnachtsbilder, and Akademischer Festmarsch and Hymnus Solemnis (both for orchestra), an Introduction and Allegro for strings, a wind-quintet, a string-quartet, a suite for two flutes, the fairy-play, Ilsa, choruses, Kammerlieder for alto with string-quartet, songs and piano-pieces, besides a manual in theory.

Rosa, Carl August Nicolas [Karl Rose] (Hamburg, 1842-1889, Paris). Famous North German impresario, trained as violinist and in 1863-65 concertmaster at Hamburg, with appearances in London in 1866 and in America in 1867. Marrying the singer Euphrosyne Parepa in New York, he formed an English opera-troupe for further American tours, returning to England in 1871. After her death in 1874 he undertook a long series of operatic enterprises (in English), usually with excellent forces and a notable repertory. The Carl Rosa Company still continues with more or less success. G.

Rosa, Salvatore (1615-1673). 17th C. G.

Rösch, Friedrich (Memmingen, 1862). Bavarian choral composer, trained in law and music at Munich and, after sojourns in Berlin and Petrograd, settling there. In 1898 he joined Sommer and Rich. Strauss in forming the Genossenschaft deutscher Tonsetzer (for copyright-protection) and in 1919 became president of the Allgem. deutscher Musikverein. Has written the burlesque oratorio Heiliger Antonius, many comic choruses, madrigals and songs, besides Musikal. Streitfragen, 1898, a study of Alex. Ritter (1898) and other essays.

Rosé, Arnold Josef (Jassy, 1863). Eminent Rumanian violinist, pupil of Heissler, making his début in 1879 at the Gewandhaus, Leipzig, and soon after at Vienna, where since 1881 he has been concertmaster at the Opera. In 1882 he formed his own Quartet (with P. Fischer, Rusitska and Buxbaum), making many wide tours. From 1888 he was concertmaster at the Bayreuth festivals. He has received numerous decorations and honors. In 1902 he married the sister of Mahler.

Rösel, Rudolf Arthur (n. Gera, 1859). Saxon violinist, pupil of the Weimar Conservatory, in 1877-84 playing in orchestras at Hamburg, Lugano and Weimar, from 1884 concertmaster at Rotterdam and teacher at the Conservatory and since 1887 concertmaster in the Weimar court-orchestra and teacher at the Conservatory. Has written the stage-works Halimah, 1895, and Théâtre Variété, music for Der gestiefelte Kater, the symphonic poem Frühlingstürme, concertos for violin and for 'cello, 2 string-quartets, nocturnes for horn and for oboe (with orchestra), violin-pieces and songs.

Rosellen, Henri (Paris, 1811-1876, do.). Popular French pianist and teacher, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of Herz (whose style he imitated). Wrote effective salon-music and many études, a concertante for piano-trio and a method, etc. G.

Roselli, Francesco. 16th C.

Rosen, Johan Magnus (Gothenburg, 1806-1885, Stockholm). Swedish editor and critic, at intervals after 1830 editing musical, theatric or artistic journals in Stockholm and writing for German and Austrian papers. Wrote an opera, music for several plays, the choral work Dit Frusna Hjärtat, the tone-picture Pompeji and other orchestral works, pieces for violin and for clarinet and some songs.

Rosen, Max (Dorohoi, 1900). Gifted Rumanian violinist, brought up in New York, pupil of Mannes and Sinzheimer and (as protégé of De Coppet) of Auer and Hess, making a brilliant début in 1915 at Dresden, a tour in Germany and Scandinavia in 1916-17 and much success in America since 1918. A.

Rosenberg, Anders Gustaf (Lilla Mellöfa, 1809-1884, Nora). Swedish organist and collector of folk-songs and dances (3 series, 1876-82).

Rosenberg, Vilhelm (Copenhagen, 1862). Danish conductor and composer, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory (Ancker Scholar in 1892), in 1889-91 conductor at the Dagmar-Theater there, in 1892-1907 of the Ydun (choral society) and since 1909 of the Faelleskor, besides in 1890-1906 teaching at the Horneman Institute. He was one of the promoters of the Koncertforening. Has written an opera, a ballet, music for many plays, the choral works Tonernes Verden, Charles Dickens and Attila, songs, etc.

Rosenfeld, Leopold (Copenhagen, 1850-1909, do.). Danish composer, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory (Ancker Scholar in 1881), writing the choral works Henrik og Else, Noar Solen Daler and Liden Helga, about 200 songs and duets, pieces for piano and for violin, etc. He was long critic for the Musikbladet.

Rosenfeld, Maurice Bernard (Vienna, 1867). Able Austrian pianist and critic, brought up in New York, pupil of the Chicago Musical College, from 1888 teaching there and in 1912-16 one of its directors, besides some connection with other schools. In 1907-1915 he was critic for the Chicago Examiner and from 1917 for the News, as well as in 1913-16 writing for Musical America. He is well known both as pianist and as lecturer on music-history. A.

Rosenhain, Jakob [Jacques] (Mannheim, 1813-1894, Baden-Baden). Able Badense pianist and composer, pupil of Jakob Schmitt and Schnyder von Wartensee, from 1823 touring from Frankfurt, from about 1840 active at Paris in association with Alard, J. B. Cramer and others, and finally at Baden-Baden. Wrote 3 operas, 3 symphonies, a piano-concerto, 3 string-quartets, 4 piano-trios, 3 'cello-sonatas, 3 piano-sonatas and many other pieces and études. Author of Erinnerungen an Paganini, 1893. Memoir by Kratt-Harveng, 1895.

Rosenmüller, Johann (?1620-1684). 17th C. G.

Rosenov, Emil Karlovitch (Paris, 1861). Russian-French writer, trained at the Moscow Conservatory and University, in 1901 (with Taneiev) starting a musicological society in Moscow and in 1904 founding the first public library and reading-room of music in Russia (in 1918 incorporated into the national system of education), of which he has remained librarian. Author of short lives of J. S. Bach and Graun, Abriss d. Gesch. d. Oratoriums, Der goldene Schnitt in d. Musik u. in d. Poesie and manuals of ear-training and piano-technique.

Rosenthal, Moriz (Lemberg, 1862). Distinguished Galician pianist, precociously developed (playing in public with distinction at ten), pupil of Galath, Mikuli, Joseffy and Liszt, formally appearing in 1876 at Vienna and Bucharest and in 1878 at Paris and Petrograd. In 1878-84 he withdrew to secure a general education at Vienna. He then resumed concert-work with the most brilliant success throughout Europe and in America (5 visits, 1887, '96, '98, 1906, '23). His technical equipment is phenomenal, especially in refinement of tone, dexterity and strength, but uniting with these much originality and dignity of conception, so that he stands in the front rank of living players. Has written several piano-pieces and advanced studies (with Schytte). His home is in Vienna. G.

Rosetti, Stefano. 16th C.

Rosier, Charles. 17th C.

Rossi, Cesare (Naples, 1842). Since 1870 theater-conductor in Naples, writing the operas Il Ritratto di Perla, 1879, and Babiles, 1879.

Rossi, Cesare (Mantua, 1864). Italian composer of the operas I Fuggitivi, 1896, and Nadaya, 1903.

Rossi, Francesco. 17th C.

Rossi, Gaetano (Verona, 1780-1855, do.). Noted Italian librettist, long employed as playwright at the Fenice in Venice. Author of about 100 opera-texts, including many famous works by Donizetti, Rossini, Mercadante and Meyerbeer.

Rossi, Giovanni Gaetano (Borgo S. Donnino, 1828-1886, Genoa). Italian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory, from 1852 court-organist at Parma, theater-concertmaster and from 1864 also head of the local conservatory, in 1873-79 conductor at the Carlo Felice in Genoa and then director of the Liceo there. Wrote the operas Elena di Taranto, 1852, Giovanni Giscala, 1855, Nicolo de' Lapi, 1865, and La Contessa d'Altenberg, 1871, a Seven Words, a Requiem, some masses and the overture Saulo, 1878. G.

Rossi, Giulio (Rome, 1865). Versatile Italian operatic bass, pupil of Oreste Tomassoni, from 1887 rapidly securing approval in Italy, Russia, England and South America, with prolonged engagements at Milan, Madrid, Petrograd, Rio de Janeiro and other cities, including 1908-13 at the Metropolitan, New York. One of his early tours was with Patti and a later one with Tetrizzini. He sang at the premières of Franchetti's Colombo (1892) and Fior d'Alpe (1894) and of Mascagni's Ratcliff (1895).

Rossi, Lauro (Macerata, 1810-1885, Cremona). Noted Italian conductor and composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, from 1832 conductor at the Teatro Valle in Rome, in 1835-43 with a troupe visiting Mexico, Havana and New Orleans, from 1850 director of the reorganized Milan Conservatory, in 1871-78 Mercadante's successor as head of the Naples Conservatory and in 1880 retiring to Cremona. Wrote nearly 30 operas, including I Falsi Monetari, 1834, Cellini a Parigi, 1845, Il Domino Nero, 1849 (his best work), and La Contessa di Mons, 1874, the oratorio Saul, 1833, masses, cantatas, elegies for Bellini and Mercadante, choruses for Plautus' Captivi, songs and vocalises, besides some fugues for strings and a textbook in harmony (1858). G.

Rossi, Luigi [Aloysius Rubens] (1598-1653). 17th C. G.

Rossi, Salomone. 16th C. G.

Rossini, Gioachino Antonio (Pesaro [Feb. 29], 1792-1868 [Nov. 13], n. Paris). Celebrated Italian composer, pupil of Angelo Tesei and the Bologna Liceo, but largely educated by observation and experiment. His mind was alert and his spirit venturesome, so that he essayed a cantata at seventeen and a short opera two years later, thus entering on a career of production that rapidly became a triumph. The raciness of his humor and his daring in discarding conventions were supported by genuine powers of invention and construction, as well as by the culture that he gained from the study of certain German masters, notably Mozart. From 1815 he was obliged to hasten from one Italian city to another to keep the engagements that crowded upon him, his chief centers being Milan and Naples. In 1822, with his bride, née Isabella Colbran, who had long sung in his works, he went to Vienna and in 1823 to Paris and London, where a few months' stay yielded him a small fortune. From 1824 till 1836 he was in Paris, except for a brief period in 1830. Till the end of 1825 he was manager of the Théâtre Italien, displaying cleverness and enterprise in his artistic policy, but reaping no large pecuniary gain. In 1826 he was appointed to two court-positions with high salaries and almost no duties (Compositeur du Roi and Inspecteur-Général du Chant), which spurred him to fresh exertions, the most brilliant of which were the French version of Mosè in Egitto in 1827 and the greatest of his works, Guillaume Tell, in 1829. In the glow attending the success of this latter he made a contract to write four more operas for Paris before 1839 and none elsewhere. But the Revolution of 1830 utterly wrecked this arrangement, and presently he determined to cease opera-writing altogether, this decision being clinched by the hearing of Meyerbeer's Huguenots in 1836. Indeed, after 1830 he wrote little of consequence except his showy and very popular Stabat Mater in 1841-42. In 1836-1847 he lived at Bologna, where he took great interest as honorary director in the Liceo Filarmónico (later called by his name) and then moved to Florence. His first wife died in 1845 and in 1847 he married the Parisian Olympe Pélissier. In 1855 he returned to Paris and his last years were spent in a circle of admirers who paid tribute to his wit and love of flattery.

His career presents many contradictory elements. He had immense native verve, vivacity and ambition, coupled with obvious gifts of melody and movement in expression. He greatly extended the range of Italian operatic technique, both on the side of lyric ornamentation and on that of sumptuous instrumental texture. In his lighter works, like the Barbiere and Cenerentola, he displayed a sparkling genius that commends general admiration and in his Tell he touched an unexpected height of dignity and dramatic truth. But much of his work was incredibly hasty in execution and shallow in artistic purpose, so that its success with a thoughtless public tended to turn operatic art back into the mere sensationalism of the old Neapolitan style at its worst. His appreciation of the higher values of the musical drama was slight, if, indeed, he was capable of understanding them at all. The charm of lyricism for its own sake, the captivation of audiences by brilliant and unexpected effects and the impress of his love for momentum, dash and humor—these were his dominating artistic impulses. That he had some sense of their insufficiency is shown by his sudden cessation from production in the face of the advancing power of other artists. His works include the following:

Operas—La Cambiale di Matrimonio, 1810 (Venice), L'Equivoco Stravagante, 1811 (Bologna), L'Inganno Felice, 1812 (Ven.), L'Occasione Fa il Ladro, 1812 (do.), La Scala di Seta, 1812 (do.), Demetrio e Polibio, 1812 (Rome), La Pietra del Paragone, 1812 (Milan), Tancredi, 1813 (Ven.), L'Italiana in Algeri, 1813 (do.), Il Figlio per Azzardo, 1813, (do.), Aureliano in Palmira, 1813 (Milan), Il Turco in Italia, 1814 (do.), Elizabetta, 1815 (Naples), Sigismondo, 1815 (Ven.), Torvaldo e Dorliska, 1815 (Rome), Il Barbiere di Siviglia, 1816 (do.), La Gazzetta, 1816 (Nap.), Otello, 1816 (do.), La Cenerentola, 1817 (Rome), La Gazza Ladra, 1817 (Milan), Armida, 1817 (Nap.), Adelaide di Borgogna or Ottone, 1818 (Rome), Adina, 1818 (Lisbon), Mosè in Egitto, 1818 (Naples, revised 1827 Paris), Ricciardo e Zoraida, 1818 (Nap.), Ermione, 1819 (do.), Edoardo e Cristina, 1819 (Ven.), La Donna del Lago, 1819 (Nap.), Bianca e Faliero, 1819 (Milan), Maometto II, 1820 (Naples, revised 1826, Paris, as Le Siège de Corinthe), Matilda di Ciabranco, 1821 (Rome), Zelmira, 1821 (Nap.), Semiramide, 1823 (Ven.), Il Viaggio a Reims, 1825 (Paris), Le Comte Ory, 1828 (do.), Guillaume Tell, 1829 (do.). In addition, the pasticcio Robert Bruce, 1846 (Paris). Cantatas—Il Pianto d'Armonia, 1808, Didone Abbandonata, 1811, Ciro in Babilonia, 1812, Egle ed Irene, 1814, Teti e Peleo, 1816, Igea, 1819, Partenope, 1819, La Riconoscenza, 1821, Il Vero Omaggio, 1823, L'Aurora Felice, 1823, La Sacra Alleanza, 1823, Il Bardo, 1823, Il Ritorno, 1823, Il Pianto delle Muse, 1823, I Pastori, 1825, Il Serto Votivo, 1829. Also for the Paris Exposition, 1867.

Sacred Music—Stabat Mater, 1842 (part written in 1832); Petite Messe Solennelle, 1864; Tantum ergo, 1847; Quoniam; O Salutaris.

A large number of fugitive pieces, mostly vocal, including many canzonets, the scena Alle Voci della Gloria, Les Soirées Musicales (ariettes and duets), a Inno Popolare, 1846 (accession of Pius IX), etc., with some piano-pieces.

Sketches and memoirs by Carpani, 1824, d'Ortigue, 1829, Bettoni, 1836, Blaze de Bury, 1854, Escudier, 1854, Mirecourt, 1855, Montazio, 1862, Azevedo, 1865, Edwards, 1869 (condensed, 1881), Pougin, 1870, Silvestri, 1874, Zanolini, 1875, Sittard, 1882 (in Waldersee's Vorträge), Thrane, 1885, Kohut, 1892, Checchi, 1898, Gandolfi, 1902, Dauriac, 1905, Corradi, 1909, Struth, n. d., Istel, 1911 (in Musik), Curzon, 1920, etc. G.

Rössler, Franz Anton [Francesco Antonius Rosetti] (Leitmeritz, 1750-1792, Ludwigslust). Able Bohemian composer, from 1773 musician to Prince Wallerstein and from 1789 court-director at Schwerin. Wrote several operas, including Das Winterfest der Hirten, 1789, 2 oratorios, a Requiem, over 30 symphonies, concertos for flute, for clarinet and for horn, a sextet for wind and strings, 9 string-quartets, etc. See Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, xii, and Kaul, Die Vokalwerke, 1911.

Rost, Nikolaus. 16th C.

Rota, Andrea (?1553-1597). 16th C. G.

Roters, Ernst (Oldenburg, 1892). North German composer, pupil of G. Schumann and Mayer-Mahr, in 1914-15 teaching at the Danzig Conservatory and since 1918 active at Hamburg. Has written an oratorio, music for Walter's Der glückselige Meergarten and Shakespeare's Midsummer-Night's Dream (1921), both of which are also arranged as orchestral suites, a choral symphony (with soloists), an orchestral Tanzrhapsodie and Legende, a suite for piano and orchestra, a Kammersinfonie, a Prelude and Fugue for strings, a Nachtstück for string-quartet, a Rhapsodie for piano, violin and 'cello, a suite, variations and other pieces for piano and songs.

Roth, Bertrand (Degersheim, 1855). Swiss pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Liszt, in 1880-84 teacher at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt and in 1882 co-founder with Schwarz and Fleisch of the Raff Conservatory there, in 1884-90 teacher at the Dresden Conservatory and then head of his own school, in 1903 gaining the title of royal professor. In 1901 he instituted recitals devoted to works by recent composers. Has written piano-pieces and songs.

Roth, Charles Alfred (Falun, 1870). Noted Swedish pianist, pupil of the Stockholm Conservatory and of Delaborde and Pugno, touring from about 1895 in Scandinavia, Germany, France and England and since 1906 organist at the chapel of the Swedish Embassy in London and conductor of a Swedish choral society there.

Roth, Philipp (Tarnowitz, 1853-1898, Berlin). Silesian 'cellist, pupil of Wilh. Müller and the Berlin Hochschule, after 1878 touring widely from Berlin, in 1890 starting the Freie Musikalische Vereinigung and editing its Signale, and publishing a method (1888, including a guide to 'cello-literature).

Rothier, Léon (Rheims, 1874). Gifted French operatic bass, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1899 engaged at the Opéra-Comique, from 1903 at Marseilles, from 1907 at Nice, in 1909-10 at Lyons and from 1910 at the Metropolitan, New York, besides from 1916 teaching at the new Volpe Institute. His répertoire includes about 120 rôles (French). A.

Rothwell, Walter Henry (London, 1872). Able English conductor, brought up in Vienna, pupil of the Conservatory there and of Thuille and Schillings, from about 1890 concertizing in Austria, Germany and Switzerland, in 1905-07 Mahler's assistant at the Hamburg Opera, then conductor at Mecklenburg, Breslau and Vienna, in 1903 director of the Amsterdam Opera, from 1904 conductor for the H. W. Savage Company in America (Parsifal, the American première of Madama Butterfly, etc.), in 1908-15 conductor of the St. Paul Orchestra, in 1916 and later leader of summer-concerts in New York, in 1917-18 guest-conductor in Cincinnati and Detroit and since 1919 conductor of the new Los Angeles Philharmonic. In 1908 he married the soprano Elisabeth Wolff. Has written an orchestral suite, a piano-concerto, 2 piano-sonatas and other pieces, music for Maeterlinck's Mort de Tintagiles, many songs, etc. A.

Rotoli, Augusto (Rome, 1847-1904, Boston). Italian vocal teacher, pupil of Luchesi, from about 1870 leader of a choral society in Rome, from 1876 teacher in the royal family and from 1878 maestro at the Cappella del Sudario. In 1885 he moved to Boston to teach at the New England Conservatory, in 1896 becoming choir-master at St. James'. Wrote a mass and a Salmo Elegiaco for the funeral of Victor Emmanuel (1878) and many fine songs. A.

Rottenberg, Ludwig (Czernowitz, 1864). Bukowinan conductor, pupil of Hfimaly, R. Fuchs and Mandyczewski, from about 1885 concert-accompanist for G. Walter, H. Spies and A. Barbi, from 1888 conductor of the Orchester-verein of the Musikfreunde in Vienna, in 1891-92 opera-director at Brünn and since 1892 director at the Frankfort Opera. In 1912-13 he led Wagner works at Covent Garden in London. Has written the opera Die Geschwister, 1916, a set of 30 songs (1914) and a violin-sonata (1919).

Rotter, Ludwig (Vienna, 1810-1895, do.). Austrian organist, from about 1835 at the Pfarrkirche am Hof in Vienna, from 1850 Sechter's assistant as court-organist and in 1867 his successor, with the title of vice-kapellmeister. Wrote much solid church-music, including masses, a Requiem, graduals, a Te Deum, etc., organ- and piano-pieces and a text-book in harmony.

Rottmanner, Eduard (Munich, 1809-1843, Speyer). Bavarian organist, at first a singer in the court-choir at Munich and organist for the Bürger-Kongregation, from 1839 cathedral-organist at Speyer. Wrote much church-music, including masses, vespers, motets, a Requiem, hymns, etc., many with orchestra, besides a collection of modern Greek songs.

Rouget de l'Isle, Claude Joseph (in the Jura, 1760-1836, Choisy-le-Roi). French engineer and song-composer, most famous as author of the Marseillaise (1792), with other patriotic hymns and 75 songs, besides two opera-librettos. G.

Rousseau, Jean Jacques (Geneva, 1712-1778, n. Paris). Distinguished Swiss philosopher, critic and satirist, counting among his many occupations various musical undertakings. From 1742 he advocated a form of numeral-notation (dissertation before the Académie in Paris), in 1745 produced privately the opera Les Muses Galantes, in 1752 made a hit with the pastoral comedy Le Devin du Village, about the same time wrote hasty articles for Diderot's Encyclopédie (from 1755 severely criticized by Rameau), in 1753 issued violent diatribes against French music (two Lettres), at intervals put forth various other critical essays on points connected with the so-called 'Guerre des Bouffons' and the earlier examples of Gluck's reforming efforts, in 1767 published a Dictionnaire de Musique, in 1773 brought out the melodrama Pygmalion with success and left a striking set of about 100 duets and romances (Les Consolations des Misères de ma Vie, 1781) and portions of the opera Daphnis et Chloé. With all his eccentricity and extravagance, he served in many ways as a stimulus to the development of French musical art. Memoirs by Jansen, 1884, Pougin, 1901, Istel, 1901, Hellouin, 1903, Schütte, 1910, Tiersot, 1912, Faguet, 1913, etc. G.

Rousseau, Samuel Alexandre (Neuve-Maison, 1853-1904, Paris). Able French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1878, also the Prix Cressent and in 1892 the City of Paris prize), long choir-master at Ste.-Clothilde, from 1892 conductor at the Lyrique, professor at the Conservatory and chorus-master for its concerts, besides writing for the Éclair. Wrote the operas Dinorah, 1879, Mérowig, 1891, La Cloche du Rhin, 1898 (his chief work), Milia, 1904, and Leone, 1910, 2 masses, a Requiem, a 'cello-sonata, pieces for string-quartet, organ- and piano-pieces and songs. G.

Roussel, Albert Charles Paul (Tourcoing, 1869). French composer, originally in naval service, then pupil of Gigout and d'Indy, in 1902-14 teacher at the Schola Cantorum, Paris. Has written 2 symphonies (Le Poème de la Forêt, 1908, and in B, 1922) the prelude Résurrection, the sketches Évocations Vendanges, Danse de l'Oiseau Sacré and Pour une Fête de Printemps, 1921, a quintet for strings and horn, a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, a piano-suite, sonatina and pieces, music for Jean-Aubry's Le Marchand de Sable qui Passe (1908), the ballet Le Festin de l'Araignée, 1913, and various songs.

Roussier, Pierre Joseph (Marseilles, 1716-1790?, Ecouis). French priest (abbé), author of essays on harmony (from 1756), ancient music (1770), Chinese music (1779, notes on Amiot), etc.

Rovelli, Pietro (Bergamo, 1793-1838, do.). Italian violinist, pupil of R. Kreutzer, from about 1810 at Weimar, in 1814-19 at Munich (where he taught Molique and Täglichsbeck), and then maestro at S. Maria Maggiore in Bergamo. Wrote fine violin-caprices, études and variations. G.

Rovetta, Giovanni. 17th C.

Rowaldt, Johann Jakob (1718-1775, Marienburg). Prussian organist, long at St. George's in Marienburg, writing a notable cycle of cantatas for the church-year on texts by S. E. Fromm (1743).

Rowbotham, John Frederick (Edinburgh, 1854). English clergyman from 1891, since 1916 vicar of Sutton Cheney. He studied music at Oxford, at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and elsewhere, with long travels. Since 1910 he has edited The Bard, having since 1888 been a fertile poet. Author of a History of Music, 3 vols. 1885-87 (also condensed, 1891), Private Life of Great Composers, 1892, The Troubadours and the Courts of Love, 1895, Hist. of Music to the Time of the Troubadours, 1899, articles for the Chambers Encyclopædia and essays in periodicals. Has also written a mass and some songs.

Royer, Joseph Nicolas Pancrace (in Savoy, 1705-1755, Paris). French conductor, from 1725 teaching in Paris, from 1739 playing in the court-band, from 1741 conductor at the Opéra and from 1753 inspector there and chamber-musician at the court, besides being from 1748 manager of the Concerts Spirituels. Wrote the operas Pyrhus, 1730, and Pandore, 3 ballets, clavier-sonatas and pieces. See Brenet, Concerts en France sous l'Ancien Régime, 1900.

Rôze, Marie Hippolyte, née Ponsin (Paris, 1846). Eminent French operatic soprano, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, in 1865-68 engaged at the Opéra-Comique and in 1870 at the Opéra, but then turning to relief-work in the Franco-Prussian War, in 1872-90 a favorite in London on the stage and still later in oratorio and concert. From 1890 she lived as teacher in Paris. She visited America in 1877 and '80. In 1874 she married the American bass J. E. Perkins (d. 1875) and later for a time was wife of the impresario Mapleson. She sang at the premières of Auber's Premier Jour de Bonheur (1868), Flotow's L'Ombre (1870) and Balfe's Talismano (1874), besides at many English premières of other works. Her rendering of the rôle of Carmen was particularly famous. In 1883-89 she was a member of the Carl Rosa Company. G.

Roze, Raymond [J. H. Raymond Roze-Perkins] (London, 1875-1920, London), son of the above. English conductor, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, associated with Irving at the Lyceum Theatre and with Tree at His Majesty's, besides conducting English opera at Covent Garden in 1913. Wrote the opera Joan of Arc, 1913, the fantastic play Arabesque, 1916, and music for nine of the Shakespeare plays, for Tribby and for other dramas. He gave various works with Continental orchestras.

Rozkošný, Josef Richard (Prague, 1833). Able Bohemian pianist and composer, pupil of Jiránek, Tomaschek and J. F. Kittl, from 1855 known as player in Austria, Hungary, Rumania, etc., and later settling at Prague. Has written the operas St. Nicholas, 1870, St. John's Rapids, Zavish of Falkenstein, The Poachers, Cinderella, 1885, Rübezahl, 1889, Satanella, 1898, Stoja and The Black Lake, masses for men's voices, choruses, many songs, overtures and piano-pieces.

Rózsavölgyi. The royal music-publishing firm at Pest, founded in 1850 by Julius Rózsavölgyi (son of a noted violinist) and Norbert Grinzwil. From small beginnings it rose rapidly to importance, issuing the works of all the leading Hungarian composers, fostering the formation of orchestral and choral societies and often arranging musical festivals at which works like Liszt's masses and St. Elisabeth were produced. Under its present management it has branches in Berlin, Leipzig and London.

Rózycki, Ludomir von (Warsaw, 1883). Gifted Polish conductor and composer, trained at the Warsaw Conservatory and by Humperdinck, in 1908-18 conductor at the Lemberg Opera and teacher at the Conservatory there and then at Warsaw. Has written the operas Boleslaus the Bold, 1909, Eros and Psyche, 1917, and Beatrice Cenci, 1922, the symphonic poems Stńczyk, Boleslaus the Bold, Pan Twardowski, Kasimir the Great, The Maid of Warsaw and Anielli, a prelude to Mona Lisa Gioconda, a piano-quintet, a rhapsody for piano-trio, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, many piano-pieces and songs.

Rubens, Paul Alfred (London, 1875-1917, Falmouth). From 1895 a successful English collaborator in many operettas, beginning with Floradora, 1899, and of many popular songs and ballads.

Rubenson, Albert (Stockholm, 1826-1901, do.). Swedish composer and critic, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Gade, in 1850-51 violinist in the court-orchestra at Stockholm, then critic or editor for musical and theatrical papers, from 1872 inspector at the Conservatory and from 1888 its director. Wrote a symphony, the overture Julius Cesar, orchestral suites and intermezzi, music for Hostrup's Night in the Mountains (1858) and Björnson's Lame Hulda (1865), a string-quartet, part-songs and songs.

Rubert, Johann Martin (?1614-1680). 17th C.

Rubinelli, Giovanni Battista (Brescia, 1753-1829, do.). Italian operatic artificial contralto, from 1771 making a reputation in Stuttgart, from 1774 in Italy (with a visit to London in 1786) and continuing a favorite till his retirement in 1800 to Brescia. G.

Rubini, Giovanni Battista (Romano di Lombardia, 1795-1854, n. do.). Eminent Italian operatic tenor, imperfectly taught in youth and making his way at first with difficulty, but gradually securing small engagements at Pavia, Brescia, Venice and Naples (where he had lessons from Nozzari). By about 1820, however, he had won applause at Rome and Palermo and in 1825 was hailed at Paris as 'king of tenors,' followed by similar success at Naples, Milan, Vienna and (from 1831) London. His early work was wholly in Rossini's works, but he now became the special interpreter of Bellini and Donizetti. In 1832-43 he sang at Paris and London alternately, in concert as well as opera, in 1843 toured for a short time with Liszt, made two trips to Russia and in 1845 retired with an enormous fortune. His voice, as finally developed, was under extraordinary control over a wide range and had both commanding power and exquisite expressiveness. He had also great skill in utilizing points of dramatic climax. Wrote a few songs and vocal studies. G.

Rubinstein, Anton Gregorovich (Vichvatnets, n. Balta, [Nov. 28] 1829-1894 [Nov. 20], Peterhof). Distinguished Russian (Ukrainian) pianist and composer, of Jewish descent, his father being a maker of pencils, his mother (née Löwenstein) coming from Silesia. He was brought up in Moscow, where his early teachers were his mother and the pianist Villoing. In 1840-43 the latter took him to Paris and on tours to Holland, England and Sweden. In 1844, with his brother, he studied under Dehn in Berlin and then toured in Germany and Austria. From 1848 he made his home in Petrograd, where he had the patronage of the Grand Duchess Helen and entered upon extensive composition, though at intervals, as in 1854-58, '67-70, '72-73 and '85-87, making great circuits as pianist (the third to America) and securing an almost unrivaled eminence. Meanwhile in 1858 he was made court-pianist at Petrograd, from 1859 conducted the concerts of the Imperial Musical Society and in 1862-67 was director of the new Conservatory. He received numerous honors at home and abroad. After 1890 he lived in Germany, at first at Berlin, but from 1892 at Dresden. The fact that he did not win great success as composer embittered him and he was strongly opposed to the whole Wagnerian movement, so that his last years were filled with pessimism about the future of musical art. Yet he still held his place as one of the most masterful and impressive interpreters of history.

Considering his derivation and the influences that shaped his genius as composer, it is not strange that his works have little that is distinctively Russian and that he was regarded as essentially a German by the leaders of the new national school. He had the gift of fluent melody, of rich and picturesque effect and often of largeness of conception. But he failed to perfect his powers by self-discipline. He seldom achieved the results that his command over the technique of composition seemed to indicate. The lack of finished articulation and sustained development make his style too often loose and rambling. His want of keen dramatic instinct thwarted his lifelong ambition in opera. His experiment with 'sacred operas' proved without important success. Yet, even when the total impression is uneven and disappointing, in works like The Demon, The Maccabees and The Merchant of Moscow, the Ocean Symphony and the violin- and piano-concertos there are large sections of rich and noble inspiration. In them, as in many of his shorter works, there is a fine pictorial quality and a warmth of imagination that belong with the true spirit of musical romanticism.

The list of his works is as follows (opus-nos. in brackets).

Operas—Dmitri Donskoi, 1852, Hadji-Abrek (not given), Sibirskie Ochozniki (The Siberian Hunters), 1853, Fomka Durachok (Tom the Fool), 1853, Mestj (Revenge), 1855, Die Kinder der Heide, 1861 (Vienna), Feramos or Lalla Rookh, 1863 (Dresden), The Demon, 1875, Nero, 1879 (Hamburg), Kalashnikov Moskovski Kupets (The Merchant of Moscow), 1880, Unter Räufern, 1883, Der Papagei, 1884 (both Hamburg), Goryushka (The Mourner), 1889. Also the ballet La Vigne, 1882.

Sacred Dramas—Das verlorene Paradies, 1858 (Weimar, and revised, 1875, Düsseldorf), Der Thurm zu Babel, 1870 (Königsberg), Die Makkabäer, 1875 (Berlin), Sulamith, 1883 (Hamburg), Moses, 1887, Christus, 1888 (Berlin).

Cantatas—Die Nixe (women's voices), [63] and Der Morgen (men's do.), [74]; scenes, E dunque ver? (soprano) [58], Hecuba and Hagar in der Wüste (alto) [92].

Gedichte und Requiem für Mignon (soli, chorus and piano) [91]; 16 choruses [31, 61, 62].

Over 125 songs [1, 8, 27, 32-4, 36, 57, 64, 72, 76, 78, 83, 101, 105, 115].

For orchestra—symphonies in F [40], C, Ocean [42], A [56], D min., Dramatic [95], G min. [107] (in memory of the Grand Duchess Helen), and A min. [111]; symphonic poem La Russie, 1882; overtures, Triumphata [43], in B-flat [60], Antony and Cleopatra [116] and Solenelle [120]; suite in E-flat [119]; musical 'portraits', Faust [68], Ivan IV [79], Don Quixote [87].

Concertos—for piano, in E [25], F [35], G [45], D min. [70] and E-flat [94]; for violin, in G [46]; for cello, in A min. [65] and D min. [96]. Also fantasias for piano and orchestra [84, 110 (Eroica)] and Caprice Russe, do. [102]; Romance and Caprice for violin and orchestra [86].

Chamber music—octet in D for piano, strings and wind [9]; string-sextet in D [97]; quintet in F for piano and wind [55] and in G min. for piano and strings [99]; piano-quartet in C [66]; cleopano-trios in F and G min. [15], B-flat [52], A min. [85] and C min. [108]. Sonatas for violin in G [13], A min. [19] and B min. [98]; for viola in F min. [49]; for cello in D [18] and G [39] (the last three also arr. for violin).

For piano—sonatas in E [12], C min. [20], F [41] and A min. [100]; suite (10 movements) [35]; 6 Preludes [24]; 12 Études [23, 81]; 3 Barcarolles; 2 Funeral Marches [29]; 6 Preludes and Fugues [53]; 6 National Dances [82]; 2 Akrostichons [37, 114]; Kammennoi Ostrov (The Stone Island), 24 pictures [10]; 6 Soirées à St.-Petersbourg [44]; Le Bal (10 pieces) [14]; Album de Peterhof (22 pieces) [75]; about 75 other pieces [2-7, 16, 21-2, 26, 28, 30, 51, 69, 71, 77, 88, 93, 104, 109, 118]. Cadenzas for Beethoven's concertos and for Mozart's in D min.; arrangement of March from Beethoven's Ruinen von Athen.

Piano-duets—(4 hands) sonata [89]; Ball Costumé (20 pieces) [103]; 6 Characterbilder [50]; (2 pianos) Fantasia in F [73].

Author of Die Musik u. ihre Meister, 1892, (5th ed. 1909), Leitfaden zum richtigen Gebrauch d. Pianoforte-Pedals, 1896, Gedankenkorbb, 1896, and Die Meister d. Klaviers, 1899—the last three posthumous. Autobiography, 1892 (at first only in German translation). Sketches and memoirs by Baskin, 1886, Vogel, 1888, Lissowski, 1889, '90, McArthur, 1889, Sveriev, 1889, Zabel, 1892, Soubies, 1895, Cavo-Degtarev, 1895, Martinov, 1895, Rodenberg, 1895 (in Deutsche Rundschau), Droucker, 1904, Findeisen, 1907, La Mara, 1911, Bernstein, 1911, etc. G.

Rubinstein, Nikolai [Nicholas] Gregorovitch (Moscow, 1835–1881, Paris), brother of the above. Eminent Russian pianist and teacher, pupil of his mother, Dehn and Kullak, becoming of 1855 a leader in musical affairs at Moscow as his brother was at Petrograd. In 1859 he founded there a branch of the Imperial Musical Society, whose concerts he conducted from 1860 and whose classes, begun in 1863, in 1866 grew into the Conservatory, of which he became director. In 1861 he visited England as pianist and later gave orchestral concerts in Petrograd and Paris (1878). Wrote many graceful piano-pieces. Memoirs by Kashkin, 1897, and Findeisen, 1901 (both in Russian journals). G.

Rückauf, Anton (Prague, 1855–1903, n. Vienna). Highly gifted Bohemian song-composer, pupil of Proksch, the Prague Organ School, Nottebohm and Navrátil, from about 1880 accompanist for Gustav Walter and in that association developing into the writer of about 80 notable songs with fine accompaniments. Also wrote some choruses, a piano-quintet, a violin-sonata, some piano-pieces and the opera Die Rosenthalerin, 1897. G.

Ruckers Family. 17th C. G.

Rudersdorff, Hermine (Ivanovsky, 1822–1882, Boston). Noted Russian (Ukrainian) operatic soprano, pupil of Bordogni and De Micherout, from 1840 appearing in concert in Germany (as at the première of the Lobgesang) and from 1841 in opera at Karlsruhe, Frankfurt, Breslau, Berlin (1852–54) and London (1854–65), in England becoming famous in oratorio. In 1871–72 she sang at the Peace Jubilees in Boston and then settled there as a favorite teacher. Her first husband was Dr. Küchenmeister of Frankfurt and the second the English merchant Maurice Mansfield, their son being the actor Richard Mansfield (1857–1907). She wrote the text for Randegger's cantata Fridolin (1873). G., A.

Rudhart, Franz Michael (d. 1879). Author of a Gesch. d. Oper am Hofe zu München, 1865 (one vol. only) and Gluck in Paris, 1864.

Rüdinger, Gottfried (Lindau, 1886). Gifted Bavarian composer, pupil of his father and Reger, from 1910 living at Munich and from 1916 conducting an cappella chorus at Berg am Laim. Has written Schwäbische Musik for orchestra, a violin-concerto, Romantische Serenade for strings, a 'cello-symphony, 2 piano-sonatas, pieces for violin, for 'cello and for piano, various part-songs and songs.

Rudnick, Wilhelm (n. Bütow, 1850). Able Pomeranian organist and composer, trained at the Institut für Kirchenmusik and the Kullak Academy at Berlin, from 1879 organist and director at Landsberg and since 1891 at the Peter-Paulskirche in Liegnitz, besides till 1911 conducting the Chorverein. Has written many notable organ-works, including 5 sonatas, 2 fugues, 4 fantasias, variations, preludes, trios, etc., the dramatic cantata Otto der Schütz, 1887, the singspiel Studio obenauf, 1888, the oratorios Judas Ischariot, Der verlorene Sohn, Jesus und die Samariterin and Johannes der Täufer, 1921, the choral works Dornröschen, Armins Kampfruf, Am Königssee, etc., many choruses and songs.

Rudolph, Archduke of Austria and Cardinal of Olmütz (Florence, 1788–1831, n. Vienna). Pupil and faithful friend of Beethoven (from 1804), one of the contributors to his annuity (from 1809). He was patron of the Gesellschaft für Musikfreunde (from 1812) and to it left his valuable music-library. Wrote variations on a theme by Beethoven and a clarinet-sonata. G.

Rudolph (Rodolphe), Johann [Jean] Joseph (Strasburg, 1730–1812, Paris). Alsatian violinist and hornist, pupil of his father, Leclair and Traetta, from about 1750 playing in theater-orchestras in Bordeaux, MontPELLIER, etc., from 1754 in the court-band at Parma, in 1761–66 in that at Stuttgart and then at Paris, where he played the horn at the Opéra and from 1770 was chamber-musician at the court. From 1784 he taught at the École Royale and in 1799–1802 at the Conservatory. Wrote 6 operas (to 1773), 2 horn-concertos, horn-fanfares, duets and studies for violin and 2 elementary text-books.

Rudorff, Ernst Friedrich Karl (Berlin, 1840–1916, do.). Eminent Prussian piano-teacher and composer, pupil of Bargiel and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1865 teaching at the Cologne Conservatory and from 1869 head of the piano-work at the Berlin Hochschule. At Cologne he founded the Bach-Verein in 1867 and at Berlin in 1880–90 followed Bruch as conductor of the Stern Gesangverein. He retired in 1910. Wrote 3 symphonies, the overtures Märchen vom blonden Ekbert, Otto der Schütz and Romantische, 2 orchestral serenades, a Ballade and Variations, a Romanze for violin and orchestra, a string-sextet, the choral work Der Aufzug der Romanze, Gesang an die Sterne and Herbstlied for six voices and orchestra, many piano-pieces, part-songs and songs. Besides orchestrating Schubert's F min. Fantasie, he prepared a full score of Weber's Euryanthe (1866), edited the piano-concertos and sonatas of Mozart and brought out Weber's letters to H. Lichtenstein (1900). His correspondence with Brahms is contained in the Brahms collection (1907) and that with Joachim was published in 1913. G.

Ruegger, Elsa (Lucerne, 1881). Gifted Swiss 'cellist, pupil of her mother, Anna Campowski and the Strasburg and Brussels Conservatories, appearing from 1894 at Brussels, in 1895–96 touring in Switzerland with her two sisters and from 1896 becoming generally known throughout Europe, England (1897) and America (1899). In 1908-14 she taught at the Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin. In 1909 she married the violinist Edmund Lichtenstein and has lately lived in San Francisco.

Ruelle, Charles Émile (Paris, 1833). From 1856 secretary to A. J. H. Vincent and later director of the St. Geneviève Library, translating many texts of Greek works on music and writing essays upon both ancient and modern Greek music (from 1875), besides other literary work.

Rüfer, Philippe Barthélemy (Liège, 1844-1919, Berlin). Able Belgian (German) piano-teacher and composer, trained at the Liège Conservatory, in 1869-71 director at Essen and then at Berlin, where he taught mostly at the Stern Conservatory. From 1896 he was a member of the Academy and from 1901 senator there, as well as member of the Brussels Académie. Wrote the operas Merlin, 1887, and Ingo, 1896, a symphony, 3 overtures, an orchestral scherzo, a violin-concerto, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 2 'cello-suites, sonatas for violin and for organ, the choral work Das Lied vom Reiche, songs and piano-pieces. Sketch by Magnette, 1910.

Ruffo, Titta (Pisa, 1877). Brilliant Italian operatic baritone, pupil of Persichini and Cassini, making his début at Rome in 1898, then in Rio de Janeiro, again in Italy, at Vienna and Paris, with visits to the United States since 1912.

Ruffo, Vincenzo. 16th C. G.

Rufinatscha, Johann (Mals, 1812-1893, Vienna). Tyrolean teacher (at Vienna) and composer, writing 5 symphonies, 4 overtures, a piano-concerto, 4 piano-sonatas, songs, etc. Brüll was his pupil.

Rühlmann, Adolf Julius (Dresden, 1816-1877, do.). Saxon trombonist and student of history, pupil of Tillmann and Julius Otto, from 1841 playing in the court-orchestra at Dresden, from 1856 teacher of piano and history at the Conservatory, as well as in 1844 one of the founders and from 1855 president of the Tonkünstlerverein. Author of various articles in the Neue Zeitschrift, including Die Urform d. Bogeninstrumente, 1874, and also Gesch. d. Bogeninstrumente, 1882 (edited by his son). From 1873 he was royal instrument-inspector.

Ruijken, Jan W. Dutch composer of the operas Norma, 1889, and Der falsche Zar, 1895 (in concert).

Rumford, R. Kennerley (London, 1870). Eminent English baritone, pupil of Henschel, Blume, Sbriglia and Bouhy, appearing in 1893 and more formally in 1896 and then becoming a favorite in concert and oratorio throughout England. In 1900 he married the contralto Clara Butt and they have toured together in all parts of the world (America in 1913). G (under Butt).

Rummel, Christian (Brichsenstadt, 1787-1849, Wiesbaden). Bavarian clarinetist and violinist, trained at Mannheim, from 1806 in military service and in 1815-41 court-director at Wiesbaden. Wrote a clarinet-concerto, 2 quintets, pieces for clarinet and for piano, etc. G.

Rummel, Franz (London, 1853-1901, Berlin), son of the next and grandson of the above. Famous German-English pianist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory and in 1872-76 teacher there, from 1876 (at Rubinstein's suggestion) chiefly engaged in repeated tours (to America in 1878, '86 and '98), with a period of teaching at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin) and residence at Dessau, where he was given the title of professor. He married the daughter of the American painter and inventor S. F. B. Morse. G.

Rummel, Joseph (Wiesbaden, 1818-1880, London), son of Christian above. Pupil of his father, for a time pianist to the Prince of Oldenburg and from 1842 living alternately in Paris and London as an industrious arranger of operatic music for the piano (about 2000 numbers in all). G.

Rummel, Walter Morse (Berlin, 1887), son of Franz above. Prussian pianist, pupil of S. F. Fabian, Godowsky, Kaun and Debussy, from 1913 appearing in Paris and elsewhere in Europe. In 1912 he married the pianist Thérèse Chaigneau and with her has given two-piano recitals. Has written a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, an Invocation to Wagner for violin and orchestra, an Invocation to the God of Earth for alto (with orchestra), various piano-pieces and songs, besides publishing Troubadour songs that he found in the Paris Library.

Runciman, John F. (1866-1916, London). Trenchant English critic, from 1894 employed on the London Saturday Review, besides writing for other papers. His prejudices and bitterness made him many enemies. Author of Old Scores and New Readings, 1899 (collected essays) and lives of Purcell (1909) and Wagner (1913).

Rung, Frederik (Copenhagen, 1854-1914, do.), son of the next. Able Danish conductor and composer, pupil of his father and the Copenhagen Conservatory, from 1872 chorusmaster at the Opera, becoming in 1884 assistant-conductor and in 1908 chief, besides being from 1877 his father's successor as director of the Cecilia and from 1887 founder and leader of the Madrigalkör. From 1881 he also taught at the Conservatory and in 1893-1906 was head of the Horne-man Conservatory. Wrote the operas The Heavenly Host, 1888, and The Three-Cornered Hat, 1894, music for several plays, a ballet, a symphony, an orchestral suite, rhapsody and Danse des Papillons, a nonet-serenade, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, sonatas for violin and for piano, other piano-pieces, a cappella choruses and songs.

Rung, Henrik (Copenhagen, 1807-1871, do.), Danish choral conductor, from 1842 chorusmaster at the Copenhagen Opera and from 1851 founder and director of the Cecilia (society). Wrote music for some plays, choruses and folk-like songs. See sketch of the Cecilia by Thrane, 1901.

Runge, Paul (Heinrichsfeld, 1848-1911, Colmar). Able Prussian specialist on the notation of the songs of the Troubadours, etc., trained at the Institut für Kirchenmusik, Berlin, from 1873 organist and teacher at Colmar (Alsace). Author of monographs on the melodies in the Colmar and Donaueschingen mss. (1896), the Flagellant songs of 1349 (1899), Die Lieder Hugo von Montforts mit d. Melodien d. Burk Mangolt, 1906, and Die Notation d. Meistergesanges, 1907 (Bericht of Basel Congress, I. M. G.), besides (with Batka) Die Lieder Mülichs von Prag, 1905. Also wrote a Te Deum (1896), Psalm 100 and other choral works.

Runghagen, Karl Friedrich (Berlin, 1778-1851, do.). Prussian choral conductor and composer, pupil of Karl Benda, from 1815 Zelter's assistant in the Berlin Singakademie and in 1833 his successor as conductor, soon after becoming a member of the Akademie and teacher in its music-school and in 1843 gaining the title of professor. Wrote 4 operas, 3 oratorios, many cantatas, a mass for men's voices, a Te Deum, 30 motets, as many part-songs, an enormous number of songs (about 1100) and much instrumental music. G.

Runze, Maximilian (Woltersdorf, 1849). Pomeranian clergyman, since 1882 at the Johannis-kirche (Moabit) in Berlin, author of a series of essays on Loewe, including a biography (1905), and editor of three collections of his works (1892, '98 and 1899-1903, 22 vols. in all), besides more general works on Die musikal. Legende, 1902, and Volkslied u. Ballade, 1907.

Ruolz-Montchal, Henri Cathérine Camille, Comte de (Paris, 1808-1887, do.), French nobleman, pupil of Berton, Lesueur, Paër and Rossini, from 1830 writing 5 operas, including Lara, 1835, and La Vendetta, 1839, a cantata in honor of Joan d'Arc (1837), a Requiem, a string-quartet, 2 piano-trios, motets and songs. In 1840, however, he turned from music to chemistry.

Russell, Ella (Cleveland, 1864). American operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. de la Grange and Sangiovanni, from 1882 appearing in Paris, and soon throughout Europe, in 1885-89 at Covent Garden, London, and later with the Carl Rosa Company, continuing her career almost wholly in England. In private life she is Countess de Rhigini. A.

Russell, George Alexander (Franklin, Tenn. 1880). American pianist and organist, pupil of Syracuse University and of Godowsky, Kelley, Bauer and Widor, appearing as pianist in Paris in 1908 and on tour in America in 1909, from 1910 in charge of concerts at Wanamaker's in New York, from 1912 also organist in Newark and leader of the Madrigal Club there, and since 1916 professor at Princeton University.

Russell, Henry (London, 1871), son of Henry Russell (1812-1900), writer of popular songs, and brother of Landon Ronald. Noted English vocal teacher and impresario, pupil of the Royal College, London, having previously studied medicine. From about 1895 he secured attention by original methods of voice-culture, becoming a foremost teacher in London. From 1903 he took charge of opera at Covent Garden, in 1905 taking his company to Boston and in 1909-14 was manager of the Boston Opera Company. In the summer of 1914 he took his Boston forces to Paris. He has since lived in London.

Russell, Louis Arthur (Newark, N. J. 1854). American organist, conductor and teacher, pupil of S. P. Warren, Bristow, C. C. Müller, Tours, Shakespeare and Henschel, in 1878-95 organist at the South Park Presbyterian Church in Newark, since 1879 conductor of the Schubert Club there and from 1885 director of the College of Music. Since 1885 he has also led a choral society in Easton, Pa., and in 1893 formed the Newark Symphony Orchestra. Has written the cantata A Pastoral Rhapsody, various pieces for orchestra, anthems, choruses, songs, etc., besides several text-books. A.

Russell, William (London, 1777-1813, do.). English organist, pupil of Cope, Shrubsole and Arnold, from 1789 his father's assistant at St. Mary's (Aldermanbury), in 1793-98 at the Great Queen Street Chapel, from 1798 at St. Ann's (Limehouse) and from 1801 at the Foundling Hospital. In 1800 he was accompanist at Sadler's Wells and from 1801 at Covent Garden. Wrote various stage-pieces, 3 oratorios, a mass, choral odes, anthems, services, glees, songs, organ-pieces, etc., and edited the Foundling Chapel collection of 1809. G.

Rust, Friedrich Wilhelm (n. Dessau, 1739-1796, do.). Eminent Saxon violinist and composer, pupil of Höckh, Fr. and G. Benda, Tartini, Pugnani and both Friedemann and Emanuel Bach, from 1766 active at Dessau under the patronage of Prince Leopold and from 1775 court-director. Wrote many stage-pieces, a Psalm, church-cantatas, many odes and songs, 3 violin-sonatas (others unpublished, including one for the E-string, 1796), 7 piano-sonatas (many others unpublished), concertos, fugues, etc. Memoirs by Wilh. Rust, 1877 (in Mendel's Lexikon), Hosäus, 1882, and Prieger, 1894. G.

Rust, Wilhelm (Dessau, 1822-1892, Leipzig), nephew of the above. Saxon organist and conductor, pupil of his uncle and Fr. Schneider, from 1849 teacher at Berlin, in 1861 becoming organist at the Lukaskirche, in 1862-74 conductor of the Bach-Verein and in 1870 teacher at the Stern Conservatory. In 1878-80, removing to Leipzig, he was organist at the Thomaskirche and from 1880 Richter's successor as cantor of the Thomasschule. While at Berlin he brought out many neglected choral works of Bach and others. Ph.D. of Marburg Univ. in 1868. Wrote motets, choruses, part-songs, arias, songs and some piano-pieces, and edited several volumes of the standard edition of Bach with notable ability. G.

Ruta, Michele (Caserta, 1827-1896, Naples). Noted Italian teacher, composer and writer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, from about 1850 active at Naples as critic for the Corriere and founder of La Musica. Wrote the operas Leonilda, 1853, Diana di Vitry, 1859, and L'Impresario per Progetto, 1873, the ballet Imelda, music for plays, many masses, a Te Deum, motets, a Requiem, part-songs and songs, besides several text-books in harmony, composition and singing. Author of a pamphlet in 1877 advocating improvements in the Naples Conservatory.

Rüter, Hugo (Hamburg, 1859). North German composer, trained at the Hamburg Conservatory, from 1882 vocal teacher and choral conductor at Wandsbeck and from 1897 at the Matthias-Claudius Gymnasium in Hamburg. Has written the operas Frau Inge and Eulenspiegel, music for Sophocles' Œdipus and Philœteles, symphonies, a violin-concerto, a Kaiser-Ouvertüre (with chorus), chamber-music, choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Ruthardt, Adolf (Stuttgart, 1849), brother of the following. Eminent Württemberger pianoteacher, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory, in 1868–85 active at Geneva and in 1886–1914 at the Leipzig Conservatory, gaining the title of royal professor in 1910. Has written many fine pieces and études for piano, a sonata for two pianos, a Trio Pastorale for piano, oboe and viola, etc., and edited Cramer's Études (1909), a collection of Aelter Tänze (2 vols. 1913) and a Klavierbuch nordischer Komponisten, 2 vols. 1913. Author of Das Klavier, 1888, and a Chormeisterbüchlein, 1890 (brief biographies), and editor of the 3d–9th editions of Eschmann's Wegweiser (to 1918).

Ruthardt, Julius (Stuttgart, 1841–1909, Constance), brother of the above. Württemberger violinist and conductor, pupil of Halévy and Alard, from 1855 in the court-band at Stuttgart, from 1871 opera-conductor at Riga, from 1882 at Leipzig, from 1884 at Kroll's in Berlin and in 1893–98 at Bremen. Wrote music for Björnson's Hulda, choruses and songs.

Rüth, Ludwig (Laudau, 1889). Rhenish conductor, trained at Munich University and Conservatory, from about 1910 in the Stuttgart orchestra and flutist at Leipzig and Munich, in 1915–16 conductor of the Munich Konzert-Orchester, then guest-conductor elsewhere and from 1919 head of a Landes-Sinfonie-Orchester for the Rhine Province.

Rutz, Ottmar (Fürth, 1881). Bavarian vocal teacher at Munich, developing the theory of his father, Josef Rutz, regarding the use of the muscles of the trunk in vocalization. Author of Neue Entdeckungen von d. menschlichen Stimme, 1908, and Musik, Wort u. Körper als Gemütsausdruck, 1911. His views have been supported by Sievers, but have aroused much discussion.

Ryan, Thomas (1827–1903, New Bedford, Mass.). Able Irish violist and clarinetist, from 1844 educated in Boston and from 1849 member of the famous Mendelssohn Quintette Club (with Aug. and Wulf Fries). Wrote various pieces of chamber-music, songs and Recollections of an Old Musician, 1899. Through the tours of the Club for nearly fifty years he exercised a fruitful influence. A.

Ryba, Jakob Jan (Przestitz, 1765–1815, Rocznitz). Extraordinarily prolific Bohemian composer of church-music, symphonies, concertos, chamber-pieces, etc., with some comic operas and melodramas.

Rybakov, Sergei Gabrilovitch (b. 1867). Russian traveler, author of several valuable collections and studies of music from southeastern Russia and Turkestan (1895–97).

Rybner, Peter Martin Cornelius (Copenhagen, 1855). Eminent Danish pianist and composer, pupil of the Copenhagen and Leipzig Conservatories and of Von Bülow and Rubinstein, in 1875 choral conductor at Baden-Baden, touring widely as pianist in Germany, France, Italy and Scandinavia. From about 1880 he lived at Karlsruhe, where for a time he assisted Mottl at the Opera, in 1892 succeeded him as conductor of the Philharmonic and also was head of the Conservatory. In 1904–19 he was MacDowell's successor as professor of music at Columbia University in New York. He holds many honors and decorations, including the post of court-pianist in Denmark. Has written the symphonic poem Friede, Kampf und Sieg, a Festouvertüre, the orchestral Nordischer Hochzeitsreigen, 2 orchestral marches, a piano-trio, the ballet Prinz Ador, 1903, 2 festival cantatas, pieces for 'cello, for violin and for piano, duets and songs, besides some remarkable piano-transcriptions from Wagner. His daughter Dagmar de Corval (b. 1890) is an accomplished pianist, since 1912 active in New York as soloist or in duet with her father. A.

Rychnowski, Ernst (Janowitz, 1879). Bohemian critic and writer, trained at Prague University (Ph.D. 1903) and by Tappert, since 1905 on the staff of the Prague Tagblatt. Author of lives of Spohr and Rochlitz (1904), Kittl (1904–05), Blech (1905), Haydn (1909), Schumann (1910, lecture), and Liszt (1911), a sketch of the Petschau Music School (1902), a bibliography of German intellectual influence in Bohemia (1906–08), catalogues of the Donebau autograph-collection (1900) and the Prague Music Exposition (1906, with Batka), analyses for the Opernführer and a new edition of Niemtschek's life of Mozart (1905).

Ryelandt, Joseph (Bruges, 1870). Belgian composer, pupil of Tinel. Has written the choral works Ste. Cécile and Purgatorium, an Idylle Mystique for soprano and orchestra, 3 symphonies, a piano-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 3 violin-sonatas, 2 piano-sonatas, sonatas for 'cello, for clarinet and for horn, an oboe-sonatina, piano-pieces and sacred songs.

Saar, Louis Victor Franz (Rotterdam, 1868). Talented Dutch composer, trained at the Munich Conservatory (Mendelssohn prize, 1891, also Tonkünstler prize in Vienna, 1892), in 1894 removing to New York, where he was accompanist at the Metropolitan and teacher from 1896 at the National Conservatory and from 1898 at the College of Music. From 1906 he was chief theory-teacher at the Cincinnati College of Music and also chorus-conductor, and since 1917 in similar work at the Chicago Musical College. Since 1899 he has won many prizes with various compositions. Has written a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a quartet for clarinet, horn, 'cello and piano, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for horn, several violin-pieces, 2 piano-suites (one for 4 hands) and many pieces, a few organ-pieces, many effective choruses (some with orchestra, some a cappella), part-songs, madrigals, services and other sacred music, many sets of songs and transcriptions of folk-songs for chorus, etc. A.

Sabaniev, Leonid Leonidovitch (Moscow, 1881). Russian æsthetician, trained at the Moscow Conservatory and University, since 1920 head of the National Institute of Musical Science, which he brought into being. Author of monographs on Medtner (1913), Scriabin (1916), Wagner u. d. Synthese d. Künste, 1913, Die Evolution d. harmon. Auffassung, 1913, Der Zusammenhang von Farben u. Tönen, 1914, Der Rhythmus, 1917, Die 53-stufige Tonleiter, 1921, Die Musik d. Sprache, 1922, etc.

Sabata, Victor de (Trieste, 1892). Talented Italian-Austrian composer of the operas Il Macigno, 1917, and Lysistrata, the symphonic poem Juventus, an orchestral suite (1910), 2 overtures, a quartet, etc. He graduated at the Milan Conservatory in 1911. Sketch by Galli, 1921 (in Musical Times).

Sabbatini, Galeazzo. 17th C. G.

Sabbatini, Luigi Antonio (n. Rome, 1739–1809, Padua). Able Italian church-musician, pupil of Martini and Vallotti, long at the Franciscan monastery in Padua, from 1766 choir-master at SS. Apostoli in Rome and from 1786 at S. Antonio in Padua. Besides being a fertile writer of music for the church, he was a learned theorist (manuals in 1789, '99, 1802) and author of a life of Vallotti (1780). G.

Sabbatini, Pietro Paolo. 17th C. G.

Sabin, Wallace Arthur (Culworth, 1869). English organist and choral director, pupil of M. J. Monk and T. W. Dodds, beginning church-playing at thirteen. Migrating to San Francisco, from 1894 he was organist at St. Luke's and since 1906 at the First Church, Scientist, besides from 1895 also at Temple Emanu-El. In 1904 and '15 he gave recitals at the St. Louis and San Francisco Expositions. He directs the Loring and Twentieth Century Clubs and a women's orchestra. Has written the 'grove-plays' St. Patrick at Tara, 1909, and The Twilight of the Kings, 1918 (both for the Bohemian Club), much music for the Jewish service, choruses, part-songs, etc. A.

Sabino, Ippolito. 16th C.

Sacchetti, Liberio Antonovitch (n. Tambov, 1852). Able Russian student of music-history and æsthetics, pupil of Davidov and the Petrograd Conservatory, at first aiming to be a 'cellist, but from 1878 teacher of history and æsthetics at the Conservatory and also from 1889 at the Academy. Since 1895 he has been assistant-librarian at the Public Library. Has published collected essays (1896), an Outline and a Chrestomathy of music-history (1883, 3d ed. 1903, and 1896, 2d ed. 1900), a text-book in theory (1897), a paper at the Paris Exposition of 1900 on Russian church-music and articles in periodicals. In 1888 he represented the Imperial Society at the musical exhibition at Bologna and was made a member of the Academy there. G.

Sacchi, Giovenale (Milan, 1726–1789, do.). Italian Barnabite, author of erudite discussions of rhythm in music, dancing and poetry (1770), Greek music (1778), etc., and lives of Farinelli (1784) and Marcello (1789).

Sacchini, Antonio Maria Gasparo (Pozzuoli, 1734–1786, Paris). Eminent Italian composer, trained at the Conservatorio S. Onofrio in Naples, from 1756 active at Naples, from 1762 at Rome, from 1768 at Venice, where he was director of the Ospedaletto, in 1770–71 at Munich and Stuttgart, from 1772 in London and from 1782 in Paris. He ranks as Piccini's ablest competitor, a versatile and effective dramatist, gifted in melody and orchestration, and yet without any commanding originality. It is notable that he was one of the first to adopt many of the ideas of Gluck, so that his latest works were far richer than the rest, the Œdipe à Colone (1786) remaining in the répertoire of the Paris Opéra for nearly sixty years (almost 600 performances). In these final works, too, he made unprecedented use of the chorus. Wrote in all about 60 stage-works, including Semiramide, 1762, Chimena, 1762 (as Il Gran Cid, 1773, and Chimène, 1783), Olimpiade, 1767 (as L'Olympiade, 1777), Alessandro nell'Indie, 1768, Ezio, c. 1770, L'Eroe Cinese, 1771, Armida e Rinaldo, 1772 (as Renaud, 1783), Dardanus, 1784, Œdipe à Colone, 1786, and Arvire et Évelina, 1788 (completed by Rey), and also 6 oratorios, masses, Psalms and other church-music, 2 symphonies, 6 string-quartets, 6 string-trios, 12 violin-sonatas, 12 harpsichord-sonatas, etc. G.

Sachs, Curt (Berlin, 1881). Able Prussian art-critic and musicologist, educated at Berlin University (Ph. D. 1904), author of Musikgesch.

d. Stadt Berlin [to 1800], 1908, Die Ansbacher Hofkapelle [1672-86], 1910 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Musik u. Oper am kurbrandenburg. Hofe, 1910, a notable Reallexikon d. Musikinstrumente, 1914, Handbuch d. Musikinstrumentenkunde, 1920, Systematik d. Musikinstrumente, 1913 (in Zeitschr. für Ethnologie, with Hornbostel), and special studies of instruments in several ethnic areas.

Sachs, Hans (1494-1576). 16th C.

Sachs, Julius (Waldhof, 1830-1888, Frankfurt). Gifted Saxon pianist, pupil of Kessler and Rosenhain, from about 1855 touring from Frankfurt as a center. Wrote an orchestral Zigeunerballade, a violin-sonata, violin- and 'cello-pieces, a piano-suite, many effective pieces, a Serenade for tenor and orchestra, songs, etc.

Sachs, Melchior Ernst (n. Gemünden, 1843-1917, Munich). Bavarian conductor and composer, trained at the Munich Conservatory, teacher there in 1871-1910, besides in 1868-72 leading the Liederkranz, in 1869-73 a men's chorus and from about 1871 the new Tonkünstlerverein. Wrote the oratorio Kains Schuld und Sühne, 1912, the choral works Das Thal des Espingo, Totenklage der Goten and Bethanien, a Paternoster, songs, a symphony and the opera Palestrina, 1886. He advocated the chromatic tone-system and wrote Die Klangerscheinung als Ober- u. Untertonbildung, 1910.

Sachse-Hofmeister, Anna (n. Vienna, 1850-1904, Berlin). Gifted Austrian operatic soprano, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory and of Proch, appearing from 1870 at Würzburg, from 1872 at Frankfurt, from 1876 at Berlin, from 1880 at Leipzig and in 1882-89 again at Berlin, making a fine reputation in heroic rôles, especially those of Gluck and Wagner. In 1878 she married the tenor Sachse.

Sacratì, Francesco Paolo (? -1650). 17th C.

Saenger, Gustav (New York, 1865). American violinist and editor, pupil of C. Richter, L. Damrosch and C. C. Müller, from 1883 playing at the Metropolitan, New York, and with the Philharmonic and Symphony Societies, from 1893 conductor at the Empire Theatre and music-manager for the Frohmann plays, and since 1909 editor for the publisher Carl Fischer, including the care from 1900 of The Metronome and from 1904 of The Musical Observer. Has written various effective violin-pieces and prepared innumerable arrangements of every kind. A.

Saenger, Oscar (Brooklyn, 1868). Eminent American vocal teacher, appearing as singer when but fourteen, then pupil of Bouhy, from 1889 teaching at the National Conservatory, New York, and in 1891 singing with the Hinrichs troupe in New York and in 1892 in Europe with the Arion Society. Since 1897 he has been constantly in request as trainer of prominent opera- and concert-singers. A.

Saerchinger, César (Aix-la-Chapelle, 1884). Able Belgian editor and writer, educated in Halle, New York and Paris, from 1906 active in New York as contributor to biographical dictionaries, from 1913 critic for The International and Current Opinion and in 1914-17 managing-editor of The Art of Music (14 vols.). He also edited an International Who's Who in Music, 1918, and has written various articles for Elson's Modern Music and Musicians, 1918, Musical America, The Musical Quarterly, etc. In 1912-14 he joined Lambord in establishing the Modern Music Society for the promotion of recent music, especially by American composers, serving since as secretary. A.

Safonov, Vassily Ilyitch (n. Tertsersk, Caucasus, 1852-1918, Kislovodsk). Eminent Russian pianist and conductor, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory, in 1881-85 teacher there and in 1885-1905 at the Moscow Conservatory, from 1889 being its director. In 1880-81 he had made a notable impression as pianist by a tour with the 'cellist Davidov in Scandinavia, Germany and Austria. At Moscow he not only took high rank as teacher, but soon revealed great power as conductor, in 1890-1905 succeeding Erdmannsdorfer as director of the Russian Musical Society concerts there and in 1906-09 leading the New York Philharmonic (having appeared as guest-conductor since 1904), and also serving as director of the National Conservatory. Besides many casual engagements elsewhere, from 1911 he was conductor of the Russian Musical Society concerts at Petrograd, succeeding Chessin. Everywhere recognized as a foremost interpreter of Russian works, he was also impressive in those of the classical repertory. He did not use a baton. His influence as teacher was impressed on Lhevinne, Scriabin, Rachmaninov, Medtner, Grechaninov and many others. Author of A New Formula for the Piano-Teacher and the Piano-Student, 1916. G, A.

Ságh, Joseph (Pest, 1852). Hungarian author of a text-book in school-music (1873) and a lexicon of Hungarian musicians (1877) and from 1885 founder and editor of the journal Zenelap. He was a pupil of Abrányi, married his daughter and contributed to his musical periodical.

Sahla, Richard (Gratz, 1855). Gifted Styrian violinist and conductor, pupil of Caspar, W. A. Remy, Kuno Hess and the Leipzig Conservatory, making his début as player at the Gewandhaus in 1873, in 1876-77 concertmaster for the Gothenburg (Sweden) Musikverein and in 1878-80 at the Vienna Opera, then on tour, from 1882 concertmaster in the Hanover court-orchestra and since 1888 court-director at Bückeburg, where he not only reorganized the musical establishment, but started an oratorio-society and a noted orchestral school (incorporated in 1914 as the Orchesterhochschule). Has written a Rumänische Rhapsodie, other concert-pieces for violin and songs.

Sahlender, Emil (Ibenhain, 1864). Thuringian conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1886-89 opera-conductor at Altenburg and then leader of the Concordia and Harmonie at Heidelberg, besides being head of his own music-school. Has written the operas Der Schelm von Bergen, 1895, Mummelsee, 1900, and the short Waffen nieder!, the choral work Das deutsche Lied, 2 orchestral suites and songs.

Saint-Amans, Louis Joseph (Marseilles, 1749–1820, Paris). French composer, from 1769 producing comic operas at Paris, in 1778–79 opera-conductor at Brussels, in 1784–1802 teacher at the Paris Music School and Conservatory. Wrote about 25 stage-works, oratorios, cantatas and chamber-music.

Saint-Foix, Georges Poullain, Comte de (b. 1874). Able French music-historian, pupil of the Paris Schola Cantorum, author of a valuable life of Mozart (2 vols. 1912, covers only the period to 1777), and important articles on Schobart (1908, I. M. G. Zeitschr., with De Wyzewa), Sammartini (1914, I. M. G. Sammelbde.) and the history of the French symphony before 1750 (1911, Année Musicale, with Laurencie).

St. George, George (Leipzig, 1841). English-German player on the viola d'amore, pupil of Rühlmann, Jul. Otto and Mildner, from 1862 active in London in reviving interest in the older bowed instruments, especially after 1881, when his son joined him as violinist and gambist. He also became skillful in making a variety of stringed instruments, including a reproduction of the Welsh crwth. Wrote pieces for violin, for organ and some for orchestra.

St. George, Henry (London, 1866–1917, do.), son of the above. English violinist and gambist, from 1881 associated with his father in recitals of old music (a pioneer in all-Bach programs), for a time editor of The Strad and author of The Bow, 1895, The Place of Science in Music, 1905, and Fiddles, their Selection, Preservation and Betterment, 1910. Wrote also a piano-concerto, a violin-sonata, pieces for violin and for piano, and an opera.

Saint-Georges, Chevalier de (Guadeloupe, 1745–1799, Paris). Eccentric French (half-negro) violinist, pupil of Leclair, writing 5 concertos, 6 concertantes, trio-sonatas, Grandes Ariettes with orchestra and an opera (1780). He is said to have influenced Jarnovic's concertos.

Saint-Georges, Marquis de (Paris, 1801–1875, do.). French novelist and noted opera-librettist, writing about 120 texts for many of the famous works of Auber, Donizetti, Halévy, Adam, Clapisson, Grisar, etc. He was the ablest of the immediate successors of Scribe. G.

Saint-Huberty [Antoinette Cécile Clavel] (Toul, 1756–1812, n. London). Noted French operatic soprano, from 1777 gradually becoming the leading singer at the Paris Opéra and elsewhere in France. In 1790 she married Count d'Entraigues, an ardent royalist, later deeply involved in political intrigue. They were both murdered by a servant. G.

Saint-Lubin, Léon de (Turin, 1805–1850, Berlin). French-Italian violinist, appearing at twelve in Berlin and Dresden, then pupil of Polledro and Spohr, from 1827 concertmaster at the Josephstädter Theater in Vienna and in 1830–47 at the Königstädter in Berlin. Wrote 5 violin-concertos, an octet, 19 string-quartets, an opera (1830) and much other stage-music.

Saint-Saëns, Charles Camille (Paris, [Oct. 9] 1835–1921 [Dec. 16], Algiers). Distinguished French pianist, organist, conductor, composer and author, very precociously developed as player, pupil of Charlotte Masson, Stamaty, Maleden and the Paris Conservatory (many prizes, but twice failed of the Prix de Rome). From 1853 he was organist at St.-Merry and in 1858–77 Lefébure-Wély's successor at the Madeleine, where he achieved an international reputation, especially as improvisator. In 1861–64 he taught piano at the École Niedermeyer (Gigout, Fauré and Messager among his pupils), but except for this and his organistship held no further official position. In 1871 he shared in the founding of the Société Nationale de Musique, continuing active in it till 1886. Meanwhile his phenomenal gifts as pianist and the steadily-mounting list of his masterly compositions brought him a multitude of honors, titles and decorations. He was admitted to the Légion d'Honneur in 1868 and in 1913 attained the Grand-Croix therein. In 1881 he took Reber's place in the Académie and was besides a member of similar bodies in Belgium, Sweden, Prussia and Spain. In 1892 he was made Mus. D. by Cambridge University. In 1907 he attended the unveiling of his own statue in the Dieppe opera-house. After losing his wife he made his home with his mother in Paris. At her death in 1888 he gave all her valuable collections of paintings, furniture, etc., with a great series of his own manuscripts, to form the Saint-Saëns Museum at Dieppe (where his father was born) and this was opened in 1891. To it he made extensive further gifts.

During his whole life he was a great traveler, either as pianist and conductor or for pleasure, these trips including Africa, the United States (1906 and '15, the last as French representative at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco) and South America (1916). His public appearances as player or conductor continued with remarkable grace and vigor well beyond his eightieth year.

His playing was brilliant, genial, sympathetic and balanced and his interpretation intelligent and broad. As composer he early gained perfect command of the technical processes of expression, including every aspect of form, extreme readiness in thematic development and superb orchestration. His versatility and alertness of conception are obvious, as also his responsiveness to imaginative suggestion and his verve and refinement in treatment. But his genius, great as it was, on the whole falls short of the highest achievements in profound feeling and urgent conviction. His full recognition in France was greatly delayed, largely because his power was so much put forth in orchestral forms rather than in captivating operas. Although his Samson et Dalila and one or two other stage-works have attained widespread appreciation, his most solid renown rests upon his symphonic poems and other instrumental creations that are more truly representative of his individuality. Like his close friend Liszt, he is at his best when his fancy is roused by an objective topic or character or scene.

His works comprise the following (opus-nos. in brackets):

Dramatic Works

Operas—La Princesse Jaune, 1872, Le Timbre d'Argent, 1877, Samson et Dalila, 1877, Étienne Marcel, 1879, Henri VIII, 1883, Gabriella di Vergy, 1885, Proserpine, 1887, Ascanio, 1890, Phryné, 1893, Les Barbares, 1901, Hélène, 1904, L'Anctère, 1906, Déjanire, 1911. Also Guiraud's Brunhilde completed as Frédégonde, 1895.

Incidental music for Meurice and Vacquerie's Antigone, 1894, Gallet's Déjanire, 1898, Dieulafoy's Parysatis, 1902, Racine's Andromaque, 1903, Lavedan's Assassinat du Duc de Guise, 1908, Brieux' La Foi, 1909, Ferrare's La Fille du Tourneur d'Ivoire, 1909, and De Musset's On ne badine pas avec l'Amour, 1916.

Ballet—Javotte, 1896.

Choral Works

Oratorios—Le Déluge, 1875 [45]; The Promised Land, 1913 (Gloucester Fest.). Also Oratorio de Noël [12]. Cantatas—Les Noces de Prométhée [19]; La Lyre et la Harpe [57]; La Nuit (women's voices) [114]; Le Feu Céleste [115]; La Gloire de Corneille [126]; Ode à Ste.-Cécile. Also cantata for the Hoche centenary (1868). Psalms 19 [42] and 150 [127].

Messe Solennelle [4]; Messe de Requiem [54]. Motets—Tantum ergo [5]; Tu es Petrus [147]; Quam dilecta [148] (last two a cappella); many others. For mixed voices a cappella—Romance du Soir [118]; 2 others [68].

For men's voices a cappella—Les Soldats de Gédéon [46]; Saltarelle [74]; Les Guerriers [84]; Chants d'Automne [113]; a la France [121]; Le Matin [129]; La Gloire [131]; Sérénade d'Hiver; Ode d'Horace; 2 others [71]. Also Madrigal, with tenor solo.

Deux Chœurs [53]; Chanson de Grand-Père, for 2 women's voices, and Chanson d'Anctère, for baritone and men's voices—both with orchestra.

Other Vocal Works

Arias with orchestra—Scène d'Horace (soprano and baritone) [10]; La Fiancée du Timbalier (mezzo-soprano) [82]; Pallas-Athénée (soprano) [98]; Lola (dramatic scena for 2 voices) [116]; Lever de Soleil sur le Nil (contralto).

About 75 songs, including 6 Mémoires Persanes [26] (also arranged for soli, chorus and orchestra).

Orchestral Works

Symphonies—1, E-flat [2] (1855), 2, A min. [55], 3, C min. [78]; 2 others, F and D. Symphonic Poems—Le Rouet d'Omphale [31]; Phaëton [39]; Danse Macabre [40]; La Jeunesse d'Hercule [50]. 2 Suites [49, 60, Algérienne]; Ouverture de Fête [133]; overture, Spartacus.

Marches—Orient et Occident [25]; Irénique [34]; De Couronnement [117]; Sur les Bords du Nil (for military band) [125].

Une Nuit à Lisbonne (barcarolle) [63]; Jota Aragonesa [64]; Hymne à Victor Hugo [69]; Sarabande et Rigaudon [93]; Hail, California!; Honneur à l'Amérique; Hymn Franco-Espagnol (for military band); Le Carnaval des Animaux.

With piano—concertos in D [17], G min. [22], E-flat [29], C min. [44] and F [103]; Allegro Appassionato [70]; Rapsodie d'Auvergne [73]; Wedding-Cake (caprice-waltz, with strings) [76]; Africa (fantasy) [89].

With violin—concertos in A [20], C [58] and B min. [61]; Introduction et Rondo Capriccioso [28]; Romance in C [48]; Morceau de Concert [62]; Havanaise [83]; Caprice Andalous [122].

With 'cello—concertos in A min. [33] and D min. [119]. Also La Muse et le Poète, for violin and 'cello [132]. With wind-instruments—Tarentelle, for flute and clarinet [6]; Romance in D, for flute (or violin, [37]; Romance in E, for horn (or 'cello) [36]; Morceau de Concert in F, for horn [94].

Chamber-Music

Septet for piano, strings and trumpet [65]; piano-quintet in A min. [14].

String-quartet in E min. [112]; piano-quartet in B-flat [41]; Sérénade, for violin, viola, piano and organ [15]; Barcarolle, for violin, 'cello, piano and organ [108]; Caprice on Danish and Russian airs, for flute, oboe, clarinet and piano [79].

Piano-trios in F [18] and E min. [92]; Romance, for violin, piano and organ [27].

For violin—sonatas in D min. [75] and E [102]; Berceuse in B-flat [38]; Triptique (suite) [136]. Also Fantaisie, for violin and harp [124].

For 'cello—sonatas in C min. [32] and F [123]; suite [16]; Allegro Appassionato [43]; Romance in D [51]; Chant Saphique [91]; Le Cygne.

Fantaisie, for harp [95]. Romance in E, for horn (from op. 16) [67].

Piano-Works

Suite [90]; Thème Varié [97]; Souvenir d'Italie [80]; Souvenir d'Ismailia [100]; Les Cloches du Soir [85]; Album [72]; Romance sans Paroles; 6 Bagatelles [3].

Gavotte [23]; Menuet et Valse [56]; Valse, Canariote [88]; Mignonnie [104]; Nonchalante [110]; Langoureuse [120] and Gaie [139]; 3 Mazourkas [21, 24, 66] 18; Études [52, 111, 135, the last set for left hand].

For 4 hands—König Harald Harfagar [59]; Duetto [11]; Feuille d'Album [81]; Par Redoublé [86]; Berceuse [105].

For 2 pianos—Variations on theme by Beethoven [35]; Polonaise [77]; Scherzo [87]; Caprice Arabe [96]; Caprice Héroïque [16].

Organ-Works

6 Preludes and Fugues [99, 109]; 2 Fantasias [101]; Marche Religieuse [107]; Bénédiction Nuptiale [9]; 3 Rhapsodies Bretones [7]; 7 Improvisations [150]. Also, for harmonium, Élévation [13]; 3 Morceaux [1]; 6 duets with piano [8].

Besides his original works he made many arrangements and prepared editions of Charpentier's Malade Imaginaire (1894), of Gluck's Armide, Orphée and Écho et Narcisse for the Pelletan edition, of many works for the standard edition of Rameau (co-editor with Malherbe) and of Mozart's piano-sonatas (1915).

His literary production was considerable and of high quality. At times he wrote many articles for Parisian journals. His critical attitude toward Wagner shifted to and fro, but was mostly adverse. Otherwise he was usually keen, discriminating and sound. He published a book of poems (1890) and three comedies (1891-1903), besides writing the text of his Hélène (1904). In addition, he was interested in scientific studies, especially astronomy. Author of a sketch of Reber (1881, Matérialisme et Musique, 1882, Harmonie et Mélodie, 1885 (critical essays), Notes sur les Décors de Théâtre dans l'Antiquité Romaine, 1886, Gounod et le Don Juan de Mozart, 1893, Problèmes et Mystères, 1894, Portraits et Souvenirs, 1899, Les Lyres et Cithares Antiques, 1902, École Buissonnière, 1913, Au Courant de la Vie, 1914, and Germanophilie, 1916.

Thematic catalogue issued by Durand in 1897 (revised 1907). Sketches by Loanda, 1889, Blondel, 1896, Bellaigue, 1899, Neitzel, 1899, Baumann, 1905, Bonnerot, 1914, Montargis, 1919, Hervey, 1921, and in general works by Rolland, Julien, Séré, etc. G. A.

Sainton, Joseph (London, 1878). English conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, with study also in Italy, from 1905 touring in South Africa as pianist, in 1908-11 conductor of the Brighton (Eng.) orchestra (leading festivals in 1909-10), from 1912 in America, at first with the Aborn Opera Company and since 1915 leading municipal concerts in Minneapolis. A.

Sainton, Prosper Philippe Cathérine (Toulouse, 1813-1890, London). Able French violinist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1834 playing in the concerts there and at the Opéra, from 1836 touring throughout Europe with marked success, in 1840-45 teacher at the Toulouse Conservatory and from 1845 professor at the Royal Academy in London, besides serving as concertmaster for the Philharmonic in 1846-54, for the Sacred Harmonic Society from 1848, at the Opera in 1847-80 (Covent Garden till 1871, then Her Majesty's), at the Birmingham Festivals and elsewhere. In all these positions he gained high esteem, as also in chamber-ensemble. In 1860 he married the noted contralto Charlotte Dolby (see below). Wrote 2 violin-concertos, a Solo de Concert with orchestra and many other violin-pieces. G.

Sainton-Dolby, Charlotte Helen (London, 1821-1885, do.), wife of the above. Eminent English contralto, pupil of Mrs. Montague and the Royal Academy (King's scholar in 1837), from 1841 becoming a universal favorite in concert and oratorio, with tours on the Continent from 1845 (at the Gewandhaus under Mendelssohn). The latter's Elijah was written with her voice in view for the contralto rôle. She retired in 1870, but in 1872 started a successful vocal academy. Wrote the cantatas St. Dorothea, 1876, The Story of the Faithful Soul, 1879, and Florimel, 1885, some songs and a vocal method. G.

Sakolowski, Paul (Danzig, 1872-1913, Leipzig). Polish-German writer, author of a life of Ernst von Schuch (1900), Bayreuther Nächte (1901), Parsifal, 1903, and Führer for operettas and operas (1910), besides new editions of several works by Nohl.

Sala, Nicola (n. Benevento, ?1717-1800, Naples). Able Italian theorist, pupil of the Conservatorio de' Turchini, Naples, and from about 1740 teacher there. Author of a notable treatise on counterpoint (3 vols. 1794). Wrote also the operas Vologeso, 1737, Zenobia, 1761, and Merope, 1769, the oratorio Giuditta, 1780, church-music, etc. G.

Salaman, Charles Kensington (London, 1814-1901, do.). English pianist, pupil of the Royal Academy and of Herz, from 1831 active in London as teacher, player and conductor, with some tours on the Continent and a sojourn at Rome in 1846-48. In 1833-37 he gave orchestral concerts annually, in 1835 was a promoter of the Concerti da Camera and concerned in the founding of the Musical Society in 1858 and the Musical Association in 1874. He also wrote for the Musical Times and other papers. Wrote the comic opera Pickwick, 1889, much synagogue-music, part-songs, songs, an overture and other orchestral pieces. G.

Saldoni, Baltasar (Barcelona, 1807-1890, do.). Excellent Spanish singing-master and composer, trained as a boy by Andrevi and later at Montserrat, from about 1825 organist in Barcelona and from 1830 teacher at the Madrid Conservatory, where he made the vocal department notable (from 1839 following methods derived from Paris). Wrote 5 Italian operas (1826-40), several zarzuelas, a Himno al Dios de las Artes, 1843, many orchestral pieces, much fine church-music, organ-pieces, etc. Author of a history of the Virgin of Montserrat (1856), a collection of biographies of Spanish musicians (1860), a biographical dictionary (1868), and a noted vocal method, with vocalises.

Sale, François. 16th C.

Sales, Pietro Pompeo (Brescia, 1729-1797, Hanau). Italian composer, from about 1760 employed by the Bishop of Augsburg and later by the Elector of Treves at Coblenz. Wrote several operas and oratorios, church-music, 2 symphonies, a clavier-concerto and sonata, etc.

Saléza, Albert (n. Bayonne, 1867-1916, Paris). Noted French operatic tenor, trained at the Paris Conservatory, appearing from 1888 at the Opéra-Comique, in 1889-91 at Nice, in 1892-94 at the Paris Opéra, then at Monte Carlo, in 1897-98 at the Opéra again, in 1898-99 at the Monnaie, Brussels, in 1899-1901 at the Metropolitan, New York, and from 1901 once more at the Opéra (except in 1907-10, when in ill-health), besides teaching at the Conservatory from 1911. He sang at the local premières of Berlioz' Prise de Troie, Salvayre's Richard III, Reyer's Salammbô, Verdi's Otello, Franck's Hulda and Mancinelli's Ero e Leandro. See Curzon's Croquis d'Artistes, 1898.

Salieri, Antonio (Legnano, 1750-1825, Vienna). Distinguished Italian conductor, composer and teacher, pupil of his mother, Simoni, Pescetti, Pasini and Gassmann, the latter bringing him to Vienna in 1766 and using him as deputy or protégé from 1770. In 1774 he followed Gassmann as opera-conductor (till 1790) and was also named court-composer. From 1788 he was court-director, succeeding Bonno. Till 1818 he also conducted the concerts of the Tonkünstler Society, which Gassmann had founded in 1771. From time to time he conducted operas in Italy. From 1775 he was drawn into much association with Gluck, and in 1784 produced Les Danaïdes under his auspices at Paris, followed by other works there. At Vienna he came to occupy a position of great influence, which he usually exercised with generosity and judgment. He was intimate with Haydn, Beethoven and Schubert, but seems to have been hostile to Mozart. He had genuine ability as composer and for a time his works had wide acceptance. His work as teacher was extensive and fruitful. At his Jubilee in 1816 and at his retirement in 1824 he received various high honors. He was an accomplished composer for the voice, with a marked gift in melody and much dramatic instinct. His early works were in the current Italian style, but from 1775 he assimilated much from Gluck, both in freedom and flexibility of general construction and in the vigorous characterization of individual numbers. It is noticeable that he was equally successful in Italy and at both Vienna and Paris. His church music, also, was dignified and able. Wrote in all about 40 operas (from 1770), including Armida, 1771, Europa Riconosciuta, 1778, Semiramide Riconosciuta, 1782, Les Danaïdes, 1784, La Grotta di Trifonio, 1785, Gli Orazzi (Les Horaces), 1786, Tarare, 1787, Il Talismano, 1788 (second version), etc., 2 oratorios, several cantatas, masses, Te Deums, a Requiem, Psalms, motets and much other church-music, choruses and vocal canons (Scherzi Armonici), a symphony, concertos for piano, for organ and for flute and oboe, a concertante for violin, oboe and 'cello, an orchestral serenade, ballet-music, etc. Memoirs by Mosel, 1827, and A. von Hermann, 1897. G.

Salimbeni, Felice (Milan, ?1712-1751, Laidbach). Noted Italian artificial operatic soprano, pupil of Porpora, appearing at Rome in 1731, in 1733-37 in the court-choir at Vienna, then again in Italy, from 1743 at the Berlin Opera and in 1751 (4 months) at Dresden. Notice in Hiller's Lebensbeschreibungen, 1748.

Salinas, Francisco (1513-1590). 16th C.

Salmon, Alvah Glover (Southold, N. Y. 1868-1917, Boston). American pianist, trained at the New England Conservatory (Boston) and by S. B. Mills, Goetschius, MacDowell and Glazunov, from about 1895 active from Boston as a center in promoting interest in Russian music. Besides extensive work as player, lecturer and writer, he gathered a large library on the subject (about 3000 vols.), with many valuable autographs. Wrote many characteristic piano-pieces. G.

Salò, Gasparo da. See Gasparo.

Saloman, Siegfried (Tondern, Schleswig, 1816-1899, Stockholm). North German violinist and composer, pupil of Siboni, Fr. Schneider and Lipinski, from 1842 active in Copenhagen, from 1847 on tour as violinist, at first alone and from 1850 with his wife (née Henriette Nissen). In 1859-79 they lived at Petrograd, where she taught at the Conservatory, but at her death he removed to Stockholm. Wrote the operas Tordenskjold, 1844, Die Herzensprobe, 1846, The Diamond Cross, 1847 (revised, 1886), Das Korps der Rache, 1850, The Fugitive from Estrella, 1867, Der verliebte Teufel, 1867, and Die Rose der Karpathen, 1868, overtures, violin-pieces and songs.

Salomé, Théodore César (Paris, 1834-1896, St. Germain). Gifted French organist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1861), from 1869 second organist at La Trinité (under Guilmant after 1871), in 1872-73 teacher at the Conservatory and choirmaster at the Lycée St.

Louis. Wrote a symphony, chamber-music, many refined organ-pieces, a mass, etc. G.

Salomon, Hector (Strasbourg, 1838-1906, Paris). Alsatian vocal composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1855 accompanist at the Bouffes-Parisiens, from 1860 at the Lyrique and from 1870 chorusmaster at the Opéra. Wrote the opera Bianca Cappello, 1886, and 4 shorter works, the ballet Fascination, 1856, the cantata Le Génie de la France, 1866, 2 symphonies, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata and various pieces, church-music and about 200 songs.

Salomon, Johann Peter (Bonn, 1745-1815, London). Eminent Rhenish violinist, in 1758-65 employed in the court-band at Bonn, with a tour to Frankfurt and Berlin, from 1765 musician to Prince Heinrich of Prussia at Rheinsberg and from 1781 settled in London, where he had manifold occupation as soloist, ensemble-player and leader or director of concerts. From 1786 his annual performances were influential in making known works by Haydn and Mozart. The former he secured as distinguished visitor in 1791 and '94, besides suggesting the composition of The Creation. For him Haydn wrote his last quartets. In 1813 he was active in the foundation of the Philharmonic, serving as concertmaster and playing in quintet. Besides being a fine musician he was also a man of culture. Wrote the opera Windsor Castle, 1795, 4 operettas for Rheinsberg, the oratorio Hiskias, 2 violin-concertos, etc. G.

Salter, Sumner (Burlington, Ia. 1856). American organist, pupil of the New England Conservatory (Boston) and of B. D. Allen, Eug. Thayer and Paine, from 1879 organist in Cleveland and teacher at the Oberlin Conservatory, from 1881 at St. Paul's in Syracuse and director of the Cecilia, from 1886 at the First Methodist Church in Atlanta and conductor for the Musical Association, in 1889-1900 and 1902-05 in New York at the First Presbyterian and West End Avenue Churches and the Broadway Tabernacle, in 1900-02 at Cornell University and teacher at the Ithaca Conservatory, and in 1905-23 organist at Williams College (Mass.). He has given many recitals, including engagements at the Expositions of 1901 (Buffalo), 1904 (St. Louis) and 1915 (San Francisco), and was a founder of the New York Manuscript Society in 1892 and of the Am. Guild of Organists in 1896 (editor of its periodical, 1895-98 and warden, 1899-1900). Has written church-music, choruses, part-songs and songs. His wife, née Mary Elizabeth Turner (Peoria, Ill. 1856), is an accomplished soprano and composer of about 150 songs that have had much acceptance. A.

Saltzman-Stevens, Minnie (Bloomington, Ill. 1885?). American operatic soprano, pupil of Jean de Reszké, appearing in 1909 in London and Lisbon, in 1911 at Bayreuth, as well as other European capitals, in 1911-14 with the Philadelphia-Chicago Company and also in 1912-13 with the Boston Company. She has confined herself to the great Wagnerian rôles. In 1905 she married A. Newman Stevens of Bloomington. A.

Salvayre, Gervais Bernard Gaston (Toulouse, 1847-1916, n. do.). French composer, pupil of the Toulouse and Paris Conservatories (Prix de Rome in 1872). Wrote the operas Le Bravo, 1877, Richard III, 1883, Egmont, 1886, Le Dame de Montsoreau, 1888, Solange, 1909, and 3 not given, 3 ballets (1877-1905), the cantata Calypso, 1872, the descriptive symphony La Résurrection, 1876, an overture, 2 orchestral suites, Psalm 113, a Stabat Mater, songs, etc. None of his operas was successful, owing to his choice of a showy and miscellaneous style, but his technical cleverness gave his ballets and lesser pieces some effect. In 1894 he had charge of military music in Serbia. He gained honors there and in Russia, besides being from 1880 member of the Légion d'Honneur. He was also critic for Gil Blas. G.

Salzedó, Carlos (Arcachon, 1885). Gifted French harpist, pupil of the Bordeaux and Paris Conservatories, beginning tours (Portugal to Austria) at sixteen, from 1905 soloist at Monte Carlo, from 1909 at the Metropolitan, New York, and in 1913 member of the Trio de Lutèce (with Barrère and Kéfer). In 1914-15 he served in the French army. Has written a notable set of harp-variations (closing with a fugue) and other concert-pieces. In 1914 he married his pupil Viola Gramm. A.

Samara, Spiro (Corfu, 1861-1917, Athens). Greek composer (English mother), trained at Athens and the Paris Conservatory. Wrote the operas Flora Mirabilis, 1886 (his only clear success), Medgé, 1888, Lionella, 1891, La Martire, 1894, La Furia Domata, 1895, Storia d'Amore, 1903, Mlle. de Belle-Isle, 1905, Rhea, 1908, and La Guerra in tempo di Guerra, 1914, the piano-suite Scènes Orientales (4-hands), 6 piano-serenades and other pieces, songs, etc. G.

Samarov, Olga, née Hickenlooper (San Antonio, Tex. 1882). Eminent American pianist, pupil of her mother and grandmother, Sternberg, Breitner, Delaborde, Hutcheson and Jedliczka, making her début in New York in 1905, followed by notable tours in the United States and Europe till 1912. Part of these were with Kreisler, Zimbalist or Geraldine Farrar, besides many appearances with leading orchestras and quartets. In 1914 she resumed activity. In 1911-23 she was the wife of the conductor Stokowski. A.

Samazeuilh, Gustave (Bordeaux, 1877). Able French critic and composer, trained at the Schola Cantorum in Paris, from about 1900 writing for the République Française, Guide Musical, Courrier Musical and other Paris journals. He is secretary of the Société Nationale de Musique. Has written an Étude Symphonique, Le Sommeil de Canope (soprano and orchestra or orchestra alone), 2 Poèmes Chantes (do.), a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, a Fantaisie Élégiatique for violin, a piano-suite

(in part also for small orchestra), many piano-pieces and arrangements of orchestral works by d'Indy, Debussy, Franck, Dukas and other recent French composers. Author of a life of Dukas (1913).

Sammarco, Giuseppe Mario (Palermo, 1873). Distinguished Sicilian operatic baritone, pupil of Ant. Cantelli, from 1894 appearing at Milan and soon throughout Europe and from 1904 in England. Besides being regularly engaged in 1905-14 at Covent Garden, in 1907-10 he was highly valued at the Manhattan, New York, and since 1910 with the Chicago Opera Company. He has also sung repeatedly in Buenos Aires. In addition to having a remarkably beautiful voice, he is a fine actor and has exceptional linguistic accomplishments. He is also a favorite in concert and song-recital. He sang at the premières of Giordano's Andrea Chenier (1896), Leoncavallo's Zaza (1900), Perosi's Mosè (1901), Franchetti's Germania, 1902, Herbert's Natoma (1911) and Parelli's I Dispettosi Amanti (1912). G.

Sammartini, Giovanni Battista (Milan, 1704-1774). Important Italian composer, self-taught, from about 1725 organist in Milan and from 1730 maestro at the S. Maria Maddalena Convent. In 1731-41 Gluck was his pupil. He is notable as a forerunner of Haydn in concerted writing and as a facile church-composer. Wrote at least 24 symphonies (from 1734), overtures, 12 trios, concerti grossi, etc., masses, motets, Psalms and other church-music, with 2 operas (1734-43)—in all about 2000 works. These, however, are somewhat confused with those of his brother Giuseppe, an oboist, who came to England in 1729, played at the Opera and became musician to the Prince of Wales. He also was a prolific instrumental composer. G.

Sammartini, Pietro. 17th C.

Sammons, Albert E. (London, 1886). English violinist, pupil of his father, Saunders and Weist-Hill, since 1906 active in London as concertmaster of the Beecham Orchestra, member of the King's band and leader of the London Quartet.

Samuel, Adolphe (Liège, 1824-1898, Ghent). Influential Belgian teacher, conductor and composer, trained at the Liège and Brussels Conservatories (Prix de Rome, 1845), with further study at Leipzig, Berlin, Dresden, Prague and Vienna and two years in Italy, from 1860 professor at the Conservatory in Brussels and from 1871 director of that at Ghent. In 1865 he started the Popular Concerts at Brussels and in 1869 the large annual festivals. Wrote 5 operas (1845-52), music for Potvin's Les Gueux and Racine's Esther, various occasional cantatas and other choral works, 7 symphonies (including Christ, 1895, with chorus), the symphonic fragment Roland à Roncevaux, 2 overtures, 2 string-quartets, piano-pieces, etc., besides a text-book in harmony, a report on instruments at the Paris Exposition of 1878 and articles in journals.

Sances, Giovanni Felice (?1600-1679). 17th C.

Sandberg, Oskar Theodor (Christianstadt, 1870). Swedish choral conductor, pupil of the Stockholm Conservatory, since 1903 cantor at the Oskarkyrka in Stockholm, from 1909 conductor of the Popular Concerts and the Swedish Choral Union and in 1906-10 critic for the Aftonbladet. Has written cantatas, motets, choruses and songs. His wife, née Hilma Munthe (b. 1875), is a fine violinist, since 1910 leader of the pioneer women's Quartet in Sweden.

Sandberger, Adolf (Würzburg, 1864). Eminent Bavarian musicologist and composer, trained at the Würzburg Music School, the Munich Conservatory and Würzburg and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1887), with extensive foreign study, from 1889 custodian of the music-section of the Munich Library and from 1894 lecturer at the University (full professor from 1909). He is a member of the Bavarian Academy of Science and of many other learned societies, since 1900 editor of the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, as well as from 1894 of the standard edition of the works of Lassus. Author of a thesis on Cornelius (1887) and an essay on his Cid (1893), a study of Chabrier's Gwendoline (1892), Beiträge zur Gesch. d. bayrischen Hofkapelle unter Orlando di Lasso, 1894-95 (vols. i and iii only), a short life of Lasso (1894), Zur Gesch. d. Haydn'schen Streichquartetts, 1899, and Ueber zwei ehem. Mozart zugeschriebene Messen, 1907, besides many articles in the I. M. G. publications, Peters Jahrbuch, etc. His fiftieth birthday was celebrated by a rich Festschrift (1919). Has also written the opera Ludwig der Springer, 1895, the symphonic poem Viola, a Schauspielsouvertüre, the orchestral prologue Riccio, a Königsmarsch, 2 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, a violin-sonata, the choral work Waldmorgen, many choruses (some a cappella), songs and piano-pieces.

Sandby, Herman (n. Holbek, 1881). Able Danish 'cellist, trained at the Frankfort Conservatory, from 1900 touring widely in Europe, in 1912-16 with the Philadelphia Orchestra and teacher at the Combs Conservatory, and then touring from New York as center. Has written music for The Woman and the Fiddler (1912, drama by his wife), a prelude for an uncompleted opera, The Vikings of Heligoland, a 'cello-concerto (1916), 2 string-quartets, many 'cello-transcriptions and settings of Scandinavian folk-songs for varied ensembles. A.

Sanderson, Lillian (Sheboygan, Wis. 1867). American concert-soprano, pupil of Stockhausen, from 1890 favorably known in Berlin and many European cities, especially interested in the songs of Bungert. In 1899 she married the painter and etcher Richard Müller at Dresden. A.

Sanderson, Sibyl (Sacramento, Cal. 1865-1903, Paris). Gifted American operatic soprano, trained in San Francisco and at the Paris Conservatory, making her début in 1888 at The Hague and in 1889 at Paris, becoming a special exponent of Massenet (his Esclarmonde, 1889, and Thaïs, 1894, were written for her, as also Saint-Saëns' Phryné, 1893). She visited New York in 1895 and '98, but without much success. Her personal charm was exceptional. In 1897 she married the Chilean merchant Antonio Terry (d. 1900). See Massenet's Souvenirs, 1912. A.

Sandström, Karl Israel (Linköping, 1824-1880, Gothenburg). Swedish organist, pupil of the Stockholm Conservatory, from 1854 at the Kristinakyrka in Gothenburg and from 1874 also conductor of the Par Bricole. Wrote effective choruses and songs, edited a Choralbuch (1877) and translated Polko's Märchen.

Sandt, Max van de (Rotterdam, 1863). Able Dutch pianist, pupil of his father and Liszt, from 1886 on successful tours, in 1889-94 teacher at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin), from 1896 at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1906 again in Berlin and since 1910 at the Ziskoven Conservatory at Bonn. Has written a string-quartet, cadenzas for Beethoven's concertos and various pieces.

Sanford, Samuel Simons (Bridgeport, Conn. 1849-1910, New York). Gifted American pianist, pupil of Klingmann, Wm. Mason, S. B. Mills, Rubinstein, Batiste and Th. Ritter, from 1870 somewhat known as a remarkable player, but rarely appearing, and from 1894 an important member of the staff of the Yale School of Music (New Haven). A.

Sangiovanni, Antonio (Bergamo, 1831-1892, Milan). Famous Italian singing-teacher, trained at the Milan Conservatory and from 1854 professor there.

Sansone, Enrico (Naples, 1859). Able Italian violinist, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, making his début in 1877, then teacher at the Conservatory and concertmaster at San Carlo and for the symphony-concerts, as well as leader of the Società del Quartetto, but about 1895 removing to Chicago, where he taught at the Chicago Conservatory and Balatka's Academy. In 1908-14 he was concertmaster of the St. Paul Orchestra. Has written the opera Abel, the cantata The Legend of Wenonah, a violin-concerto, 2 quartet-suites, études and songs. A.

Santelmann, William Henry (Offensen, 1863). Hanoverian bandmaster, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1887 enlisted in the U. S. Marine Band, in 1895-98 engaged as conductor of an independent orchestra or at the Columbia Theatre in Washington, but from 1898 Fanciulli's successor as director of the Marine Band. Mus.D. of George Washington Univ. in 1908. Has written considerable band-music. A.

Santini, Fortunato (Rome, 1778-1862, do.). Italian ecclesiastic (abbate), a lifelong investigator of old music and collector of scores. His library, one of the most extraordinary ever gathered, was acquired by the Münster Museum. See his own Catalogo, 1820, Stasov's biography and summary (1854) and Killing's beginning of a thorough catalogue (one vol. 1910). Also wrote an a cappella Requiem a 8, a Stabat Mater and many motets (mostly a cappella). In 1830 he was visited by Mendelssohn (see his Letters). G.

Santley, Charles (Liverpool, 1834-1922, London). Distinguished English baritone, pupil of Nava and Manuel Garcia, appearing in opera in Italy in 1856 and in oratorio in England in 1857. He at once became conspicuous at festivals and in concert throughout England, besides from 1859 taking parts more or less in English and Italian opera. In 1864-65 he visited Barcelona, in 1871 and '91 the United States, in 1889-90 Australia and in 1893 and 1903 South Africa. From 1875 he was for some time member of the Carl Rosa troupe. Knighted in 1907, besides being Commander in the Order of St. Gregory (1887). Wrote a mass, an Ave Maria, some other Catholic music, an orchestral Berceuse (1890), a madrigal and some songs (using the pen-name 'Ralph Betterton'). Author of Student and Singer, 1892, Reminiscences, 1909, The Singing-Master, 2 parts, 1900, and The Art of Singing, 1908. G. A.

Santoliquido, Francesco (n. Naples, 1883). Italian poet and composer, pupil of the Rome Accademia, till 1921 living in Tunis. Has written the operas La Favola di Helga, 1910, L' Ignota and Ferhuda, 1919, the cantata L' Ultima Visione di Cassandra, the mimodrama La Bajadera dalla Maschera Gialla, the overture La Morte di Tintapiles, the symphonic poem Nelle Oasi Sahariani, 2 symphonies, the suites Passaggi and Acquarelli, etc., besides the essay Il Dopo Wagner, Debussy e Strauss.

Santucci, Marco (n. Lucca, 1762-1843, do.). Able Italian church-musician, pupil of Fenaroli, from 1797 Anfossi's successor as maestro at the Lateran in Rome and from 1808 canon and maestro at Lucca Cathedral. Wrote a large amount of church-music in the strict style, 7-part canons, symphonies, organ-sonatas, etc. and a manual of composition (1828). Memoir by Rinuccini, 1851.

Sapellnikov, Vassily (Odessa, 1868). Eminent Russian pianist, pupil of Kessler, Brassin and Sophie Menter, since 1888 largely engaged in concertizing throughout Europe, except in 1897-99, when he taught at the Moscow Conservatory. He has lived chiefly in Germany or at Florence. Has written many refined piano-pieces and the opera The Khan and his Son. G. A.

Sapio, Romualdo (Palermo, 1858). Sicilian conductor and singing-master, trained at the Naples Conservatory, from 1883 opera-director in Italy, from 1888 touring in America with Patti, Albani and Nordica, besides in 1889-90 having charge of the first season at the Chicago Auditorium, and from 1892 chief vocal teacher at the National Conservatory, New York. In 1917 he toured in the Far West with the De Vally French Opera Company. He has made English versions of several operas. In 1892 he married the soprano Clementine de Vere. A.

Sapirstein, David (Pittsburgh, 1889). Gifted American pianist, pupil of his grandfather, Gittings, Spanuth and Kaun, first appearing when but ten, also at New York in 1905, and in 1908-12 touring widely in Europe. Since 1912 he has concertized in America.

Saran, Franz Ludwig (n. Lützen, 1866). Saxon philologist, from 1896 lecturer and from 1905 professor at Halle University and since 1913 at Erlangen. Has written ably about Greek metrics and the Minnesinger poetry (from 1893).

Sarasate, Pablo de [Pablo Martín Melitón S. Navascuez] (Pamplona, 1844-1908, Biarritz). Distinguished Spanish violinist, already playing at ten with such effect as to secure from Queen Isabella the gift of a fine Stradivari, then pupil of the Paris Conservatory and at fifteen fully launched as an extraordinary virtuoso, beginning a series of journeys that ultimately took him all over the world, always with sustained success. Until about 1870 he confined himself mostly to operatic fantasias and characteristic pieces of his own, but after that extended his repertoire over most of the standard violin-literature—limited only by the fact that his hand was small and incapable of the widest reaches and by certain instinctive preferences. His perfectly facile execution, exquisite beauty of tone, charming brightness and uniform refinement gave distinction to everything he undertook. Each year he returned to Pamplona for a kind of festival and at his death left an immense collection of gifts and mementos that he had received, now installed in a special museum. For him Lalo wrote his 1st Concerto and the Symphonie Espagnole, Bruch his 2d Concerto and Schottische Fantasie, and Mackenzie his suite Pibroch. Wrote only for violin (with orchestra) Zigeunerweisen, Navarra (2 violins), Airs Écossais, the caprice Peterneras, Jota de San Fermín, La Chasse, Nocturne-Sérénade, Chansons Russes, Rêve, 6 sets of Spanish dances and fantasias on Carmen and Faust, and (with piano) 8 sets of Spanish dances and many fantasias from operas by different composers. Memoir by Altadill, 1910. G.

Sarmiento, Salvatore (Palermo, 1817-1869, Naples). Italian (Spanish) composer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, from 1854 royal choir-master there. Wrote 5 operas (1837-52), a sacred cantata, a Requiem, church-music and songs.

Saro, J. Heinrich (Jessen, 1827-1891, Berlin). Saxon bandmaster, from 1859 in the Kaiser Franz Regiment in the Prussian army. In 1867 his band won at the international competition in Paris, also received a medal at the Peace Jubilee at Boston in 1872. Wrote an opera, a symphony, overtures, quartets, much band-music and 2 practical text-books.

Sarrette, Bernard (Bordeaux, 1765-1858, Paris). French military officer, in 1789 the organizer and leader of a band for the National Guard, which in 1790 was adopted by the city of Paris and increased to 70 members. In 1792, when it came near being given up because of the pecuniary difficulties of the government, he turned it into a school to train musicians for the whole army. This in 1795 gave rise to the famous Conservatory, of which in 1796-1814 he was director. His energy, intelligence and organizing ability gave it its initial impetus. See Constant's historical summary (1895).

Sarri, Domenico (Trani, 1678-?). Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio della Pietà at Naples, from 1713 second and after 1741 first court-director there. Wrote about 35 operas (1706-43), several oratorios, cantatas, 3 serenades, other ensemble-pieces, etc.

Sarti, Giuseppe (Faenza, 1729-1802, Berlin). Distinguished Italian conductor and composer, pupil of Vallotti and Martini, in 1748-50 organist at Faenza Cathedral and in 1752-53 theater-conductor there, in 1753-75 at Copenhagen, at first as opera-conductor and from 1755 as court-director (but with an absence in Italy in 1765-68), from 1775 director of the Ospedaletto Conservatory in Venice, from 1779 maestro at Milan Cathedral (where, among many others, Cherubini was his pupil and assistant at first), and from 1784 Paisiello's successor as court-director at Petrograd under Catherine II (interrupted in 1787-91 by a temporary retirement caused by intrigue). In 1793 he was named director of a projected conservatory at Ekaterinoslav and in 1795 was ennobled. His death occurred when en route to Italy for reasons of health. Throughout his varied career he kept up a steady stream of production in many forms, chiefly for the stage and the church. He had a natural gift for expressive melody and a command of effective structure, even when using considerable technical learning and artifice. But comparatively little of his music was published and hardly any has retained its place in general recognition. He represented much that was good in a musical order that was being superseded. Wrote over 50 operas, including Il Rè Pastore, 1753, Ciro Riconosciuto, 1756, Ipermestra, 1766, Le Gelosie Villane, 1776, Achille in Sciro, 1779, Fra i Due Litiganti, 1782, Armida, 1786, Olega (text by Empress Catherine), etc., many masses, motets, Psalms, a Te Deum (1789), a Requiem (1793), much other sacred music, some clavier-sonatas, etc. While at Petrograd he made acute studies in acoustics, invented apparatus for counting tone-vibrations and anticipated the 'diapason normale' of 1859 by advocating 436 as the vibration-number of a. Memoirs by Scudo, 1857 (novel), Pasolini-Zanelli, 1883, and Findeisen, 1903 (in Musikal. Allertümer). G.

Sartorio, Antonio (?1620-1681). 17th C.

Sartorius, Erasmus (1577-1637). 17th C.

Sartorius, Paul. 17th C.

Saslavsky, Alexander (Kharkov, 1876). Gifted Russian violinist, trained at the Kharkov Music School and by Gorsky and Gruen, going to America in 1893 for a Canadian tour and then joining the New York Symphony Society, in which in 1903-19 he was concertmaster and assistant-conductor. In 1904-08 he was also concertmaster of the new Russian Symphony Orchestra. In 1907 he formed a Quartet with Finkelstein, Weismann and Renard, making many tours and giving summer-concerts in Denver from 1915. In 1919 he became concertmaster of the new Philharmonic Orchestra at Los Angeles. A.

Sass [Sax], Marie Constance (Ghent, 1838-1907, n. Paris). Belgian operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Ugalde, in 1859 appearing at the Lyrique in Paris and from 1860 at the Opéra, from 1871 in many Italian cities and after 1882 for a time at Brussels. In 1864-67 she was the wife of the baritone Castelmarty. Her assumption of the name Sax was legally contested by Adolphe Sax.

Sassöli, Ada (Bologna, 1887). Talented Italian harpist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, first appearing at Bologna when but twelve and from 1904 making many tours (with Melba in England and Australia in 1904-05, in America in 1905-06, '10-11 and '15-16, and in Italy in 1913-14). Has written harp-transcriptions of piano-music.

Satie, Eric Alfred Leslie (Honfleur, 1866). French composer, spasmodically trained at the Paris Conservatory and the Schola Cantorum, as well as under individual teachers. As early as 1885 he had adopted a style resembling that later used by Debussy and from 1889 he and Debussy became intimate. From 1892 he was associated with a mystic fraternity known as the Salon de la Rose-Croix. Has written the comic opera Paul et Virginie, the symphonic drama Socrate, 1918, the ballet Uspud, 1892, music for plays by Péladan, Mazel, Bois and Feraudy, and a variety of more or less eccentric piano-pieces (beginning with Ogives, 1886). See Jean-Aubry's Musique Française d'Aujourd'hui, 1916, and Van Vechten's Interpreters, 1917.

Satter, Gustav (Vienna, 1832-?). Austrian pianist, trained at Vienna and Paris, in 1854-60 touring extensively in North and South America and then living at various points in Europe, with a second American tour. Wrote the opera Olanthe, 2 symphonies, the tone-picture Washington, 3 overtures, piano-quartets, trios, 3 piano-sonatas, concert-waltzes, studies, etc. Some of his works were commended by Berlioz.

Sauer, Emil (Hamburg, 1862). Eminent North German pianist, pupil of his mother, the Moscow Conservatory, Liszt and Deppe, since 1882 known throughout Europe by many tours, with visits to America in 1898-99 and 1908, besides in 1901-07 teaching advanced pupils at the Vienna Conservatory. Since 1908 he has lived at Dresden. His highly finished style has won him many honors in Austria, France and Saxony (ennobled in 1917). Has written 2 piano-concertos, a Suite Moderne, 2 sonatas, 24 concert-études, many lesser pieces and a Hymne Bulgare for chorus, besides editing Brahms' piano-works, etc. Author of Meine Welt, 1901 (autobiography). G.

Sauer, Wilhelm (Friedland, 1831–1916, Frankfort). Excellent North German organ-maker, from 1857 established at Frankfort-an-der-Oder and during the next thirty years supplying many of the best instruments in Germany, with some in Russia.

Sauret, Émile (Dun-le-Roi, 1852–1920, London). Distinguished French violinist, pupil of the Paris and Brussels Conservatories (de Bériot's last pupil), when but eight beginning successful tours in France, Italy and Austria, from 1862 appearing in London, from 1872 in America and from 1876 in Germany, thus establishing a notable international reputation as a finished artist. From 1880 he taught at the Kullak Academy in Berlin, from 1891 at the Royal Academy in London, in 1903–06 at the Chicago Musical College and from 1908 at Trinity College in London. In 1872–77 he was the husband of the pianist Teresa Carreño and from 1879 of Emma Hotter of Düsseldorf. Wrote a violin-concerto, various pieces for violin with orchestra (Rapsodie Russe, Rapsodie Suédoise, Andante et Caprice de Concert, Souvenir de Moscou, etc.), a suite for violin solo and nearly 60 études, over 100 pieces for violin and piano, about 25 transcriptions and a fine Gradus ad Parnassum. His repertory as player was very extensive, including about 500 works of the first order. G. A.

Sauveur, Joseph (La Flèche, 1653–1716, Paris). Distinguished French acoustician, from 1696 member of the Académie, from 1700 publishing in its Mémoires a series of notable essays. He was the first to use the term 'acoustics' for the science of sounds, to establish the doctrine of 'partial-tones', etc. His achievements are the more remarkable because he was born a deaf-mute.

Sauzay, Charles Eugène (Paris, 1809–1901 do.). Eminent French violinist, pupil of Vida and the Paris Conservatory (several prizes) from about 1830 playing second or viola in Baillot's Quartet (till its end in 1840) and then head of his own Quartet (with Norblin, Franchomme, etc.), besides being soloist to Louis Philippe and later second concertmaster in the court-orchestra. In 1860–92 he was Girard's successor as professor at the Conservatory. He married Baillot's daughter. Wrote a Symphonie Rustique, a string-trio, pieces for piano-trio, fantasias, romances and études for violin, piano-pieces, songs and music for Molière's Georges Dandin and Le Sicilien, besides an essay on the quartets of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven (1861, 2d ed. 1884) and L'École de l'Accompagnement, 1869. G.

Savage, Henry Wilson. American impresario, from about 1895 active in Boston in organizing various fine troupes for the giving of opera in English, including notable performances of Parsifal (1904–05), Madama Butterfly (1906–07, first time in America), The Girl of the Golden West (1911–12), etc. Latterly, as head of his own corporation, he has sent out many troupes to give operettas and musical comedies. A.

Savard, Marie Emmanuel Augustin (Paris, 1861), son of the following. French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1886), in 1892–93 chorusmaster at the Opéra and since 1902 head of the Lyons Conservatory. Has written 2 symphonies, the overture Roi Lear, the operatic 'rêve' La Forêt, 1910, the cantata La Vision de Saül, 1886, a string-quartet, etc.

Savard, Marie Gabriel Augustin (Paris, 1814–1881, do.). French theorist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and from 1843 professor there. Author of a noted Manuel d'Harmonie, 1861 (14th ed. 1913), Premières Notions de Musique, 1866 (25th ed. 1897), and other text-books.

Savart, Félix (Mézières, 1791–1841, Paris). Eminent French acoustician (originally a physician), from 1819 professor of physics at the Collège de France and from 1827 member of the Académie. He made notable investigations in the field of resonance, especially in stringed instruments, in the formation of tone in the human voice and in bird-song, etc., and invented the device of a toothed wheel for demonstrating the relation of vibration-number to pitch. Author of many essays in the Annales de Physique (from 1819), the first of which included experiments leading to his remarkable 'trapezoidal violin'. G.

Savenau, Karl Maria (Prague, 1837–1916, Gratz), Freiherr von Kapua. Bohemian composer, pupil of the Prague Organ School and Conservatory, from 1870 settled at Gratz. Wrote the choral work Aus Waldmeisters Brautfahrt, Psalm 50, 2 scenas from Tieck's Schöne Magelone, a Symphonisches Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, a string-quartet, men's choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Savioni, Maria (1680–?). 17th C.

Sawyer, Frank Joseph (Brighton, 1857–1908, do.). English organist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and J. F. Bridge, for a time assistant of the latter at Westminster Abbey, then organist at St. Patrick's in Brighton and conductor of the Brighton and Hove Choral and Orchestral Society, and after 1896 teacher at the Royal College in London. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1883. Wrote Slavonic Dances for orchestra, a Konzertstück for organ and orchestra, the cantata Orpheus, the choral works John the Baptist, 1877, Mary the Virgin, 1883, Jerusalem, The Soul's Forgiveness, 1894, and The Widow of Nain, various anthems, part-songs, songs and piano-pieces and violin-pieces, besides a primer on extemporization and a text-book in harmony (1899, with Bridge).

Sax, Antoine Joseph Adolphe (Dinant, 1814–1894, Paris). Eminent Belgian maker of wind-instruments, trained as clarinetist at the Brussels Conservatory, from 1835 engaged with his father (see below) in improving the clarinet and about 1840 inventing the 'saxophone' (a brass instrument with a conical tube and a clarinet-mouthpiece), which in 1842 he took to Paris and soon introduced into military bands.

This was followed by the 'saxhorn' and the 'saxotromba', both enlarging the practical resources of brass-wind music. He made elaborate studies in the acoustics and mechanism of all brass instruments, especially as to the use of pistons and valves, and took various prizes with his several instruments. In spite of his energy and ingenuity, he had many business reverses and in 1877 had to sell his collection of nearly 500 instruments. From 1857 he taught the saxophone at the Conservatory and prepared a method for it. Memoirs and studies by Commettant, 1860, and Lajarte, 1876. See also Pontécoulant's Organographie, 1861. G.

Sax, Charles Joseph (Dinant, 1791-1865, Paris). Able Belgian instrument-maker, from 1815 becoming noted at Brussels for stringed and wind-instruments, especially the latter, and after 1853 associated with his son in Paris (see above). His clarinets and bassoons early attracted notice and later he perfected an ingenious 'omnitionic horn', adjustable to any key. G.

Sbolci, Jette (Florence, 1833-1895, do.). Able Italian 'cellist, from 1865 teacher at the Florence Istituto, later founding and conducting the Società Orchestrale and joining Buonamici's Quartet.

Sbriglia, Giovanni (Naples, 1840). Eminent Italian operatic tenor and singing-teacher, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, from 1861 famous throughout Italy and from 1865 notably successful in Havana and the United States. About 1875 he settled in Paris and devoted himself to training many famous singers (the De Reszkés, Plançon, Nordica, etc.), becoming a member of the French Académie and the Florence Accademia.

Scacchi, Marco. 17th C.

Scalabrini, Paolo (Lucca?, 1713-1806, do.). Italian singer, from 1742 in Mingotti's operatroupe at Gratz and Hamburg, in 1748-53 and also 1775-81 court-director at Copenhagen, then returning to Lucca. Catalogue of works in E. H. Müller's monograph on the Mingottis (1917).

Scalchi, Sofia (Turin, 1850). Eminent Italian operatic mezzo-soprano, pupil of Boccabadati, from 1866 appearing in Italy, in 1868-90 a prime favorite in England and in 1882-86 and 1891-96 also in the United States, besides fine success in Russia, at Warsaw, Vienna, Madrid and Rio de Janeiro. In 1875 she married Count Luigi Lolli and since 1896 has lived at her villa near Turin.

Scaletta, Orazio (?-1630). 16th C.

Scandello, Antonio (1517-1580). 16th C. G.

Scaria, Emil (Gratz, 1838-1886, n. Dresden). Excellent Styrian operatic bass, pupil of Netzer, Gentiluomo and Lewy, making a poor début at Pest in 1860, but, after further study with Garcia, with fine success at Dessau in 1862, followed by engagements at Leipzig, Dresden (from 1864) and Vienna (from 1872), besides visits to England (from 1875), New York (1884) and Russia. He was chosen by Wagner to sing at the première of Parsifal (1882). See Neumann's Erinnerungen, 1907. G.

Scarlatti, Alessandro (1659-1725). 17th C. G.

Scarlatti, Francesco. 17th C. G.

Scarlatti, Giuseppe (Naples, 1712-1777, Vienna), grandson of Alessandro above, but not son of Domenico below. Italian composer of over 25 operas (from 1740), after 1757 active at Vienna. G. [Florimo gives his birth-year as 1718.]

Scarlatti, Giuseppe Domenico (Naples, 1685-1757, do.), son of Alessandro above. Distinguished Italian harpsichordist and composer, pupil of his father, Pasquini and Gasparini. In 1704 he remodeled for Naples Polaroli's Irene and in 1705 was sent by his father to Florence and Venice with Nicolini, the singer, apparently to give his talents wider scope. In 1709 Cardinal Ottoboni at Rome pitted him against Handel in friendly rivalry on both harpsichord and organ. There from 1709 he wrote operas for the Queen of Poland and from 1715 was maestro at St. Peter's, succeeding Bai. In 1719-21 he was cembalist for the Italian Opera in London, in 1721-25 court-cembalist at Lisbon, then at Naples, in 1729-54 in royal service at Madrid and finally at Naples once more. He was addicted to gambling and his family's poverty had to be relieved by help from the singer Farinelli. Like his father, he was one of the ablest geniuses of his age, but his power lay in a keen intuition as to the possibilities of keyboard-technique and style. He used many daring and difficult devices, such as runs in thirds and sixths, quick repetitions, wide skips, intricate hand-crossings. He chose to write in short forms, combining dextrous thematic imitation and free modulation with piquant and often impetuous dance-like forms. Wrote about 10 operas (1710-15), a Stabat Mater a 10 and at least 350 harpsichord-pieces (6 vols. of complete edition issued by Ricordi since 1906). Memoir by Longo, 1913. G.

Schachner, Rudolf Joseph (Munich, 1821-1896, n. Salzburg). Bavarian pianist, pupil of Frau von Fladt, J. B. Cramer and Ett, from 1842 appearing at Vienna, Paris, Leipzig (at the Gewandhaus under Mendelssohn), Berlin and Munich, from 1853 teaching in London and finally settling in Vienna, but with many visits to Munich. Wrote the oratorio Israels Rückkehr von Babylon, 2 piano-concertos and many pieces (Poésies Musicales, 6 books of Ombres et Rayons, etc.), songs, etc.

Schachtebeck, Heinrich (n. Göttingen, 1887). Noted Hanoverian violinist, pupil of Hilf and W. Hausmann, from 1908 a member of the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig, from 1909 concertmaster in one of the city theaters, in 1911-14 in the Philharmonic (often as soloist) and in 1915 founder of his own Quartet (with Albert Patzak, A. Witter and Alfred Patzak). His wife, née Augusta Soroeker (b. 1889), is an accomplished ensemble-pianist.

Schack [Cziak], Benedict (Mirowitz, 1758-1826, Munich). Bohemian tenor, from 1780 musician to Prince Carolath and then in Schikaneder's troupe, thus becoming intimate with the Mozarts and Haydn. He remained a close friend of the younger Mozart, who wrote the part of Tamino for him. Wrote several singspiele, masses (one completed by Mozart), a Seven Words and other sacred music. G.

Schad, Joseph (Steinach, 1812-1879, Bordeaux). Bavarian pianist, pupil of the Würzburg Conservatory and of Aloys Schmitt, from 1834 organist at Morges (Switzerland), later at the Geneva Conservatory and from 1847 a leading teacher at Bordeaux. Wrote many effective salon-pieces.

Schade, Karl. School-teacher at Halberstadt and author of several early text-books and collections of school-music (1828-31).

Schadewitz, Carl (St. Ingbert, 1887). Rhenish composer, trained at the Würzburg Conservatory and active there as teacher and director. Has written the opera Laurenca, the fairy-play Johannisnacht, music for Calderon's Zenobia, a symphonic poem, a prelude and fugue for strings, 3 orchestral suites, a piano-quartet, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, songs and a Lied-Sinfonie (for soprano, baritone, violin, flute and piano).

Schaefer, Alexander Nikolaievitch (Petrograd, 1866). Russian conductor and composer, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1886 teacher at music-schools in Petrograd, from 1898 director of Panaiev's private theater and since 1901 conductor at the People's Opera. Has written the operas Thisbe and The Gypsies, 1901, 2 ballets, 2 symphonies, 3 orchestral suites, dances and a scherzo, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, many 4-hand arrangements of Russian orchestral works, piano-pieces and songs.

Schaefer, Dirk (Rotterdam, 1874). Eminent Dutch pianist and composer, trained at the Rotterdam Music School and the Cologne Conservatory, in 1894 winner of the Mendelssohn prize, from 1895 active at The Hague and since 1904 at Amsterdam. Has written an orchestral suite and a rhapsodic, a piano-concerto, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a string-trio, 4 violin-sonatas, sonatas for 'cello and for piano, choruses, songs and piano-pieces. He is one of the most gifted of the younger Dutch musicians.

Schaefer, Karl Ludolf (Rostock, 1866). Physician and since 1907 professor at the free clinic of Berlin University. Author of many monographs on the physiology of hearing and musical apprehension (from 1890, including Musical. Akustik, 1902 (3d ed. 1919), Psychologie d. Klanganalyse, 1909, and Einführung in d. Musikwissenschaft, 1915).

Schäffer, August (Rhineberg, 1814-1879, Baden). Prussian composer, pupil of Mendelssohn and Birnbach, from about 1835 active in Berlin, writing popular comic duets and quartets, several operas (from 1839), some symphonies, chamber-music, etc.

Schäffer, Julius (n. Stendal, 1823-1902, Breslau). Able Prussian choral conductor, trained at Halle University and under Dehn. besides intimacy with Franz and the Mendelssohn circle, from 1855 court-director at Schwerin, founding a choir in imitation of the Berlin Domchor, and from 1860 at Breslau as Reinecke's successor as conductor of the Singakademie and as director at the University. He gained the title of royal professor in 1878 and in 1872 was made Ph.D. by the Univ. Wrote songs and part-songs, edited fine Choralbücher (1866, '80) and championed Franz' additional accompaniments as against Chrysander (1863-77), besides preparing a history of the Breslau Singakademie (1875). Memoir by Bohn, 1903.

Schäffer, Willy. Composer of the operas Signe, 1907 (short) and Das Buch Hiob, 1912.

Schaffrath, Christoph (n. Dresden, 1709-1763, Berlin). Saxon cembalist, from 1735 in Frederick the Great's private establishment (until 1740 at Rhineberg), writing many clavier-pieces, violin-sonatas, trios, quartets, sinfonie, etc.

Schaffhäutl, Karl Franz Emil von (Ingolstadt, 1803-1890, Munich). Bavarian geologist and technician, from 1849 custodian of the University Museum at Munich. He was also much engaged on acoustics, writing various essays on tone-production (from 1833), including criticisms of Helmholtz' theories, and on Catholic church-music (essays in 1833, '69 and '87). Author also of a report on instruments at the Munich Exposition of 1854 and a life of Vogler (1888). Memoir in Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch, 1891.

Schalk, Franz (Vienna, 1863). Able Austrian conductor, trained by Bruckner, from 1899 at the Berlin Opera and from 1904 at the Vienna Opera, besides directing the Musikfreunde concerts (in succession to Löwe) and the directing-school of the Akademie.

Schall, Klaus (Copenhagen, 1757-1835, n. do.). Danish violinist and conductor, from about 1775 in the opera-orchestra at Copenhagen, in 1792 becoming concertmaster and in 1817-34 conductor. Wrote several singspiele (1787-1802), about 20 effective ballets, violin-concertos and pieces. He was intimate with Viotti and Cherubini.

Scharfe, Gustav (Grimma, 1835-1892, Dresden). Saxon operatic baritone, from about 1860 engaged at the Dresden Opera and from 1874 eminent as singing-teacher at the Conservatory, gaining the title of royal professor in 1880. Wrote choruses, songs and a notable method.

Scharfenberg, Wilhelm (Kassel, 1819-1895, Quogue, N. Y.). Hessian violinist, pupil of Hummel, in 1837-38 second in Spohr's Quartet at Kassel and then in New York, where he became prominent as player and teacher, from 1842 was a leading member of the new Philharmonic Society (holding many offices, including from 1863 that of president) and was also interested in music-publishing (from about 1870 editor and adviser for Schirmer). A.

Scharrer, August (Strasburg, 1866). Eminent Alsatian conductor and composer, at first trained for a business career, then pupil of the Strasburg Conservatory and Berlin University, besides private study under Müller-Reuter, Jacobsthal and others. In 1897-98 he was Mottl's assistant at the Karlsruhe Opera, from 1898 conductor at the Ratisbon Opera, from 1900 second conductor of the Kaim Orchestra at Munich, from 1904 conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic, from 1907 director of the Strasburg Conservatory and since 1914 leader of the Lehrergesangverein in Nuremberg. Has written the opera Erlösung, the choral works Hymne an die Nacht, Advent und Gudruns Befreiung (for 3 soli and orchestra), the symphony Per Aspera ad Astra, the symphonic poems Stille Stunde and Iphigenie, 4 overtures, a Phantastisches Vorspiel, Symphonietta, Symphonisches Adagio, Ballettmusik, 3 Intermezzi, Festmarsch, Charakteristische Suite and several pieces for small orchestra, besides 4 books of songs.

Scharrer, Irene (London, ?1880). Able English pianist, pupil of the Royal Academy and of Matthay, since 1901 appearing widely in England and also in Germany and Holland.

Scharwenka, Franz Xaver (Samter, 1850), brother of the next. Distinguished Polish-Prussian pianist and composer, trained at the Kullak Academy in Berlin and in 1868-73 teacher there. He made his début as player in 1869 and for many years gave annual chamber-concerts with Sauret and H. Grünfeld, besides leading orchestral concerts and from 1874 making many tours as pianist (from 1879 visiting England and also America). In 1881-91 he directed the Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin, in 1898-1914 was head of the amalgamated Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory and then (with Petzet) opened a school for advanced players. In 1891-98 he conducted a school in New York, but with annual trips in Europe. His eminent gifts as player and composer have won him many honors, as from the Prussian and Austrian courts, from the Berlin Akademie, etc. Has written the opera Mataswintha, 1896, a symphony, 4 piano-concertos (in B-flat min., C min., C-sharp-min. and F min.), a piano-quartet, 2 piano-trios, a violin-sonata, a 'cello-sonata, 2 piano-sonatas and many brilliant pieces (some for 4 hands), many effective arrangements, a critical edition of Schumann's piano-works and many studies and collected pedagogical pieces. Author of Methodik d. Klavierspiels, 1908, communications to the London Musical Record and an autography (1922). G, A.

Scharwenka, Ludwig Philipp (Samter, 1847-1917, Bad Nauheim), brother of the above. Eminent Polish-Prussian theory-teacher and composer, pupil of the Kullak Academy in Berlin and in 1870-81 teacher there, then joining his brother in the Scharwenka Conservatory. In 1891-92 they were together in New York, but he then returned to the Berlin school, which in 1893 he and Hugo Goldschmidt amalgamated into the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory, remaining one of its directors till 1914. In 1880 he married the violinist Marianne Stresov, who joined his teaching-staff (d. 1918). Wrote 2 symphonies (D. min. and E-flat (brevis)), the symphonic poems Frühlingswogen and Traum und Wirklichkeit, a Festouvertüre, Arkadische Suite, Dramatische Fantasie, Liebesnacht, Serenade, Polish dances and other orchestral pieces, a violin-concerto, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, 4 piano-trios, 2 violin-sonatas, sonatas for viola and for 'cello, many pieces for violin and for 'cello, 3 piano-sonatas and many rhapsodies, dances, etc. (many for 4 hands), the choral works Herbstfeier, An den König und Sakuntala, a cappella choruses and songs. He was a member of the senate of the Berlin Akademie. His son Walter (b. 1881) is organist at Dahlem (since 1908), writing a piano-concerto and Psalm 150. G, A.

Schattmann, Alfred (in Russian Poland, 1876). Composer of the short operas Die Freier, 1904, Des Teufels Pergament, 1913, Die Geister von Krakenstein and Die Hochzeit des Mönchs.

Schatz, Albert (Rostock, 1839-1910, do.). North German merchant (in 1867-73 in San Francisco), from 1873 owner of the music-business at Rostock founded by L. Trutschel. From early life he gave great attention to opera-history, collected about 12,000 librettos of premièrès and prepared a card-catalogue of about 80,000 entries, with important statistical data. In 1908 his invaluable collection was sold to the Library of Congress in Washington, where it has been greatly augmented. See Sonneck's Catalogue 2 vols. 1914.

Schaub, Hans F. (Frankfort, 1880). Hessian theorist, pupil of I. Knorr, Humperdinck and Arnold Mendelssohn, from 1902 choral leader at Bingen, from 1904 teacher at the Breslau Conservatory, from 1906 editor of the Deutsche Musikzeitung at Berlin and teacher in the Benda music-school, and since 1914 teacher at the Vogt music-school in Hamburg and critic for the Correspondent. Has written a comic opera, a Festvorspiel, a prologue to Monna Vanna, 3 intermezzi for small orchestra, violin-pieces and songs.

Schebek, Edmund (Petersdorf, 1819-1895, Prague). Moravian lawyer and government official at Prague, a keen student of instrument-making. Author of a report on orchestral instruments at the Paris Exposition of 1855 (1858), Der Geigenbau in Italien u. sein deutscher Ursprung, 1874 (occasioned by the Vienna Exposition of 1873), and a pamphlet on Froberger (1874). He made a collection of instruments, autographs, etc. G.

Schebest, Agnes (Vienna, 1813-1869, Stuttgart). Austrian operatic mezzo-soprano, from about 1830 connected with the Dresden Opera and in 1833-41 a favorite at Pest, Vienna and in Germany in heroic rôles. In 1841 she married the noted theologian David Strauss. Author of an autobiography (1857) and Rede u. Gebärde, 1862. G.

Schechner-Waagen, Nanette (Munich, 1806–1860, do.). Bavarian operatic soprano, early employed at the Munich Opera and from 1825 highly successful, at first in Italian works and from 1827 in German, quickly gaining the first rank in grand opera at Munich, Vienna and Berlin, but in 1835 forced by ill-health to retire. She married the painter Waagen. G.

Scheel, Fritz (Lübeck, 1852–1907, Philadelphia). Able North German violinist and conductor, pupil of his father and David, playing in the former's orchestra when but ten and becoming concertmaster and leader at Bremerhaven at seventeen. From 1873 he directed summer-concerts at Schwerin, from 1884 was municipal conductor at Chemnitz (following Sitt) and in 1890–93 led orchestral concerts in Hamburg. Removing to America, in 1893–94 he led concerts in New York, in 1894 had charge of the Trocadero orchestra at the Chicago Exposition, in 1895–99 founded and conducted the San Francisco Orchestra and in 1899 made such an impression with summer-concerts in Philadelphia that in 1900 he was made conductor of the new Philadelphia Orchestra, speedily developing it to great efficiency. From 1905 he also led the Orpheus and Euridice Clubs. A.

Scheffer, John Julia (Hamburg, 1867). North German conductor, pupil of Mehrkens, Schlöming and Sucher, from 1889 theater-conductor at Ghent, Königsberg, Jena, Stettin and Detmold and since 1896 active at Hamburg and Lübeck as director of several choral societies, especially for men's voices. Has written orchestral pieces and songs.

Scheibe, Johann Adolf (Leipzig, 1708–1776, Copenhagen), son of a skillful organ-maker. Industrious Saxon composer, critic and conductor, originally trained as a lawyer. In 1729 he competed unsuccessfully for the place of organist at the Thomaskirche in Leipzig, then spent some years in Prague, Gotha and Sondershausen, and in 1736 settled at Hamburg, where in 1737–40 he issued Der kritische Musicus (including in 1737 an attack on Bach which he later withdrew). From 1740 he was court-director at Kulmbach and in 1744–58 at Copenhagen. Wrote the opera Thusnelda, 1749, 2 oratorios, about 200 sacred works, duet-cantatas, songs, a multitude of concertos for flute and for violin, quartets, trios, etc. Author of works on the origin of music, with the assertion that part-song sprang from northern Europe (1754), on the recitative (1764–65) and on composition (1773, one vol. only), besides a second edition of the Kritische Musicus in 1745. G.

Scheibler, Johann Heinrich (n. Aix, 1777–1837, Krefeld). Rhenish silk-manufacturer at Krefeld, from about 1812 deeply interested in acoustical problems, especially in making a standard tonometer. He left a remarkable set of 56 tuning-forks, by which a tempered scale could be laid out with extreme exactitude. His essays on tonometry were published as Schriften über physikal. u. musikal. Tonmessung, 1838, and his system discussed by Töpfer (1842), Vincent (1849), Lecomte (1856) and Ellis (1880). In 1834 he proposed what is called the 'Stuttgart pitch' of  $a' = 440$  (so called because adopted by the Stuttgart Congress of physicists). See monograph by Löhr, 1836. G.

Scheide mann, Heinrich (17596–1663). 17th C. G.
Scheidemantel, Karl (Weimar, 1859–1923, do.) Eminent Saxon operatic baritone, pupil of Borchers and Stockhausen, from 1878 at the Weimar Opera and in 1886–1911 regularly engaged at Dresden, but with visits elsewhere (notably from 1886 at Bayreuth, at Milan in 1892 and extensively in Germany, besides trips to England in 1884 and '99). He sang at the premières of Bungert's Odysseus trilogy (1896, '98, 1901) and of Paderewski's Manru (1901). From 1911 he was teacher at the Weimar Conservatory. Author of Stimm bildung, 1907 (4th ed. 1914), librettos for Lindner's Eldena and Pittrich's Pechogel und Lachtaube, a new text for Mozart's Così Fan Tutti (1909, as Dame Kobold) and a fresh translation of his Don Giovanni (1914, prize from the Bühnenverein), besides a collection of Meisterweisen, 6 parts, 1914. Sketch by Trede, 1911. G.

Scheider, May (New York, ?1890). American operatic lyric soprano, pupil of Gallico, Lambert, Earl Brown, Lamperti and J. de Reszké, making her formal début in 1908 at Berlin and Zurich, remaining at the latter till 1911, in 1911–13 at Karlsruhe and then at various cities in Germany and Switzerland, besides in 1915–16 singing with the Boston Opera Company.

Scheidt, Samuel (1587–1654). 17th C. G.

Scheffelhut, Jakob. 17th C.

Schein, Johann Hermann (1586–1630). 17th C. G.

Schein, Paul Vassilievitch (Mohilev, 1826–1900, Riga). From about 1875 a specialist in Russian folk-songs, publishing Die russischen Volkslieder, 1869–70, '77 (in Vorträge d. Gesellschaft für Geschichte u. Altertum), Die weissrussischen Volkslieder, 1874, Materialen zur Erforschung d. Sprache u. d. Gebräuche d. russ. Bevölkerung im nordwest. Gebiet, 1898, and Der Grossrusse in seinen Liedern, 2 vols. 1898, 1900.

Scheinpflug, Paul (n. Dresden, 1875). Able Saxon violinist and conductor, trained at the Dresden Conservatory, in 1897–98 violinist in a nobleman's private quartet in southern Russia, from 1898 concertmaster of the Bremen Philharmonic and also conductor of the Lehrer-gesangsverein (till 1904) and the Liederkranz, from 1909 director of the Musikverein at Königsberg, from 1914 conductor of the Blüthner Orchestra at Berlin and since 1920 city-director at Duisburg. Has written the symphonic poem Frühling, 1907, an effective Ouvertüre zu einem Lustspiel, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a violin-sonata, Die Ulme von Hirsau for double men's chorus, 2 men's choruses with violin, Weihnachtslied der Engel for women's chorus and organ, the song-cycle Worpswede (with piano, violin and English horn) and many songs, besides the 'spieler' Das Hofkonzert, 1922. Sketch by Dubizky in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1907.

Schelble, Johann Nepomuk (n. Donaueschingen, 1789-1837, Frankfurt). Gifted South German tenor and choral leader, pupil of Weisse and Krebs, in 1812-13 teacher at Stuttgart and member of the court-choir, in 1813-16 teacher and opera-singer at Vienna (intimate with Beethoven, Moscheles, Weigl, Spohr and others) and from 1816 at Frankfurt, for a time as stage-singer, in 1817-18 as conductor of the Akademie and from 1818 as founder and director of the famous Cäcilienverein, producing many choral works of the first order. He was an able teacher and developed a special method of cultivating the sense of absolute pitch (see study by K. Lange, 1873). Memoir by Weissmann, 1838. G.

Schelle, Karl Eduard (n. Berlin, 1816-1882, Vienna). Prussian literary scholar, from 1864 Hanslick's successor as critic for the Vienna Presse, besides lecturing on music-history at the Conservatory and the Horák music-school. Author of Der Tannhäuser in Paris, 1861, and Die päpstliche Sängerschule in Rom, 1872.

Schelling, Ernest Henry (Belvidere, N. J. 1876). Gifted American pianist, pupil of Mathias, Moszkowski, Pruckner, Leschetizky, Huber, Barth and Paderewski, making his first appearance when under five, from 1903 touring extensively in Europe and South America and since 1905 in the United States. For some years he lived at Céligny (Switzerland), came to America in 1914 and enlisted in the World War, becoming captain. In 1918 he accompanied Paderewski to Poland, and in 1919 was badly hurt in an accident in Switzerland. Has written a symphony, a Symphonische Legende, an orchestral suite, a Suite Phantastique for piano and orchestra, 1907, Impressions from an Artist's Life for the same, a violin-concerto, a violin-sonata, piano-variations and other pieces, songs, etc. A.

Schelper [Buck], Otto (Rostock, 1840-1906, Leipzig). Able North German operatic baritone, from 1856 an actor, but from about 1865 singing at Bremen, Mannheim, Cologne, Berlin and (from 1876) Leipzig, with notable success in Wagnerian rôles.

Schenck, Johann [Jean]. 17th C. G.

Schenck, Johann (Wiener-Neustadt, 1753-1836, Vienna). Austrian composer, pupil of Tomaselli, Stoll, Schneller and Wagenseil, from 1778 gaining notice by a mass and other fine church-music and from 1785 making a hit with a series of 11 clever operettas, including Die Weinlese, 1785, Der Erntekranz, 1790, Der Dorfbarbier, 1796 (his brightest work, long popular), and Der Fassbinder, 1802. Also wrote 11 symphonies, music for Erwine von Steinheim (1780), quartets, trios, harp-concertos, several cantatas, arias, songs, etc. For some months in 1793-94 he secretly coached Beethoven in counterpoint while the latter was studying with Haydn. Memoirs by Bauernfeld, 1837 (in Wiener Zeitsch. für Kunst) and Staub, 1900. G.

Schenck, Peter Petrovitch (Petrograd, 1870). Russian composer, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory and of Soloviev, for a time active as pianist and then in charge of the Imperial Theater Library. Has written the operas Love's Power, 1893, Actea, 1899, and The Last Meeting, 1904, the ballets Bluebeard, 1896, and Salange, 1899, several cantatas (as in memory of Pushkin, Gogol, Alexander II, Nicholas II, etc.), 3 symphonies, the symphonic poem Hero and Leander, the fantasy Ghosts, an orchestral suite, an overture, variations and other orchestral pieces, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, pieces for violin and for 'cello, 2 piano-sonatas and pieces, a cappella choruses and many songs.

Schenker, Heinrich (n. Buczac, 1868). Galician pianist and theorist, pupil of Bruckner, since about 1890 active in Vienna as teacher and critic. He has published arrangements of cantatas, etc., by J. S. Bach, various works by K. P. E. Bach, Handel's organ-concertos and especially an annotated edition of Beethoven's last five sonatas, besides a monograph on Beethoven's 9th Symphony, a text-book in harmony (1906), the beginning of one in counterpoint (1910) and further studies as Der Tonville (from 1922). Has also written piano-pieces and songs.

Schennich, Emil (Rattenberg, 1884). Tyrolean conductor and composer, trained at the Innsbruck Music School and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1908 teacher at Königsberg and assistant-conductor of the Sängerverein, in 1916-18 head of a music-school at Barmen and then director of the Innsbruck Music Schools, and leader of the Musikverein concerts. Has written an orchestral serenade, a string-quintet, 2 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, 3 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, 2 piano-sonatas, 2 piano-suites, an organ-sonata, etc.

Scherber, Ferdinand (Vienna, 1874). Austrian critic and librarian, educated as a lawyer, in music largely self-taught, from 1901 scientific expert at the Vienna Library and in 1909-12 Mantuani's successor as custodian of the music-division there, retiring because of ill-health. He has contributed much to various periodicals and written several orchestral and chamber-works, besides a vaudeville, a pantomime, etc.

Scherchen, Hermann (Berlin, 1891). Prussian violist and conductor, self-taught, in 1907-10 playing in the Blüthner and Philharmonic Orchestras in Berlin, in 1911-12 touring with Schönberg, in 1914 conductor of symphony-concerts at Riga, but during the war imprisoned in Russia. In 1918 he founded and led the Neue Musikgesellschaft in Berlin, in 1921-22 the new Grottrian-Steinweg Orchestra in Leipzig and since 1922 the Museum Concerts in Frankfurt. In 1920-21 he edited the semimonthly Melos in Berlin. Has written a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a piano-sonata and some songs.

Scherer, Sebastian Anton (1631-1712). 17th C.

Schering, Arnold (Breslau, 1877). Eminent Silesian musicologist, trained at Berlin, Munich and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. 1902), in 1907-

20 lecturer or adjunct professor at the latter, besides in 1903-04 writing for the Neueste Nachrichten and in 1903-06 editing the Neue Zeitschrift and also since 1904 the Bach-Jahrbuch. From 1909 he lectured at the Conservatory on music-history. In 1920 he succeeded Abert at Halle University. In 1908 he discovered at Upsala the parts of the lost Christmas Oratorio of Schütz. He is a Bach-specialist, and has written on Bachs Textbehandlung, 1900, and Zur Bach-Forschung, 1903-04 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.). Author also of histories of the concerto (1905), the oratorio (1907, '11), the solo-sonata in the early 17th century (1909, in the Riemann Festschrift), the Netherland organ-mass in Josquin's time (1912), public music-education in Germany prior to the founding of the Leipzig Conservatory (1918), etc., besides Musikal. Bildung u. Erziehung zum musikal. Hören, 1911, Studien zur Musikgesch. d. Frührenaissance, 1914, Tabellen zur Musikgesch. 1914, Deutsche Musikgesch. im Umriss, 1917, Das öffentliche Musikbildungswesen in Deutschland [before 1843], 1918, Beethoven u. d. deutsche Idealismus, 1921, and many articles in periodicals. He has advocated the view that much of the vocal music in the 14-16th centuries was adapted from organ-works (see especially his Alle Meister d. Frühzeit d. Orgelspiels, 1913). He has also edited A. von Dommer's Musikgeschichte (1914) and a large number of important works by the old masters, and is at work on an extension of Wustmann's Musikgeschichte Leipzigs. Has also written the plays Der Thomaskantor, 1916, and Der junge Händel, 1918, music for Faust and a sonata for violin solo.

Scherzer, Otto (Ansbach, 1821-1886, Stuttgart). Bavarian violinist, pupil of Molique and Faiszt, in 1838-54 playing in the court-orchestra at Stuttgart and in 1860-77 music-director at Tübingen University (Ph.D. 1877). Wrote many beautiful songs, chorale-elaborations for organ, etc. Memoir (anonymous), 1897.

Schetky, Johann Georg Christoph (Darmstadt, 1740-1824, Edinburgh). Excellent Hessian 'cellist, pupil of his father, Filtz and Endeler, with travels in Italy and France. In 1772 he was brought to Edinburgh by the publisher Bremner and became prominent in musical life there. In 1774 he married a daughter of Joseph Reinagle. Wrote 3 symphonies, 4 'cello-concertos, many quartets, trios, duet-sonatas for violin and 'cello, 'cello-sonatas, flute-duets, etc. His son John George (?1775-1831) followed his uncle, Alexander Reinagle, to Philadelphia in 1787 and was long a leading musician there. G. A.

Scheurleer, Daniel François (The Hague, 1855). Leading Dutch banker and distinguished musicologist, since 1875 prominent in financial circles at The Hague and also a foremost musical scholar. He owns a notable library and instrument-collection (catalogues from 1893) and is president of the Netherlands Music History Society. Author of biographical works on Berlioz (1878), Liszt (1887), and Mozart [in relation to Dutch musical development] (1883, 1903, '06, '09), a résumé of Dutch musical literature (1902, one vol. only), sketches of music in Amsterdam in the 17th century (1904, 2d ed. 1911) and in The Hague in the later 18th (1911), etc., besides many contributions to learned journals. He has also edited several important early works and written introductions to collections by others, with catalogues of various Dutch expositions, etc. Outside of music he has also written a life of Admiral de Ruyter and three books on the development of the Dutch maritime power.

Scheve, Edward Benjamin (Herford, 1865). Able Westphalian organist and composer, trained at the Kullak Academy, Berlin, and in 1886-88 teacher there. Coming to America in 1888, he was at first organist in Rochester, N. Y., and in 1902-06 in Chicago, where he also directed a music-school. Since 1906 he has been teacher at Grinnell College (Iowa), becoming Mus.D. there in 1912. Has written a symphony (1917), a Festival March for orchestra and chorus (1909), the orchestral suite In Trying Times, 1914, a violin-concerto, a piano-concerto (1913), a violin-sonata, 4 Sketches for piano-trio, the piano-suite Twilight-Pictures, an organ-sonata, a Suite Religiosa for organ, Meditations on the Psalms for piano with violin ad lib., the oratorio The Death and Resurrection of Christ, 1906, a Requiem (1909), the cantata A Song of Penitence, 1916, anthems and many songs. A.

Schicht, Johann Gottfried (Reichenau, 1753-1823, Leipzig). Eminent Saxon pianist, conductor and composer, from about 1775 well known as player at Hiller's 'Liebhaber' concerts at Leipzig and from 1781 at the Gewandhaus concerts, in 1785 succeeding Hiller as conductor of the latter. From 1810 he was also cantor of the Thomasschule (following Müller). Wrote the oratorios Die Feier der Christen auf Golgatha, 1785, Moses auf Sinai, 1790, and Das Ende des Gerechten, 1790, several masses, Psalm 100 (after Moses Mendelssohn) 4 Te Deums, many motets (several based on chorales), 9 settings a 4-8 of Leo's Miserere, cantatas, a notable Choralbuch, 1819 (nearly 1300 melodies), a piano-concerto, sonatas, caprices, etc., and a text-book in harmony (1812), besides translating methods by Clementi, Pleyel and Pellegrini-Celoni. His wife, née Valdesturla, was a fine concert-singer. See Langer, Chronik d. Leipziger Singakademie, 1902. G.

Schick, Margarete Luise, née Hamel (Mayence, 1773-1809, Berlin). Famous Hessian operatic soprano, pupil of Steffani and Righini, from 1791 appearing at Mayence (where she married the violinist Ernst Schick) and after 1794 at the Berlin Opera. For a time she was thought to rival Mara. Memoir by Lewezow, 1809.

Schiedermaier, Ludwig (Ratisbon, 1876). Bavarian musicologist, trained at Munich (Ph.D. 1901), Leipzig and Berlin Universities, from 1906 lecturer at Marburg University and since 1912 lecturer or professor at Bonn University.

Author of Beiträge zur Gesch. d. Oper um d. Wende d. 18. u. 19. Jahrh. 2 vols. 1906-10, Bayreuther Festspiele im Zeitalter d. Absolutismus, 1908, Einführung in d. Studium d. Musikgeschichte, 1918, and several important articles in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. Has also written an opera and songs.

Schiedermayer, Johann Baptist (n. Straubing, 1779-1840, Linz). Bavarian organist, long at Linz Cathedral. Wrote 16 masses, much other church-music, 3 singspiele (1815-16), 2 symphonies, string-trios, piano-sonatas, organ-pieces, a text-book for church-singers (R. C.) and an abridgment of L. Mozart's Violinschule.

Schiedmayer & Sohne. Famous Stuttgart firm of piano-makers, founded at Erlangen in 1781 by Johann David Schiedmayer (d. 1806) and from 1806 carried on at Stuttgart by his son Johann Lorenz (1786-1860) and two sons of the latter. In 1853 two other sons of Lorenz started a harmonium-factory which was also developed into large piano-works. Julius Schiedmayer (1822-1878), of the first firm, was a well-known expert, repeatedly serving on juries at expositions. G.

Schiever, Ernst (Hanover, 1844). Able Hanoverian violinist, pupil of Joachim, in 1868-69 leader of the Müller Quartet, soon after of the Hochberg Quartet (with H. Francke, L. Wolff and R. Hausmann) and, after coming to England in 1878, of his own Quartet (with A. Ross, K. Courvoisier and W. Hatton). For almost thirty years he was concertmaster in the Richter Orchestra. G.

Schikaneder, Emanuel Johann (Ratisbon, 1748-1812, Vienna). Bavarian actor, singer, manager and playwright, in 1780, as head of a strolling troupe, in contact with Mozart at Salzburg, from 1784 at Vienna, where in 1791 he supplied the libretto for the Zauberflöte and sang the part of Papageno, profiting greatly from its success. Author of about 35 librettos (1789-1806) of ephemeral interest. For a time he had an interest in the Theater an der Wien (built in 1801). Memoir by Komorzynski, 1901, and see Dent's monograph on The Magic Flute, 1911. G.

Schildt, Melchior (1592-1667). 17th C.

Schilling, Gustav (n. Hanover, 1803-1881, in Nebraska). Hanoverian writer, educated for the church at Göttingen and Halle Universities (Ph.D.), in 1830-57 head of the Stöpel music-school in Stuttgart, then migrating to America. Wrote a variety of text-books (1830-52) and a musical dictionary of importance (6 vols. 1835-38, 2d ed. 7 vols. 1840-42), a work on musical aesthetics (1838) and a revised version of K. P. E. Bach's clavier-method (1857). A.

Schilling-Ziemssen, Hans (Munich, 1868). Bavarian operatic conductor, from about 1905 at Metz, Düsseldorf, Kolmar and Frankfurt (1908-12), then removing to London and later to Munich. In 1921 for a time he was director of the Music School at Augsburg and of the Oratorienverein. Has written the opera Sonnwendglut, 1908, an orchestral march and songs.

Schillings, Max von (Düren, 1868). Eminent Rhenish composer, educated at Munich University, in music pupil chiefly of KönigsLöw and Brambach, from 1892 assistant-trainer at Bayreuth and from 1902 chorusmaster. Till 1908 he lived at Munich and then went to Stuttgart as general director (conductor of court-concerts and the opera), retiring in 1918 and in 1919 becoming director of the Staatsoper in Berlin. He gained the title of royal professor in 1903, was made Ph.D. by Tübingen and Heidelberg Universities in 1911 and was ennobled in 1912. His many works evince great technical ability, resting upon a general adoption of Wagnerian principles and methods, but have not aroused much enthusiasm, though their magnitude and earnestness command attention. Has written the dramas Ingvalde, 1894, Der Pfeifertag, 1899, Moloch, 1906, and Mona Lisa, 1915, music for Sophocles' Edipus (1900), Æschylus' Agamemnon and Eumenides [Orestie] (1900), and Part I of Faust (1908), the melodramas Kassandra, Das eleusische Fest, Das Herzentied and Jung Olaf, the choral works Dem Verklarten, 1905, and Hochzeitsglocken, Glockenlieder for tenor and orchestra, 1907, a cappella men's choruses and about 40 songs, the symphonic fantasias Meergruss and Seemorgen, 1896, Ein Zwiegespräch for violin, 'cello and small orchestra, 1897, a violin-concerto, a Festlicher Marsch for military band, a string-quintet, a string-quartet (1887, revised 1906), and some violin-pieces, besides a setting of the dialogue in Mozart's Entführung. In 1913 he produced Berlioz' Troycens at Stuttgart (compressed into a single performance). Sketch by R. Louis, 1909 (in Monographien moderner Musiker). G. A.

Schimon, Adolf (Vienna, 1820-1887, Leipzig). Able Austrian vocal teacher, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and much in request as accompanist under leading teachers, about 1845 going to Florence and bringing out an opera. In 1850-52 he was cembalist at Her Majesty's in London and in 1852-59 at the Paris Opéra. In 1872 he married the soprano Anna Regan at Florence (see below), in 1874-77 was teacher at the Leipzig Conservatory and in 1877-86 at the Munich Conservatory, with a few months at Leipzig again. Wrote the operas Stradella, 1846, and List um List, 1858 (short comedy), 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces and many songs in French, Italian and German. G.

Schimon-Regan, Anna (n. Karlsbad, 1841-1902, Munich), wife of the above. Eminent Bohemian concert-soprano, trained by Maschinka Schubert and Karoline Unger (her aunt), appearing in opera at Siena from about 1862 and in 1864-67 also at Hanover, but then devoting herself to concert-work, in 1867-68 under Berlioz at Petrograd and in 1869-75 annually in England, besides many tours elsewhere. She taught with her husband at Leipzig and Munich, continuing at the latter after his death. G.

Schindelmeyer, Ludwig (Königsberg, 1811–1864, Darmstadt). Prussian conductor, from about 1830 engaged at theaters in Salzburg, Innsbruck, Berlin (Königstädter) and Pest (Deutscher, 1838–47), in 1851–53 court-director at Wiesbaden and then in like position at Darmstadt. Wrote 7 operas (from about 1835), including Melusine, 1861, the oratorio Bonifacius, a ballet, the overtures Uriel Acosta, Schleswig-Holstein, meerumschlungen! and Rule, Britannia, a concertante for clarinet-quartet and a concertino for clarinet, both with orchestra, 3 piano-sonatas and many pieces, songs and an orchestral arrangement of Beethoven's Sonata Pathétique. He was an early friend of Wagner, with whom he had much correspondence. G.

Schindler, Anton Felix (n. Neustadt, 1795–1864, n. Frankfurt). Moravian violinist, from about 1815 employed at the Theater an der Wien in Vienna and from 1814 intimate with Beethoven, in 1819–25 being his constant assistant and in his last sickness his closest friend, as well as the ultimate custodian of his papers. From 1831 he was choirmaster at Münster Cathedral and in 1835–37 at Aix, then passing into private life at Münster and Bockenheim (n. Frankfurt). Author of the earliest important life of Beethoven (1840, 2d ed. 1845, reprinted 1909) and Beethoven in Paris, 1842 (merged with the above in 1845). Memoir by Hüffer, 1909. His Beethoven papers went to the Berlin Library. G.

Schindler, Kurt (Berlin, 1882). Eminent Prussian conductor, expert on folk-music, and song-composer, educated at Berlin and Munich Universities, with collateral study in music, in 1902–03 conductor of the Stuttgart Opera, in 1903–04 at Würzburg and in 1905–08 assistant at the Metropolitan, New York. In 1903–05 he also assisted Mottl and Zumpe at Munich and Strauss at Berlin. In 1909 he started the MacDowell Chorus in New York, which in 1912 became the Schola Cantorum and thenceforth one of the most significant musical enterprises of the city. Since 1912 he has also been organist at Temple Emanuel. Besides achieving notable results with his chorus he has made important collections of the folk-songs of Russia, Finland, Spain, etc. (from 1911), often accompanied by valuable notes and introductions. Has written about 50 songs and choruses a cappella. Since 1907 he has been almost continuously connected with Schirmer as reader and critic. A.

Schjölér, Axel (Guldager, 1872). Danish conductor, pupil (as violinist) of Tofte and Berthelier, in 1896–97 playing in the Lamoureux orchestra in Paris, in 1899–1901 conductor of the Music Union at Bergen (Norway), from 1903 conductor of the Volkstheater in Copenhagen, in 1905–07 of the Philharmonic there and from 1909 of the free concerts at the Rosenborg-Have. Has written a symphony and the symphonic poem Napoleon Bonaparte.

Schipke, Paul Robert Maximilian (Oels, 1873). Silesian school-teacher, since 1898 in Berlin, with studies at Berlin and Basel Universities (Ph.D. 1913). Author of articles on the history of school-music (1913).

Schira, Francesco (in Malta, 1808–1883, London). Able Italian conductor and vocal teacher, trained at the Milan Conservatory, producing an opera in 1832, in 1833–41 conductor at the San Carlos in Lisbon and teacher at the Conservatory and from 1842 in London, where at first he led English opera at the Princess, in 1844–47 at Drury Lane, in 1848 at Covent Garden and in 1852 again at Drury Lane, then turning to teaching. Wrote the operas Elena e Malvina, 1832, Il Fanatico per la Musica, 1835, I Cavalieri di Valencia, 1837, Kenilworth (not given), Mina, 1849, Theresa, 1850, Niccolò de' Lapi, 1853, La Selvaggia, 1875, and Lia, 1876, an operetta, the cantata The Lord of Burleigh, 1873, part-songs, songs, etc. G.

Schirmer, Friedrich (Bonn, 1881). Rhenish 'cellist, conductor and composer, pupil of the Cologne and Leipzig Conservatories and of Humperdinck, in 1912 taking the Meyerbeer prize. For a time he traveled as conductor with the Reinhardt troupe producing Humperdinck's Mirakel in Prague, Vienna, Paris and London and then settled in Königsberg. Has written a symphony, the symphonic poems Das Fest der Töten and Werther, an orchestral suite, the overture Am Rhein, a wind-sextet and the choral works Elegie and Hymus, Ein deutscher Hymnus and Festkantate.

Schirmer, G. Famous music-publishing firm in New York, developed from 1866 by Gustav Schirmer (1829–1893), who came to New York in 1837, became manager for Kerkisieg & Breusing in 1854, their successor in 1861 (at first with B. Beer) and ultimately sole proprietor. In 1893 he was followed by his sons Rudolph Ernest (1859–1919) and Gustave (1864–1907), under whom the business grew to immense proportions. The total number of publications is now over 30,000, including the Library of Musical Classics (about 1500), the Golden Treasury of varied collections (some unique), the works of many American composers as well as those of Europeans, The Musical Quarterly (from 1915), etc. Their factory in Long Island City is one of the finest music-making plants in the world. The Boston Music Company, founded in 1885 by Gustave Schirmer, has been closely affiliated and in 1913–17 a London branch was conducted by the late Winthrop Rogers. G. A.

Schjelderup, Gerhard (Christiansand, 1859). Gifted Norwegian composer and writer, pupil of Franchomme, Savard and Massenet, since 1896 teaching in Dresden. Has written the operas Norwegische Hochzeit, 1900, Frühlingsnacht, 1908, Sturmvogel (incomplete), Brutraub, 1919, Jenseits Sonne und Mond and Ein Volk in Not (last two not given), 3 fairy-plays, music for Gjellerup's Opferfeuer (1903), a symphony, the symphonic poems Eine Sommernacht auf dem Fjord and Brand, a Weihnacht-Suite and other orchestral pieces, a quartet, violinand 'cello-pieces, the choral work Auf den Höhen, songs, etc. Author of lives of Grieg (1903, '08, the latter with W. Niemann) and Wagner, (1908), besides articles in periodicals.

Schladebach, Julius (Dresden, 1810-1872, Kiel). Saxon physician, author of the beginning of a musical dictionary (1854, completed by Bernsdorf) and a work on the voice (1860).

Schläger, Hans (Filskirchen, 1820-1885, Salzburg). Austrian choral leader, pupil of Preyer, from 1854 trainer for the Vienna Männergesangverein and in 1861-67 choirmaster at Salzburg Cathedral and director of the Mozarteum. In 1867 he married one of the Zichy family. Wrote the operas Heinrich und Ilse, 1869, and Hans Haidekukuk, 1873, the tone-poem Waldmeisters Brautfahrt, symphonies, a prize string-quartet, 3 masses, etc.

Schlegel, Leander (n. Haarlem, 1844-1913, do.). Eminent Dutch pianist and composer, pupil of The Hague and Leipzig Conservatories, from about 1865 touring with Wilhelmj, from 1871 director of the Haarlem Music School and also conductor for ten years of the Zangvereniging, and from 1898 head of his own music-school at Overveen (suburb). As composer he resembled Brahms. Wrote a symphony, the symphonic poem Aus Toggenburgs Sage, concertos for violin and for piano, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a passacaglia for two pianos, a piano-suite, 2 ballades, fantasias and many characteristic pieces (some for 4 hands), various songs and some women's choruses.

Schleinitz, Heinrich Conrad (n. Döbeln, 1802-1881, Leipzig). Saxon lawyer, pupil of the Thomasschule, from 1835 on the executive board of the Gewandhaus and thus intimate with Mendelssohn, whom in 1847 he succeeded as director of the Conservatory.

Schlesinger (a) Music-publishing firm in Berlin, founded in 1810 by Adolf Martin Schlesinger (d. 1839), who was succeeded by his son Heinrich (1807-1879), the business passing in 1864 to Lienau. They published the Berliner Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung in 1824-30 and from 1851 the Echo (ended in 1879). (b) Music-publishing firm in Paris, founded in 1834 by Moritz Adolf Schlesinger (d. 1871), another son of Martin, and developed with much energy, in 1846 transferred to Brandus (present name C. Imbert). They began the issue of the Gazette Musicale (later Revue et Gazette Musicale), which continued till 1880. G.

Schletterer, Hans Michel (Ansbach, 1824-1895, Augsburg). Bavarian church-musician and writer, pupil of Spohr, Kraushaar, David and E. F. Richter, from 1845 teacher in Lorraine, from 1847 director at Zweibrücken, from 1854 at Heidelberg University, and from 1858 at Augsburg, at first as choirmaster at the Annakirche and teacher at the Von Stetten Institut, from 1865 as founder and leader of the Oratorienverein and also founder and director of the Music School. Ph.D. of Tübingen Univ. in 1875. In 1857 he married the violinist Hor-tensia Zirges (1830-1904). Author of two résumés of the history of church-music (1866, '69), a sketch of the singspiel (1863), a life of J. F. Reichardt (1865), essays in Waldersee's Sammlung (1880-84) on Pergolesi, Boccherini, Spohr and Die Ahnen moderner Musikinstrumente, and a Gesch. d. französ. Musik, 3 vols. 1884-85 (derived from Castil-Blaze). Also wrote 4 operettas, 2 cantatas, many choruses, songs, much school-music, a violin-method and numerous careful piano-arrangements of standard works of different kinds.

Schlick, Arnold. 16th C. G.

Schlick, Johann Konrad (Münster?, 1759-1825, Gotha). Fine Westphalian 'cellist, writing a concerto, 3 sonatas, 3 quintets for flute and strings, 6 string-quartets, 3 piano-trios and a concertante for violin and 'cello.

Schlieder, Frederick William (Foreston, Ill. 1873). American organist, trained at Syracuse University and by Carl, Guilman and Dallier, from 1897 music-director at Centenary Collegiate Inst. (Hackettstown, N. J.) and from 1901 organist in or near New York (since 1910 at St. Nicholas'), besides teaching at the Music School Settlement. He has been active in musical associations, especially the Nat. Assoc. of Organists (president, 1918-20). Has written the cantata The Way of Penitence, a violin-sonata and pieces, piano-pieces and songs, besides studies in improvisation.

Schlimbach, Georg Christian Friedrich (Ohrdruf, 1760-?). Thuringian organist and organ-expert, from 1782 organist at Prenzlau and from 1805 head of his own school in Berlin. Author of Ueber d. Struktur, Erhaltung, Stimmung u. Prüfung d. Orgel, 1801, and articles in the Berlin. Musical. Zeitung.

Schlögel, Xavier (n. Rochefort, 1854-1889, n. Namur). Gifted Belgian composer, pupil of the Liège Conservatory, writing Scènes Champêtres for orchestra, string-quartets, piano-trios, 2 masses and Ballade des Épées for voice and orchestra.

Schlösser, Karl Wilhelm Adolf (Darmstadt, 1830-1913, n. Dorking), son of the following. Hessian pianist, pupil of his father, from 1847 touring in Germany, France and England, in 1854 settling in London and until 1903 teaching at the Royal Academy. From 1868 he gave effective series of Schumann 'evenings'. Wrote a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a suite, many pieces, studies and songs. G.

Schlösser, Louis (Darmstadt, 1800-1886, do.). Hessian violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of Rinck, Seyfried, Mayseder, Salieri and the Paris Conservatory, from about 1840 concertmaster in the court-band at Darmstadt and at length court-director. Wrote 5 operas, an operetta, a melodrama, music for Faust, ballets, symphonies, overtures, quartets, a horn-concertino, etc. G.

Schlöttmann, Louis (Berlin, 1826-1905, do.). Able Prussian pianist, pupil of Taubert and Dehn, after successful tours on the Continent and in England, teaching at Berlin. Wrote the symphonic scene Trauermarsch, Rezitativ und Finale, overtures to Romeo and Juliet and Wallensteins Lager, a Konzertstück for piano, chamber-music, piano-pieces, choruses and songs.

Schmalstich, Clemens (Posen, 1880). Prussian pianist and conductor, trained at Bonn University and the Berlin Hochschule, in 1906-09 serving as conductor at the Neues Schauspielhaus in Berlin and since 1910 at the Berlin Opera. Has written refined salon-music for piano, including Liebeswalzer, a 4-hand Suite de Carneval and graceful pieces for children.

Schmedes, Erik (n. Copenhagen, 1868). Powerful Danish operatic tenor (originally baritone), pupil of Rothmühl, Mme. Artot de Padilla, Ress and Ifert, from 1891 appearing at Wiesbaden, in 1894-95 at Nuremberg, in 1896-97 at Dresden and since 1898 engaged at the Vienna Opera, but with many trips elsewhere (at Bayreuth in 1899, in New York in 1908-09, etc.). His repertoire includes all of Wagner's works and he has sung at 15 premières.

Schmeltzl, Wolfgang. 16th C. G.

Schmelzer, Johann Heinrich (?1630-1680). 17th C.

Schmetz, Paul Johann (n. Aix, 1845-1897, Zell). Rhenish church- and school-musician, from about 1865 teaching in or near Aix, in 1878-93 at the Montabaur Seminary and then school-inspector at Zell (on the Moselle). Author of works on the organ-accompaniment of Gregorian music (1885, '87, '91, '92) and on Pothier's Liber Gradualis (1884), with Liederbuch für Volksschulen, 1888 (12th ed. 1895) and Kleines Vesperbuch, 1893 (2d ed. 1899).

Schmid, Anton (n. Leipa, 1787-1857, n. Vienna). Bohemian librarian and writer, from 1818 engaged at the Vienna Library, from 1844 as head of the music-division. Author of monographs on Petrucci (1845), Haydn and Zingarelli (1847) and Gluck (1854), besides Beiträge zur Literatur u. Gesch. d. Tonkunst (in Cäcilia, 1842-46) and contributions to other works. G.

Schmid, Bernhard [father and son]. 16th C.

Schmid, Heinrich Kaspar (Laudau, 1874). Bavarian pianist and composer, pupil of Mitterer and the Munich Conservatory, in 1903 teacher at the Athens Conservatory and then on tour as player, from 1905 teacher at the Munich Conservatory and since 1921 director of the Karlsruhe Conservatory. Has written a quintet for wind, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, fine piano-pieces and notable songs and men's choruses.

Schmid, Joseph (Munich, 1868). Eminent Bavarian organist, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from 1890 at the Heiliger-Geist-Kirche in Munich and since 1901 at the Cathedral and for the Kaim concerts, besides leading the choral society München. Has written a festival mass, 3 masses a cappella, a Te Deum do., a Crucifixus a 16 do., a Requiem do., various organ-works (including fugues and fughetts, a Dante fantasia etc.), a 'cello-sonata, a wind-serenade, men's choruses and the opera Die Schildbürger (not given).

Schmid, Otto (Dresden, 1858). Saxon critic and historian, pupil of Kretschmer, long critic for the Dresden Journal and since 1912 teacher of music-history at the Conservatory. He gained the title of royal professor in 1905. Author of lives of Koschat (1887), Kretschmer (1890) and Mich. Haydn (1906), Das sächs. Königshaus in musikal. Betätigung, 1900, Die böhm. Altmeisterschule Czernohorskys u. ihr Einfluss auf d. Wiener Klassizismus, 1901, Gesch. d. Dreyssischen Singakademie, 1907, Merkeblätter zur Musikgeschichte, 1912, Die Heimstätten d. Sachs. Landestheater, 1919, Wagners Opern in Dresden, 1919, and a history of the Mozart-Verein there (1921), besides the Festschrift for the Jubilee of the Tonkünstlerverein (1904) and the valuable collections Musik am sächs. Hofe, 10 vols. and Orgelwerke althöhm. Meister, 2 vols.

Schmidt, Arthur P. Music-publishing business in Boston, founded by A. P. Schmidt (1846-1921) and by him developed into prominence, especially in the issue of works by American composers.

Schmidt, Felix (Dresden, 1848). Able Saxon concert-bass and vocal teacher, pupil of Mantius, Weitzmann and the Berlin Hochschule, where since 1875 he has been a valued teacher. For many years (to 1917) he was conductor of the Lehrergesangsverein. In 1878 he married the accomplished singer Maria Köhne. Translator of Weitzmann's Handbuch d. Theorie (1888).

Schmidt, Franz (Presburg, 1874). Hungarian 'cellist, pupil of Hellmesberger, in 1892-1910 playing in the court-orchestra at Vienna and since 1892 teaching at the Royal Academy. Has written the operas Notre Dame, 1914, and Fredegundis, 2 symphonies (1900, Musikfreunde prize, 1913), the orchestral march Unter Flagge und Wimpel and a piano-method.

Schmidt, Friedrich (n. Geldern, 1840). Rhenish church-musician, since 1866 music-director at Münster Cathedral, in 1889-99 Witt's successor as president of the Cäcilienverein and since 1890 editor of the Fliegende Blätter für kath. Kirchenmusik. Has written masses, motets and other church-music, a text-book in Catholic music (1875, with Diebels) and a collection of organ-pieces (1869, 2d ed. 1872).

Schmidt, Gustav (Weimar, 1816-1882, Darmstadt). Saxon conductor, from 1841 employed at theaters in Brünn, Würzburg, Frankfurt, Wiesbaden and Mayence, from 1864 at Leipzig and from 1876 court-director at Darmstadt. Wrote the operas Prinz Eugen, 1845, Weibertreue, 1858, La Réole, 1863, and Alibi, besides popular men's choruses and songs.

Schmidt, Gustav Friedrich (Rostock, 1883). North German student of history, educated at Rostock, Berlin and Munich (Ph.D. 1910), writing a thesis on G. K. Schürmann (1913) and an essay on the early operas in Leipzig (1918, in the Sandberger Festschrift). He is at work on a larger book on Schürmann.

Schmidt, Heinrich (n. Bayreuth, 1861). Bavarian school-musician and writer, educated at Munich University (Ph.D. 1897) and Conservatory, becoming teacher at the Bayreuth Seminary. Author of a thesis on Mattheson (1897), Die Orgel unserer Zeit, 1904, and Wagner in Bayreuth, 1909 (with U. Hartmann). Has also written music for festival-plays, an orchestral march, an organ-concerto (with strings), organ-transcriptions from Parsifal, men's choruses and a collection of string-pieces for school-orchestras, with a new edition of Hohmann's Violinschule, etc.

Schmidt, Johann Philipp Samuel (Königsberg, 1779–1853, Berlin). Prussian official, critic and amateur composer, writing operas, oratorios, cantatas, masses, symphonies, chamber-music, arrangements of orchestral and operatic music, articles for Spener's Zeitung, etc.

Schmidt, Karl (Friedberg, 1869). Hessian church- and school-musician, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D.) and Conservatory, from about 1895 teaching at the Fridericianum at Laubach and since 1902 at the Augustinerschule at Friedberg, as well as at the Theological Seminary in 1903–12. Since 1905 he has edited the organ of the Kirchengesangsverein. Author of studies on music in Friedberg (1894, 1919), Kirchenmusikal. Veranstaltungen, 1917, a life of Wilhelm Hill (1910) and several books on school-music, besides assisting on the 5th ed. of Köstlin's Geschichte (1899). Has also written a piano-concerto, music for Sophocles' Ajax, songs, etc., and edited an Arien-Album, 10 vols. 1912–16, and works by Hill.

Schmidt, Leopold (Berlin, 1860). Prussian critic and historian, educated at Berlin University and the Hochschule (Ph.D. 1895, Rostock), from 1887 theater-conductor at Heidelberg, Berlin, Zurich and Halle, since 1897 critic for the Berlin Tageblatt, besides contributing to the Merker and Kunstwart, and in 1900–15 teacher of music-history at the Stern Conservatory and since 1912 at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory. Since 1912 he has issued a musical Almanach. Author of lives of Meyerbeer (1898), Haydn (1898, 3d ed. 1914), Mozart (1909, 2d ed. 1920) and Beethoven (1914), Zur Gesch. d. Märchenoper, 1896, Gesch. d. Musik im 19. Jahrh. 1901, Moderne Musik, 1904 (vol. iii of Die neue Kunst), Tonmeister d. 19. Jahrh. 1908, collected essays (1908, '13), editions of letters by Beethoven (1908) and Brahms (1909) and Führer to Strauss' Salome and Ariadne, Gluck's Orfeo, etc., besides assisting on the new edition of Naumann's Geschichte (1905). Has also written the singspiel Die glückliche Insel, 1917, the operetta Die Heimkehr des Odysseus, 1913 (made up of parts taken from little-known works by Offenbach), a violin-sonata, songs and an edition of Corona Schröter's songs.

Schmitt, Aloys (Erlenbach, 1788–1866, Frankfurt). Able Bavarian pianist, pupil of his father and J. A. André, settling as teacher at Frankfurt in 1816, with sojourns at Berlin (about 1820) and as organist to the Duke of Cambridge at Hanover (1825–29), besides many other trips. Wrote 4 operas (1825–45), 2 oratorios, masses, a symphony, overtures, 4 piano-concertos and a concertino, piano-quartets, piano-trios, piano-sonatas, variations, excellent studies, etc., and a method. Memoir by Henkel, 1873. G.

Schmitt, Florent (Blamont, n. Nancy, 1870). Eminent French composer, pupil of Hess, Sandré and the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1897, 1st, 1900), from 1906 living in Paris, where he was prominent in the Société Nationale (from 1909) and since 1921 director of the Lyons Conservatory. Though well versed in the ways of impressionism, he excels in the masterly marshalling and articulation of his materials. Has written the ballets La Tragédie de Salomé, 1907, Ouvragi (not given) and Le Petit Elfe, Ferme l'Œil, 1922, the symphonic poems Sélimlik (for military band), Le Palais Hanté, 1904, and Combat de Raksasas et Délivrance de Sita (finished in 1898, but score lost by flood in 1910), the orchestral suites Reflets d'Allemagne and Pupazzi, other pieces for orchestra, a piano-quintet, a quintet for harp and strings, Lied et Scherzo for wind-octet, violin- and 'cello-pieces, numerous highly characteristic piano-pieces (some for 4 hands and 3 Rapsodies for two pianos), the scena Sémiramis, Psalm 47, choruses, part-songs and many songs (some with orchestra), besides orchestrations of piano-works by Chopin and Schubert. Sketches by Calvocoressi, 1907 (in L'Art Moderne), Séré, 1911, and Jean-Aubry, 1916 (last two in summaries of recent French music).

Schmitt, Friedrich (Frankfort, 1812–1884, Berlin). Noted Hessian vocal teacher, pupil of his father, A. Schmitt, Oesterrieth, Charlotte Mangold and Stunz, for a time singing in opera at Magdeburg, Leipzig and Dresden, then turning to teaching at Munich, Vienna and Berlin (Jul. Hey among his pupils). He was one of Wagner's intimates. Author of valuable vocal text-books (1854–70). See H. Nägeli's Verfall d. dram. Gesangs, 1864.

Schmitt, Georg Aloys (Hanover, 1827–1902, Dresden), son of Aloys above. Able Hanoverian pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father and Vollweiler, from about 1845 touring extensively as player, followed by several engagements as theater-conductor at Aix, Würzburg, etc., in 1857–92 court-director at Schwerin, exerting an important influence, and from 1893 still further notable as conductor of the Mozart-verein in Dresden. Wrote 3 operas, including Tribby, 1845, music for several plays, overtures, other orchestral pieces, quartets, trios, piano-pieces and songs, besides a revision of Mozart's mass in C min. and orchestrations of works by Handel and Mozart. His wife was the singer Cornelia Czanyí (1851–1906). G.

Schmitt, Hans (Koben, 1835–1907, Vienna). Noted Bohemian piano-teacher (originally oboist), pupil of the Vienna Conservatory and from 1862 teacher there. Wrote many valuable studies and also a vocal method, besides a Konzertstück for violin, piano-pieces, songs and an opera.

Schmitt, Jakob [Jacques] (Obernburg, 1803–1853, Hamburg), brother and pupil of Aloys above. Able Bavarian piano-teacher at Hamburg, writing a large amount of piano-music (sonatas, variations, salon-pieces, sonatinas, studies, etc.), a method and also an opera. G.

Schmittbauer, Joseph Alois (Bamberg, 1718–1809, Karlsruhe). Bavarian composer of notable church-music, besides singspiele and many instrumental works. He was active at Stuttgart, Cologne and Karlsruhe (court-director from 1776 or earlier).

Schmitz, Eugen (Neuburg, 1882). Able Bavarian musicologist, trained at Munich University (Ph.D. 1905) and in 1909–14 lecturer there, in 1914–15 director of the Mozarteum in Salzburg and since 1916 lecturer or professor at the Dresden Technische Hochschule. From 1908 he was critic for the Munich Zeitung and editor of the Neue Musikal. Rundschau, and since 1915 has been critic for the Dresden Nachrichten. Author of monographs on Staden (1906), Hugo Wolf (1906), Rich. Strauss (1907), Wagner (1909), Kaskel (1909, in Monographien moderner Musiker), Palestrina (1914) and the history of the cantata (1910, '14), Harmonielehre als Theorie, Aesthetik u. Gesch. d. musikal. Harmonik, 1911, Handbuch d. Musikästhetik, 1915, Das Madonna-Ideal in d. Tonkunst, 1919, and Klavier u. Klavierspiel, 1919, besides articles in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. and other journals, contributions to dictionaries and Führer to works by Puccini, Reger, etc. For the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern he edited works by Staden, besides new editions of Naumann's Geschichte (1908) and of Marx' Anleitung (1912). Has also written choruses and solo-ballades.

Schnabel, Alexander Maria (Riga, 1890). German-Russian composer, pupil of Payr and Ohnesorg, since 1912 active at Riga, where he is a leader in the German-Baltic Teachers' Association. Has written the melodrama Gorm Grimme, the orchestral Babylonische Tragödie, symphonic dances, a Kammersinfonie, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and 3 for piano, the piano-suite Pan, various songs, etc.

Schnabel, Arthur (Lipnik, 1882). Gifted Carinthian pianist, pupil of Leschetizky, from 1897 becoming widely known through tours and finally settling in Berlin, where he has given recitals with the violinist Flesch and in 1912 organized a Trio with Wittenberg and Hekking. His wife, née Therese Behr, is an accomplished contralto. Has written piano-pieces and songs, besides editing Mozart's violin-sonatas (with Flesch).

Schnabel, Joseph Ignaz (Naumburg, 1767–1831, Breslau). Able Silesian church-musician, from 1797 in Breslau, at first as violinist and organist, from 1804 as cathedral-choirmaster and from 1812 as music-director at the University, teacher at the Theological Seminary and head of the Institut für Kirchenmusik. Wrote masses, much other church-music, band-marches, a clarinet-concerto, a quintet for guitar and strings, etc. See Guckel's Kirchenmusik in Silesien, 1912. His nephew Karl (1809–1881) was both an expert piano-maker and a fine pianist, writing in large vocal and instrumental forms.

Schnabel-Tollefsen, Augusta (Boise, Ida. 1885). Gifted American pianist, pupil of Widmann and Gallico, appearing as a child in Germany, Switzerland and Belgium, with a tour in America in 1900, and making her formal début in 1906. In 1907 she married the violinist Tollefsen and in 1909 joined him and Durieux in a Trio that has made many concert-tours. A.

Schnedler-Petersen, Frederik (Rudjööbing, 1867). Danish violinist and conductor, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory and of Joachim, in 1894–95 concertmaster at the Konzerthaus in Berlin and from 1897 active in or near Copenhagen as conductor of popular orchestras (since 1909 of the Tivoli and Palais concerts), but with a similar engagement at Abo (Finland) in 1905–08. He also directs an orchestral school.

Schneegass, Cyriakus (1546–1597). 16th C.

Schneevoigt, Georg Lennart (Viborg, 1872). Eminent Finnish 'cellist and conductor, pupil of the Helsingfors and Leipzig Conservatories and of K. Schröder, in 1892 soloist at the Moscow Exposition and then making many tours in northern Europe and England, in 1896–99 teacher at the Helsingfors Conservatory, in 1901 conductor at the Riga Exposition, in 1904–08 Weingartner's successor as head of the Kaim Orchestra in Munich, from 1909 conductor of the Riga orchestra and since 1912 in a like position in Helsingfors, besides from 1914 directing the Concert Union in Stockholm and from 1918 summer-concerts at Scheveningen. In 1907 he married the accomplished pianist Sigrid Ingeborg Sundgrén (b. 1878), with whom he made several tours and who now teaches at the Helsingfors Conservatory.

Schneider, Edward Faber (Omaha, Neb. 1872). American pianist, pupil of F. L. King, Lisser, X. Scharwenka, Barth and Boise, from about 1900 teaching in San Francisco and from 1911 music-dean at Mills College in Oakland. Has written the 'grove-plays' The Triumph of Bohemia, 1907, and Apollo, 1915, the symphony In Autumn Time, 1913, violin-pieces and songs. A.

Schneider, Georg Abraham (Darmstadt, 1770–1839, Berlin). Noted Hessian hornist, pupil of Portmann, for a time oboist in a Hessian regiment and then in the court-bands at Schwerin, Rheinsberg and Berlin, in 1820 becoming conductor at the Berlin Opera and also general music-master in the Royal Guards. He was expert on many instruments. Wrote 5 operettas, 13 ballets, much other stage-music, 2 oratorios, cantatas, masses with orchestra, symphonies, overtures, concertos and much chamber-music for wind-instruments, etc. G.

Schneider, Johann Christian Friedrich (n. Zittau, 1786–1853, Dessau), brother of the following. Distinguished Saxon organist, conductor and composer, pupil of Unger, in 1807–11 organist at the Paulinerkirche in Leipzig and from 1812 at the Thomaskirche, besides from 1810 conducting the Seconda opera-troupe and from 1817 at the Opera. From 1821 he was court-director at Dessau, where he made the orchestra and the Singakademie famous, besides organizing a noted student-chorus and from 1829 directing a fine music-school. From 1825 he was in much request as conductor of festivals throughout Germany. Ph.D. of Halle Univ. in 1830 and member of the Berlin and other Academies. Wrote the oratorios Die Höllefahrt des Messias, 1810, Das Weltgericht, 1819 (his chief work), Die Sündflut, 1823, Das verlorene Paradies, 1824, Jesu Geburt, 1825, Christus das Kind, 1829, Christus der Meister, 1827, Pharao, 1829, Gideon, 1829, Absalom, 1830, Das befreite Jerusalem, 1835, Salomonis Tempelbau, 1836, Bonifazius, 1837, Gethsemane und Golgatha, 1838, Christus der Erlöser, 1838, 7 operas, 25 cantatas, 14 masses, 13 Psalms, motets, over 20 symphonies, many overtures, 7 piano-concertos, piano-quartets, trios, violin- and piano-sonatas, about 400 men's choruses and 200 songs. Author of elementary text-books (1820, '27) and a Handbuch d. Organisten, 4 parts, 1829–30. Memoir by Kempe, 1859 (2d ed. 1864). G.

Schneider, Johann Gottlob (n. Zittau, 1789–1864, Dresden), brother of the above. Distinguished Saxon organist, famous as a boy-singer and head of the choir at the Zittau Gymnasium, in 1811–12 organist at the Paulinerkirche in Leipzig, from 1812 at the Peter-Paulskirche in Görlitz and from 1825 court-organist at Dresden and also from 1830 conductor of the Dreyssig Singakademie. As virtuoso he made numerous tours in Germany and even to England (1833) and as teacher drew many talented pupils (Merkel, Berthold, Jansen, Nikolai, Van Eycken, etc., besides Mendelssohn, Schumann and Liszt). In 1861 thirty of them presented him with a Jubiläum of organ-pieces. Wrote organ-fugues, fantasias and preludes, besides some songs with organ. G.

Schneider, Johann Julius (Berlin, 1805–1885, do.). Fine Prussian pianist and organist, pupil of A. W. Bach, Türschmidt, L. Berger, Hausmann and B. Klein, from 1829 organist and cantor at the Friedrichswerder Church in Berlin and in 1835–58 also vocal teacher at the Industrial School and from 1854 at the Institut für Kirchenmusik. In 1829 he started a Liedertafel and in 1836 a mixed chorus, besides in 1852 instituting a noted choir at his church. From 1836 he was music-director to the Royal York Grand Lodge, in 1844–47 was head of a chamber-music society in Potsdam and from 1869 official organ-inspector. Wrote 2 operas, 2 oratorios, a mass, a Te Deum, a Paternoster a 12, Psalms, cantatas, over 200 men's choruses, a piano-concerto and sonatas, many organ-pieces, chamber-music, etc.

Schneider, Karl Ernst (Aschersleben, 1819–1893, Dresden). Saxon teacher at Halle, Bielefeld and Dresden, author of Das musikal. Lied, 3 parts, 1863–67, Zur Periodisirung d. Musikgeschichte, 1863, and Musik, Klavier u. Klavier-spiel, 1872.

Schneider, Louis (Berlin, 1805–1878, Potsdam), son of Georg Abraham above. Actor at the Berlin Theater, author of a Gesch. d. Oper u. d. königlichen Opernhauses zu Berlin, 1852. Wrote also a singspiel and a debatable redaction of Mozart's Schauspieldirektor (1858).

Schneider, Max (Eisleben, 1875). Able Saxon musicologist, trained at Leipzig University, in 1897–1901 conductor at the Halle Opera and also in summer at the Theater des Westens in Berlin, from 1904 librarian for the music-seminar at Berlin University, in 1907–14 assistant in the music-division of the Berlin Library and in 1909–15 teacher of orchestration at the Institut für Kirchenmusik, gaining the title of professor in 1913. Since 1915 he has been professor at Breslau University and teacher at the Church Music Institute there. Since 1912 (with Springer and Wolffheim) he has edited the supplements to Eitner's Quellen-Lexikon. Author of three catalogues of Bach-works and literature (1905, '06, '07), Die Anfänge d. Basso Continuo u. seine Bezifferung, 1918, many monographs and essays in journals and editions of various works like Mattheson's Ehrenpforte (1910) and Ortiz' Tratado (1913), besides editing works by Telemann and Keiser for the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst.

Schneider, Theodor (Dessau, 1827–1909, Zittau), son of Friedrich above. Saxon church-musician, pupil of his father and Drechsler, from 1845 'cellist in the Dessau court-band, from 1854 director in the court- and city-churches and from 1859 at Chemnitz as choirmaster at the Jakobikirche and conductor of the Männergesangsverein (founded in 1870), retiring in 1898 with the title of royal professor.

Schneider, Wilhelm (Neudorf, 1783–1843, Merseburg). Saxon organist, long at Merseburg Cathedral, besides teaching at the Gymnasium. Author of a series of manuals on the organ and church-music (1823–35), including an account of the cathedral-organ (1829).

Schnerich, Alfred (Tarvis, 1859). Carinthian writer on church-music, trained at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1888) and since 1889 expert in art- and music-history in the library there. Author of Der Messentypus von Haydn bis Schubert, 1892 (defending the use of the orchestra), Die Frage d. Reform d. Kathol. Kirchenmusik, 1902 (reply to criticism by the Cäcilienverein), Messe u. Requiem seit Haydn u. Mozart, 1909, and Unsere Kirchenmusik, 1911, besides a facsimile edition of Mozart's Requiem with notes (1914) and essays in Kirchenchor und Musik.

Schnitzer, Germaine (Paris, 1888). Highly gifted French pianist, trained at the Paris Conservatory (taking a prize at ten and graduating at fourteen) and under Sauer, from 1904 establishing herself speedily as an artist of exceptional power. Her first visit to America was in 1906. In 1913 she married Dr. Leo Buerger of New York and since 1915 has made her home there.

Schnorr von Carolsfeld, Ludwig (Munich, 1836-1865, Dresden), son of the famous painter. Bavarian operatic tenor, pupil of Jul. Otto, Devrient and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1858 appearing at Karlsruhe and from 1860 at Dresden. He sang at the première of Tristan (1865), dying soon after from a chill at that time. See Wagner's reminiscences in vol. viii of his Schriften. His wife, née Malwine Garrigues (1832-1904), was a noted soprano at Dresden (also singing at the première of Tristan), Hamburg and Karlsruhe. In 1867 she published poems by herself and her husband. G.

Schnyder von Wartensee, Xaver (Lucerne, 1786-1868, Frankfurt). Swiss composer, pupil of Kienlen, from 1815 at the Yverdon Institute and from 1817 a favorite teacher at Frankfurt. Wrote the fairy-opera Fortunat, 1829, the oratorio Zeit und Ewigkeit, cantatas, effective choruses and songs, besides 2 symphonies, a piano-sonata, etc. Author of System d. Rhythmik (posthumous, edited by Widmann) and articles in Cécilia and the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, besides Gedichte, 1869. Memoir (anonymus), 1888.

Schoberlechner, Franz (Vienna, 1797-1843, Berlin). Precocious Austrian pianist, pupil of Hummel and E. A. Förster, at ten playing Hummel's 2d Concerto (written for him) and at seventeen producing his first opera at Florence. In 1815-19 he was musician to the Duchess of Lucca and from 1820 was much on tour, at Petrograd in 1824 marrying the singer Sophie dall' Oca (1807-1863), with whom he returned there in 1827-30 (when she sang at the Italian Opera). After about 1833 he lived at his villa near Florence. Wrote 4 operas (1814-39), an overture, variations for piano and orchestra, string-quartets, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, piano-sonatas, fantasias, variations, etc. His wife was a favorite in Russia and Germany until her retirement in 1840. G.

Schöberlein, Ludwig (n. Ansbach, 1813-1881, Göttingen). Bavarian theologian, from 1841 at Erlangen, from 1850 at Heidelberg and in 1855-78 at Göttingen, author (with Riegel) of a valuable Schatz d. liturg. Chor- u. Gemeindegesangs, 3 vols. 1865-72.

Schobert, Johann (?1720-1767, Paris). Silesian clavierist, affiliated as composer with the Mannheim circle, from 1760 musician to Prince de Conti at Paris. Earlier he may have been organist at Versailles. Not only are his works marked by elegance and structural ingenuity, but they are notable as the first in which the clavier is systematically used in chamber-composition. Wrote 6 concertos, 7 sonatas (3 with violin), 2 trios and 6 quartets (clavier, violin and horns) and a singspiel (1765). Four of Mozart's piano-concertos are studies from Schobert. See I. M. G. Zeitschr. 1908. G.

Schoeck, Othmar (Brunnen, 1886). Gifted Swiss composer, pupil of the Zurich and Leipzig Conservatories, since about 1910 at Zurich as leader of the Choral Union and also (from 1917) of the symphony-concerts at St. Gall (following A. Meyer). Has written the operas Don Ranudo de Colibrados, 1919, and Venus, 1922, the singspiel Erwin und Elmire, 1916, the overture Ratcliffe, a serenade for small orchestra, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, the choral work Der Postillon, the choruses Wegelied, Dithyrambe and Trommelschläge and about 125 songs.

Schöelcher, Victor (Paris, 1804-1893, do.). French official, in 1851-70 in England because of republican sympathies, author of a life of Handel, 1857, based on some original research. His Handeliana, with much other material, and his collection of rare instruments went to the Paris Conservatory. G.

Schoenefeld, George (Chicago, 1887), son of the following. American expert in harpsichord and clavichord-music, pupil of his father, Krause, De la Nux and Bauer, since 1913 devoting himself to the exposition of early keyboard-music.

Schoenefeld, Henry (Milwaukee, 1857). Able American pianist and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Lassen, from 1879 in Chicago, where in 1891-1902 he led the Germania Männerchor, and since 1904 in Los Angeles, where he directs the Turnverein and a Women's Symphony Orchestra. In 1915 he led the first German Sängerkreis on the Pacific Coast. He was one of the first to utilize Indian themes. Has written the symphonies Rural and Springtime, the overtures In the Sunny South and Festival, 2 American Rhapsodies for orchestra, 2 Indian Legends, a Suite Caractéristique (Indian themes), the nocturne Californica and other works for strings, concertos for violin and for piano, the pantomime-ballet Wachicanta, a violin-sonata (Marteau prize, 1898), many violin-, 'cello- and piano-pieces, the choral works The Three Indians, Easter Idyl and Salvum fac regem, other choruses and songs. He also has an opera on an Indian subject. A.

Schöffel, Peter. 16th C.

Scholes, Percy A. (Leeds, 1877). Versatile English teacher and writer, in 1900-01 and '03 music-master at Kent College (Canterbury), in 1901-03 at Kingswood College (South Africa), for a time from 1904 in the Municipal School of Music at Leeds, school-inspector in London, for many years extension-lecturer for Oxford, London and Manchester Universities, etc. He started the Home Music-Study Union and in 1908-21 edited its organ, The Music Student (now The Music Teacher), and also Youth and Music (for children). He has been active in many musical associations and during the World War did much musical work in camps. Author of Everyman and his Music, 1917, Introduction to British Music, a Listener's Guide to Music, 1919, The Book of the Great Musicians, 3 vols. 1920–23, an unfinished life of Purcell and numerous periodical-articles. In 1915 he visited the United States. A.

Scholtz, Hermann (Breslau, 1845–1918, Dresden). Able Silesian pianist, pupil of Brosig and the Leipzig and Munich Conservatories, from 1869 teaching at the latter, in 1875 removing to Dresden, where he became chamber-musician to the court in 1880 and royal professor in 1910. His playing of Chopin was specially notable. Wrote a piano-concerto, a piano-trio, a piano-sonata, 5 sets of variations and one for two pianos, a Passacaglia, Ballades and a long list of charming short pieces, besides editing Chopin's piano-works, Heller's études and Brahms' piano-concerto in D min.

Scholz, Bernhard E. (Mayence, 1835–1916, Munich). Eminent Hessian conductor and composer, pupil of Pauer and Dehn, from 1856 teacher at the Munich Conservatory, from 1859 conductor at the Hanover Opera and in 1865–66 of the Cherubini in Florence, then for some years in Berlin, from 1871 conductor of the Orchesterverein in Breslau and in 1883–1908 Raff's successor as head of the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt and from 1884 also conductor of the Rühl Gesangverein. After 1908 he lived in Florence, in 1914 returning to Munich. Ph.D. of Breslau Univ. in 1883 and from about 1885 royal professor. His works include Operas—Carlo Rosa, 1858, Ziethensche Husaren, 1869, Morgiane, 1870, Golo [Genovefa], 1875, Der Trompeter von Sakkingen, 1877, Die vornehmen Wirte, 1883, Ingo, 1898, Anno 1757, 1903, Mirandolina, 1907.

Choral works—Requiem; Des Sängers Wiederkehr; Ständchen an eine Verlassene; Das Siegesfest; Das Lied von der Glocke; Silvesterglocken; Türmerlied; Lebenslied; Der Wald; Media Vita; many detached choruses.

For orchestra—symphonies in B-flat and A min.; overtures for Goethe's Iphigenie auf Tauris and Im Freien; Wanderung; piano-concerto in B; Capriccio; for piano and Capriccio all' Ongarese for 'cello; Malinconia; etc.

Chamber-music—string-quintet in E min.; string-quartets in G and A min.; piano-quartet in F min.; piano-trios in E min. and A min.; violin-sonatas in E-flat, G and A min.; 'cello-sonatas in F, D min., C, G and A min.

Many piano-pieces and songs.

Author of Lehre vom Kontrapunkt u. d. Nachahmung, 1897, Wohin treiben wir?, 1897 (essays), Musikalisches u. Persönliches, 1899, and Verklungenes Weisen, 1911 (reminiscences), besides an edition of Dehn's Kontrapunkt (1859, 2d ed. 1883). G.

Scholz, Hans (Breslau, 1879), son of the above. Silesian writer, trained at the Hoch Conservatory and Berlin and Rostock Universities (Ph.D. 1910), since 1910 tutor at Munich University. Author of a monograph on Kusser (1911), a small text-book in harmony (1920) and a translation of Berlioz' Mémoires (1914).

Scholze, Anton (Oberhennersdorf, 1864). Bohemian composer of the opera Hanna, 1914, and vocal and instrumental pieces, besides Bilder aus d. Musikgeschichte, 1913. Since 1898 he has been teacher at the Eger Music School.

Schönberg, Arnold (Vienna, 1874). Eccentric Austrian composer, until 1894 self-taught, then pupil of his brother-in-law Zemlinsky. After failure to secure attention in Vienna, in 1901–03 he lived in Berlin, where (with Wolzogen, Wedekind and Bierbaum) he experimented for some months with the enterprise called the Ueberbrettel ('a sort of artistic cabaret') and later taught at the Stern Conservatory. In 1903, returning to Vienna, he secured the favor of Mahler and thus a hearing for a variety of works, the originality and often beauty of which won him a degree of fame, so that in 1910–11 he was made teacher at the Akademie. From 1911, however, he betook himself once more to Berlin, this time gaining a wider circle of admirers and indulging in more extravagance of production. Latterly he has made his home at Mödling (near Vienna). His gifts of technical ingenuity and of imagination are indisputable, though many of his attempts to expand structural procedure in novel ways seem more bizarre than successful. Often he produces passages of obvious artistic richness and his command of resource is sometimes impressive. But his whimsicality and straining after startling effects provoke serious question. His text-book in harmony is challenged as a crude mixture of obsolete theories and impatience with all restraint. His boast that he has never read a music-history perhaps offers an explanation. Has written a Kammer symphonie in E (a second projected), the symphonic poem Pelleas und Melisande, the melodrama Pierrot Lunaire, the monodrama Erwartung, 5 other orchestral pieces, the string-sextet Verklärte Nacht string-quartets in D min. and F-sharp min., the extraordinary Gurrelieder (text by Jacobsen, for 5 soli, a reciter, 2 choruses and an orchestra of 114) and a number of songs (some with orchestra). Author of Harmonielehre, 1911. See essays by a circle of partisans (1912), by Huneke in Ivory Apes and Peacocks, 1914, by E. Wellesz, 1921, and by various writers in musical journals.

Schönberger, Benno (Vienna, 1863). Able Austrian pianist, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory and of Liszt, playing with the Hellmesberger Quartet when but eleven, beginning wide tours at fifteen and in 1880–85 teaching in Vienna. From 1887 he appeared regularly in London as both soloist and in ensemble (as with Ysaÿe and Gérardy), and in 1894 visited America. At one time he taught at the Royal Academy in London and since 1912 has conducted opera-troupes in England. Has written 3 sonatas, 3 Rhapsodies, many other piano-pieces and more than 40 songs. G.

Schönfeld, Hermann (Breslau, 1829–?). Silesian church-musician, pupil of Jul. Seidel, long cantor at the Maria Magdalenenkirche in Breslau, writing cantatas, motets, organ-pieces, a symphony, overtures, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, etc.

Schop, Johann. 17th C. G.

Schott, Anton (n. Göppingen, 1846–1913, Stuttgart). Eminent Württemberger operatic tenor, in 1865-71 an artillery-officer, then pupil of Agnes Schebest-Strauss, from 1872 rapidly becoming known at Munich, Berlin, Schwerin and Hanover, in England from 1879, in Italy in 1882 and in New York in 1884-85. His success in the chief Wagnerian rôles was notable. After about 1890 he confined himself mostly to concert. G.

Schott [B. Schotts Söhne]. Important music-publishing firm at Mayence, founded in 1773 by Bernhard Schott (d. 1817) and continued by his sons Andreas (1781-1840) and Johann Joseph (1782-1855). There are branches or affiliated houses in Brussels, London, Paris, etc. They were one of the earliest to use lithographic processes. Their total of publications is about 30,000, including a long list of great works from Beethoven down. From 1875 the active managers were Peter Schott, Franz von Landwehr and Ludwig Strecker. G.

Schrader, Bruno (Schöningen, 1861). North German critic and writer, at one time teacher at the Weimar Conservatory and later at the Riemann Conservatory at Stettin, also critic for the Leipzig Neueste Nachrichten and editor of the Musik-Saison, and since 1908 active in Berlin. Author of lives of Handel, Mendelssohn, Berlioz and Liszt (1918), besides completing Riemann's Bach and revising Brehmer's Handlexikon.

Schradieck, Henry (Hamburg, 1846-1918, Brooklyn). Eminent North German violinist, pupil of his father, Léonard and David, in 1863-64 concertmaster for the Reinhthaler concerts in Bremen, from 1864 teacher at the Moscow Conservatory, from 1868 concertmaster of the Hamburg Philharmonic (following Auer) and in 1874-83 concertmaster (with Röntgen) of the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig and at the Opera, besides teaching at the Conservatory. In 1883 he moved to Cincinnati to teach at the College of Music, in 1889-94 resumed his post at Hamburg, from 1894 was at the National Conservatory in New York and from 1898 at the Broad Street Conservatory in Philadelphia and from 1912 also at the Am. Institute of Applied Music in New York. His gifts as teacher were carried out in a Schule d. Violintechnik, many studies and exercises. G., A.

Schramm, Melchior. 16th C.

Schreck, Gustav (Zeulenroda, 1849-1918, Leipzig). Able Saxon teacher and composer, trained mostly at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1870 teacher at the Viborg (Finland) Gymnasium and then at Leipzig, where from 1887 he taught at the Conservatory and from 1892 was cantor at the Thomasschule (succeeding Rust), gaining the title of royal professor in 1898 and a Ph.D. from the Univ. in 1909. Wrote the oratorio Christus der Auferstandene, the choral works Im Walde, König Fjalar, Der Falken-Räuber, Begrüssung des Meeres, Psalm 23, Salvum fac regem, Gott ist die Liebe and Pfingstgesang, many a cappella motets and choruses, a Divertimento for wind-nonet, a fantasia and double fugue for organ and orchestra, sonatas for oboe and for bassoon, etc., besides editing Pergolesi's Stabat Mater (1909), Bach's violin-sonatas and a set of 15 choruses used by the Thomaschor. For the quinqucentennial of Leipzig University (1909) he wrote a Festkantate.

Schreiber, Friedrich Gustav (n. Gotha, 1817-1889, Mühlhausen). Thuringian organist, pupil of Kast and Gebhardt, in 1840-47 teacher at the Musikinstitut at Prague and from 1851 town-musician and cantor at the Blasiuskirche in Mühlhausen, in 1864 becoming organist and founding two choral societies. Wrote the oratorio Der Jüngling von Nain, the choral works Frühlingsfeier, Borussia, Der deutsche Geist, etc., motets, Psalms, songs, symphonies, overtures and piano-pieces.

Schreker, Franz (Monaco, 1878). Eminent Austrian-Monacan composer, pupil of Fuchs, from 1911 founder and conductor of the Philharmonischer Chor at Vienna and also teacher at the Akademie and from 1920 director of the Berlin Hochschule. Has written the operas Der ferne Klang, 1912, Das Spielwerk und die Prinzessin, 1913, Die Gezeichneten, 1918, and Der Schatzgräber, 1920, 3 pantomimes, Psalm 116 (1901), a choral Schwanengesang, an orchestral suite, the overture Ekkehard, a Vorspiel zu einem Drama, 1914, a Sinfonietta and Nachtsstück for orchestra, an intermezzo for strings and about 50 songs. Sketches by Bekker, 1919, and Kapp, 1921.

Schrems, Joseph (n. Berneck, 1815-1872, Ratisbon). Bavarian priest and church-musician, from 1839 choirmaster at Ratisbon Cathedral, joining Prose and Mettenleiter in the revival of old liturgical music and succeeding the former in 1861 as editor of Musica Divina. He was untiring in his extension of the cathedral-library.

Schreyer, Johannes (n. Dresden, 1856). Saxon writer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and the Berlin Akademie, since 1881 a valued teacher at Dresden. Author of Von Bach bis Wagner, 1903 (revised as Harmonielehre, 1905, 4th ed. 1911), Beiträge zur Bachkritik, 2 parts, 1911-12, articles in the Allgem. Musikzeitung (1914) and articles in the Riemann Lexikon.

Schröder [Schroeder], Alwin (Neuhaldensleben, 1855), brother of the two following. Eminent Saxon 'cellist, pupil of his father, J. B. André and the Berlin Hochschule, in 1871-72 playing viola in the Schröder Quartet (with his three brothers), from 1875 'cellist in Liebig's orchestra in Berlin and from 1880 at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig, the Opera and the Conservatory (from 1881 as his brother's successor), besides playing in the Petri Quartet. In 1891 he moved to Boston, remaining in the Boston Symphony Orchestra till 1903 and in the Kneisel Quartet till 1907, returning to the Orchestra in 1910-12. In 1907-08 he played in the Museum Orchestra at Frankfurt and taught at the Hoch Conservatory, and in 1908-10 was with the Hess Quartet in Boston. Since 1915 he has been in the Margulies Trio in New York and also the Boston String Quartet (till 1919). As soloist and ensemble-player he holds the first rank. His 'cello is a fine Amati. Has published a large number of excellent studies. A.

Schröder, Hermann (Quedlinburg, 1843-1909, Berlin), brother of Alwin and Karl. Able Saxon violinist, pupil of his father and A. Ritter, from 1873 head of his own school in Berlin and also from 1885 teaching at the Hochschule. Wrote pedagogical quartets and trios, a violin-method and essays on acoustical questions (1891-1906).

Schröder, Karl (Quedlinburg, 1848), brother of the two preceding. Distinguished Saxon 'cellist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father, Drechsler and Dehn, playing in the court-orchestra at Sondershausen when but fourteen and in 1871 forming a Quartet with his three brothers, in 1872-73 conductor at Kroll's in Berlin, in 1873-74 in the Brunswick court-band and in 1874-81 with the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig, at the Opera and also at the Conservatory. From 1881 he was court-director at Sondershausen (following Erdmannsdörfer) and was head of the new Conservatory, holding both positions till 1907 except in 1886-90, when he conducted the German Opera at Rotterdam for one season and the Berlin and Hamburg Operas for two each. After 1907 he conducted orchestras at Leipzig, Frankenhausen and Dresden and since 1911 has taught at the Stern Conservatory at Berlin. He received the title of royal professor in 1885 and that of Hofrat in 1907. Has written the operas Aspasia, 1892 (rewritten as Die Palikarin, 1905), and Der Asket, 1893 (short), the operetta Malajo, 2 'cello-concertos, 2 string-quartets, a string-trio, 4 Konzertstücke for 'cello and piano, many pieces, studies and a method, besides an edition of J. G. Arnold's concerto and a collection of 60 standard 'cello-pieces. Author of a Führer for the 'cello-teacher (1880) and Katechismen of conducting (1889), violin-playing (1889, 3d ed. 1911) and 'cello-playing (1890).

Schröder-Devrient, Wilhelmine (Hamburg, 1804-1860, Coburg). Distinguished North German operatic soprano, trained by her parents as an actress and by Mazatti in singing, in 1821-22 establishing herself at Vienna as an artist of extraordinary breadth and power. From 1823 till her retirement in 1847 she was engaged at the Dresden Opera, but with many trips to Paris (from 1830), London (from 1832) and other cities. Her power lay more in mental earnestness and dramatic intensity rather than in the beauty or finish of her voice. She sang at the premières of Wagner's Rienzi (1842), Fliegende Holländer (1843) and Tannhäuser (1845). In 1823-28 she was the wife of the actor Karl Devrient, in 1847-48 of Von Döring (who decamped with her savings) and from 1850 of the Livonian Baron von Bock. Memoirs by Glümer, 1862, Wolzogen, 1863, Bonacci, 1903, Hagemann, 1904, and (anonymous) 1913, and see vol. ix of Wagner's Schriften. G.

Schröter, Christoph Gottlieb (Hohenstein, 1699-1782, Nordhausen). Saxon organist and theorist, pupil of the Kreuzschule, Dresden, from 1717 copyist for Lotti, in 1720-24 traveling in Germany, Holland and England with a nobleman, then studying and lecturing at Jena University, from 1726 organist at Minden and from 1732 at Nordhausen. In 1717 he seems to have made a design for a hammer-clavier and later claimed thus to have invented the piano, but his priority even of idea is now set aside. Author of Deutliche Anweisung zum Generalbass, 1772, Letzte Beschäftigung mit musikal. Dingen, 1782, and many essays, largely polemic, in Mizler's Bibliothek and Marburg's Critische Briefe. His formal assertions regarding the invention of the piano are in Mizler, 1738 and 1763. Wrote 5 Passions, 7 sets of church-cantatas, many secular cantatas and serenades, symphonies, overtures, concertos, sonatas, organ-fugues and preludes, etc. G.

Schröter, Corona Elisabeth Wilhelmine (Guben, 1751-1802, Ilmenau). Famous Prussian actress and singer, pupil of her father, appearing in concert at Leipzig when but fourteen and continuing there till 1771. In 1778-86 she was chamber-singer at Weimar, one of the brilliant circle around Goethe. Wrote 2 sets of songs (1786, '94). Memoirs by Keil, 1875 (in Vor 100 Jahren), Düntzer, 1876, Pasig, 1902, and Stümcke, 1904. Her brother Johann Samuel (1750-1788) was a good pianist, from 1772 in England and soon in court-employ, writing many concertos, quintets, trios and sonatas. G.

Schröter, Leonhardt (?1540-1595). 16th C. G.

Schröter, Oskar. Composer of the opera Jodocus der Narr, 1903.

Schubart, Christian Friedrich Daniel (Sont-heim, 1739-1791, Stuttgart). Noted Swabian poet, in 1777-87 imprisoned for indiscreet writing in his Deutsche Chronik, but later court-poet and theater-director at Stuttgart. Wrote an operetta, a melodrama, 2 cantatas, songs, piano-pieces, etc., besides Ideen zu einer Aesthetik d. Tonkunst, 1806 (edited by his son). Autobiography, 1791-93, and memoirs by F. D. Strauss, 1849, Solcher, 1895, and Holzer, 1905. See also Friedländer, Das deutsche Lied, 1902. G.

Schubaur, Johann Lukas (Lechfeld, 1749-1815, Munich). Swabian physician at Munich, writing the early singspiele Melida, 1781, Die Dorfdeputierten, 1783, Das Lustlager, 1784, and Die treuen Köhler, 1786, a Psalm and a cantata.

Schubert, Ferdinand (Lichtenthal, 1794-1859, Vienna), brother of the following. Austrian school-musician, from 1809 employed at the Vienna Orphan Asylum, from 1820 at the parish-school of Altlerehenfeld (suburb) and from 1824 head-teacher at the Normal School of St. Anna (director from 1851). Wrote about 40 pieces of church-music, including 2 Requiems. He was tenderly devoted to his brother and after the latter's death took charge of his effects. G.

Schubert, Franz Peter (Lichtenthal, [Jan. 31] 1797-1828 [Nov. 19], Vienna), son of the parish schoolmaster, Lichtenthal being then a village just north of Vienna. Extraordinarily gifted Austrian composer, whose career, though pitifully brief, marks an epoch in lyrical expression through music. His humble origin and poverty precluded his having thorough and varied training. But his phenomenal intuition for playing instruments and for composition was carefully guided by his father, his older brothers Ignaz (1784-1844) and Ferdinand (see above) and the local choirmaster Holzer, so that at ten he was adept with voice and violin. In 1808 he readily secured admission to the school of the court-choir (under Eybler and Salieri, with Ruzicka as routine instructor), gaining invaluable experience from the daily singing and ensemble-practice (soon leader of the school-orchestra). At his home-visits quartet-playing with his father and brothers was the chief occupation (he taking the viola). From 1810 varied examples of his urgent impulse to composition accumulate (1st overture in 1812, 1st symphony, wind-octet and significant songs in 1813). When his boy-voice broke in 1813 he left the school and avoided military service by becoming helper in his father's school, remaining in its drudgery till 1817. He kept up lessons with Salieri and gave all spare time to composing (1st mass and a 3-act opera in 1814, 2 symphonies, 2 masses, operettas and nearly 150 songs in 1815). He now began to acquire faithful friends, such as the Grob family, Mayseder, the poet Mayrhofer and the young Schober, with many others later. In 1816 he vainly sought the headship of the new music-school at Laibach, but after settling in Vienna in 1817 gradually attracted notice through the interest of friends (now including the singer Vogl, the Hüttenbrenners, etc.). In 1818 two of his overtures were given in public, followed by some other works at intervals. His quartets at home now expanded into orchestral evenings at other houses. In the summer of 1818 (as again in 1824) he spent some months at Zélesz (Hungary) as music-master in Count Esterházy's family. From 1819 he often took summer walking-trips in the mountains. Except for these absences, he remained in Vienna, absorbed in producing works in all forms with marvelous rapidity and freshness of inspiration. From 1820 his songs began to make their way, so that his relations with singers, publishers and managers increased. At times he was led to hope for the performance of stage-works (as of Alfonso und Estrella in 1822 and of Pierrabras in 1824). On the whole, however, he remained without official position or occupation and relatively obscure, living mostly in casual lodgings, with few diversions or opportunities except the bohemian gatherings of his circle of intimates. The lack of a suitable home and the unconscious strain of intense mental application brought on several illnesses. At length he succumbed to typhus fever when still not thirty-two. In his last hours he had strange fancies about Beethoven and his father and brother Fulfilled his wish to be buried close to him in the Währing Cemetery.

Personally, he was simple-hearted, affectionate and almost always buoyant, with a childlike honesty and directness that made him lovable. He liked the bluff camaraderie of students and working-people, but was ill at ease in formal society. He had no finesse about business affairs or skill in advancing his own interests or fame. Indeed, it is not clear that he had any full sense of his transcendent artistic value beyond a perfect assurance in working out the manifold visions of his restless imagination.

To poetry of every kind he was acutely responsive. As lyrics and dramas came to his hand fit musical embodiments instantly presented themselves, usually complete in detail. His song-texts were drawn from more than a hundred different poets (over 70 from Goethe, about 45 each from Schiller and Wihl. Müller, about 25 each from Matthison, Hölty and Kosegarten, etc.). His dramatic texts were much less happily chosen and he often showed here a taste for the extravagantly fantastic or the gruesomely morbid, thus displaying one aspect of the inherently romantic bent of his genius. But the lyric impulse was not limited to literary suggestion. It was equally ready in generating matchless tone-poems for the piano, the chamber-ensemble or the orchestra. Here his melodic and harmonic fecundity was supplemented by an instinct for rhythmic and color-effects all the more surprising when we recall how many of his works never came to performance while he lived. In sustained elaboration, in thematic construction in the formal sense and in the production of climax through compressed and studied approach he was far less successful. Many works are obviously too long and diffuse. But they are never dry or unbeautiful. Upon them all lies a radiance as from a world unseen.

In his hands the artistic song became one of the master-forms of modern music, utterly spontaneous melody combining with ingenious, yet unstrained accompaniment vividly to express his interpretation of the text. He was one of the first to produce true 'songs without words', though without using the term. His employment of the sonata-type was technically regular, but the richness of his main subjects was novel. In the development-sections, however, he is seldom powerful. Yet in his finer sonatas, quartets and symphonies he stands forth as a worthy companion of Mozart and even Beethoven. For the production of dramatic works he had too little technical training, though the lyric passages are often full of beauty. Into the choral works, sacred and secular, he poured a wealth of earnest feeling, but on certain sides (as in contrapuntal movements) he was hampered by the lack of early discipline and possibly by a defect of hearty interest.

The total extent of his compositions remained long unknown. Not until Schumann's visit to Vienna in 1838 was the search for them pushed, and even yet there may be some unknown. The standard edition was issued by Breitkopf & Härtel in 1888-97 (40 vols.), edited by Mandyczewski. Thematic catalogue by Nottebohm, 1874. Of the songs there have been numerous editions, larger or smaller.

A summary of his works is as follows:

For Orchestra

Symphonies—1, D (1813), 2, B-flat (1815), 3, D (1815), 4, Tragicke, C min. (1816), 5, B-flat (1816), 6, C (1818), 7, 'Unfinished' (two movements only) (1822), 8, 'Gasteiner', C (1825), 9, C (1828).
Overtures in D (1812), B-flat (1816), D (1817), D and C, 'in italien. Stil' (1817), and E min. (1819).
Konzertstück for violin, in D (1816). Also several early pieces.

Chamber-Music

Octet in F, for clarinet, horn, bassoon and strings (1824); two movements of a wind-octet (1813).
String-quintet in C (1828); piano-quintet in A (1819).
String-quartets in B-flat and C (1812), B-flat, C, B-flat, E-flat and D (1813), D and B-flat (1814), G min. (1815), E-flat and E (1817), C min., one movement only (1820), A min. (1824), D min. and G (1826). Also Adagio and Rondo Concertant in F, for piano-quartet (1816).
String-trio in B-flat (1816); piano-trios in B-flat (1826) and E-flat (1827). Also Nocturno for piano-trio (1827?).
Trauermusik for nine wind-instruments (1813).
Violin-sonatas in D, A min. and G min. (1816) and A (1817). Also, for violin, Rondeau Brillant in B (1826) and Phantasie in C (1827?). Arpeggione- (or 'cello)-sonata (1824).
Introduction and Variations on 'Ihr Blumlein alle!' (from no. 18 of the Müllertlieder), for flute and piano (1824).

For Piano

Sonatas in E and C (1815), A-flat, E min., B, A min. and E-flat (1817), A min. (1823), A min., A and D (1825), G (1826), C min., A and B-flat (1828) and E (?), besides 5 incomplete.
8 Imprompts; 6 Moments Musicaux; 2 Scherzos; Variations in F and A min.; Wanderer-Phantasie (1822); some other pieces.
Many minuets, waltzes, ländler, écossaises and other dances.
For 4 hands—sonatas in B-flat and C (1824); overtures in G min. and F; 4 fantasias; Divertissement à la Hongroise; 3 sets of variations; 18 marches; 10 polonaises; etc.

Dramatic Works

Operas—Alfonso und Estrella (1822, overture 1823, given by Liszt at Weimar 1854), Fierabras (1823, given at Vienna 1861). Music for Rosamunde (1823).
Operettas and Singspiele—Des Teufels Lustschloss (1814), Der vierjährige Posten (1814), Fernando (1815), Die beiden Freunde von Salamanca (1815), Die Zwillingenbrüder (1819), Die Zauberharfe, 1820 (melodrama), Die Verschworenen (1823, given at Vienna 1861).
Fragments or sketches of 6-7 others.

Church-Music

Masses in F (1814), G and B-flat (1815), C (1816), A-flat (1822) and E-flat (1828). Also 3 Kyries, 1 Gradual and 5 Offertoriums.
Magnificat; 2 Stabat Maters; 4 Salve Reginas; 5 Tantum Ergos; Palm Sunday Antiphons; Auguste jam caelestrum (duet).
Deutsche Messe (1827, text by Neumann).

Other Choral Works

Psalms 23 (1820) and 92 (1828).
Mirjams Siegesgesang (1828); Lazarus (1820, fragment); Gott in der Natur (1822); Gebet vor der Schlacht, (1824); Glaube, Hoffnung und Liebe (1828).
Various occasional cantatas in honor of his father, Salieri, Spendou, Vogl, the Emperor, etc.
Chor der Engel und Gesang der Geister (both from Goethe).
Over 50 other choruses and part-songs.

Songs

Cycles—Die schöne Müllerin (20, 1823); Die Winterreise (24, 1827); Schwanengesang (14, 1828).
About 550 others.

Memoirs by Kreissle von Hellborn, 1861 (2d ed. 1865), Barbedette, 1866, La Mara, 1868, Risse, 2 vols. 1872, Reissmann, 1873, Austin, 1873, Frost, 1881, Friedländer, 1887, Niggli, 1888, H. Ritter, 1896, Skalla, 1897, Curzon, 1899, 1900, Zenger, 1902, Heuberger, 1902 (2d ed. 1908), Duncan, 1905, Klatte, 1907, Bourgault-Ducoudray, 1908, Antcliffe, 1910, Dahms, 1912 (6th ed. 1918), and Deutsch and Scheibler, 4 vols. 1913. G.

Schubert, Joseph (Warnsdorf, 1757-1812 [1833], Dresden). Bohemian violist, about 1780 musician to the Margrave of Schwedt and from 1788 in the Dresden court-band. Wrote 4 operas, 15 masses, various concertos, violin- and piano-sonatas, etc.

Schubert, Louis (Dessau, 1828-1884, Dresden). Saxon violinist, from 1845 playing at Petrograd, in 1846-52 in the opera-orchestra at Königsberg and then teacher and soloist there, in 1862 moving to Dresden as a favorite vocal teacher. Wrote 4 effective operettas, songs, a violin-method, a Gesangsschule in Liedern, etc.

Schubert, Maschinka, née Schneider (Reval, 1815-1882, Dresden). Brilliant German-Russian operatic soprano, pupil of Bordogni and Bianchi, appearing London in 1832 and from about 1835 engaged at the Dresden Opera, retiring in 1860. She married the concertmaster Franz Schubert (1808-1878). Her daughter Georgine (1840-1878) was also an accomplished stage-singer from 1859. G.

Schuberth, Karl (Magdeburg, 1811-1863, Zurich). Eminent Saxon 'cellist, pupil of L. Hesse and Dotzauer, from 1828 active at Magdeburg, from 1833 on long and brilliant tours and from 1835 court-musician in Petrograd (conductor of the court-orchestra, inspector of the opera-school and music-director at the University). Wrote 2 'cello-concertos, fantasias and variations with orchestra, a string-octet, 2 string-quintets, 4 string-quartets, a 'cello-sonata, etc. G.

Schuberth. Prominent music-publishing firm at Leipzig and New York, first started at Hamburg in 1826 by Julius Ferdinand Georg Schuberth (1804-1875), with branches at Leipzig (1832) and New York (1850). After 1853 the Hamburg business was taken over by his brother Friedrich Wilhelm (b. 1817). Julius at Leipzig was succeeded by his widow and nephew, and in 1891 the business was sold to Siegel. He was the founder of the Norddeutscher Musikverein in 1840, at different times started musical journals of importance and also published a musical Lexikon. G.

Schubiger, Anselm (Utnach 1815-1888, Einsiedeln). Swiss priest, author of Die Sängerschule von St. Gallen, 1858, Die Pflege d. Kirchengesangs in d. deutschen kathol. Schweiz, 1873, Musikal. Spicilegien, 1876 (essays on liturgical drama, organ-making, instruments, etc., in the Middle Ages), and articles in the Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte.

Schuch, Ernst von (Gratz, 1847-1914, Dresden). Eminent Styrian conductor, pupil of Stoltz and Dessoff, from 1867 engaged successively at Breslau, Würzburg, Gratz and Basel, with service in Pollini's troupe in 1872, and from 1873 court-director at Dresden, where his long administration was extremely able and brilliant, particularly in the field of opera, and rewarded by a series of honors, including the title of nobility from the Emperor of Austria. In 1900 he visited New York, conducting three concerts at the Metropolitan. In 1875 he married the soprano Clementine Proška [Procháska] (b. 1853), who in 1873-95 was the leading coloratura-singer at Dresden. Sketches by L. Hartmann, 1896 (in Nord u. Süd), and Sakolowski, 1901. G.

Schuchardt, Friedrich (Gotha, 1876). Saxon clergyman, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, becoming pastor in Gotha. Has written the opera Die Bergmannsbraut, 1904, the oratorio Peter Forschgrund, the choral work Die Erscheinung der Muse, songs and ballades.

Schucht, Jean F. (Holzthalleben, 1822-1894, Leipzig). Thuringian writer, in music pupil of Hauptmann, Spohr and Schnyder von Wartensee, from about 1845 in Berlin and from 1868 in Leipzig, writing for the Neue Zeitschrift. Author of lives of Meyerbeer (1869) and Chopin (1880), besides handbooks of musical knowledge.

Schüecker, Edmund (Vienna, 1860-1911, Bad Kreuznach), brother of the following. Eminent Austrian harpist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1877 soloist in the Park Orchestra at Amsterdam, then at Hamburg and Dresden, and in 1884-91 soloist at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig and teacher at the Conservatory. From 1891 he was with the new Chicago Orchestra under Thomas, in 1900-01 at the Vienna Opera under Mahler, then in ill-health at Bad Kreuznach, in 1903-04 with the Pittsburgh Orchestra, from 1904 with the Philadelphia Orchestra and in 1909-10 at the Metropolitan, New York. In 1903-06 he assisted at Wagner works at Covent Garden, London, under Richter. He was a superior teacher and also a fine pianist. Wrote many striking harp-pieces, including the effective Remembrances of Worcester for two harps, many valuable études, a collection of the principal harp-passages in Wagner's works and arrangements from several composers (some for two or three harps or for harp and violin). A.

Schüecker, Heinrich (Vienna, 1867-1913, Boston), brother of the above. Eminent Austrian harpist, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, in 1884-85 engaged at Hamburg and Bad Kreuznach and from 1885 soloist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, besides teaching at the New England Conservatory. In 1893 he organized a Trio with Jacques Hoffmann and Karl Barth. He played often at the Worcester Festivals, in Paris and in London. He owned a small collection of valuable harps. A.

Schüecker, Joseph E. (Leipzig, 1886), son of Edmund above. Saxon harpist, pupil of his father and the Vienna Conservatory, in 1904-05 and 1908-09 with the Pittsburgh Orchestra, in 1907-08 with the Leipzig Philharmonic, from 1909 with the Philadelphia Orchestra, in 1911-13 with the Savage Opera Company and since 1914 teacher at the Pittsburgh Inst. of Technology. A.

Schulhoff, Erwin (Prague, 1894). Gifted ultra-modern pianist and composer, trained as player at the Prague, Leipzig and Cologne Conservatories, the Berlin Hochschule and under Thern, taking the Mendelssohn prize in 1913 (Cologne). Has written 2 symphonies, the one (Landschaften) with soprano, the other (Menschheit) with alto, an overture, orchestral variations, a Lustige Overtüre, a piano-concerto, a suite for small orchestra, a string-quartet, a quartet-divertimento, a violin-suite, sonatas for violin, for 'cello, and 2 for piano, piano-variations and fugato, 6 piano-pieces (Ironie), preludes and fugues, waltzes, inventions and many other piano-works, 3 pieces for contrabassoon solo, etc.

Schulhoff, Julius (Prague, 1825-1898, Berlin). Able Bohemian pianist and teacher, pupil of Kisch, Tedesco and Tomaschek, making his début in 1842 at Dresden, Leipzig and Paris (at first under Chopin's patronage), after 1848 with extended tours throughout Europe and much success as a popular teacher, but removing to Dresden in 1870 and finally to Berlin. Wrote a sonata, a set of études and much facile salon-music. G.

Schultheiss, Benedict (? -1693). 17th C. G.

Schulthesius, Johann Paul (n. Gotha, 1748-1816, Leghorn). Saxon clergyman, in music pupil of Kehl and Checchi, from about 1775 pastor of the Dutch and German congregation at Leghorn, and noted as a claviersist. Wrote piano-quartets, quartet- and trio-variations, violin-sonatas, etc. G.

Schultz, Johannes (? -1653). 17th C.

Schultz-Adaievsky, Ella von (Petrograd, 1846). Russian pianist, pupil of Henselt and the Petrograd Conservatory, from about 1870 much engaged in studying old Greek music, from 1882 living in Venice and from 1909 at Neuwied. Has written the opera The Dawn of Freedom, 1881, a cappella church-music, a Sonate Grecque for clarinet, part-songs, songs and piano-pieces, besides a collection of Italian folk-songs.

Schultze, Adolf (Schwerin, 1853). North German pianist, trained at the Kullak Academy in Berlin, from 1875 teacher there, in 1886-90 court-director at Sondershausen and head of the Conservatory, later teacher in Berlin. Has written a piano-concerto, orchestral and piano-pieces.

Schulze, Christoph (1606-1683). 17th C.

Schultze, Wilhelm Heinrich (Celle, 1828-1888, Syracuse, N. Y.). Hanoverian violinist, coming to America in 1848 with the Germania Orchestra, from 1858 leader of the Mendelssohn Quintette Club and from 1877 teacher at Syracuse University (Mus.D. 1877). A.

Schulz, August (n. Brunswick, 1837–1909, do.). North German violinist, pupil of Zinkeisen, Leibrock and Joachim, from about 1855 in the Brunswick court-band and, after a short period as concertmaster at Detmold, conductor at Brunswick of the symphony-concerts and of several choral societies. Wrote the opera Der wilde Jäger, 1887, the choral works Hehre, heilige Musik, Eine Sommernacht, Prinzessin Ilse, Frühlingsbrautfahrt and Sturmhymnus, excellent men's choruses and songs.

Schulz, Ferdinand (n. Krossen, 1821–1897, Berlin). Prussian choral conductor, pupil of A. W. Bach, Grell and Dehn, from 1843 singer in the Berlin Domchor, in 1856–64 conductor of the Cäcilienverein, from 1858 choirmaster at the Markuskirche and finally organist at the Sophienkirche. Wrote Psalm 68, motets, other church-music, men's choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Schulz, Johann Abraham Peter (Lüneburg, 1747–1800, Schwedt). Noted North German conductor and vocal composer, pupil of Kirnberger, in 1768–73 traveling as music-master to a Polish princess, then in Berlin teaching and assisting on Sulzer's Theorie d. schönen Künste (S-Z), in 1776–78 conductor at the French theater, from 1780 court-director to Prince Heinrich at Rheinsberg, in 1787–95 court-director at Copenhagen and then again in Germany, part of the time as leader of the Seconda opera-troupe. Wrote about 10 stage-works (from 1774), including 4 Danish operas (1779–93), music for Goethe's Gotz von Berlichingen and Racine's Athalie, the oratorios Maria und Johannes and Christi Tod, a long series of both secular and sacred songs, including the important Lieder im Volkston, 3 books, 1779–90, part-songs, choruses, many piano-pieces, including a sonata or two, etc. As song-composer he was a significant forerunner of Schubert, though his service lay chiefly in developing the artistic capacity of the folk-song type. Author of Wahre Grundsätze zum Gebrauch d. Harmonie, 1773 (issued as by Kirnberger), and Gedanken über d. Einfluss d. Musik auf d. Bildung eines Volkes, 1790, besides a work on tablature (1786). Memoir by Riess, 1914 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), and on his songs see monograph by Klunger, 1909. G.

Schulz, Johann Philipp Christian (Langensalza, 1773–1827, Leipzig). Thuringian conductor, pupil of Engel and Schicht, from 1800 in charge of the Seconda opera-troupe and from 1810 conductor of the Gewandhaus Orchestra. Wrote overtures for Die Jungfrau von Orleans and Faust (also dances for the latter), part-songs, songs, marches, etc.

Schulz, Leo (Posen, 1865). Eminent Prussian 'cellist, playing much in concert when but five to eight, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, making a more mature début at eleven. In 1885–86 he played in the Berlin Philharmonic and in 1886–89 at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig. Coming to America, in 1889–90 he was with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and then with the New York Philharmonic (except 1906–08, when he was in the New York Symphony Society). For some years he taught at the National Conservatory and in 1904–15 was a member of the Margulies Trio. He has had numerous engagements as soloist. Has written a 'cello-concerto, a string-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 'cello-pieces, a cantata and some songs, besides editing collections of 'cello-works. A.

Schulz-Beuthen, Heinrich (Beuthen, 1838–1915, Dresden). Distinguished Silesian composer, originally studying at Breslau University to be a civil engineer, then pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Riedel, by 1865 recognized as of more than ordinary ability. From 1866 he lived at Zurich (where he aroused antagonism by his criticism of the failure of musical enterprise after Wagner's residence), from 1880 in Dresden, from 1893 in Vienna and after 1895 in Dresden again, teaching at the Conservatory and gaining the title of professor in 1911. He was an ardent disciple of Wagner and Liszt, and was highly valued by the latter. His works include Symphonies—1, Dem Andenken Haydns, 2, Frühlingsfeier, 3, Sinfonia Maestosa, 4, Schön Elisabeth, 5, Reformation (with organ), 6, König Lear (with men's chorus), 7, in B-flat (from a quartet), 8, Sieg. Also one movement each of 2 others.

Symphonic Poems—Sturmesnacht; Wilhelm Tell; Toteninsel; Mittellaterliche Volksszene; Des Meeres und der Liebe Wellen; Beethoven-Hymnus; Ein Pharaonenbegräbnis. Also 2 episodes from Faust (Am Rabenstein, Fausts Tod).

Overtures—Bacchantenzug des Dionysus; Pan und die Waldnymphen; Kriemhildens Leid und Untergang. Suites—Auf dem Künstlerfest; Aus meiner Wiener Musikmappe.

Ballfest-Episode; Negerlieder und Tänze (2 sets); Indischer Kornkranz und Kriegtanz; Ungarische Ballade; Serenade.

Symphonische Konzert, for piano and orchestra.

Chamber-works—wind-octet; Abschiedsklänge, for string-sextet; string-quintet in B-flat; Schäferspiele, for string-trio; several pieces for violin.

For piano—sonatas, Alhambra and Heroische; suite, Bilder aus aller Zeit; Kindersymphonie; Orientalische Bilder; Ungarisches Ständchen; Stimmungsbilder in freier Walzerform; 3 pieces im ersten Stil, 5 in Suitenform, 4 in heroischen Stil, 3, in Sonatenform and 5 in a cycle: Erinnerung an die Jugendzeit; 6 fugues. Also several pieces for 4 hands.

Stage-works—Fridolin, 1862 (singspiel), Aschenbrödel, 1879, Die Verschollene, Die Paria, Ohne Mann, Kuert. Also Die Blume Wunderhold (melodrama).

Choral works—Psalms 13, 23, 29 (triple chorus) and 125, Befreiungsgesang der verbannten Israels; Requiem; Geburt und Sendung Christi; several other choruses for men's or women's voices.

5 sets of songs.

Sketch by Mey, 1909 (in Monographien moderner Musiker).

Schulz-Schwerin, Karl (Schwerin, 1845–1913, Mannheim). North German pianist, trained at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, from 1865 touring as court-pianist at Mecklenburg, then at Stettin as teacher at the Conservatory and at Stargard as conductor of the Musikverein, in 1885–1901 teacher at the Stern Conservatory and then living at Mannheim. Wrote a symphony, the overtures Torquato Tasso, Die Braut von Messina and Triumphale, the orchestral pieces Serenata Giocosa, In Memoriam and Festmarsch, orchestral arrangements of works by Mendelssohn, various piano-pieces and sacred choral works.

Schulze, Adolf (n. Mölln, 1835-1920, Jena). Able North German bass and vocal teacher, pupil of Voigt and Garcia, from 1864 active as concert-singer at Hamburg and from about 1875 a prominent teacher at the Berlin Hochschule, becoming royal professor and senator in the Academie, retiring in 1910.

Schumacher, Peter Paul Heinrich (Mayence, 1848-1891, do.). Hessian teacher and conductor, from 1871 leader of choral societies at Mayence and in 1881 founder of a music-school (continued by his widow). Wrote the orchestral suite Bilder vom Rhein, a serenade and funeral march, a violin-concerto and suite, many piano-pieces, the opera Die sieben Raben, the cantata Der fahrende Schüler, 1890, men's choruses and effective songs.

Schumann, Camillo (Königstein, 1872), brother of Georg below. Able Saxon organist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Bargiel, since 1896 organist at the Georgskirche in Eisenach. Has written 3 notable organ-sonatas, 2 suites, 2 chorale-fantasias, a fantasia and fugue on Ein' feste Burg, other fine organ-works (including Rezitatif und Adagio with 'cello), a fantasia for oboe and orchestra, violin- and 'cello-pieces and songs.

Schumann, Clara Josephine, née Wieck (Leipzig, 1819-1896, Frankfurt), daughter and pupil of Friedrich Wieck. Distinguished Saxon pianist, appearing from her eleventh year and touring from 1832 with rapid success. In 1840 she married Robert Schumann (see below) and till 1856 her life was bound up with his. She then moved to Berlin, in 1863 to Lichtenthal (near Baden-Baden) and in 1878 to Frankfurt, where till 1892 she taught at the Hoch Conservatory. From 1856 she was a frequent visitor in England. She was remarkable for her sympathetic mastery of the whole range of piano-literature, but specially famous as the interpreter of Beethoven, Chopin and Brahms, besides being the chief agent in securing due recognition for her husband. She was thus peculiarly important in establishing standards of appreciation for the whole romantic school. Her relation to Brahms from about 1855 onward was notable, both in influencing his development and in bringing his works into favor. Her own works were few, but finely conceived and wrought. Wrote a piano-concerto, a piano-trio, 2 scherzos, 4 polonaises, Valses Romantiques, 3 preludes and fugues, variations on the cavatina from Bellini's Il Pirata and on a theme from Schumann's Bunte Blätter, the impromptu Souvenir de Vienne, caprices in waltz-form, about 10 romances (3 for violin), 10 Soirées Musicales, 4 Pièces Fugitives, an andante and allegro, cadenzas for Mozart's concerto in G min. and for those of Beethoven in C min. and G, and about 15 songs. Memoirs by Meichsner, 1875, La Mara, 1882, Litzmann, 3 vols. 1902-08 (later eds. 1915-20), and Kleefeld, 1910, G.

Schumann, Georg Alfred (Königstein, 1866), brother of Camillo above. Eminent Saxon pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father, K. A. Fischer, Rolfuss, Baumfelder and the Leipzig Conservatory (Beethoven prize), from 1890 director of the Gesangverein at Danzig, in 1896-99 of the Bremen Philharmonic and since 1900 of the Berlin Singakademie (following Blumner) and from 1913 also director of the Akademische Meisterschule. He gained the title of royal professor in 1900, in 1916 was made Ph.D. by Berlin Univ. and in 1918 became vice-president of the Academie. Has written 2 symphonies, the overtures Liebesfrühling, Zu einem Drama und Lebensfreude, the suite Zur Karnevalszeit, orchestral variations on Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten, Ueber ein lustiges Thema (with double fugue) and on a theme by Bach (with fugue), 2 piano-quintets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, 2 violin- and 1 'cello-sonatas, variations and fugue on a theme by Beethoven for two pianos, piano-variations, ballade, Stimmungsbilder, Traumbilder, Harzbilder, etc., the fine choral works Amor und Psyche, Totenklage, Sehnsucht, Preis- und Danklied, Ruth and Das Tränenkrüglein, the burlesque duet-scena Junker David und Absalon, motets, a cappella choruses and many songs, besides an organ-passacaglia on B-A-C-H and an edition of a trio-sonata by K. P. E. Bach. Sketch by Hielseher, 1906 (in Monographien moderner Musiker). G.

Schumann, Robert Alexander (Zwickau, [June 8] 1810-1856 [July 29], Endenich, n. Bonn). Distinguished Saxon composer, foremost in promoting the romantic movement in music. He was the son of a bookseller, from whom he derived strong literary aptitudes, while from his mother he inherited a marked emotional sensitiveness. Until he was twenty he had but desultory musical training, but developed himself into an effective pianist and also as leader of a school-orchestra. When about fifteen he became an eager admirer of the intense poet Richter ('Jean Paul') and absorbed in sentimental phantasies. His mother (his father having died) sent him in 1828 to Leipzig University to study law and in 1829 to Heidelberg, though without weaning him from his increasing desire to pursue music. In 1830 she withdrew her opposition.

He then returned to Leipzig, took up studies with Wieck and tried by strenuous practice to make up for earlier deficiencies. But in his zeal he crippled his right hand so that the virtuoso-career was impossible. He then turned to composition, with lessons under Dorn and the same assiduous application. He also advanced rapidly into critical activity, standing forth as the opponent of whatever in the musical world was inspired by merely pedantic, mechanical or meretricious motives. A circle of sympathizers began to gather about him, constituting what he called the 'Davidsbund', arrayed against the ranks of all 'Philistines'. In 1834 he started the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, which he edited till 1844, making it at once the organ of artistic and creative progress. In 1835 he was stimulated by the advent of Mendelssohn and the awakening of musical life in Leipzig that he effected. In 1836 began his courtship of Clara Wieck, long blocked by her father's opposition, which finally was ended in 1840 by legal pressure. In 1838-39 he visited Vienna in search of professional openings and there began the recovery of many of the Schubert manuscripts. Throughout these years he was gaining self-reliance in composition, but wholly in the field of piano-music. The vigorous, original and exuberant type of his genius was already manifest.

After his marriage in 1840 his creative power displayed itself more fully and on a larger scale, at first in a multitude of beautiful songs, in 1841 chiefly in orchestral writing, in 1842 in chamber-works and then in several choral works. From 1843 he was one of the notable faculty of the new Leipzig Conservatory, though he was never himself a successful teacher, owing to his reticence. In 1844 he and his wife made a striking tour in Russia. But for three or four years he was then laid aside by ill-health, living mostly in Dresden, where in 1847 he undertook some choral conducting and in 1848 resumed composition with energy. He even aspired to be conductor at the Gewandhaus if Rietz should leave (1849). In 1850 he followed Hiller as town-director at Düsseldorf, in charge of both chorus and orchestra, though with leisure for composition. The latter opportunity he richly used, but his conducting, like his teaching, was increasingly ineffective, so that he was gradually replaced by Tausch. He and his wife made trips to Leipzig (1852), Holland (1853) and Hanover (1854). In October, 1853, came the famous interview with the young Brahms. But his health was failing, in 1853-54 mental derangement appeared and he finally attempted suicide by throwing himself into the Rhine (February, 1854). After that he was cared for in an asylum at Endenich, passing into progressive melancholia.

His strong impress during his early maturity was at first that of a rather whimsical romanticist, somewhat quixotically attacking settled customs, and then that of a thoughtful, cultivated and constructive critic, eager to urge music into fresh fields of expression in accord with the mental expansion of the age. His significance as composer was not at once appreciated by many—his style was too novel, condensed, impetuous and heedless about easy sentimental effect. But gradually its peculiar union of intellectuality, imagination, virility and nobility came to be better understood, so that its influence in moulding composition later in the century may be traced in many groups and classes of composers. As song-writer he came to be ranked next to Schubert, though diverse from him in reflective insight and in the elaboration of technical detail. The same warm lyricism runs through most of his choral works. His piano-pieces are strongly characterized by some topic or mood as appraised by poetic imagination and are often mentally programmatic. Their independence of form pointed the way for many later developments. His orchestral works are generally criticized as of unequal effectiveness, owing largely to his lack of early discipline in instrumentation. But even these, with the best of the chamber-works, are marked by an extraordinary elevation of conception and intense beauty of expression in many passages.

His association with Mendelssohn at Leipzig was most cordial on his part, though Mendelssohn never seems to have quite understood his enthusiastic support of everything that looked like advance and change. Together they gave to the Leipzig circle a striking mixture of tendencies in which the Schumann element was for a time not conspicuous. In his own development and especially in the establishment of his fame the forceful quality of Clara Wieck was of prime importance.

His works comprise the following (opus-nos. in brackets);

For Orchestra

Symphonies—1, 'Spring', in B-flat [38], 2, in C [61], 3, 'Rheinische', in E-flat [97], 4, in D min. [120].
Overture, Scherzo und Finale [52], overtures, Die Braut von Messina [100], Fest (on the Rheinweinland) [123], Julius Cæsar [128] and Hermann und Dorothea [136].

With piano—concerto in A min. [54], Konzertstück (Intro. and Allegro) [92], Konzert-Allegro [134].
Fantasia for violin [131]; cello-concerto [129]; Konzertstück for 4 horns [86].

Chamber-Works

Piano-quintet in E-flat [44].
String-quartets in A min., F and A [41]; piano-quartet in E-flat [47].
Piano-trios in D min. [63], F [80] and G min. [110].
Violin-sonatas in A min. [105] and D min. [121], 4
Fantasiestücke for violin and 'cello [88], 4 Märchenbilder for viola [113], 5 Stücke im Volkston for 'cello [102].
3 Romanzen for oboe [94]; 4 Märchenerzählungen for clarinet [132].

For Piano

Sonatas—1, in F-sharp min. [11], 2, in F min. [14], 3, in G min. [22].
Papillons [12] [2]; Davidbündlerlänke (18) [6]; Carnaval (21) [9]; 11 Fantasiestücke [12, 111]; Kreisleriana (8) [16]; 8 Noctetten [21]; 4 Nachstücke [23]; 9 Waldszenen [82]; 14 Bunte Blätter [99]; 20 Albumblätter [124]; 5 Gedänge der Fröhe [133].
Études Symphoniques [13]; Variations on A-B-E-G-G [1]; 12 studies after Paganini's Caprices [3, 10]; Impromptu on theme by Clara Wieck [5]; Faschings-schwank aus Wien [26].
Toccata [7]; Allegro [8]; Fantasia in C [17]; Arabeske [18]; Blumenstück [19]; Humoreske [20]; 3 Romances [28]; Scherzo, Gigue, Romanza and Fughetta [32]; 4 fugues [72]; 4 marches [76]; 7 pieces in fughetta-form [126].
6 Intermezzi [4]; 13 Kinderszenen [15]; Jugendalbum (40) [68]; 3 sonatas for children [118].
For two pianos—Andante and variations [46].
For 4 hands—Bilder aus Osten [66]; 9 Ballscenen [109]; Kinderball (6) [130]; 12 pieces [85].

For pedal-piano or organ—6 canons [56]; 4 Skizzen [58]; 6 fugues on B-A-C-H [60].

Dramatic Works

Opera—Genoveva, 1850 [81].

Music for Byron's Manfred (1859) [115]; scenes from Goethe's Faust (1849–62).

Choral Works

Ballades and Cantatas with soli—Das Paradies und die Peri, 1843 [50]; Adventlied (1848) [71]; Der Rose Pilgerfahrt, 1852, [112]; Der Königssohn, 1852 [116]; Des Sängers Fluch, 1860 [130]; Vom Pagen und der Königstochter (4 ballades), 1852 [140]; Das Glück von Edenhall (1853) [143]. Without soli—Abschiedslied [84]; Requiem für Mignon [98b]; Nachlied [108]; Neujahrslied [144].

Missa Sacra [147]; Requiem [148]. Motet, Verzweifelte nicht [93].

For mixed voices—Spanisches Lieder-spiel [74]; Der deutsche Rhein (with solo); 33 others [55, 59, 67, 75, 141, 145–6].

18 part-songs for women's voices [29, 69, 91, 114], 24 do. for men's voices [33, 62, 65 (canons), 137].

Songs and Duets

Myrthen (26) [25]; Frauenliebe und Leben [42]; Dichterliebe (16) [48]; Belsazar [57]; Lieder-Album (28, for children) [79]; Der Handschuh [87]; Schön Hedwig [106]; Husarenlieder (4) [117]; Spanische Liebeslieder [138]; about 160 others [24, 27, 30–1, 35–7, 40, 45, 49, 51, 53, 64, 77, 83, 89, 90, 95–6, 98a, 101, 104, 107, 119, 122, 125, 127, 135, 142].

About 15 duets [34, 43, 78, 103].

The standard edition of his works, edited by his wife, was issued by Breitkopf & Härtel in 1886–93, with a supplement edited by Brahms. His articles in the Neue Zeitschrift are gathered as Gesammelte Schriften über Musik u. Musiker, 4 vols. 1854 (5th ed. 1914, edited by Kreisig). Selected letters have been published by his wife, 1885 (4th ed. 1912), Jansen, 1886 (2d ed. 1904), Gensel, 1892, and Störck, 1896. Memoirs by Wasielewski, 1858 (4th ed. 1906), Reissmann, 1865, (3d ed. 1879), La Mara, 1868, Niggli, 1879, Spitta, 1882 (in Waldersee's Vorträge), Fullert-Maitland, 1884 (2d ed. 1913), Erler, 2 vols. 1887 (2d ed. 1912), Reimann, 1887, Batka, 1892, Abert, 1903 (2d ed. 1910), Patterson, 1903, Schneider and Maréchal, 1905, Oldmeadow, 1905, Maclaure, 1906, Wolff, 1906, Hartog, 1910, Steiner, 1911, Calvocoressi, 1912, Dahms, 1916, and Von der Pforten, 1920, besides numerous articles, biographical and critical. G.

Schumann-Heink, Ernestine, née Rössler (n. Prague, 1861). Eminent Austrian-Bohemian operatic soprano, pupil of her mother (an Italian), Marietta von Leclair, Krebs and Wüllner, when but eleven gaining notice as singer at the Ursuline Convent in Prague and at fifteen appearing at Gratz in concert. From 1878 she sang at the Dresden Opera, from 1883 with rapidly increasing fame at the Hamburg Opera (from 1896 regularly also at Bayreuth) and in 1898 began a ten-years' contract with the Berlin Opera, until 1902 with leave in the winters to sing at the Metropolitan, New York, but then chose to remain in America, after 1904 devoting herself mainly to concert-tours, though with some brilliant stage-appearances there and in Europe (1908–09). Her répertoire extends to at least 150 operas and she is also renowned as an interpreter of song-literature. She has been thrice married, to Ernst Heink in 1882, to Paul Schumann in 1893 (d. 1904) and to William Rapp in 1905 (divorced 1914). G. A.

Schünemann, Georg (Berlin, 1884). Prussian musicologist, trained at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin) and Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1907), since 1919 on the faculty of Berlin University and in 1920 temporarily head of the Hochschule. Author of Das Taktschlagen in d. Mensuralmusik, 1907, Mozart als achtjähriger Komponist, 1908, an able Gesch. d. Dirigierens, 1913, and Der Berliner Tonkünstlerverein, 1919, besides many valuable articles in periodicals and the editing of two oratorios by J. C. F. Bach (with biography) for the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst. During the World War he was appointed to study the songs of prisoners taken by the Germans (see Kasantatarische Lieder in Archiv für Musikwissenschaft. 1918, expanded in 1922), etc.

Schunke, Ludwig (Kassel, 1810–1834, Leipzig). Gifted Hessian pianist, pupil of his father, Kalkbrenner and Reicha, beginning successful tours when but eleven and especially after 1824. In 1833 he came to Leipzig and joined Schumann in the Neue Zeitschrift, but died soon after. Wrote a sonata and other works of great promise. G.

Schuppan, Adolf (Berlin, 1863). Prussian composer of a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, a viola-fantasie, 2 piano-suites, etc.

Schuppanzigh, Ignaz (Vienna, 1776–1830, do.). Noted Austrian violinist, in 1794 for a time teacher of Beethoven and from 1792 leader of the youthful Quartet maintained by Prince Carl Lichnovsky. In 1798–99 he conducted the concerts at the Augarten (started in 1782 by Martin and Mozart). In 1808–16 he led the famous Rasumovsky Quartet, interpreting for the first time many of Beethoven's chamber-works, and in 1816–23 toured with it in Germany and Russia, then returning to Vienna, where from 1824 he played in the court-orchestra and from 1828 was conductor at the German Opera. Besides his long intimacy with Beethoven, from 1823 he was associated with Schubert. G.

Schuré, Édouard (Strasburg, 1841). Able Alsatian literary scholar, trained at Strasburg University, since 1867 living in Paris. Author of Histoire du Lied, 1868 (4th ed. 1900), Le Drame Musical, 1875 (5th ed. 1902), Souvenirs sur Wagner, 1900, and Précurseurs et Révoltés, 1904, besides several non-musical works. Sketches by Mainor, 1905, and Roux and Veysié, 1913.

Schürer, Johann Georg (Raudnitz, 1720–1786, Dresden). Bohemian composer, from 1748 court-composer at Dresden, writing 40 masses, 3 Requiems, 140 Psalms, 3 oratorios, a German singspiel (1747), 4 Italian operas (1746–48), etc.

Schuricht, Karl (Danzig, 1880). Gifted Prussian conductor, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, from about 1900 directing concerts and opera at Zwickau, Dortmund, Kreutznach, Goslar and Frankfort (Rühlscher Gesangverein), besides from 1912 serving as conductor of the Kur-Orchester at Wiesbaden and town-director. Has written a piano-sonata, Drei Herbststücke (also for orchestra), other piano-pieces and some songs.

Schurig, Arthur (Dresden, 1870). Saxon artillery-officer, since 1904 engaged in historical studies, preparing a good life of Mozart (1913, 2 vols.), editing Leopold Mozart's travel-notes (1920) and writing essays on Stendhal, Balzac and others.

Schurig, Volkmar Julius Wilhelm (Aue, 1822-1899, Dresden). Saxon church-musician, pupil of Fr. Schneider, J. Otto and Uhlig, in 1842-52 choir-master at the Synagogue in Dresden and also till 1856 organist at the English Church, in 1856-61 cantor and organist at Presburg and then teaching in Dresden, in 1873-93 being also cantor at the Annenkirche. Wrote several organ-works, motets, choruses, sacred duets and solos, children's songs, etc. Schürmann, Georg Kaspar (?1672-1751). 17th C. G.

Schuster, Bernhard (Berlin, 1870). Prussian editor and publisher, from about 1890 opera-conductor at Magdeburg and Berlin, since 1901 founder and editor of Die Musik and from 1905 also in the publishing-firm of Schuster & Loeffler (dissolved in 1915). Has written a symphony, a suite for small orchestra, a string-quartet, a Psalm, 2 books of songs and 2 operas, including Der Jungbrunnen, 1920.

Schuster, Joseph (Dresden, 1748-1812, do.). Saxon conductor and composer, pupil of Schürer and Martini, with three long sojourns in Italy, from 1772 holding the title of court-composer at Dresden and from 1781 associated there with Naumann, Schürer and Seydelmann as conductor in church and theater, from 1787 sharing with the latter the post of court-director. Wrote about 25 operas (1770-1800, 4 in German), many of them for Italian stages, 5 oratorios, several cantatas (as Das Lob der Musik), a mass, symphonies, piano-concertos, 6 string-quartets, violin- and piano-pieces, etc.

Schütt, Eduard (Petrograd, 1856). Eminent German-Russian pianist and composer, pupil of the Petrograd and Leipzig Conservatories and of Leschetizky, from 1880 making brilliant tours with Neruda and Auer, in 1881 succeeding Mottl as conductor of the Akademischer Wagner-Verein in Vienna, occasionally making concert-trips elsewhere. Has written the comic opera Signor Formica, 1892, 2 piano-concertos, a serenade for strings, a piano-quartet, 2 piano-trios, Walzermärchen for piano-trio, a violin-sonata, 3 violin-suites, an Andante und Scherzino for two pianos, many characteristic piano-pieces and songs. G.

Schütz, Heinrich (1585-1672). 17th C. G.

Schwalm, Robert (Erfurt, 1845-1912, Königsberg). Able Thuringian choral conductor and composer, pupil of Pflughaupt and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1870 active at Elbing and from 1875 leader of the Sängerverein at Königsberg and in 1878-84 of the Philharmonie, gaining the title of royal professor in 1897. Wrote the opera Frauenlob, 1885, the oratorios Die Hochzeit zu Kana and Der Jüngling zu Nain, many striking men's choruses with orchestra or a cappella, Psalm 100, the ballade Das Gewitter, a string-serenade, Konzertstücke for violin and for 'cello, piano-pieces and songs.

Schwabenberg, Johann Gottfried (Wolfenbüttel, 1740-1804, Brunswick). North German conductor and composer, pupil of Latilla and Saratelli, with direction also from Hasse, whose style he imitated, from 1762 court-director at Brunswick. Wrote about a dozen Italian operas, the prologue Der Ausspruch des Apollo, 1794, cantatas, concertos for violin and for piano, etc.

Schwantzer, Hugo (Oberglöck, 1829-1886, Berlin). Silesian organist, trained at the Institut für Kirchenmusik at Berlin, from 1852 organist at synagogues there, in 1856-69 teacher at the Stern Conservatory and from about 1870 head of his own Musikinstitut.

Schwartz, Rudolf (Berlin, 1859). Prussian musicologist, educated at Berlin and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. 1892), in 1887-97 leader of the Greifswald Liedertafel and then at Leipzig, where from 1901 he has edited the Jahrbuch Peters and had charge of the Bibliothek Peters. Author of important monographs on the frottole (1886), H. L. Hassler (1892), Das erste deutsche Oratorium (1898), Die Tonkunst im 19. Jahrh. (1900) and Zur Gesch. d. Taktschlagens (1907), besides a fresh catalogue for the Bibliothek (1910, one vol.) and an index for the Vierteljahrsschrift (1895). He has also contributed to the German and Bavarian Denkmäler.

Schwarz, Max (Hanover, 1856). Able North German pianist, pupil of Bendel, Von Bülow and Liszt, in 1880-83 teacher at the Hoch Conservatory and then founder and director of the Raff Conservatory there.

Schwedler, Otto Maximilian (Hirschberg, 1853). Fine Silesian flutist, pupil of Meinel, from 1872 playing in orchestras at Warmbrunn, Meissen, Königsberg and Düsseldorf, and since 1881 at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig (in 1895 succeeding Barge), besides teaching at the Conservatory. In 1885 he invented an improved form of flute, later put on sale by Kruspe. Has written transcriptions, a method and a Katechismus d. Flöte u. d. Flötenspiels, 1897 (2d ed. 1910).

Schweitzer, Albert (n. Colmar, 1875). Eminent Alsatian theologian, physician and organist, variously educated at Strasburg, Paris and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1899, Lic. Theol. 1900, both Strasburg), pupil in music of Eugen and Ernst Munk and Widor, from 1902 lecturer and from 1913 adjunct-professor at Strasburg, meanwhile taking medical studies (M.D. 1912), then going as medical missionary under the Mission Évangélique to West Africa (French Kongo). During the war he was interned as a German subject, returning to France when released. His musical activities have largely arisen from his interest in Bach. From 1896 he was organist at Bach concerts in Strasburg and from 1906 also for those of the Société Bach in Paris. Author of an important life of Bach (1905, 2d ed. 1915) and editor (with Widor) of a fresh edition of his organ-works (from 1912, 5 vols. thus far). He is also an expert on organ-making, in 1909 acting as chairman of that section of the I. M. G. Congress at Vienna (paper on Die Reform unseres Orgelbaues) and author of Deutsche u. französische Orgelbaukunst u. Orgelkunst, 1906. His chief theological book is Das Messianitäts- u. Leidensgeheimnis, eine Skizze d. Lebens Jesu, 1901. See also the Hibbert Journal, 1914, for sketch of his missionary work. A.

Schweitzer, Anton (Coburg, 1735–1787, Gotha). Saxon conductor, as a youth singer and violist at the Hildburghausen court, where, after two years in Italy, he was in 1766–69 court-director. From 1769 he was conductor for the Seyler opera-troupe, which in 1772–74 was established at Weimar. Moving to Gotha, from 1780 he was court-director there (following Benda). Wrote 4 very popular singspiele (from 1770), the serious operas with German texts (the first of their class) Alceste, 1773, and Rosamunde, 1780, the monodrama Polyxena, 1793, cantatas and symphonies. Memoir by Maurer, 1912.

Schwemmer, Heinrich (1621–1696). 17th C. G.

Schwencke, Christian Friedrich Gottlieb (in the Harz, 1767–1822, Hamburg). North German church-musician, pupil of Marpurg and Kirnberger, appearing as clavierist when not yet twelve, competing for one of the Hamburg organs in 1783 and from 1789 town-cantor there and choirmaster at the Katharinenkirche (following K. P. E. Bach). Wrote 2 oratorios, cantatas, much church-music, 6 organ-fugues, sonatas for violin and for clavier, etc., besides rescoring Handel's Messiah and Hasse's Te Deum in D and contributing to the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung. G.

Schwencke, Johann Friedrich (Hamburg, 1792–1852, do.), son of the above. From 1829 organist at the Nikolaikirche in Hamburg and noted also as 'cellist and clarinetist. Wrote over 500 preludes and postludes, many cantatas, harmonies for about 1000 chorales and for 73 Russian folk-songs, a septet for 5 'cellos, double-bass and timpani, arrangements from Spohr, etc., besides editing the Hamburg Choralbuch, 1832. His son Friedrich Gottlieb (1823–1896) was also a remarkable organist, in 1852 succeeding his father at the Nikolaikirche. In 1855 he gave recitals in Paris. G.

Schwencke, Karl (Hamburg, 1797–?), brother of the above. Both organist and excellent pianist, from about 1820 successful in Petrograd, Stockholm and Paris and finally living near Vienna. Wrote a mass, a symphony (both given in Paris), a violin-sonata, 3 piano-sonatas (4 hands), etc. In 1824 Beethoven wrote a canon for him. Memoir in the Hamburg Korrespondent, 1884–85. G.

Schwickerath, Eberhard (Solingen, 1856). Able Rhenish choral conductor, trained at first as a lawyer, then pupil of Seiss, G. Jensen, Door and Bruckner, from 1882 director of two a cappella choruses at Cologne and teacher at the Conservatory, from 1887 highly honored as town-director at Aix, where he also formed an a cappella chorus and led several of the Lower Rhine Festivals, and since 1912 head of the Munich Conservatory, still continuing his choral activities.

Schwindel, Friedrich (?–1786, Karlsruhe). Silesian (?) violinist, about 1770 at The Hague, then at Geneva and Mülhausen, finally becoming court-concertmaster at Karlsruhe. Wrote numerous symphonies, quartets and trios in the style of the Mannheim school. G.

Schytte, Henrik Vissing (Aarhus, 1827–1909, Copenhagen), brother of the following. Danish 'cellist and critic, writing for several papers and in 1884–93 editing the Musikbladet, besides a useful Nordisk Musiklexikon, 1882–95.

Schytte, Ludvig Theodor (Aarhus, 1850–1909, Berlin), brother of the above. Gifted Danish pianist and composer, pupil of Rée, Neupert, Gebauer, Gade, Taubert and Liszt, from 1887 teaching in Vienna (at first at the Horák Institute) and from 1907 at Berlin. As composer he was most successful in short, picturesque pieces. Wrote the short operas Hero, 1898, Der Mameluk, 1903, Der Student von Salamanka, 1909, and Fahrendes Volk (not given), a piano-concerto, a Barcarolle for piano and strings, Petites Suites Faciles for piano-trio, 3 Scènes Orientales for violin, a piano-sonata, 6 sonatinas, the suite Pizza del Popolo, Promenades Musicales, Mondscheinwanderungen, Rapsodie Norvégienne, Aus froher Kinderzeit, Spanische Nächte, Valse Piquante, Waldbilder, Aus der Heimat und Fremde and numerous brilliant and original studies, besides, for 4 hands, Bajaderentänze, Musikalische Wandelbilder, Reiseblätter, Kindersymphonie and Kindersuite, and various songs, including the cycle Der Verlassene. G.

Scontrino, Antonio (Trapani, 1850–1922, Florence). Eminent Sicilian double-bassist and composer, trained at the Palermo and Munich Conservatories, in 1870–72 touring as soloist and in 1874–75 playing with Mapleson's troupe in London, from 1875 teacher in Milan, in 1891–92 at the Palermo Conservatory and from 1892 at the Florence Istituto. Wrote the operas Matelda, 1879, Il Progettista, 1882 (short), Sortilegio, 1882, Gringoire, 1890 (short) and La Cortigiana, 1896, music for D'Annunzio's Francesca da Rimini, overture to Marenco's Celeste, the symphonies Marinaresca and Romantica, a concerto for double-bass, 3 string-quartets, Preludio e Fuga for quartet, many pieces for violin, for 'cello and for double-bass, a Gloria (8-part fugue for soli), over 50 songs, including the cycles La Vie Intérieure and Intima Vita, and piano-pieces. G.

Scott, Cyril Meir (Oxten, Cheshire, 1879). Eminent English composer of the impressionist school, pupil of the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfort), since 1900 living at Liverpool. He has lectured and written much on occult philosophy and its application in music and on the relation of tones and colors. Has written 2 symphonies (the 2d revised as Orchestral Dances), a Heroic Suite, the overtures Pelléas et Mélisande, Princess Maleine, Aglavaine et Sélysette and Christmas (with chorus), 2 orchestral Rhapsodies, an Aubade, an Arabesque and 2 Passacaglias on Irish Themes, a piano-concerto, a piano-sextet, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, the violin-suite Tallahassee, a piano-sonata, 2 piano-suites, a Handelian Rhapsody, many pieces, the opera The Alchemist, the scenas La Belle Dame sans Merci and Fair Helen of Kirkconnel and many songs. Author of The Philosophy of Modernism and seven books of poems. Biography by Hull, 1918, and various sketches in magazines. G. A.

Scott, Henri Guest (Coatesville, Pa. 1876). Gifted American operatic bass, pupil of Saenger, making his début in 1909 in New York with the Manhattan Company, in 1910-11 at the Adriano in Rome, in 1912-14 with the Chicago Company and from 1915 at the Metropolitan, New York. A.

Scott-Gatty, Alfred (Ecclesfield, 1847-1919, London). English specialist in heraldry and composer of 2 operettas, 3 children's plays and many popular songs (words often original). He was knighted in 1904.

Scotti, Antonio (Naples, 1866). Famous Italian operatic bass, pupil of Mme. Trifari Paganini, in 1889 appearing at Malta, in Italy and then in South America, from 1899 regularly at both Covent Garden, London, and the Metropolitan, New York, his versatility and histrionic genius giving him great success. Since 1919 he has toured in America with his own companies. G. A.

Scotto family. 15-16th Cs.

Scriabin [Skriabin], Alexander Nikolaievitch (Moscow, 1872-1915, do.). Eminent Russian pianist and composer, pupil of the Moscow Conservatory, where, after living from 1892 in Paris, Brussels and Amsterdam, he taught in 1898-1903. Though in his early works for piano he exhibited a notable refinement of idea and expression, from about 1905 he steadily drifted into impressionistic paths and even into the most radical revolt against conventional forms and methods. But his experiments with mystical types of expression were directed by thorough conviction and great ingenuity, so that the results are often impressive and even beautiful. He was fanatical in his emphasis on the relation of colors (and even perfumes) to musical effect. In 1907 he visited America and in 1914 England. Wrote 3 symphonies (in E, with chorus, C-min. and C, Le Divin Poème), Le Poème de l'Extase, Prométhée, le Poème du Feu, a piano-concerto, 10 piano-sonatas (6 being in his peculiar harmonic system, without fixed tonality), 3 noc-turnes, a Fantaisie, Poème Satanique, 8 sets of preludes, mazurkas, impromptus, etc.—in all 70 opus-nos. Memoirs by Lipiaiev, 1913, Hull, 1916, etc., and see the latter's Modern Harmony, 1914. [His Prométhée, which involves the use of color-effects through a 'color-keyboard', was produced according to the composer's intentions by the Russian Symphony Orchestra under Altschuler in New York in 1915, though without satisfactory impression.] G. A.

Scribe, Eugène (Paris, 1791-1861, do.). Exceedingly prolific and popular French dramatist, novelist and writer of librettos for operas and lesser musical stage-works. The best of Auber's, Meyerbeer's and Halévy's operas were written to his texts, as those of many other composers. In all, he provided over 100 texts. See his Œuvres, 1874-85. G.

Scudo, Paolo (Venice, 1806-1864, Blois). Italian critic in Paris, author of various collections of essays and annals (from 1850), the musical novel Le Chevalier Sarti, 1857 (and its sequel Frédérique), and many fugitive articles. G.

Seagle, Oscar (Chattanooga, Tenn. 1877). American baritone, pupil of Jean de Reszké, favorably known in the United States from 1896 and from 1907 in Europe. For some years he was De Reszké's assistant, but since 1914 has lived in New York. He is specially noted as a lieder-singer.

Search, Frederick Preston (Pueblo, Colo. 1889). Able American 'cellist, pupil of J. Adamowski, Mattioli and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1910-12 playing at the Gewandhaus under Nikisch, then touring in America, in 1915-16 with the American Orchestra in Chicago and in 1916-17 with the Chicago Opera Company. Has written a Romantic Symphony, an overture (1915), incidental music for plays, a string-sextet, 4 string-quartets, an Aztec Dance for quartet, 2 'cello-sonatas, about 20 songs, etc. A.

Seashore, Carl Emil (Mörlunda, 1866). Notable Swedish psychologist, educated wholly in America (Ph.D. 1895, Yale Univ.), from 1895 instructor at Yale University and since 1902 professor at Iowa State University (Iowa City). He has specialized in problems of musical psychology, conducting extensive investigations on novel lines and with many ingenious instruments. Author of The Psychology of Musical Talent, 1917, and many monographs in the Univ. of Iowa Studies in Psychology and in periodicals. A.

Sebald, Alexander (Pest, 1869). Eminent Hungarian violinist, trained at the Pest Academy and by Thomson, from about 1890 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra and Quartet at Leipzig, from 1903 touring widely in Europe and America (from 1910), besides from 1907 directing his own school in Berlin, where he gained the title of professor in 1913. From 1914 he was for a time concertmaster for the Chicago Opera. Author of a Geigentechnik, some pieces and songs.

Sebastiani, Johann (1622-1683). 17th C. G.

Šebor, Karel [Karl] (Brandeis, 1843–1903, Prague). Bohemian bandmaster and composer, pupil of the Prague Conservatory and of Kittl, in 1864–67 conductor at the National Opera there and from 1871 in army-service at Vienna. Wrote the Czech operas The Templars in Moravia, 1864, Drahomíra, 1867, The Hussite Bride, 1868, Blanka, 1870, and The Frustrated Wedding, 1878, symphonies, overtures, a quintet, a quartet, cantatas, songs, etc.

Sechter, Simon (Friedberg, 1788–1867, Vienna). Distinguished Bohemian organist, theorist and composer, pupil of Koželuch, from 1811 teacher at the Blind Institute in Vienna, from 1825 court-organist and from 1851 professor at the Conservatory, training many famous pupils (such as Preyer, Rufinatscha, Bruckner, Vieuxtemps, Pauer, Thalberg, etc.). He was not only a skillful teacher, but a most industrious composer, usually in intricate contrapuntal forms. Wrote 4 oratorios, cantatas, a large amount of church-music, many organ-fugues, preludes, etc., many contrapuntal piano-pieces (including some humorous fugues) and dances, 2 string-quartets, comic operettas, the burlesque opera Ali Hutsch-Hatsch, 1844, songs, etc. One set of piano-fugues is dedicated to Beethoven and a fugue to Schubert; he also completed Mozart's unfinished orchestral fugue in D. His chief theoretical work is the Grundsätze d. musikal. Composition, 3 vols. 1853–54 (based in general on Rameau), besides a revised edition of Marpurge's Abhandlung von d. Fuge. Memoir by Pohl, 1868, and see monograph on his theory by Capellen, 1902. G.

Seckendorff, Karl Siegmund, Freiherr von (Erlangen, 1744–1785, Ansbach). Bavarian soldier (in Austrian service) and diplomat (for Saxony and Prussia), in 1776–84 living at Weimar in intimacy with Goethe. Wrote the operas Lila, 1776, Proserpina, 1778, and Jery und Bätely, 1780, 12 string-quartets, 3 piano-trios, violin- and piano-pieces (in the Mannheim style) and notable Volks- und andere Lieder, 3 sets, 1779–82 (new ed. by Friedländer, 1916). Memoir by Knab, 1913.

Sedaine, Michel (Paris, 1719–1797, do.). French architect, from 1752 author of many effective texts for the new French opéras comiques and similar stage-pieces. Memoir by Gisi, 1883, and selections from his works by Moland, 1878.

Sedie. See Delle Sedie.

Seeböck, Wilhelm Karl Ernst (Vienna, 1859–1907, Chicago). Austrian pianist, pupil of Grädener, Epstein, Grill, Nottebohm and Brahms, with help from Rubinstein, from 1881 teacher and organist in Chicago. Wrote 2 piano-concertos, a piano-quintet, 2 piano-sonatas, variations for two pianos, concert-études and over 200 songs, besides 2 operas (not given). A.

Seeger, Charles Louis (Mexico City, 1886). American teacher and composer, educated at Harvard University and in Europe, in 1910–11 assistant-conductor at the Cologne Opera and in 1912–21 professor at the University of California (Berkeley). Has written the overture Shadowy Waters, the masques Dedra, 1914, and The Queen's Masque, 1915, chamber-music (including a violin-sonata) and about 25 songs. Author (with Stricklen) of 2 text-books in harmony (1913, '16). A.

Seegr [Segert], Joseph Ferdinand Norbert (n. Melnik, 1716–1782, Prague). Famous Bohemian organist, pupil of Czernohorsky, from about 1725 at St. Martin's in Prague, from 1735 violinist and from 1741 organist at the Teyn-kirche and also from 1745 at the Kreuzherrenstift, besides teaching many notable pupils (Koželuch, Mysliweczek, Gelinek, etc.). Wrote many masses, Psalms, litanies, etc., and 8 organ-toccatas and fugues. G.

Seeling, Hans [Hanus] (Prague, 1828–1862, do.). Able Bohemian pianist, from 1852 appearing in Italy, in 1856–57 in the Orient and from 1859 at Paris and in Germany. Wrote brilliant piano-pieces and études. G.

Seghers, François Jean Baptiste (Brussels, 1801–1881, n. Paris). Belgian violinist, pupil of Gensse and Baillot, in 1828 one of the promoters of the Conservatory Concerts at Paris and in 1848 founder of the Société Ste.-Cécile (conductor till 1854), giving notable choral and orchestral performances.

Segnitz, Eugen (Leipzig, 1862). Saxon critic and writer, pupil of Papperitz and Paul, long on the staff of the Leipzig Tageblatt. Author of lives of Reinecke (1900), Nikisch (1920) and Reger (1921), Wagner u. Leipzig, 1901, Liszt u. Rom, 1901, Goethe u. d. Oper in Weimar, 1908, Liszt's Kirchenmusik, 1911, and several analyses for the Musikführer.

Segond, L. A. French physician at Paris, author of essays on vocal hygiene (1846) and lectures on the mechanism of phonation (1859).

Seguin, Arthur Edward Sheldon (London, 1809–1852, New York). Irish-English bass, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, from 1828 appearing in concert and from 1833 in opera (Covent Garden, Drury Lane), in 1838 removing to New York, where, with his wife, née Ann Childe (1814–1888), he later formed an operatroupe that toured in the United States and Canada. After his death Mrs. Seguin became a teacher in New York. G, A.

Seidel, Friedrich Ludwig (Treuenbrietzen, 1765–1831, Charlottenburg). Prussian conductor and composer, pupil of Friedrich Benda and protégé of Reichardt, from 1792 organist at the Marienkirche, from 1801 B. A. Weber's assistant at the National-Theater, from 1808 conductor of the court-orchestra and in 1822–30 court-director. Wrote the singspiel Claudine von Villabella, the operas Jery und Bätely, Der Dorfbarbier, 1817, and Lila, 1818, the oratorio Die Unsterblichkeit, 1797, much church-music, piano-pieces and songs.

Seidel, Johann Julius (Breslau, 1810–1856, do.). Silesian organist, from 1837 at the Christ-

ophskirche in Breslau, author of Die Orgel u. ihr Bau, 1843 (4th ed. 1887, edited by Kothe).

Seidel, Toscha (Odessa, 1900). Gifted Russian violinist, pupil of Max and Alex. Fiedemann and Auer, making his début in 1915 at Christiania, then touring in Scandinavia (partly with Auer) and in 1918 going with him to America.

Seidl, Anton (Pest, 1850–1898, New York). Distinguished Hungarian conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1872 engaged as chorusmaster for the Vienna Opera under Richter, but transferred to Bayreuth as Wagner's helper in preparing the scores for the Ring premières, at which he assisted. In 1879 he became associated with Angelo Neumann at the Leipzig Opera, participated in the latter's representations there and elsewhere of the Ring dramas and in 1883–85 was conductor under his management at the Bremen Opera, and there married the soprano Auguste Krauss. In 1885 he came to the Metropolitan, New York, to succeed Damrosch, continuing there in the highest regard except in 1892–95, when German operas were not given. He directed the American premières of all the later Wagnerian works (from Die Meistersinger in 1886 to the Ring complete in 1889). From 1891 he was also conductor of the Philharmonic and in 1897 appeared as guest-conductor at Covent Garden, London, and at Bayreuth. His masterly interpretations of Wagner not only gave him fame, but had permanent influence in establishing the Wagnerian style in public favor. Memoirs by Krehbiel, 1898, and (anonymous), 1899. G. A.

Seidl, Arthur (Munich, 1863). Eminent Bavarian literary scholar, trained at the Heffner Music School in Ratisbon, the Munich Conservatory and Tübingen, Berlin and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. 1887), with much special music-study, in 1888–90 visiting German and Austrian libraries, in 1890–93 and '98–99 engaged in literary work at Weimar, from 1893 critic at Dresden, in 1897–98 at Hamburg and from 1899 for the Neueste Nachrichten at Munich. In 1903–19 he served as music-dramaturgist at the Dessau Opera and in 1904–09 lectured on history and aesthetics at the Leipzig Conservatory. Author of Vom Musikalisch-Erhabenen, 1887 (2d ed. 1907), Zur Gesch. d. Erhabenheitsbegriffs seit Kant, 1889, Hat Wagner eine Schule hinterlassen?, 1892, a character-study of Strauss (1896, with Klatte), Moderner Geist in d. deutschen Tonkunst, 1900 (2d ed. 1912), Wagneriana, 3 vols. 1901–02, Moderne Dirigenten, 1902, Kunst u. Kultur, 1902, Festschrift for the Jubilee of the Allgem. deutsche Musikverein, 1911, Die Hellerauer Schulfest u. d. Bildungsanstalt Jacques-Dalcroze, 1912, Ascania (ten years in Anhalt), 1913, Wagners Parsifal, 1914, Neue Wagneriana, 3 vols. 1914, Zur modernen Tonkunst, 2 vols. 1914, Zur Musikdramaturgie, 2 vols. 1914–15, and Lisztiana, 1914 (edited from Lina Ramann's papers). Since 1917 he has edited the book-series Die Musik (begun in 1904 by Strauss). In 1904 he gained the title of professor. Sketch by Frankenstein, 1913.

Seifert, Uso (n. Hildburghausen, 1852–1912, Dresden). Saxon piano-teacher, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory and from about 1875 teacher there. In his later years he was organist at the Reformed Church. Wrote an overture, many notable organ-pieces, piano-pieces and a method, men's choruses and songs.

Seiffert, Max (Beeskow, 1868). Eminent Prussian musicologist, trained at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1891) and since then diligently active as writer and editor. Author of a thesis on Sweelinck and his pupils (1891), Gesch. d. Klaviermusik, 1899–1901 (issued as 3d ed. of Weitzmann's book, but really original), and Ein Archiv für deutsche Musikgeschichte, 1914, besides important contributions to the many works that he has edited for the German, Bavarian, Austrian and Dutch Denkmäler. In 1904–14 he edited the I. M. G. Sammelbde. and since 1918 the Archiv für Musikwissenschaft. He is engaged on the completion of the biography of Handel begun by Chrysander. Since 1907 he has been royal professor and from 1914 member of the Akademie. G.

Seifriz, Max (Rottweil, 1827–1885, Stuttgart). Württemberger violinist, pupil of Täglichsbeck, from 1841 in the Hechingen court-band, from 1849 at the Zurich Opera, in 1857 court-director at Löwenberg (to Prince Hohenzollern) and from 1870 court-director at Stuttgart. Wrote music for Die Jungfrau von Orleans, a symphony, an overture, the cantata Ariadne auf Naxos, many choruses and a violin-method (with E. Singer).

Seiler, Emma (Würzburg, 1821–?, Philadelphia). Bavarian singing-teacher, pupil of Wieck and Helmholtz, becoming a recognized vocal specialist. In 1866 she removed to Philadelphia and opened a school. Author of Altes u. Neues über d. Ausbildung d. Gesangorgans, 1861, The Voice in Singing, 1869, and The Voice in Speaking, 1875. A.

Seiss, Isidor Wilhelm (Dresden, 1840–1905, Cologne). Saxon pianist, pupil of Wieck, Jul. Otto and Hauptmann, making some tours, from 1871 a valued teacher at the Cologne Conservatory, besides conducting the Musikalische Gesellschaft (till 1900). Wrote many effective piano-pieces and arrangements, an orchestral Feierliche Szene und Marsch, a 'cello-adagio and an opera. G.

Seitz, Friedrich [Fritz] (n. Gotha, 1848). Saxon violinist, pupil and son-in-law of Uhlrich, with further study under Lauterbach, from about 1875 active at Sondershausen and Magdeburg and since 1884 concertmaster of the Dessau court-orchestra. Has written a piano-quartet and various pieces for violin and for 'cello.

Séjan, Nicolas (Paris, 1745–1819, do.). Noted French organist, pupil of Forqueray, from 1760 at St.-André-des-Arts, from 1772 one of four players at Notre-Dame and from 1783 at St.-Sulpice, besides from 1789 serving at the Chapelle Royale and teaching at the École Royale. The Revolution deprived him all of these posts. But from 1807 he was at the Invalides and from 1814 again at the Chapelle Royale. Wrote some piano-trios, violin- and piano-sonatas, etc. His son Louis (1786–1849) succeeded him at St-Sulpice and the Chapelle Royale.

Sekles, Bernhard (Frankfort, 1872). Hessian composer, trained at the Hoch Conservatory and from 1896 teacher there (after service from 1893 as theater-conductor at Heidelberg and Mayence). Has written the opera Schahrazade, 1917, the dance-play Der Zwerg und die Infantin, 1913, the burlesque Die Hochzeit des Faun, 1921, the symphonic poem Aus den Gärten der Semiramis, the orchestral Kleine Suite and Die Temperamente, a serenade for eleven instruments, a Passacaglia and Fugue for string-quartet, a 'cello-sonata, piano-pieces, men's and women's choruses and many songs, besides a text-book in dictation (1905).

Selby, Bertram Luard (Ightham, 1853–1918, Rochester). Able English organist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1881–83 playing at Salisbury Cathedral, from 1884 in Torquay, from 1886 at St. Barnabas (Pimlico) in London and in 1900–16 at Rochester Cathedral, following John Hopkins. Wrote the operas The Ring, 1886, and Adela, 1888, music for Helena in Troas (1886), an operetta or duologue (1896), an orchestral Idyll, 1897, 2 piano-quintets, a violin-suite and sonata, a piano-suite and many pieces, excellent organ-pieces, services, anthems, part-songs, songs and a school-cantata. G.

Selby, William (1738–1798, Boston). An English organist who came to America about 1771, from 1774 was at Trinity Church, Newport, and from 1777 at King's Chapel in Boston, where he long remained influential as player on both organ and harpsichord, teacher and concert-promoter. Wrote a harpsichord-concerto, a quartet-sonata, organ-pieces, anthems and songs. A.

Seligmann, Hippolyte Prosper (Paris, 1817–1882, Monte Carlo). Able French 'cellist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1840 making extensive tours. Wrote many violin-pieces and études and 2 sets of songs.

Selle, Thomas (1599–1663). 17th C.

Sellner, Joseph (Landau, 1787–1843, Vienna). Famous Bavarian oboist, from 1805 in Austrian military-bands, from 1811 at the National Opera at Prague, where he was associated with Weber and studied composition under Tomaschek, and from 1817 at the Vienna Opera, besides teaching at the Conservatory from 1821 and till 1838 leading the students' concerts there. Wrote an oboe-concerto, 3 concertinos, a double concerto, a quartet for oboe and strings, etc., and a superior Oboen-Schule, which is still standard.

Selmer, Johan (Christiania, 1844–1910, Venice). Eminent Norwegian composer, trained at the Paris and Leipzig Conservatories, with a governmental scholarship later. In 1883–86 he conducted the Philharmonic at Christiania and then devoted himself to composition, mostly abroad. Wrote the symphonic poem Prometheus, the suite In der Bergen, the orchestral Scène Funèbre, Nordischer Festzug, Finnländische Festklänge and Karneval in Flandern, the choral works Nordens Aand, Zug der Türken gegen Athen, Hilsen til Nidaros, and Der Selbstmörder und die Pilger, the solo-scenes Fortunios Lied, La Captive, Wunsch, Erwartung and poems by Shelley and Jacobsen, political songs for unison-chorus with orchestra, a cappella men's choruses, duets, many songs and folk-song arrangements. Sketch by P. Merkel, 1904.

Selnecker, Nikolaus (1528–1592). 16th C. G.

Sembach, Johannes (Berlin, 1881). Eminent Prussian operatic tenor, pupil of Wichmann, Irrgang, F. Schmidt and the Stern Conservatory (Berlin), serving as organist when but fourteen and from about 1900 becoming known in operettas, from 1903 at the Vienna Opera under Mahler, in 1907–13 at the Dresden Opera, with a visit to London in 1910 and a sojourn at Paris in 1911–12 for study with Jean de Reszké. From 1914 he became a favorite at Covent Garden, the Berlin Opera and the Metropolitan, New York. Besides his large operatic repertory he is noted as a finished lieder-singer. He sang at the premières of Grünfeld's Die Schönen von Fogaras (1907), Strauss' Elektra (1909), Kaskel's Der Gefangene der Zarin (1910), De Koven's Canterbury Pilgrims (1917), etc. Has written about 100 marches, dances and songs.

Sembrich, Marcella [Praxede Marcelline Kochanska] (Wisniewczyk, 1858), deriving her name Sembrich from her mother. Distinguished Galician (Polish) operatic soprano, precociously developed by her father as pianist and violinist and at the Lemberg Conservatory, at sixteen turning to vocal study under Rokitsansky, Stengel (whom she married in 1877) and the Lampertis. Her début in opera was at Athens in 1877, followed by engagements at Dresden in 1878–80, at Covent Garden, London, in 1880–85 and at the Metropolitan, New York, from 1884 till her retirement in 1909, but with numerous appearances elsewhere in all parts of Europe. Throughout her career she has been in constant request for oratorio and concert. Her voice is a singularly perfect and brilliant one, adapted to every demand of lyric and coloratura music. She has instinctively avoided the heavier rôles of Wagner, Verdi (in his later works) and the intensely dramatic school. Her song-repertory includes all leading works in many languages. During the World War she was prominent in Polish relief-work in New York. Her husband died in 1917. G, A.

Semet, Théophile Aimé Émile (Lille, 1824–1888, n. Paris). French light-opera composer, pupil of Halévy, for many years timpanist at the Opéra. Wrote Nuits d'Espagne, 1857, La Demoiselle d'Honneur, 1857, Gil Blas, 1860, Ondine, 1863, and La Petite Fadette, 1869, a cantata (1862), fine part-songs, songs, etc. G.

Senailié, Jean Baptiste (Paris, 1687-1730, do.). Able French violinist, pupil of Queversin, Baptiste Anet and Vitali, from about 1720 in the court-band at Paris. His playing and teaching helped to advance Italian standards in France. Wrote 50 sonatas (1710-27). G.

Senefelder, Alois (Prague, 1771-1834, Munich). Bohemian printer, with Gleissner the first to apply lithography commercially to music-printing. In 1799 he worked for André at Offenbach and in 1800 set up for himself at Vienna. Memoir by Pfeilschmidt, 1877.

Senesino [Francesco Bernardi] (Siena, 1680-1750?) Famous Italian artificial mezzo-soprano, pupil of Bernacchi, in 1719 appearing at Dresden and from 1720 in high favor in London, until 1733 under Handel. About 1735 he returned to Italy. G.

Senff, Bartholf Wilhelm (n. Coburg, 1815-1900, Badenweiler). Important Saxon music-publisher, trained under Kistner in Leipzig, in 1847 establishing his own business. From 1843 he issued the valuable Signale für die Musikalische Welt. In 1907 the business was purchased by Simrock. G.

Senfi, Ludwig (?1492-1555). 16th C. G.

Senger-Bettaque, Katharina (Berlin, 1862). Able Prussian operatic soprano, pupil of H. Dorn, in 1879 appearing at Berlin, in 1880-82 at Mayence, in 1883-84 at Leipzig, from 1884 at Rotterdam, in 1888-92 at Bremen, from 1893 at Hamburg, from 1895 at Munich (both Hofoper and Prinzregenten) and since 1906 at Stuttgart. In 1888-89 and 1904-05 she also sang at the Metropolitan, New York. She is specially successful in Wagnerian rôles. In 1895 she married the actor and manager Senger (d. 1902) and later the engineer Klein. She holds court-titles from Bavaria and Württemberg.

Senilov, Vladimir Alexeievitch (Vyatka, 1875). Russian composer, pupil of Riemann and the Petrograd Conservatory. Has written a symphony, 4 symphonic poems, an overture, a Poème for 'cello and orchestra, 2 string-quartets, choruses and solos with orchestra, 3 operas, songs, etc.

Senkrah [Arma Loretta Hoffmann, née Harkness] (New York, 1864-1900, Weimar). American violinist, pupil of Hilf, Wieniawski and Massart, from 1882 making successful tours in Europe. A.

Seppilli, Armando (b. 1860). Italian conductor and composer of the operas La Nave Rossa, 1907, and Cingallegra, 1912 (both at Milan), besides the early Andrea di Francia (1888, offered for the Sonzogno prize).

Serassi, Giuseppe (Bergamo, 1750-1817, do.). Noted Italian organ-maker, active in developing a business founded at Bergamo by his grandfather. He was followed by his two sons. Their output to 1815 was nearly 350 organs and by 1852 over 650, including the best in Italy.

Sérieux, Jean Marie Charles Auguste (Amiens, 1865). French theorist, originally trained in law, then pupil of Barthe, Gédalge and d'Indy, from 1900 assisting the latter at the Schola Cantorum and helping on his Cours de Composition (1903-09). Author of Les Trois États de la Tonalité, 1909, a sketch of d'Indy (1914) and many articles in periodicals. Has also written a violin-sonata (1904), the scena La Voie Lactée, organ- and piano-pieces, songs, etc. Sermisy, Claude de (?1490-1562). 16th C. G.

Serov [Sierov], Alexander Nikolaievitch (Petrograd, 1820-1871, do.). Gifted Russian critic and composer, educated as a lawyer and till about 1850 in the civil service, in music almost wholly self-taught. Even after entering on musical activity he still held posts in the Interior and Postal Offices. From 1851 he began writing articles extolling Western music and lamenting Russian nationalism, thus coming into sharp collision with his close friend Stasov and the New Russian group. Later he became a strong partisan of Wagner. In 1859 and '64 he lectured at Petrograd University, in 1865 at Moscow and in 1866 for the Imperial Musical Society. In 1863 his opera Judith at once set him in the front rank of national composers and it was shortly followed by others of less vigor during his few remaining years. His works include the operas Judith, 1863, Rognieda, 1865, The Power of Evil (completed by his wife, scored by Soloviev and given 1871) and sketches of Christmas Eve (later made into a suite by his wife), incidental music to Nero, an orchestral Danse Cosaque, a setting of Schiller's Lied von der Glocke, a Christmas Song, Ave Maria (1868, for Patti) and Stabat Mater, dances and an Overture d'une Comédie for piano (4 hands). His opera-librettos were original. Many of his essays were collected in 1892-95 (4 vols.). His letters to his sister were published in 1896. Memoir by Findeisen, 1900. G.

Serova [Sierova], Valentina Semenovna, née Bergmann (Moscow, 1846), wife of the above. Russian composer, for a time at the Petrograd Conservatory, then pupil of her future husband (married in 1867). Besides assisting him in both criticism and composition, wrote the operas Uriel Akosta, 1885, and Ilya Muromets, 1899, with 2 others not given. G.

Serpette, Henri Charles Antoine Gaston (Nantes, 1846-1904, Paris). French light-opera composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1871). Wrote about 30 operettas and other stage-works, from La Branche Cassée, 1874, to Le Carillon, 1896, and the cantata Jeanne d'Arc, 1871. G.

Serrão y Ruiz, Emilio (Victoria, 1850). Spanish conductor and composer, pianist to the Infanta Isabella (Countess Girgenti), long director of the Madrid Opera and professor at the Conservatory. Has written the operas Mitridates, 1882, Doña Juana la Loca, 1890, Irene de Otranto, 1891, and Gonzalo de Córdoba, 1898, and much piano-music. G.

Serrao, Paolo (Filadelfia, 1830-1907, Naples). Able Italian (Calabrian) composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory and from 1863 a valued teacher there. Wrote the operas Perigolesi, 1857, La Duchessa di Guisa, 1865, Il Figliuol Prodigio, 1868, and two not given, an oratorio, a mass, a Requiem and much other sacred music, a symphony in honor of Mercadante, an overture, etc.

Serre, Jean Adam (Geneva, 1704-?). Swiss painter and musical theorist, author of several essays on acoustics and harmony (1742-63), discussing the theories of Blainville, Rameau and others.

Servais, Adrien François (Hal, 1807-1866, do.). Eminent Belgian 'cellist, pupil of his father and the Brussels Conservatory, from about 1830 playing in the opera-orchestra, from 1834 touring as virtuoso throughout Europe and in Siberia, and after 1848 teaching at the Brussels Conservatory with marked success. He was sometimes called 'the Paganini of the 'cello'. Wrote 3 concertos, 16 fantasias with orchestra, many duos (with violin), études, etc. G.

Servais, François Matthieu (1852-1901, Asnières), adopted son of the above. Belgian pianist and conductor, active at Brussels in giving orchestral concerts and producing Wagner's Holländer and Siegfried at La Monnaie. His opera Yon, 1899 (Karlsruhe), the fruit of long effort, failed of success.

Servais, Joseph (Hal, 1850-1885, do.), son of Adrien above. Gifted 'cellist, pupil of his father, with whom he played in 1867, becoming soloist at Weimar in 1869-70 and from 1872 teacher at the Brussels Conservatory and playing in quartet with Hubay. Wrote a string-quartet. Both he and his father used a remarkable Stradivari, given to the former by Princess Yusupov. G.

Servièrès, Georges (Fréjus, 1858). French novelist and critic, author of works on Wagner (1887, '95), Weber (1906) and Chabrier (1911), La Musique Française Moderne, 1897, and Épisodes d'Histoire Musicale, 1914, besides able articles in periodicals and translations of the texts of Weber's Freischütz and Wagner's Tristan.

Setaccioli, Giacomo (Corneto, 1868). Important Italian composer, pupil of the Accademia S. Cecilia in Rome and later professor there. Has written the operas La Sorella di Mark, 1896, and Adriana Lecouvreur, 1907, a symphony, an orchestral fugue and Marcia Solenne, an Allegro for piano and orchestra, the symphonic poems La Morte di Garlo and Quadro Sinfonico (with chorus), a suite for strings and harp, a wind-nonet, a string-quartet, a prelude and fugue for organ, a Requiem in memory of Humbert I (1900), the choral work Cantica, a cappella motets, songs and piano-pieces. Author of Debussy è un Innovatore?, 1910, and a translation of Riemann's Harmonielehre (1906).

Sevčík, Otokar Josef (Horaždowitz, 1852). Eminent Bohemian violinist and teacher, pupil of his father and the Prague Conservatory, in 1870-73 concertmaster at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, in 1873-74 at the Theater an der Wien in Vienna, from 1875 teacher at the Kiev Music School, in 1892-1906 at the Prague Conservatory and from 1909 head of the Violin Master-School of the Vienna Academie, but has lately taught in the United States. He has attained extraordinary success with his pupils, using a method of great originality and thoroughness. Has written a series of text-books and studies that have had wide currency. G.

Sévérac, Déodat de (St. Félix de Caraman, 1873-1921, Céret). Gifted French composer, pupil of the Toulouse Conservatory and the Schola Cantorum in Paris, from 1907 active in Paris or at his birthplace. Wrote the operas Le Cœur du Moulin, 1909, Les Princesses d'Hokifari and L'Étudiant de Vich (both not given), music for Damard's Mirage (1905), Sicard's Héliogabale (1910), Navarre's Muguette (1911) and Verhaeren's Hélène de Sparte (1912), the symphonic poems Nymphes au Crépuscule, Tryptique, Les Grenouilles and Nausikaa, the orchestral suite Didon et Enée (lost), a serenade for flute and piano-sextet, the suite Le Parc aux Cerfs for oboe and piano-sextet, the suite Les Muses Sylvestres for piano and double quintet, an organ-suite, a piano-sonata, the piano-suites Le Chant de la Terre (7 movements), En Languedoc (5 do.) and Petite, other piano-pieces, songs and collections of folk-songs. He was active in the Société Nationale in furthering progressive ideas. Memoir by Moulin, 1922, and see Séré, Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui, 1911.

Severi, Francesco (?-1630). 17th C.

Severn, Edmund (Nottingham, 1862). Talented English violinist and composer, pupil in America of his father, Milcke, B. Listemann and Chadwick, then of Wirth and Ph. Scharwenka, from 1890 active at Springfield, Mass., as soloist and leader of quartets and choruses, and since 1897 living in New York, in 1900-07 often on tour and in 1907-14 lecturing for the Board of Education. Has written the symphonic poems Lancelot and Elaine, 1895, and Abelard and Héloïse, 1915, 2 overtures, an orchestral Polonaise and Gavotte, an orchestral fantasy on The Tempest, a violin-concerto, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio (1898), a violin-sonata, the violin-suites Oriental (1900), Italian (1904) and From Old New England (1912), a suite for two violins (1914), many violin-pieces and studies, the cantata Jephtha's Daughter, 1896, choruses, songs, etc., besides a method. A.

Seydel, Martin (n. Leipzig, 1871). Saxon vocal specialist, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1894) and from 1900 instructor there, gaining the title of professor in 1913. Author of Schopenhauers Metaphysik d. Musik, 1894, Ueber Stimme u. Sprache, 1902, and Grundfragen d. Stimmkunde, 1909.

Seydelmann, Franz (Dresden, 1748-1806, do.). Noted Saxon composer, pupil of his father, with Italian study (as protégé of the Elector), from 1772 one of the composers to the Dresden court (with Schuster), later in charge of the court-choir (with Naumann and Schuster) and from 1787 court-director, besides acting as cembalist at the Opera. Wrote several Italian operas, the singspiel Arsene, 1779, a Requiem, 36 masses, 40 Psalms, cantatas, duets, songs, sonatas for violin, for flute and for piano, etc. Monograph by Speyer, 1909.

Seyffardt, Ernst Hermann (Crefeld, 1859). Rhenish choral conductor and composer, trained at the Cologne Conservatory and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1887 leader of the Freiburg Liedertafel and since 1892 conductor of the Neue Singverein in Stuttgart and also later teacher at the Conservatory, receiving the title of royal professor in 1897. Has written a symphony, orchestral variations and the pieces Thunselda and Trauerfeier für eine Frühent-schlafene, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a violin-sonata, a piano-sonata, the choral works Schicksalsgesang, Zum Gedächtnis, Aus Deutschlands grosser Zeit and Festgesang, the scena Friede, the cycle Vom Schwarzwald bis zum Rhein and other songs, choruses and the opera Die Glocken von Plurs, 1912.

Seyfried, Ignaz Xaver, Ritter von (Vienna, 1776-1841, do.). Austrian conductor and composer, pupil of Koželuch, Albrechtsberger and Winter, from 1797 conductor for Schikaneder and in 1801-28 at the Theater an der Wien. Wrote over 100 stage-works, including operas, operettas, singspiele, melodramas, the biblical dramas Saul, 1810, Abraham, 1817, Die Mac-cabäer, 1818, Noah, 1819, and Moses, etc., a great quantity of church-music, symphonies, quartets, piano-pieces, etc., besides pasticcios from Mozart and Haydn. He wrote much for the Neue Zeitschrift, Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung and Cäcilia, as well as for Schilling's Lexikon, and edited Albrechtsberger's and Preindl's works on theory, with Beethoven's exercises in harmony and counterpoint (1832). He was a member of numerous societies and taught many pupils of note. G.

Spambati, Giovanni (Rome, 1843-1914, do.). Distinguished Italian pianist, conductor and composer (English mother), precociously developed by Barbieri and Natalucci so that he appeared in public from his sixth year, later pupil of Liszt. In 1860 he settled in Rome as player and soon as conductor of important orchestral concerts at the Sala Dante (introducing many masterpieces previously unheard there), besides making occasional trips abroad. In 1869 he visited Germany with Liszt and began to know Wagner's works, while in 1876 the latter first heard some of the Italian's in Rome, immediately recommending him to the publisher Schott. In 1882 he appeared in London and in 1884 at Paris. Meanwhile at Rome in 1866 he joined Pinelli in starting chamber-music concerts and in 1869 began free piano-instruction at the Accademia S. Cecilia, this being the first step toward the founding of its Liceo Musicale in 1877. Here he became chief piano-teacher. For many years he was pianist to the Queen and director of her Quintet. In 1903 he made a brilliant trip to Russia. His significance lay not so much in the absolute originality of his composition as in his resolute devotion to instrumental music at a time when it was generally neglected in Italy. His efforts opened a period of significant progress. His works include

For orchestra—symphonies in D and E-flat; overture, Solennelle and for Cola di Rienzi; Epitalamio Sin-fonico, 1887 (for the Duke of Aosta's wedding); piano-concerto in G min.; Te Deum Laudamus (also for strings and organ).

Chamber-works—piano-quintets in F min. and B-flat; string-quartet in D-flat (last part in C-sharp min.); 3 violin-pieces.

For piano—Prelude and Fugue in E-flat min.; suite (5 movements); 6 Nocturni; 8 Fogli Volanti; 6 Pieces Lyriques; 12 Melodies Poétiques; 2 Études; Gavotte; Romanza; a few other pieces. Transcriptions of a melody from Gluck's Orfeo, of Chopin's Canzone Lituanica and of Liszt's Die Ideale (4 hands).

For voice—Messa da Requiem (in memory of Humbert I); about 35 songs.

Memoirs by De Angelis, 1912 (in Rivista Musicale), and Bonaventura, 1914 (in La Nuova Musica). G.

Shakespeare, William (Croydon, 1849). Eminent English tenor and vocal teacher, pupil of Molique, the Royal Academy, London (Mendelssohn Scholar), Reinecke and Lamperti, from 1875 singing in concert and oratorio and from 1878 professor at the Royal Academy (many notable pupils). In 1880-86 he also conducted the Academy concerts and in 1901-05 those of the Strolling Players' Orchestral Society. Has written a symphony, several overtures, a piano-concerto, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, etc. Author of the important The Art of Singing, 2 parts, 1900-01. G.

Shaliapin, Fedor Ivanovitch (Kazan, 1873). Remarkable Russian operatic bass, first appearing without training with a traveling troupe, then pupil of Usatov, making his formal début in 1894 at Petrograd and soon displaying extraordinary powers of vocal and dramatic interpretation, especially in Russian works. From 1901 he began to be known in Italy and in 1906 in Paris and New York, entering on a prolonged career of international fame. G.

Shapleigh, Bertram (Boston, 1871). American composer, pupil of the New England Conservatory (Boston), also trained in medicine and as art-critic. From 1898 he lived not far from London, cultivating a large estate, but in 1915 his house was burnt and his valuable library destroyed. He then returned to New York. Has written several operas (not given), 2 symphonies, a Symphonic Prelude, 3 Consolations, the orchestral suites Râmâyana and Gur Amir, the tone-poem Mirage (with chorus), a Poem for 'cello and orchestra, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, violin- and 'cello-pieces, the choral works The Raven, The Dance of the Dervishes, The Fir-Tree and the Brook, The Tale of the Dismal Swamp and Vedic Hymn, the cycle Romance of the Year for solo and small chorus, a mass and other Catholic music, a cantata, over 100 songs (many on Oriental themes) and many piano-pieces. Many of his texts are by his wife, née Mabelle Carpenter. He has acted as adviser for Breitkopf & Härtel, lectured on art-topics and edited The Concert-Program Exchange, besides publishing poems. A.

JEAN SIBELIUS

Sharp, Cecil James (London, 1859). English lawyer and folk-music specialist, educated at Cambridge University, in 1882-91 at Adelaide (South Australia) in judicial work, also being organist at the Cathedral and director of the Philharmonic. In 1893-96 he conducted the Finsbury Choral Society (London), in 1896-1905 was head of the Hampstead Conservatory (London) and since 1911 has directed the Folk-Dance Society and the School of Folk-Song and Dance (Stratford), visiting America in search of folk-music material. Author of English Folk-Song, 1907, Folk-Dancing and Singing in Schools, 1913, '14, and a long list of collections of songs and dances from different parts of England (from 1902) and from the Appalachian region in America (1917). A.

Sharpe, Cedric (London, 1891). English 'cellist, pupil of the Royal College, London, from 1915 a member of the Philharmonic Quartet and since 1920 a leading player in the Albert Hall Orchestra.

Sharpe, Herbert Francis (Halifax, 1861). English pianist, pupil of the National Training School (London), from 1882 appearing widely as soloist and in trio in 1899-1902, since 1884 teacher and from 1890 examiner at the Royal College. Has written a comic opera, an overture, violin- and flute-pieces, piano-music and a Pianoforte School (with Lucas), part-songs and songs. G.

Shattuck, Arthur (Neenah, Wis. 1881). American pianist, pupil of Leschetizky, making his début in 1901 at Copenhagen and then touring throughout Europe (as far as Egypt in the East and also to Iceland), with visits to America in 1911-12 and since 1915. A.

Shaw, Mary, née Postans (London, 1814-1876, Hadleigh). Gifted English contralto, pupil of the Royal Academy (London) and of G. Smart, from 1834 appearing in concert and from 1839 also in opera (including premières of Mendelssohn's St. Paul, 1836, and of Verdi's Oberto, 1839). In 1844 her career was ended by the shock of her husband's insanity. G.

Shedlock, John South (Reading, 1843-1919, London). English critic, pupil of E. Lübeck and Lalo, from about 1865 teacher in London, from 1879 critic for the Academy and in 1901-16 for the Athenæum, besides lecturing somewhat at the Royal Academy. Author of The Pianoforte Sonata, 1895, a life of Beethoven (1903), articles on Beethoven's sketch-books (1892) and Cramer's studies (1893), and a translation of Riemann's Lexikon, 4th ed. (1899), besides an edition of Kuhnau's Bible-sonatas (1895).

Shelley, Harry Rowe (New Haven, Conn. 1858). Noted American organist and composer, pupil of Stoeckel, Buck, Vogrich and Dvořák, from 1878 at the Church of the Pilgrims, Plymouth Church (1881-87) and other Brooklyn churches, since 1899 at the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, New York, besides teaching at the Am. Institute of Applied Music. Has written 2 symphonies, an overture, the orchestral suite Souvenir de Baden-Baden, a violin-concerto, a piano-fantasia with orchestra, the cantatas The Inheritance Divine, Vexilla Regis, 1894, Death and Life and Lochnivar's Ride, 1915, many effective anthems, songs and piano-pieces, with many organ-transcriptions and collections of organ-pieces. A.

Shepard, Frank Hartson (Bethel, Conn. 1863-1913, Orange, N. J.). American organist and teacher, pupil of Eugene Thayer and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1891 (with his wife) directing a piano-school at Orange. Author of various text-books, including Harmony Simplified. A.

Shepard, Thomas Griffin (Madison, Conn. 1848-1905, Brooklyn). American organist, pupil of G. W. and J. P. Morgan, from 1865 at various churches in New Haven, Conn., and leader of choral societies. Wrote the cantata The Word Made Flesh, many anthems, songs and the comic opera Pennikeese. A.

Shepherd, Arthur (Paris, Idaho, 1880). American conductor and composer, trained at the New England Conservatory (Boston), where, after ten years in Salt Lake City, he taught in 1908-20. From 1914 he directed the Musical Art Society and in 1917 followed Clifton as head of the Cecilia. Since 1920 he has been assistant-conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra. Has written the overtures Joyeuse (Paderewski prize, 1902), The Festival of Youth, 1915, and The Nuptials of Attila, an orchestral suite, a Humoreske for piano and orchestra, a piano-sonata (prize, 1909), variations and other pieces, the choral works Song of the Sea-Wind and The City of the Sea, choruses and songs. A.

Shepherd, John. 16th C. G.

Sheremetiev, Alexander Dmitrievitch (b. 1859). Russian music-patron at Petrograd, from 1882 maintaining a symphony-orchestra, from 1884 a choir (led by Archangelsky) and from 1898 popular orchestral concerts (led by himself and Vladimirov). Has written for orchestra and choir. [His father long maintained a noted choir, led by Lomakin.] G.

Sherwood, Percy (Dresden, 1866). English-Saxon pianist and composer, pupil of H. Scholtz and the Dresden Conservatory (Mendelssohn prize, 1889) and from 1890 teacher there, in 1911 gaining the title of royal professor. Has written 2 symphonies, several overtures, a piano-quintet, a violin- and 2 'cello-sonatas, a suite for two violins, a clarinet-suite, 2 piano-sonatas, other pieces, songs and a Requiem. G.

Sherwood, William Hall (Lyons, N. Y. 1854-1911, Chicago). Eminent American pianist, pupil of his father, Wm. Mason, Kullak, Weitzmann, Doppler, Deppe, Richter and Liszt, appearing in Europe in 1875 and from 1876 in America, where he soon became widely known as soloist. After teaching in Boston and New York, from 1889 he was head of the piano-section of the Chicago Conservatory and in 1897 founded the Sherwood Piano School. In 1887 he married his pupil Estella F. Abrams, also a fine pianist. Wrote 2 piano-suites, dances and some other pieces. A.

Shield, William (Whickham, 1748-1829, London). English violist and composer, from about 1765 in theater-orchestras (as violinist) at Scarborough and London, in 1773-91 violist at the Opera and from 1778-97 composer at Covent Garden, continuing in theater-music till 1807. From 1817 he was Master of the King's Music. Wrote about 40 stage-pieces (from 1778), 6 string-trios, violin-duets, many popular songs and 2 text-books in harmony. G.

Shostakovsky, Peter Adamovitch (b. 1853). Russian pianist and conductor, appearing at Riga at fifteen, then pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, Kullak and Liszt, for a time teacher at the Moscow Conservatory, in 1878 founder of a music-school there, which in 1883 he gave over to the new Philharmonic Society and which in 1886 was duly recognized as one of the national conservatories. Besides remaining its director he also led concerts by the Society and in 1889 and '94 conducted the Italian Opera, retiring in 1898.

Shudi. See Tschudi.

Sibelius, Jean (Tavastehus, 1865). Distinguished Finnish composer, pupil of the Helsingfors Conservatory and of Bargiel, A. Becker, Fuchs and Goldmark, from 1893 teacher at the Helsingfors Conservatory and the Philharmonic Orchestra School. His genius was early recognized by a grant of 3000 marks annually (1897-1907) from the Finnish government. His fame was much increased by a tour with the Helsingfors Philharmonic in 1900 throughout northern and western Europe and by his appearance at the Heidelberg Festival in 1901. In 1914 he came to America to conduct his Aalottaret Oceanids at the Norfolk (Conn.) Festival, receiving also a Mus.D. from Yale Univ. Without using much direct folk-song material, his style evidently rests upon an intensely national basis, developed with extraordinary vigor and assurance of artistic conception and grasp of harmonic, rhythmic and orchestral resource. His imagination tends to dwell upon the sombre and the weird, interpreted with great intellectual earnestness. His works include the following (opus-nos. in brackets):

Dramatic Works—The Maid in the Tower, 1896 (the first Finnish opera); Scaramouche (pantomime) [71]; music for Paul's Christian II [27] and Die Sprache der Vögel, Maeterlinck's Pelleas et Mélisande, Procope's Belsazar, Strindberg's Svanhvit and Järnefelt's Kuolema; The Wood-Nymph (melodrama) [15].

Symphonies—1, E min. [39], 2, D [43], 3, C [52], 4, A min. [63], 5, E-flat [1916].

Symphonic Poems—A Legend [9], Der Schwan von Tuonela and Lemminkäinen zieht heimwärts [22], Finlandia [26], Pohjola's Daughter [49], Nächtliche Ritt und Sonnenaufgang [55], Der Barde [64], Luonnolar (with soprano) [70], The Oceanids [72].

Overtures—Karelia [10]; also in E and A min.

Suites—Karelia [11], in E-flat [25], from music for Christian II [27], Pelleas [46] and Svanhvit [54] (last two for small orchestra), Scènes Historiques [66].

Violin-concerto in D min. [47]; 2 serenades for violin and orchestra [69].

Other orchestral pieces—Spring-Song [16]; Romanze (strings) [42]; Valse Triste from Kuolema [44]; Die Dryade and Tanz-Intermezzo [45]; Gasmal from Belsazar [51]; Pan und Echo (intermezzo) [53a]; In Memoriam (march) [59]; Canzonetta and Valse Romanique (strings) [62a].

Chamber-Music—string-quintet in G min.; string-quartets in D min. (Voces Intime) [56], A min. and B-flat; piano-quartet in C; variations in E-flat min. for string-quartet; string-trio in A.

For Piano—sonata in F [12]; 6 Impromptus [5]; Kylliki [41]; about 25 other pieces [24, 58, 67-8].

Vocal Works—for men's voices, Athenians' Song [31], The Old Man, part-songs [18, 21]; for women's voices, Impromptu [19]; for mixed voices, Die gefangene Königin [48], part-songs [23]. Der Fährmanns Braute (baritone scena) [33]; about 50 highly individual songs [13, 17, 35-8, 50, 57, 60-1].

Sketches by Nöwmark, 1905, and Niemann, 1917. G. A.

Siboni, Erik Anton Waldemar (Copenhagen, 1828-1892, do.), son of the following. Danish pianist and composer, pupil of Hartmann, Moscheles, Hauptmann and Sechter, from 1853 teacher in Copenhagen and in 1864-83 organist and teacher at the Sorø Academy. Among his early pupils were Princesses Alexandra and Dagmar, later Queen of England and Empress of Russia respectively. Wrote the operas Loreley, 1859, and Carls II Flucht, 1862, the choral works The Battle of Murten, The Capture of Copenhagen, Psalm 111 and Stabat Mater (Paris prize), 2 symphonies, 2 overtures, a piano-concerto, quartets, a trio, violin-, 'cello- and piano-sonatas, etc. G.

Siboni, Giuseppe (Forlì, 1780-1839, Copenhagen). Italian tenor and conductor, from 1797 favorably known in Italy and at Prague, Vienna, London and Petrograd, in 1819 settling at Copenhagen as teacher in the opera-school and from 1827 head of his own school. Paër wrote several rôles for him. G.

Sichra, Andreas Ossipovitch (Vilna, 1772-1861, Petrograd). Russian guitarist, inventor of the 7-stringed instrument, for which he wrote many pieces and a method, besides issuing periodicals in 1802 (Moscow) and 1826-29 (Petrograd). See Russanov's work on the guitar (1901).

Sick, Theodor Bernhard (1827-1893, Copenhagen). Danish artillery-officer, self-taught in music, becoming a facile and effective composer of chamber-music (about 65 works).

Siebeck, Hermann (Eisleben, 1842-1920, Giessen). Saxon professor of philosophy, from 1875 at Basel University and from 1883 at Giessen, author of Ueber musikal. Einführung, 1906, Grundfragen zur Psychologie u. Aesthetik d. Tonkunst, 1909, and other writings on musical aesthetics.

Sieben, Wilhelm (Landau, 1881). Bavarian violinist and conductor, trained at the Munich Conservatory and by Sevcik and Berber, from 1905 teacher at the Munich Conservatory and leader of a Quartet, and since 1918 Brode's successor as conductor of the Königsberg Philharmonie and Singakademie.

Siebenhaar, Malachias (1616-1685). 17th C.

Sieber, Ferdinand (Vienna, 1822-1895, Berlin). Noted Austrian vocal teacher, pupil of Mieksch and G. Ronconi, from about 1840 singing in opera, from 1848 teacher at Dresden and after 1854 at Berlin, where he attracted many pupils and was made royal professor in 1864. Wrote many songs, studies and vocalises, besides a series of text-books and a classified catalogue of 10,000 German songs, duets and tertzes (1875).

Siegel, E. F. W. Firm of music-publishers at Leipzig, founded in 1846 by Siegel (d. 1869), who was followed by Richard Linnemann (1845-1909) and his sons Carl and Richard. They have specialized in choral music and in 1871-1916 issued the periodical Die Sängerkirche and since 1919 the Archiv für Musikwissenschaft. In 1903 they acquired the business of Fritzsche and in 1919 that of Kistner.

Siegel, Rudolf (Munich, 1878). Bavarian conductor and composer, pupil of Thiel, Humperdinck and Thuille, from about 1900 living in Berlin, in 1914-17 conductor of the Königsberg Akademie (orchestra) and since 1919 city-director at Crefeld and conductor of the Konzertverein. Has written the opera Herr Dandolo, 1914, an Apostatenmarsch for men's voices and orchestra, the orchestral Heroische Tondichtung and songs.

Sieveking, Martinus (Amsterdam, 1867). Noted Dutch pianist, pupil of his father and the Amsterdam Conservatory, with later study under Leschetizky, from about 1885 accompanist with the Lamoureux Orchestra (Paris) and on tour with Patti, in 1893-95 teacher in Lincoln, Neb. and in 1896-97 touring in America as soloist. After many years in Europe, with some concert-tours, in 1915 he started a school in New York to demonstrate a new method of rapidly acquiring virtuosity. Has written violin- and piano-pieces.

Siface [Giovanni Francesco Grossi] (1653-1697). 17th C. G.

Sighicelli, Antonio (Modena, 1802-1883, do.). Able Italian violinist and conductor, pupil of his grandfather and Mari, from about 1820 prominent in orchestras at Cento, Bologna and Ferrara and from 1835 conductor of the Modena court-orchestra and concertmaster at the theater. His son Vincenzo (1830-1905) was associated with him at Modena from 1849 and from 1855 was a favorite teacher in Paris.

Sigismondi, Giuseppe (Naples, 1739-1826, do.). Italian singing-teacher, from 1808 librarian at the Naples Conservatory, writing an opera (1767?), 4 oratorios, etc.

Sigwart, Botho [Sigwart Botho, Graf von Eulenburg] (1884-1915, in the Galician campaign). Prussian composer of the opera Die Lieder des Euripides, 1915, the melodramas Hektors Bestattung and Ode de Sappho, a symphony for organ and orchestra, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin, for viola d'amore and 2 for piano, many songs, etc.

Siklós, Albert (Pest, 1878). Hungarian pianist and composer, pupil of the Pest Akademie and from 1910 teacher there, besides connection with the Fodor Institut. Has written a suite for small orchestra, a piano-quintet, 'cello- and piano-pieces and several text-books in harmony, counterpoint, form and instrumentation.

Silas, Édouard (Amsterdam, 1827-1909, London). Able Dutch pianist, organist and composer, playing in public from his seventh year, pupil of Neher, Grua, Lacombe and the Paris Conservatory (in 1849 competing successfully against Saint-Saëns in organ-playing). From 1850 he lived in London, for years as organist at the Catholic Chapel at Kingston and later as teacher at the Guildhall School and the London Academy of Music. Wrote the opera Nitocris (not given), the oratorio Joash, 1863, a cantata, a mass (prize at the Belgian Exposition of 1866), canticles and much other Catholic church-music, 3 symphonies, overtures, other orchestral pieces, 3 piano-concertos, a nonet for strings and wind, 2 quintets, quartets, trios, sonatas and many pieces for organ and for piano, songs, etc., besides text-books in notation and harmony (1885). G.

Silbermann, Andreas (n. Freiberg, 1678-1734, Strassburg). Noted Saxon organ-maker, from 1703 settled in Strassburg, where he built the organ in the Cathedral. His skill was transmitted to three sons. G.

Silbermann, Gottfried (n. Freiberg, 1683-1753, Dresden), brother of the above. Famous Saxon maker of organs, clavichords and pianos, working mostly at Freiberg and Dresden (noted instruments in both places). From about 1730 he produced the first German pianos. From 1745 three or more of these were owned by Frederick the Great. He also invented the 'cembalo d'amour' (a double-length clavichord, the tangents striking the strings in the center). G.

Silcher, Philipp Friedrich (n. Waiblingen, 1789-1860, Tübingen). Noted Württemberger song-composer, pupil of his father and Auberlen, from about 1810 schoolmaster at Ludwigsburg, then at Stuttgart and from 1817 music-director at Tübingen University (Ph.D. 1852). Wrote numerous highly popular songs (for one, two or four voices), many chorales, men's choruses, etc., largely included in his Sammlung deutscher Volkslieder, 12 vols. Author of Gesch. d. evangel. Kirchengesangs, 1844, and a text-book in harmony (1851). Memoirs by Köstlin, 1877, and Primers, 1910. G.

Siloti [Ziloti], Alexander (n. Kharkov, 1863). Eminent Russian pianist and conductor, pupil of the Moscow Conservatory and of Liszt, from 1880 appearing with marked success at Moscow and in 1887-90 professor at the Conservatory there. After about ten years on tour throughout western Europe, from 1901 he was regular or occasional conductor of the Moscow Philharmonic and from 1904 organized his own orchestra at Petrograd, with concerts there and elsewhere. One of Liszt's strongest pupils, he has had notable artistic triumphs everywhere. He visited America in 1898 and moved to New York in 1922. He arranged Bach's Concerto in D for piano, violin, flute and strings and Vivaldi's Concerto in D min. for small orchestra, and edited some of his own concert-pieces. G.

Silva, Andreas de. 16th C. G.

Silva, David Poll de (n. Bayonne, 1834-1875, Clermont). Talented French composer (blind), writing 3 operas, 2 oratorios, various other choral works, 2 symphonies, an overture, much chamber-music and many lesser works.

Silvani, Giosèffo Antonio (Bologna, 1672-1727?, do.). Italian church-musician, in 1702-25 maestro at S. Stefano in Bologna, publishing many masses, motets, litanies, etc. G.

Silver, Charles (Paris, 1868). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1891). Has written the operas La Belle au Bois Dormant, 1902, Clos, 1906, Neigilde (ballet-opera), 1908, and Myriane, 1913, the oratorio Tobie, other dramatic pieces, the overture Bérénice, 2 orchestral suites, songs, etc.

Silvestre, Armand (Paris, 1839-1901, Toulouse). French dramatist and poet, author of many noted opera-texts (as of Jondière's Dimitri (1876), Saint-Saëns' Henri VIII (1883), Godard's Jocelyn (1888) and Massenet's Grisélidis (1901).

Simandl, Franz (Blatna, 1840-1912, Vienna). Bohemian double-bassist, long in the court-orchestra at Vienna and from 1869 teacher in the Conservatory. Wrote a concerto for his instrument, a Konzertstück and other pieces, besides an elaborate method and collections of concert-pieces and études.

Simon, Anton (b. 1851). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1871 settled in Moscow, where at first he was conductor at the Bouffes, from 1891 teacher at the Philharmonic Music School and from 1897 also orchestra-intendant at the Imperial theaters and inspector at the Alexander Institute. Has written the operas Rolla, 1892, Triumphant Love, 1899, The Fishers, 1900, and Esmeralda (mimodrama), 1902, the ballets The Stars and Living Flowers, the symphonic poems La Revue de Nuit and The Sinner, 3 overtures, a suite, concertos for piano and for clarinet, other orchestral pieces, a string-quartet, 2 piano-trios, a brass-quartet, 22 pieces for 4-7 brass instruments, many piano-pieces (some for 4 hands), a mass and about 100 songs. G.

Simon, James (Berlin, 1880). Prussian writer and pianist, trained at the Berlin Hochschule and Meisterschule, as well as Munich University (Ph.D. 1904), since 1907 teacher at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory. Has written a piano-concerto and 6 books of songs, an essay on the romantic element in Vogler's works (1904), Faust in der Musik, 1906, and a study of Mozart's operatic orchestration, 1914 (in Musik).

Simon, Jean Henri (Antwerp, 1783-1861, do.). Belgian violinist, pupil of Lahoussaye, Rode, Gossec, Lesueur and Catel, from about 1810 prominent at Antwerp as teacher and player (Meerts, Janssens and Vieuxtemps among his pupils). Wrote 7 violin-concertos, a trio, fantasias, etc., the oratorio Judith, cantatas and church-music.

Simon, Prosper Charles (Bordeaux, 1788-1866, Paris). Able French organist, pupil of Franz Beck and later Reicha, in 1802-25 playing in Bordeaux, from 1826 organist at Notre-Dame in Paris and from 1840 at the Chapelle Royale of St. Denis. He wrote an organ-method. Memoir by Dumoulin, 1866.

Simpson, Christopher. 17th C. G.

Simpson, George Elliot (Orange, N. J. 1876). American teacher and composer, pupil of E. Mollenhauer, Bassford, Busch and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1903 active at Kansas City, in 1907-11 at Belton, Tex., and since 1912 at Fort Worth. Has written 2 symphonies, 4 overtures, 3 suites and other orchestral works, songs and piano-pieces. A.

Simpson, Thomas 17th C. G.

Simrock. Famous music-publishing house, established in 1790 at Bonn by Nikolaus Simrock (1752-1834), succeeded there by his son Peter Joseph (d. 1868) and his grandson Fritz August (1838-1901). In 1870 the latter moved the business to Berlin and passed it on to his nephew Hans (d. 1910), who made it into a stock company in 1902 and started branches in London and Paris. They have been noted as publishers of many of the great works of Beethoven, Brahms, Bruch and Dvořák. G.

Sinclair, George Robertson (Croydon, 1863-1917, Birmingham). English organist and conductor, pupil of Ouseley, Stewart and Lloyd, in 1879-80 assisting the latter at Gloucester, from 1881 at Truro Cathedral and from 1889 at Hereford Cathedral, where he also directed choral and orchestral societies and many of the Three Choirs' Festivals (1891-1906) as well as playing at six festivals at Gloucester. From 1899 he led the Festival Society at Birmingham. Mus.D. of Canterbury in 1899. G.

Sinclair, John (n. Edinburgh, 1791-1857, Margate). Scottish tenor, pupil of Thos. Welsh, in 1811-18 appearing in English operas in London, then pupil of Pellegrini, Banderali and Rossini, in 1822-23 engaged in Italy and again in England till 1830, when, after a trip to America, he retired. G.

Sinding, Christian (Kongsberg, 1856). Distinguished Norwegian composer, trained by Lindeman and at the Leipzig Conservatory, with further studies on a stipend from the government, in 1877-80 and '82-90 teaching at Christiania and then enabled by a life-pension from the government to give himself entirely to composing. In Norway he is counted next to Grieg as a national representative, though his ability lies more in the field of extended concerted forms. His works include the following (opus-nos. in brackets):

For orchestra—symphonies in D min. [21] and D [85]; piano-concerto in D-flat [6]; violin-concerto in A [45]; Épisodes Chevaleresques (suite) [35]; Rondo Infinito [42]; suite in A min. [10], Légende [46] and Romanze in D [100] (all with violin).

Chamber-works—piano-quintet in E min. [5]; string-quartet in A min. [70]; piano-trios in D [23], A min. [64] and C [87]; 2 serenades for two violins and piano [56, 92]; violin-suites in F [14], G, Scènes de la Vie [51] and G min. [96]; violin-variations, Cantus Doloris [78]; pieces for violin [9, 30, 43, 61, 79, 81, 89]; do. for 'cello [66].

For piano—sonata in B min. [91]; suite [3]; variations, Fatum [94]; Alle Weisen [1]; 15 Capricen [44]; Burlesques [48]; Mémoires Mignonnes [52]; Morceaux Caractéristiques [53]; 5 Études [58]; Intermezzis [65, 72]; Studien und Skizzen [82]; over 80 other pieces [24-5, 31-4, 49, 74, 76, 84, 86, 88, 93, 97]. For 4 hands, Valses, Nordische Tänze, etc. [59, 71, 98]. For two pianos, Variations in E-flat min., etc. [2, 41].

Vocal—opera, Der heilige Berg, 1914; over 200 songs; 5 duets [63]; 3 terzets [47].

In 1921 he was called to the new Rochester (N. Y.) Conservatory as professor of composition. G.

Singelée, Jean Baptiste (Brussels, 1812-1875). Belgian violinist, pupil of his brother and the Brussels Conservatory, variously employed at Brussels, Ghent and Antwerp. Wrote 2 violin-concertos, overtures, fantasias, etc.

Singer, Edmund (Totis, 1830-1912, Stuttgart). Brilliant Hungarian violinist, pupil of Ellinger, Kohne and Jos. Böhm, beginning tours when but eleven, in 1846 soloist at the Pest Opera, from 1854 concertmaster at Weimar and from 1856 at Stuttgart. Wrote a Tarantella and Rapsodie Hongroise for violin and orchestra, cadenzas for concertos by Beethoven and Brahms, various fantasias, etc., besides a Violinschule and editions of many standard works.

Singer, Otto (Sora, 1833-1894, New York). Able Saxon pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Liszt, from 1855 teaching at Leipzig and Dresden and in 1867 removing to New York, where till 1873 he taught in the Mason-Thomas Conservatory. In 1873 he assisted Thomas at the Cincinnati Festival and became teacher at the College of Music, also serving as chorus-trainer and conductor for the Sängerbund. Wrote the choral works The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, 1876, and Festival Ode, 1878, 2 symphonies, a symphonic fantasia, sonatas for violin and for piano, etc. His son Otto (b. 1863), a good violinist, in 1888-90 led the Heidelberg Liederkrantz, from 1890 the Cologne Männergesangverein, then going to Leipzig and Berlin (1900). He has prepared vocal scores of many of Wagner's and Strauss' operas. A.

Singer, Peter (Häselgehr, 1810-1882, Salzburg). Tyrolese monk and church-musician at Salzburg, writing an enormous amount of masses and other ritual-music and also inventing in 1839 the 'pansymphonikon' (reed-orchestration). Memoirs by Lahn-Hochbrunn, 1910, and Engl, 1910.

Singer, Richard (Pest, 1879). German-Hungarian pianist, pupil of Fiedler, Barth, Leschetizky and Busoni, since about 1900 prominent at Hamburg as concertist and also at Berlin as teacher of advanced students. At Berlin in 1912-13 he gave a notable series of concert-recitals.

Singleton, Esther. American author of opera-guides (1899, 1909), The Orchestra and its Instruments, 1917, translations from Lavignac (1898, 1903) and an article on American music for the latter's Encyclopédie (1915). A.

Sinico, Francesco (Trieste, 1810-1865, do.). Noted Italian-Austrian choral leader, pupil of Farinelli, from 1832 conductor of the Trieste Filarmonico-Drammatica Society and from 1843 maestro at S. Maria Maggiore, besides developing a school for choral singing on Wilhelm's method. Wrote the opera I Virtuosi di Barcellona, 1841, and 2 others, besides choruses.

Sinico, Giuseppe (Trieste, 1836-1907, do.), son of the above. Austrian choral leader and composer, pupil of his father and I. Bruno, extending the popular chorus-work begun by his father and serving as maestro at the Greek and Illyrian churches. Wrote the operas Marinella, 1854, I Moschettieri, 1859, Aurora di Nevers 1861, Alessandro Stradella, 1863, Spartaco, 1886, and Don Carlo (not given), church-music and a vocal method.

Sinigaglia, Leone (Turin, 1868). Eminent Italian composer, pupil of the Turin Conservatory and of Bolzoni and Dvořák, with help from Goldmark, since about 1895 increasingly prominent as a gifted and versatile instrumental composer. Has written

For orchestra—overture to Goldoni's Le Baruffe Chiozzotte; suite, Piemonte; violin-concerto in A; Danze Piemontesi; Rapsodia Piemontese and Romanze (with violin); Romanze and Humoreske (with 'cello). Chamber-works—Hora Mistica, for string-quintet; Romanza, for horn and string-quartet; string-quartet in D; Konzert-Étude, Scherzo, Variations on theme by Brahms and other pieces, for string-quartet; a Serenade in D for string-trio; pieces for violin, oboe and horn.

Various choruses, part-songs, songs and some piano-pieces. G.

Sinsheimer, Bernard (New York, 1870). American violinist, pupil of Léonard and Joachim, from 1886 appearing in New York, later in Germany and France and from 1902, with his own Quartet, generally in America, introducing many important works. A.

Sirmen [Syrmén], Maddalena Laura, née Lombardini (Venice, ?1735-?). Noted Italian violinist, pupil of the Conservatorio dei Mendicanti (Venice) and of Tartini, from about 1760 favorably known in Italy (marrying Ludovico Sirmen, also a violinist, at Bergamo), from 1768 at the Concerts Spirituels in Paris and in 1771-72 with great success in London. From 1774 she tried operatic singing with slight result. She is last heard of as playing in Paris in 1785. Tartini wrote her a remarkable letter of instruction (1770). Wrote 6 violin- and 6 harpsichord-concertos, 6 trios, 6 sonatas for two violins and (with her husband) 6 quartets. G.

Sistermans, Anton (Hertogenbosch, 1867). Eminent Dutch bass, originally in business, then pupil of Stockhausen, from 1895 widely recognized as a concert-singer of the first rank, equally effective in songs and in oratorio. Till 1904 he lived at Frankfurt or Wiesbaden, then moving to Berlin and teaching at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory. In 1899 he sang as Pogner at Bayreuth.

Sitt, Hans (Prague, 1850-1922, Leipzig). Able Bohemian violinist, conductor and composer, trained at the Prague Conservatory, from 1867 playing in or directing theater-orchestras at Breslau, Prague and Chemnitz, in 1880-81 in a nobleman's band at Nice, from 1881 settled at Leipzig, where he started a series of popular concerts, from 1883 taught at the Conservatory, in 1885-1903 was conductor of the Bachverein (following Herzogenberg), for a time played viola in the Brodsky Quartet, led subscription-concerts at Altenburg and also for a time conducted the Singakademie and for many years the Lehrergesangverein. Wrote an overture for Lescivo's Don Juan d' Austria, 3 violin-concertos, a viola-concerto, 2 'cello-concertos, an orchestral Nocturne and Festmarsch, a Spinnlied for strings, a violin-concertino, Cavatina, Polonaise, Wiegenlied and Gavotte for violin and orchestra, Konzertstück for viola and orchestra, 2 piano-trios, 2 piano-suites, numerous pieces for violin, for viola and for 'cello, violin-études, some piano-pieces, the choral works Hohenzollern und Oranien and Festhymne, etc., besides a viola-method and 2 collections of violin-pieces.

Sittard, Alfred (Stuttgart, 1878), son of the following. Eminent Württemberger organist, pupil of his father, W. Köhler, Armbrust (whom he succeeded at the Petrikirche in Hamburg in 1896-97) and the Cologne Conservatory, in 1901-02 assisting at the Hamburg Opera, in 1902 taking the Mendelssohn prize, from 1903 organist at the Kreuzkirche in Dresden and since 1912 at the rebuilt Michaeliskirche at Hamburg (having one of the largest organs in the world), where he organized a noted choir. Has written Choralstudien, many a cappella choruses and a monograph on the Hamburg organ (1912). Since 1920 he has also conducted the Lehrer-Gesangverein.

Sittard, Josef (Aix, 1846-1903, Hamburg). Rhenish critic and writer, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory, from about 1875 teacher there and after 1885 in Hamburg as critic for the Korrespondent (succeeding Meinardus). Author of sketches of Mendelssohn and Rossini (1881-82, in Waldersee's Vorträge), Kompendium d. Gesch. d. Kirchenmusik, 1881, Zur Einführung in d. Geschichte u. Aesthetik d. Musik, 1885, Das erste Stuttgarter Musikfest, 1885, Jongleurs u. Ménestrels, 1885, Studien u. Charakteristiken, 1889 (various essays), Gesch. d. Musik- u. Konzertwesens in Hamburg, 1890, and Gesch. d. Oper am Hofe zu Stuttgart, 2 vols. 1890-91, besides some vocal music.

Sivori, Ernesto Camillo (Genoa, 1815-1894, do.). Eminent Italian violinist, first appearing when but six, then pupil of G. Costa, Dellepiane and Paganini, becoming a protégé of the latter and adopting his style. From 1827 (with Dellepiane) he began tours which lasted without long breaks until 1870 and which included a prolonged visit to the United States, Mexico and South America (1846-50). Unlike Paganini, he was a fine ensemble-player. Wrote 2 concertos, many fantasias, etc. Memoir by Pierrotet, 1896. G.

Sjöberg, Svante Leonard (Karlskrona, 1873). Swedish organist, pupil of the Stockholm Conservatory and the Berlin Hochschule, since 1902 at the Stadskyrka in Karlskrona (with many recitals) and leader of the Musikförening. Has written 2 overtures, a violin-sonata, Psalm 23, a cappella choruses and songs.

Sjögren, Johan Gustav Emil (Stockholm, 1853-1918, do.). Gifted Swedish organist and lyric composer, pupil of the Stockholm Conservatory and of Kiel and Haupt, from 1891 at the Johankyrka in Stockholm. Though not often essaying large forms, he won fame by the delicate refinement of his style. Wrote 5 violin-sonatas, 2 Fantasiestücke for violin, Legender and Prelude and Fugue for organ, a piano-sonata, a Prelude and Fugue, Nenia (also orchestrated, with organ, by Aulin), Theme and Variations, many other piano-pieces, about 80 beautiful songs, a Trinklied for men's voices and the cantata The Journey of the Magi, 1890. G.

Skilton, Charles Sanford (Northampton, Mass. 1868). American composer, pupil of Bargiel, Boise, Heintz, Buck and Shelley, in 1893-97 teacher at Salem, N. C., from 1897 at the Normal School in Trenton, N. J., and since 1903 at the University of Kansas (Lawrence), till 1915 also dean of Fine Arts, besides activity as recitalist and lecturer. He has given special attention to Indian music. Has written the symphonic poem A Carolina Legend, the overture Mt. Oread, 2 Indian Dances (also for quartet), sonatas for 'cello and for organ, 3 Indian Scenes for quartet, 3 Indian Sketches for piano, other piano- and organ-pieces, the cantatas The Witch's Daughter, 1917, and The Ballad of Carmilhan, choruses and songs. A.

Skinner, Ernest M., & Company. Firm of organ-makers in Boston, founded in 1901 by Ernest M. Skinner (b. 1866) and rapidly developed by his energy and skill into national fame. He is author of The Modern Organ, 1917. A.

Skovgaard, Axel (Copenhagen, 1875). Danish violinist, pupil of Krygel, C. Petersen, Tofte and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1890 widely known in Scandinavia and since 1903 throughout the United States and Canada. A.

Skroup [Skraup], Franz (n. Pardubitz, 1801-1862, Rotterdam), brother of the next. Bohemian conductor and composer, trained at Prague while studying law, from 1827 assistant and 1837-57 chief conductor at the Bohemian Opera there and after 1860 conductor of the German Opera in Rotterdam. Besides composing the first Czech operas, he was an early promoter of interest in Wagner. Wrote 5 Czech operas (from 1826), 3 German do., music for several plays, overtures, a string-quartet, 3 piano-trios and many popular songs.

Škroup, Jan Nepomuk (n. Pardubitz, 1811–1892, Prague), brother of the above. Bohemian church-musician, from about 1830 connected with the Bohemian Opera in Prague, in 1838–45 choirmaster at the Kreuzherrenstift and from 1845 director at the Cathedral, besides teaching at the Theological Seminary. Wrote some Czech operas (from 1836), an overture (1862), much church-music and text-books.

Skuherský, Franz Zdenko (Opočno, 1830–1892, Budweis). Bohemian choral leader and composer, pupil of Pietsch and Kittl, from 1854 conductor of the Innsbruck Musikverein and from 1866 director of the Prague Organ School (following Krejčí), from 1868 also choirmaster at St. Kastulus and city-director, besides from 1879 lecturing at the University. Wrote the operas Der Liebesring, 1861, Vladimír, 1863, Lora, 1868, and Rector a General, 1873, many organ-pieces (in Gregorian modes) and studies, piano-pieces, several masses and songs, besides text-books in harmony, form, composition and the organ.

Slavík, Joseph (n. Píbram, 1806–1833, Pest). Gifted, but short-lived, Bohemian violinist, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, from 1829 playing at the Vienna Opera and writing 2 violin-concertos and 1 for two violins, a string-quartet and other ensemble-works.

Sleeper, Henry Dike (Patten, Me. 1865). American organist and educator, pupil of B. D. Allen, Paine, Hammond, Eddy, Root and Geo. Thorpe, in 1892–94 teacher at Beloit College (Wis.), then at Georgetown, Ky., from 1895 at the University of Wisconsin (Madison) and in 1898–1923 at Smith College (Northampton, Mass.), in 1904 becoming head of the music-department. From about 1890 he has also been almost always in service as organist. Has written an orchestral Larghetto, an organ-suite a choral Carmen Sæculare, 1904, part-songs and songs, besides editing collections of songs and tunes. A.

Slezak, Leo (Schönberg, 1875). Eminent Moravian operatic tenor, pupil of Ad. Robinson and Jean de Reszké, from 1895 appearing at Brünn, in 1898–99 at the Berlin Opera and from 1900 regularly engaged at the Vienna Opera, but with many trips elsewhere (England from 1909, America in 1909–12). He has a répertoire of about 60 rôles, besides an extensive range of lieder. Author of reminiscences (1922). Sketch by Klinenberger, 1910.

Slivinski, Joseph von (Warsaw, 1865). Highly gifted Polish pianist, pupil of the Warsaw Conservatory and of Leschetizky and A. Rubinstein, making his début in 1890 and from 1893 performing in England and America as a virtuoso of both brilliance and poetic feeling.

Sloper, Edward Hugh Lindsay (London, 1826–1887, do.). English pianist, pupil of Moscheles, A. Schmitt, Vollweiler and Rousset, from 1846 appearing with success in London and from 1880 teaching at the Guildhall School. Wrote an orchestral suite, effective salon-pieces and studies, songs, etc.

Smareglia, Antonio (Pola, 1854). Italian-Austrian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory and adopting a style derived from that of Wagner. Since 1905 he has been blind. Has written the operas Preziosa, 1879, Bianca da Cervia, 1882, Rè Nala, 1887, Il Vassallo di Sziget, 1889 (Vienna, in German), Cornill Schutt, 1892, Nozze Istriane, 1895, La Falena, 1897, Oceana, 1903, Notte di S. Silvestro, 1907, and L'Abisso, 1914, besides the symphonic poem Eleonora, 1877. In 1921 he was made titular professor of composition at the Trieste Conservatory.

Smart, George Thomas (London, 1776–1867, do.). Eminent English conductor, pupil of Ayrton, Dupuis and Arnold (while a choir-boy in the Chapel Royal), from about 1791 organist at Hampstead and violinist in Salomon's orchestra. In 1811 he conducted concerts in Dublin and was knighted by the Lord Lieutenant. In 1813–44 he often directed the concerts of the London Philharmonic, in 1813–25 the Lenten 'oratorios' and in 1818 the City concerts, besides the music at the coronations of William IV (1820) and Victoria (1837). From 1822 he was one of the organists of the Chapel Royal and from 1838 one of its composers. He was often in request to direct provincial festivals, as at Liverpool, Norwich, Bath, Newcastle, Edinburgh, Cambridge and Hull, and to coach oratorio-singers, especially in Handel's works. Wrote anthems, glees, canons, etc., and edited O. Gibbons' madrigals and Handel's Delitting Te Deum. Memoir by Cox, 1907. G.

Smart, Henry Thomas (London, 1813–1879, do.), nephew of the above. Able English organist, pupil of his father and Kearns (largely self-taught), from 1831 at Blackburn (Lancashire), and after 1836 in London, first at St. Philip's (Regent Street), from 1844 at St. Luke's (Old Street) and from 1864 at St. Pancras' (Euston Road), where, though now blind, his playing was much admired. Wrote the opera Bertha, 1855, the cantatas The Bride of Dunkerron, 1864, King René's Daughter, 1871, The Fishermaidens, 1871, and Jacob, 1873, many highly effective organ-pieces, about 25 fine anthems, part-songs and songs. Memoirs by Spark, 1881, and Seymour, 1881. G.

Smend, Julius (Lengerich, 1857). Eminent Westphalian theologian, from 1893 at Strasburg University and since 1918 rector at Münster University. Author (besides non-musical works) of Zum Gedächtnis Mozarts, 1892, Die evangel. deutsche Messe bis zu Luthers deutscher Messe, 1896, Die römische Messe, 1920, and several other monographs on liturgics, besides from 1896 editing (with Fr. Spitta) the Monatschrift für Gottesdienst u. kirchliche Kunst.

Smetana, Bedřich [Friedrich] (Leitomschl, 1824–1884, Prague). Distinguished Bohemian pianist, conductor and composer, at first self-taught, then pupil of Proksch and Liszt (for a short time), from about 1845 teacher in Count Thun's family at Prague, in 1848 making a very unsuccessful tour as pianist and then starting a piano-school (with help from Liszt) that was soon famous. In 1849 he married the pianist Katharina Kolár (d. 1859). His reputation as player now became established, leading to a call in 1856 to direct the Philharmonic in Gothenburg (Sweden), where he developed power as conductor. In 1861, however, he returned to Prague to take part in the new national movement and in 1866 to be conductor at the Bohemian Opera. In that year his first two operas were produced, establishing his place as the leading Czech composer. Yet soon he was beset with jealousy and intrigue, so that in 1874 he gave up his post as conductor (largely because of deafness). He continued to compose, with some popular successes. But ill-health increased and at length he became insane. His greatest achievements were the operas The Bartered Bride and The Secret, the symphonic poems and the E min. quartet. His works include Operas—The Brandenburgers in Bohemia, 1863, The Bartered Bride, 1866, Dalibor, 1868, The Two Widows (comic), 1874, The Kiss, 1876, The Secret, 1878, Libussa (1871), 1881, The Devil's Wall, 1882, Viola (not finished).

Symphonic Poems—Wallensteins Lager, Richard III, Hakon Jarl (all 1856–57, Gothenburg); the cycle My Country: Visegrad, The Moldau, Sárka, From Bohemia's Woods and Meadows, The Camp, Blaník (1874–79, Prague). Also Triumph-Symphonie, 1853, Festmarsch, 1864 (for Shakespeare tercentenary), Prager Karneval (unfinished suite).

Chamber-works—string-quartets in E min., Am meinem Leben (1876), F, C and D min. (unfinished); piano-trio in G min. Also Fantasie for violin and orchestra.

Various dances and the concert-étude Am Seegestade for piano. Some part-songs.

While he was conductor at Prague the young Dvořák was violinist in the orchestra and was aided by his interest. Opinion is somewhat divided as to which of the two is the better national representative. Memoirs by Wellek, 1895 (2d ed. 1899), 1914, Hostinsky, 1901, Nedjedly, 1903, '22, Krejčí, 1906, W. Ritter, 1907, Zich, 1912, Hoffmeister, 1914, and Helfert, 1917. G.

Smith, Alice Mary (London, 1839–1884, do.). Able English composer, pupil of W. S. Bennett and Macfarren, from 1867 wife of the London lawyer F. Meadows White. Wrote 2 symphonies, the overtures Endymion, Lalla Rookh, Masque of Pandora and Jason, a clarinet-concerto, an Introduction and Allegro for piano and orchestra, 3 string-quartets, 4 piano-quartets, a piano-trio, the cantatas Rudesheim, 1865, Ode to the Northeast Wind, 1880, Ode to the Passions, 1882, Song of the Little Balmung, 1883, and The Red King, 1884, part-songs and songs. G.

Smith, Bernard [Bernhard Schmidt] (?1630–1708). 17th C. G.

Smith, David Stanley (Toledo, O. 1877). Eminent American organist, conductor and composer, trained by Hor. Parker, Thuille and Widor, from 1903 teacher at the Yale School of Music (New Haven, Conn.), becoming professor in 1916 and director in 1920 (succeeding Parker), besides from 1912 taking Parker's place as conductor of the symphony-concerts and the Oratorio Society. For many years he was also organist at New Haven churches and since 1918 has led the Choral Art Club. In 1914 he lectured at the summer-session of the University of California. Mus.D. of Northwestern Univ. in 1918. Has written symphonies in F min. (1912) and D (1918), the symphonic poem Darkness and Dawn, the overtures in E-flat (1898), Joyeuse, 1904, Sérieuse and Prince Hal, 1912, the orchestral Commemoration March, 1901, Allegro Giocoso, Symphonic Ballad, L'Allegro, Il Penseroso and 4 Impressions, a Prelude, Chorale and Fugue for organ and orchestra, a Fantasy for piano and do., string-quartets in E min. (1912) and A (1915), a piano-trio in G, the choral works Commencement Ode, 1900, The Fallen Star, 1909 (Paderewski prize), The Djinns and Ave Jesu (or Rhapsody of St. Bernard), 1918, anthems, part-songs (some with orchestra) and songs, besides a 2-act opera (not given). A.

Smith, Gerrit (Hagerstown, Md. 1859–1912, Darien, Conn.). American organist, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory and of S. P. Warren, Eug. Thayer, Sherwood and Haupt, from 1885 organist at the South (Reformed) Church in New York, besides teaching at Union Theological Seminary and the Master School (Brooklyn). He was the first president of the Manuscript Society and of the Am. Guild of Organists. Wrote the cantata King David, anthems, choruses, about 100 songs, etc. A.

Smith, John (Cambridge, 1797–1861, Dublin). English church-musician, from 1815 active in Dublin, at first in the choir at Christ Church Cathedral and from 1819 at St. Patrick's, becoming also composer to the Chapel Royal and from 1847 professor at the University (Mus.D. 1827). Wrote the oratorio The Revelation, church-music and glees, besides editing an anthem-collection (1837). G.

Smith, John Christopher (Ansbach, 1712–1795, Bath), name originally Schmidt. Bavarian organist and composer, brought up in London as pupil and lifelong friend of Handel, with lessons also from Pepusch and Roseingrave, from 1754 organist at the Foundling Hospital and at many renderings of Handel's oratorios. To him Handel bequeathed scores, harpsichord, etc. From 1774 he lived at Bath. Wrote 10 operas, many oratorios (2 compiled from Handel's), 2 cantatas, etc. See Coxe's Anecdotes, 1799. G.

Smith, John Stafford (Gloucester, 1750–1836, London). Able English organist, pupil of Boyce and Nares, from 1784 singer in the Chapel Royal, from 1802 one of its organists and in 1805-17 choirmaster. Wrote many glees, songs and anthems and edited Musica Antiqua, 1812. G.

Smith, Thomas Max (New York, 1874). American critic, from 1903 on the staff of the New York Press and from 1916 on that of the American. A.

Smith, Wilson George (Elyria, O. 1855). Talented American pianist and composer, pupil of Otto Singer, Kiel, the Scharwenkas, Kullak, Raif and Moszkowski, since 1882 a successful teacher in Cleveland and from 1902 critic for the Press. Has written a large number of brilliant and effective piano-pieces and études, with many arrangements, and about 40 songs. A.

Smolensky, Stepan Vassilievitch (Kazan, 1848-1909, do.). Important Russian church-musician, from 1889 director of the Synodal School and Choir at Moscow and professor of church-music at the Conservatory, and in 1901-03 director of the court-choir at Petrograd. At Moscow he gathered a unique collection of mss. (from the 15th cent. onward) in 1895 publishing an account of it. Author of many essays in the Musical Gazette, monographs on notation (1888, 1901) and a text-book in choir-singing (5th ed. 1900). Memoir by Findeisen, 1910. G.

Smolian, Artur (Riga, 1856-1911, Leipzig). German-Russian conductor and critic, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from 1879 theater-conductor at Berlin, Basel and Stettin, in 1884 choral leader in Leipzig, then teacher at Wiesbaden, from 1890 at the Karlsruhe Conservatory and critic for the Zeitung there, and after 1901 in Leipzig as editor of the Neue Musikal. Presse (till 1903) and of Seemann's Führer and writer for the Zeitung and the Wochenblatt, gaining the title of royal professor in 1911. Author of Vom Schwinden d. Gesangskunst, 1903, Stella del Monte, 1903 (concerning Berlioz) and articles in the Brockhaus Lexikon, besides editing Berlioz' works for the Eulenburg Edition. He was a partisan of Wagner and in 1889 assisted at Bayreuth.

Smulders, Karl Anton (Maestricht, 1863). Dutch composer, trained at the Liège Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1889) and long teacher there, besides work as critic and novelist. Has written many orchestral works, including the symphonic poem Adieu, Absence, Retour, Marche Solennelle, 2 piano-concertos, a violin-sonata, Hebrew Melodies for 'cello and orchestra, a piano-sonata, motets, choruses and songs.

Smyth, Ethel Mary (London, 1858). Eminent English composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Herzogenberg, from 1884 attracting attention by instrumental works, from 1893 by a mass and from about 1900 by operas. Mus. D. of Durham Univ. in 1910. Her virile conception, versatility of resource and poetic sensibility have been widely recognized. Has written the operas Fantasio (original text), 1898, Der Wald (do.), 1901, Les Naufragés, 1906 (as The Wreckers, 1909), and The Boatwain's Mate (original text), 1917, 2 symphonies, overture to Antony and Cleopatra, 1890, an orchestral Serenade, 1890, a string-quintet (1884), a string-quartet, sonatas for violin (1887) and for 'cello, organ-preludes, a mass (1893), and many songs (some with orchestra). In 1911 she was prominent as a suffragist, at that time writing The March of the Women, etc. In 1920 she received the equivalent of knighthood (with the title 'Dame'). G, A.

Snel, Joseph François (Brussels, 1793-1861, n. do.). Belgian violinist and teacher, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1815 soloist at the Grand Théâtre in Brussels and from 1830 conductor, from 1831 also of a choral society and from 1835 choirmaster at Ste.-Gudule. In 1818 he started a music-school (with Mees), using Galin's and Wilhelm's methods, in 1828 became head of a bandmasters' school, in 1829 was made inspector of all such schools and in 1837 was named 'chef de musique' for the City Guard. Wrote a great variety of vocal and instrumental music, including ballets, symphonies, masses, concertos, military marches, etc.

Snoer, Johannes (Amsterdam, 1868). Able Dutch harpist, pupil of E. Schuëcker, in 1894-1910 soloist at the Gewandhaus, Leipzig, and since 1912 with the Winderstein Orchestra there. In 1902-04 he played at Bayreuth and in 1904-05 toured in both Europe and America. Author of Die Harfe als Orchesterinstrument, 1898, a method and many studies, besides various pieces.

Söbølewski, Eduard (Königsberg, 1808-1872, St. Louis). Polish-Prussian conductor and composer, pupil of Weber, from about 1830 theater- and later choral conductor at Königsberg, from 1854 at Bremen, in 1859 migrating to America and at St. Louis forming an orchestra. Wrote 4 operas (1833-58), 3 oratorios, 2 symphonies, the symphonic poems Vineta and Meeresphantasie, cantatas and choruses. Author of Oper nicht Drama, 1858, and Das Geheimnis d. neuesten Schule d. Musik, 1859.

Söderman, August Johan (Stockholm, 1832-1876, do.). Gifted Swedish composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1860 chorus-master and from 1862 assistant-conductor at the Stockholm Opera. Wrote operettas (including The Wedding at Ulfasa), music for Schiller's Jungfrau von Orleans, a notable mass, an overture, effective part-songs, etc. G.

Södning, Karl Erik (Mogata, 1819-1884, Västervik). Swedish school-teacher at Västervik, a collector of folk-songs and old instruments. His account of the former is in the library of the Stockholm Musical Academy and part of his instruments in the Gothenburg Museum. In 1850-59 he was organist in Buenos Aires.

Soffredini, Alfredo (Leghorn, 1854-1923, Milan). Italian writer and composer, in 1896-1912 editor of the Gazzetta Musicale in Milan and then critic for Natura ed Arti. Author of Le Opere di Verdi, 1901, and a sketch of 18th-century Italian music for Lavignac's Encyclo- pédie (1913). Also wrote the operas Il Saggio, 1883, Salvatorello, 1894, Aurora, 1897, La Coppa d'Oro, 1900, Graziella, 1902, and Il Leone, 1914, with 2 others.

Sohn, Joseph (New York, 1887). American writer, pupil of the Berlin Akademie, now teacher and critic in New York. Author of lives of Schumann (1896) and Joachim (1904), Opera in New York, 1907, The Mission of Wagner, 1910, etc. A.

Sokalsky, Peter Petrovitch (Kharkov, 1832-1887, Odessa). Russian folk-song specialist, originally a school-teacher, in 1857-60 in the consular service at New York and in 1860-76 editor in Odessa, where in 1864 he started the Philharmonic Society. Author of the thorough treatise The Russian Folk-Song, 1888 (edited by his brother). Wrote the operas The Siege of Dubno, 1884, Mazeppa and May-Night, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Sokalsky, Vladimir Ivanovitch (Heidelberg, 1863), nephew and pupil of the above. Russian (German) lawyer, writing a symphony, a Dramatische Phantasie for orchestra, an Andante Elegiaco for 'cello and orchestra, a piano-suite and other pieces, songs and the children's opera The Turnip, 1900. G.

Sokolov, Nikolai Alexandrovitch (Petrograd, 1859). Talented Russian composer, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1886 harmony-teacher for the court-choir and since 1896 at the Conservatory. Has written the ballet Les Cygnes Sauvages, music for Shakespeare's A Winter's Tale, an orchestral polka (La Caresante), Élégie and Divertissement, 2 serenades for strings, 3 string-quartets, a 'cello-suite, violin- and 'cello-pieces, piano-variations, many a cap-pella and other choruses and about 80 songs. G.

Sokolov, Nikolai Grigorovitch (n. Kiev, 1886). Gifted Russian violinist and conductor, from early youth trained in America at the Yale School of Music and under Loeffler, from 1903 playing in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in 1911 touring in France and England, from 1916 head of a Quartet in San Francisco and of the Philharmonic Orchestra, and since 1918 conductor of the new Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, which he has made significant, besides engagements as guest-conductor elsewhere in America and Europe.

Solano, Francisco Ignatio (Coimbra, ?1720-1800, Lisbon). Able Portuguese theorist, writing a series of treatises on harmony and form (1764-1793).

Soldat, Marie (Graz, 1864). Excellent Styrian violinist, pupil of Pleiner, Pott and Joachim (Mendelssohn prize at the Berlin Hochschule), from 1885 touring from Berlin and after 1889 (when she married the lawyer Röger) from Vienna. From 1887 she led her own Quartet (women-players) and at Vienna formed another, which is still active. She has specialized in Brahms' music. She lives at Knittenfeld, Styria. G.

Solenière, Eugène de (Paris, 1872-1904, do.). French writer, musically trained in Munich and Brunswick, from about 1895 active in Paris as lecturer on musical aesthetics. Author of lives of Rose Caron (1895), Massenet (1897) and Saint-Saëns (1899), La Femme Compositeur, 1894, Notes Musicales, 1896, Musique et Religion, 1897, Cent Années de Musique Française, 1901, Notules et Impressions Musicales, 1902, and an analysis of Eranger's Fils d'Étoile (1904).

Solerti, Angelo (?-1907, Rome). Learned Italian historian of literature, author of many works, including Le Origini del Melodramma, 1903, Gli Albori del Melodramma, 3 vols. 1905 [both on the first operas], and monographs on the court-music at Florence and Ferrara.

Sollié [Soulier], Jean Pierre (Nîmes, 1753-1812, Paris). French baritone (originally tenor), long a favorite at the Comédie Italienne in Paris, also writing nearly 35 comic operas (from 1792). G.

Soloviev, Nikolai Theopemptovitch (Petrozavodsk, 1846). Gifted Russian theorist and composer, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory and since 1874 professor there. Has written the operas Vakula the Smith, 1875 (comic), Cordelia, 1883, and The Cottage at Kolomna, the symphonic picture Russia and the Mongols, 1882, the cantata Samson, 1870, the prize-chorus Prayer for Russia, 1876, other choruses, songs and characteristic piano-pieces, besides completing Serov's Power of the Enemy (1871). He has served much as critic and was musical editor of the Russian edition of the Brockhaus Lexikon.

Soltys, Miecyslaw (Lemberg, 1863). Galician conductor and composer, pupil of Kenn and Gigout, since 1901 conductor of the Musical Society at Lemberg and head of the Conservatory. Has written the operas The Republic of Babin, 1905, Maria, 1909, Mr. Lover and A Ukrainian Story, the oratorios The Vow of John Casimir and L'Inferno, a symphony, 3 symphonic poems, a piano-concerto, a trio-andante, choruses, songs and piano-pieces. His son Adam (b. 1890), educated at Lemberg and Berlin (Ph.D. 1921), is now teacher and conductor at the Lemberg Conservatory, director of the choral society Lutnia, composer of 2 symphonies, 2 overtures, sonatas for violin and for piano, etc., and author of a study of Georg Oesterreich (1922).

Somborn, Theodor Karl (Barmen, 1851). Rhenish vocal composer, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from 1878 choral conductor at Lehr, in 1882-1911 theory-teacher and librarian at the Strasburg Conservatory (royal professor from 1902), then at Venice and since 1913 in Munich. Has written the operas Philenor, 1903, and Die Flammen (not given), several song-cycles, other songs, men's choruses, 2 sets of Italian folk-songs and some piano-pieces. Author of Die venezian. Villota, 1901.

Somervell, Arthur (Windermere, 1863). Eminent English composer, pupil of Stanford, the Berlin Hochschule and the Royal College, London, in 1893-1901 teacher at the latter and then Stainer's successor as music-inspector for the Board of Education (trips to Australia and South Africa in 1900, '05). Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1903. Has written the oratorio The Passion of Christ, 1914, the choral works A Song of Praise, 1891, The Power of Sound, 1895, The Forsaken Merman, 1895, Elegy, 1896, The Charge of the Light Brigade, 1896, Ode to the Sea, 1897, and Ode on the Intimations of Immortality, 1907, a mass (1891), the symphony Thalana, 1913, the orchestral ballad Helen of Kirkconnel, 1892, the suite In Arcady, 1897 (for small orchestra), the variations Normandy, 1912, for piano and orchestra, a Konzertstück, 1913, for violin and do., variations for two pianos, many piano-pieces, the song-cycles Maud, Love in Springtime, The Shropshire Lad and James Lee's Wife, about 40 other songs, the pantomime The Blue Cloth, 4 children's operettas and a collection of British folk-songs. G.

Somis, Giovanni Battista (in Piedmont, 1676–1763, Turin). Eminent Italian violinist, pupil of Corelli and Vivaldi, long soloist and court-conductor at Turin (teacher of Giardini, Chabran, Pugnani, Leclair, etc.). Wrote a concerto, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, etc. His brother Lorenzo was also a fine violinist, writing many sonatas (some for trio). G.

Sommer, Hans [Hans Friedrich August Zincken] (Brunswick, 1837–1922, do.). Noted North German writer and vocal composer, originally mathematician and physicist (Ph.D. Göttingen) and in 1859–84 professor or director at the Technological School in Brunswick. From about 1860 he was an active promoter of music there, in 1863 starting the Konzertverein and for years conducting it. He contributed extensively to all the leading German musical periodicals. Wrote the operas Der Nachtwächter, 1865, Loreley, 1891, Saint Foix, 1894, Der Meermann, 1896, Rübezahl, 1904, Riquet mit dem Schopf, 1907, Der Waldschrott, 1912, and 3 not given entire, the effective song-cycles Der Rattenfänger von Hameln, Der wilde Jäger, Hunold Singuf, Tannhäuser, Sapphos Gesänge, Aus dem Süden, Werners Lieder aus Welschland and Eliland, 2 sets of Balladen und Romanzen and many others, besides various pieces of patriotic music. For Eitner's Publikationen he edited Schürmann's Ludovicus Pius. In 1898 he was one of the founders of the Royalty Union. Sketch by Stier, 1906 (in Monographien moderner Musiker). G.

Sondheimer, Robert (Mayence, 1881). Hessian historical student, trained at Bonn, Berlin and Basel Universities, at the Cologne Conservatory and by Humperdinck and F. E. Koch. From 1922 he has published selected works to illustrate the evolution of the modern sonata (a quartet by Joh. Stamitz, a symphony, quintet and quartet by Boccherini, etc.) and is preparing a history of the preclassical symphony, parts of which have appeared in periodicals. He has also composed an opera and other works (unpublished). He lives in Berlin as teacher, conductor and critic.

Sonneck, Oscar George Theodore (Jersey City, N. J. 1873). Distinguished American musicologist and librarian, educated at Heidelberg and Munich Universities, in music pupil of Kwast, Sandberger, M. E. Sachs, K. Schröder and Knorr, with study also in Italy. From 1902 he was in charge of the music-division of the Library of Congress in Washington, raising it to the highest rank among musical libraries. In 1915 he became editor of the new Musical Quarterly and since 1917 has been one of the managers for its publisher, G. Schirmer, in New York. He was a leading spirit in the formation of the recent Society for the Publication of American Music. Author of Classification of Music and Literature about Music, 1904 (revised, 1917), Francis Hopkinson and James Lyon, 1905, Bibliography of Early Secular American Music, 1905, Early Concert-Life in America, 1907, Historical Report on The Star-Spangled Banner, America, Hail Columbia and Yankee Doodle, 1909, Critical History of The Star-Spangled Banner, 1914, Catalogue of Opera-Librettos before 1800, 2 vols. 1914, Early Opera in America, 1915, Catalogue of First Editions of S. C. Foster, 1917, Suum Cuique, 1916 (essays), and Miscellaneous Studies in the History of Music, 1921, besides two volumes of poems (1895, '98), a Protest gegen Symbolismus in d. Musik, 1897, and articles in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. Has also written many songs, a Symphonischer Satz for small orchestra, a string-quartet, violin- and piano-pieces. A.

Sonneleithner, Christoph (Szegedin, 1734–1786, Vienna). Hungarian lawyer at Vienna and amateur composer of several symphonies, many quartets and good church-music. G.

Sonneleithner, Joseph (Vienna, 1765–1835, do.), son of the above. Austrian government official and promoter of musical enterprises in 1804–14 in charge of the court-theaters (succeeding Kotzebue), in 1813 founder of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and then its secretary, in 1817 one of the active promoters of the new Conservatory and specially interested in its library and in 1827 the discoverer of the famous St. Gall Antiphonary. Compiler of the Wiener Theatralmanach, 1794–96. He was intimate with Gerber, Schubert and Grillparzer and member of many musical societies. His nephew Leopold (1797–1873) was likewise assiduous in furthering musical interests in Vienna. He was one of the earliest to bring Schubert to public notice. To the Musikfreunde he left voluminous data about opera in Vienna and assisted Jahn with his biography of Mozart. G.

Sontag, Henriette Gertrude Walpurgis (Coblentz, 1806–1854, Mexico City). Famous Rhenish operatic soprano, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, but trained for the stage from childhood. She sang at Prague at fifteen and at Vienna for four years (including premières of Weber's Euryanthe, 1823, and of Beethoven's 9th Symphony and Missa Solemnis, 1824), proceeding in 1825 to Berlin, in 1826 to Paris and in 1828 to London, everywhere securing enormous applause for the beauty of her voice and style. She was secretly married to Count Rossi, a diplomat in the Sardinian service, and in 1830 gained a title from the King of Prussia so as to be received as his wife. She then left the stage, but continued to sing at times in concert. After the revolutions of 1848, however, she felt obliged to take up opera again, with as great success as before. She died of cholera while on an extended trip in America. Memoir by Stümcke, 1913. G.

Sontheim, Heinrich (n. Göppingen, 1820–1912, Stuttgart). Noted Württemberger operatic tenor, from 1840 appearing at Zurich, from 1843 at Karlsruhe and in 1856–72 at Stuttgart, with many trips elsewhere. Memoir by Leo Adler, 1916.

Soomer, Walter (Liegnitz, 1878). Eminent Silesian operatic bass, pupil of Stoeckert, Jos. Wolf and Anna Uhlig, in 1902 appearing at Colmar, from 1906 at Halle (becoming noted as a Wagnerian interpreter), from 1906 at Leipzig and since 1911 at Dresden, besides from 1908 singing regularly at Bayreuth and in 1909–11 at the Metropolitan in New York.

Sor [Sors], Fernando (Barcelona, 1778–1839, Paris). Spanish guitarist, from 1808 active at Paris, with sojourns at London and Moscow. Wrote sonatas, fantasias, études, etc., and a method, besides 2 operas.

Sorge, Georg Andreas (n. Rudolstadt, 1703–1778, Lobenstein). Saxon organist, from 1722 in court-service at Lobenstein, chiefly noted as an early observer of 'combinational' tones (see his text-book in composition, 1745–47), besides writing good organ-works and other church-music.

Soriano. See Suriano.

Soriano-Fuertes, Mariano (Murcia, 1817–1880, Madrid). Able Spanish teacher and writer, pupil of his father, in 1843–44 teaching at the Madrid Conservatory and then director successively of the lyceums of Cordova, Seville and Cadiz, besides conducting opera at Seville, Cadiz and Barcelona and in 1860 starting the Gaceta Musical. Author of the valuable Historia de la Música Arabo-Española, 4 vols. 1855–59, and other historical essays (1853–67). G.

Sormann, Alfred Richard Gotthilf (Danzig, 1861–1913, Berlin). Prussian pianist, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule and of Liszt, from 1886 on tour, from 1889 court-pianist at Neustrelitz and finally at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin). Wrote the operas Die Sibylle von Tivoli, 1902, and König Harald, 1909, overtures, a piano-concerto, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, notable piano-études and pieces, etc.

Soubies, Albert (Paris, 1846–1918, do.). Eminent French critic and historian, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1874 editor of the long-suspended Almanach des Spectacles [1752–1815], from 1876 critic for Le Soir (under the pen-name 'B. de Lomagne'), Ménestrel, Revue de l'Art Dramatique, etc. He was officier in the Légion d'Honneur, besides holding other honors. Author of histories of music in Germany (1896), Russia (1897), Bohemia (1898), Hungary (1898), Portugal (1898), Switzerland (1899), Spain (1900, 3 vols.), Belgium (1901, 2 vols.), Holland (1901), Denmark and Sweden (1901), Norway (1903) and Great Britain (1904–06, 2 vols.), Histoire de l'Opéra-Comique, 2 vols. 1892 (with Malherbe), Histoire du Théâtre-Lyrique, 1899, Le Théâtre Italien, 1913, essays on Wagner, Gounod's Faust and Massenet, etc. G.

Soubre, Étienne Joseph (Liège, 1813–1871, do.). Belgian conductor and composer, from 1838 choral leader at Liège, from 1844 head of the Brussels Philharmonic and Réunion Lyrique and after 1862 director of the Liège Conservatory (following Dassoigne-Méhul). Wrote the opera Isohne, 1855, a prize-symphony (1854), the cantata Sardanapale, 1841, a Hymne à Godefroid de Bouillon, 1850, a Requiem, Stabat Mater and Ave Maria, other church-music, choruses, etc.

Souhatty, Jean Jacques. 17th C.

Soulage, Marcelle (Lima, 1894). French-Peruvian composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, writing a piano-trio (1921), a trio-suite (Prix Lepaulle, 1918), sonatas for violin, for viola (1921) and for 'cello (1920), other chamber-pieces, a harp-duet and a Choral et Danse for harp, piano-variations, some songs, etc.

Sousa, John Philip (Washington, 1854). Famous American bandmaster (father Portuguese, mother Bavarian), pupil of Esputa and Benkert, from 1872 violinist in theaters in Washington and Philadelphia (in 1876–77 under Offenbach) and from 1879 beginning to write comic operas. As early as 1867 he had played in the Marine Band (Washington) and in 1880–92 was its leader, then forming his own band, with which he has toured throughout America, four times in Europe and once around the world (1910–11). He holds many honors and decorations. Has written over 10 comic operas, 8 suites for band, the scenic Sheridan's Ride and the symphonic Chariot-Race, about 100 marches, some 20 dances, about 50 songs and several arrangements. G, A.

Sowerby, Leo (Grand Rapids, Mich. 1895). Gifted American composer, pupil of Lampert, A. O. Anderson and Grainger, teacher at the American Conservatory (Chicago), organist at the South Congregational Church and critic for the Inter-Ocean. During the war he was bandmaster in the artillery. In 1922 he was sent to Rome on a prize-scholarship. Has written (for orchestra) Comes Autumn-Time, Set of Four (both 1918), a symphony (1922), 3 British Folk-Tune Settings and The Sorrow of Mydath, concertos for 'cello and for piano (1919), a wood-quintet, a serenade for string-quartet, a trio for flute, viola and piano (1919); sonatas for two violins and 'cello, for violin, for organ and for piano, 2 violin-suites, 4 chorale-preludes for organ, a cappella choruses, etc. A.

Sowinski, Albert [Wojcech] (Ladyzn, 1803–1880, Paris). Polish (Ukrainian) pianist, pupil of Czerny, Leidersdorf and Seyfried, from about 1825 touring in Italy and after 1830 player and teacher in Paris, visiting London in 1842. Wrote 2 operas, an oratorio, masses, 2 symphonies, overtures, a piano-concerto, polonaises and salon-pieces. Author of a lexicon of Polish and Slav musicians (1857).

Spagna, Arcangelo. 17th C.

Spalding, Albert (Chicago, 1888). Eminent American violinist, trained at the Bologna Conservatory and by Lefort, making his début in 1905 at Paris, then touring in France, Germany and England and, after a visit to America in 1908–09, in Scandinavia, Russia, Holland, Italy and Egypt, and since 1912 regularly in America. In the World War he was in service in 1917–19. Has written 2 violin-concertos, orchestral variations, a violin-suite and sonata, many pieces and songs. A.

Spalding, Walter Raymond (Northampton, Mass. 1865). Able American organist and teacher, pupil of S. B. Whitney, A. W. Locke and Paine, later of Guilman, Widor, Rheinberger and Thuille, in 1888–92 teacher of languages at St. Mark's School (Southboro, Mass.) and since 1895 instructor or assistant-professor at Harvard University, in 1906 succeeding Paine as head of the music-division. He began service as organist when but eleven and until 1900 played at various churches, including Christ (Cambridge) and Emmanuel (Boston). Author of Tonal Counterpoint, 1904, Modern Harmony, 1905 (with Foote), and Music, an Art and a Language, 1920. A.

Spangenberg, Heinrich (Darmstadt, 1861). Hessian pianist and teacher, pupil of the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfurt) and of N. Rubinstein, Leschetizky and Grädener, from 1882 on tour, from 1884 opera-conductor at Mayence and teacher at the Conservatory, from 1886 leader of the Lehrerverein at Wiesbaden and for a time teacher at Freudenberg's music-school, soon establishing his own school, which still continues. Has written the operas Frau Holle, 1896, Korsische Hochzeit, 1904, '05 (2 parts), Der Hezengeiger (not given) and Sah ein Knab' ein Röslein steh'n, 1917, several orchestral pieces, a violin-suite, a Prelude and Double Fugue for organ, many effective men's choruses and songs.

Spanuth, August (n. Hanover, 1857–1920, Berlin). North German pianist and editor, trained at the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfurt), appearing from 1874 at Coblenz and Bremen and in America (1886). From 1887 he taught at the Chicago Musical College and in 1893–1906 in New York, there also acting as critic for the Staatszeitung. From 1906 he was teacher at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin and from 1907 also editor of the Signale. Published piano-pieces, songs, piano-exercises and a method (with X. Scharwenka), an edition of Liszt's piano-works and a translation of Caruso's How to Sing (1914).

Spargur, John Mitchell (Cincinnati, 1879). American violinist, pupil of Max Schwartz and Carl Hild, from 1894 leader in a theatrical troupe, later with the Ben Greet Players, from about 1900 player or concertmaster in various New York orchestras, in 1908–09 conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and since 1911 founder and conductor of the Seattle Philharmonic, besides directing festivals and some operatic performances. He has often played in ensemble with eminent players. A.

Spark, William (Exeter, 1823–1897, Leeds). Able English organist, pupil of S. S. Wesley and from about 1843 his assistant at Leeds, where, after short terms elsewhere, from 1850 he was organist at St. George's (till 1880) and from 1859 also borough-organist (at the new Town Hall). In 1851 he started the Madrigal and Motet Society and in 1869 began issuing The Organist's Quarterly Journal and later The Practical Choirmaster. Mus.D. of Dublin Univ. in 1861. Wrote the oratorio Immanuel, 1887, cantatas, anthems, glees, part-songs, solid organ-pieces, etc. Author of a life of Henry Smart (1881), Musical Memories, 1888, and Reminiscences, 1892. G.

Spataro, Giovanni (?1458–1541). 15th C.

Späth, Andreas (n. Coburg, 1792–1876, Gotha). Saxon organist and conductor, pupil of Grumlich and Riotti, from 1810 in the court-band at Coburg, from 1822 organist at Morges (Switzerland), from 1833 town-musician at Neuchâtel and from 1854 court-director at Coburg. Wrote 4 operas (1821–42), oratorios, church-music, chamber- and piano-pieces, etc.

Spazier, Johann Gottlieb Karl (Berlin, 1761–1805, Leipzig). Prussian writer, for a time professor at Giessen University, then living at Newwied, Berlin and Leipzig. Wrote many popular songs. Author of an autobiography (1792–96, 3 vols.), an essay on Gluck's music (1795) and articles in the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, with an edition of Dittersdorf's autobiography (1801) and a translation of part of Grétry's Mémoires (1800). He used the pen-name 'Karl Pilger'.

Speaight, Joseph (London, 1868). English violinist, pupil of his father and the Guildhall School, since 1894 professor there. Has written 2 symphonies, 3 symphonic poems, 2 orchestral suites and a Fairy Fantasy, a piano-concerto and chamber-pieces.

Speaks, Oley (Canal Winchester, O. 1876). American baritone, pupil of Dufft, Galloway, Emma Thursby, Spicker and Macfarlane, since 1898 active in New York. Has written about 100 effective songs, with some anthems and part-songs. A.

Specht, Richard (Vienna, 1870). Able Austrian critic and writer, from about 1895 on the staff of Der Zeit and in 1908–15 of Die Musik. In 1909 he started the semimonthly Der Merker, of which Jul. Bittner till 1919 was associate-editor. Author of two lives of Mahler (1906, '13), two of Strauss (1911, '20-21), and also of Bittner (1921) and Furtwängler (1922), Kritisches Skizzenbuch, 1900, and Das Wiener Operntheater, 1919. In 1912 he married the pianist Vera Schapira.

Speer, Charlton Templeman (Cheltenham, 1859). English pianist, organist and composer, pupil of Stewart, the London Academy and Royal Academy (Bennett Scholar), in 1882-93 teaching at the latter, besides various positions as organist. Has written the operas Helen and Odysseus and Zara, the cantatas The Arsenal, 1877, The Day-Dream, 1887, The Battle of Lake Regillus, 1909, The Soul of Percival, 1911, and The Burial March of Dundee, the symphonic poem King Arthur, the suite Cinderella, an overture, piano-pieces, anthems and songs. G.

Speer, Daniel. 17th C.

Speer, William Henry (London, 1863), cousin of Charlton above. English organist and composer, pupil of Lloyd and the Royal College (London), from about 1890 organist in various churches, in 1903-10 at Bexhill. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1906. Has written the choral works The Jackdaw of Rheims and The Lay of St. Cuthbert, a symphony, the symphonic poem Infancy and Childhood, an overture, an orchestral Rhapsody, a Nocturne for strings, a string-quartet (1894), a violin-sonata and pieces, a piano-sonata and pieces, church-music and songs. G.

Speidel, Wilhelm (Ulm, 1826-1899, Stuttgart). Eminent Württemberger pianist, pupil of Wänner, Kuhe and Ignaz Lachner, from 1846 teaching at Thann, from 1848 at Munich, from 1854 at Ulm (music-director) and from 1857 at Stuttgart, where he led the Liederkrantz, joined Lebert, Faiszt and others in founding the Conservatory and taught in it except in 1874-84, when he conducted his own school. Wrote the choral works (men's voices) O Geist der Töne, Geisterchor aus Faust, Deutsche Völker allesamt, Völkern Schwanenlied, Kaisertlied and Wikinger Ausfahrt, many other men's choruses, overture and intermezzo for König Helge, piano-trios, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, effective piano-pieces and songs.

Spelman, Timothy Mather (Brooklyn, 1891). American composer, trained at Harvard University and by Courvoisier, writing the opera The Sunken City (original text), the pantomime The Romance of the Rose, 1913, a melodrama, the suite Florentine Sketches and songs. A.

Spencer, Allen Hervey (Fairhaven, Vt. 1870). Gifted American pianist, pupil of E. H. and W. H. Sherwood and Lutkin, since 1892 teaching at the American Conservatory in Chicago and in much request as recitalist. Has written piano-pieces and lessons, with many articles on piano-study. A.

Spencer, Eleanor (Chicago, 1890). Gifted American pianist, pupil of Mrs. Cheney, Wm. Mason, Bauer and Leschetizky, appearing first when but ten, and formally in 1910 at London.

Since then she has toured extensively in both Europe and America (from 1913). A.

Spendiarov, Alexander Afanasovitch (Kachov, 1871). Russian composer, pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov, writing an overture, the tone-pictures Crimean Sketches, Die drei Palmen and Danse Ancien (small orchestra), an orchestral Valse de Concert and other pieces, the ballads The Fisherman and the Naïad, Bédas Predigt and Lied des armenischen Freiwilligen, a cappella choruses, songs and some pieces for violin and for 'cello.

Spengel, Julius Heinrich (Hamburg, 1853). North German choral conductor, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory, the Berlin Hochschule, Grädener and Armbrust, from 1878 conductor of the Caecilienverein at Hamburg, from 1884 also teacher at the convent-school and from 1886 organist at the Gertrudenkirche, gaining the title of royal professor in 1906. Has written a symphony, a piano-quintet, a 'cello-sonata, the ballad König Alfreds Gesang, Psalm 39, the choral Zwiesung in der Sommernacht, many choruses and songs. He has also edited Handel's Belshazzar (1905) and prepared an analysis of Bach's B min. Mass. He is an expert in directing a cappella singing.

Speyer [Speier], Wilhelm (Offenbach, 1790-1878, do.). Hessian violinist, pupil of Fränzl, André and Baillot while also taking up a business career, from about 1820 touring as virtuoso. He was intimate with many musicians, such as Spohr and Mendelssohn. In 1838 he promoted the Frankfurt festival that provided the nucleus for the Mozart Scholarship. Wrote fine men's choruses and songs, besides a string-quintet, quartets, etc. G.

Spicker, Max (Königsberg, 1858-1912, New York). Able Prussian conductor and editor, trained by L. Köhler and at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1879 theater-conductor at Heidelberg, Cologne, Ghent, Aix and Potsdam, in 1882 removing to New York, where he led the Beethoven Männerchor (till 1888), from 1888 was director of the Brooklyn Conservatory and after 1895 taught at the National Conservatory, besides for years serving as reader for G. Schirmer and in 1898-1910 as choirmaster at Temple Emanu-El. Wrote an orchestral suite, music for Schiller's Demetrius, the cantata The Pilot, other choral music and songs, besides editing valuable anthologies of folk-songs and arias and a collection of Synagogical Services. A.

Spielter, Hermann (Bremen, 1860). North German conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and winner of the Mendelssohn prize in 1886, from 1885 theater-conductor at Schwelm and from 1889 at Bremerhaven. Migrating to New York in 1894, he at first led the Beethoven Männerchor, in 1897-1911 taught at the College of Music and from 1915 at the Von Ende School. Has written the operetta Die Rajahsbraut, 1910 (with Eggers), the choral works Vineta, Die Wallfahrt nach Kevlaar, Für Freiheit and Landsknechtlied, many choruses, songs, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, a trio-serenade, many piano-pieces, etc. A.

Spiering, Theodore (St. Louis, 1871). Eminent American violinist and conductor, pupil of his father, Sehradieck and Joachim, in 1892-96 playing with the Chicago Orchestra under Thomas and from 1893 also head of his own Quartet (with Roehrborn, Weidig and Diestel), which gave over 400 concerts before 1905. In 1898-1905 he taught in Chicago, from 1899 in his own school and from 1902 at the Chicago Musical College. In 1905-06 he was at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin) and then toured in Germany, England and Holland till 1909, when he came to New York as concertmaster of the Philharmonic and finally as Mahler's substitute in 1911 (17 concerts). In 1911-12 he resumed tours in Europe and then had charge of symphony-concerts in Berlin with the Philharmonic and Blüthner Orchestras. Since 1914 he has been active again in New York or on tour, besides editing violin-works for Carl Fischer. Has written a quartet-scherzo, violin-caprices and studies, piano-pieces and songs. A.

Spies, Hermine (n. Weilburg, 1857-1893, Wiesbaden). Gifted Hessian contralto, pupil of Sieber and Stockhausen, appearing from 1880 with immediate success, especially in the songs of Brahms. In 1892 she married Dr. Hardtmuth of Wiesbaden. Memoir by her sister, 1894 (3d ed. 1904). G.

Spigl, Friedrich (Vienna, 1860). Able Austrian pianist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1881 teacher at the Horák Music School and since 1914 its director (following Brixel). Has written excellent transcriptions of orchestral works (Haydn to Bruckner) and a Klavierschule, 1892 (with Horák), advocating advanced methods. Author of Wagner et Debussy, 1902 (in Revue Bleue), opera-librettos for Schulz-Beuthen, Mandl and da Motta and several plays.

Spindler, Franz Stanislaus (n. Peissenberg, 1759-1819, Strasburg). Bavarian stage-singer and composer, from 1782 appearing at Augsburg, Innsbruck, Brünn and Breslau, for a time also in theatrical troupes (in 1807 in that of Vogel) and from 1808 choirmaster at Strasburg Cathedral. Wrote 12 singspiele (1783-1810), 2 melodramas (1786), music for plays and an oratorio (1808).

Spindler, Fritz (n. Lobenstein, 1817-1905, n. Dresden). Noted Saxon pianist and composer, pupil of Fr. Schneider, from 1841 a favorite teacher in Dresden. Wrote about 300 facile and elegant piano-pieces, besides 2 symphonies, a piano-concerto and Konzertstück, a quintet for piano and wind, a piano-quartet, 4 trios, a horn-sonata, etc. G.

Spinelli, Nicola (Turin, 1865-1909, Rome). Italian composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, writing the short opera Labilia, 1890 (2d prize in Sonzogno competition), and the lyric drama A basso Porto, 1894.

Spiridio, Berthold. 17th C.

Spitta, Friedrich (Wittingen, 1852), brother of the following. Hanoverian theologian, from 1887 professor at Strasburg University, since 1919 at Göttingen University and from 1896 co-editor with Smend of the Monatschrift für Gottesdienst u. Kirchliche Kunst, besides varied activity in church-music in the Evangelical Church. Author (among other works) of Liburg. Andacht zum Luther-Jubiläum, 1883, Die Passionen von Schütz, 1886, Ueber Chorgesang im evangel. Gottesdienst, 1889, Ein feste Burg, 1905, Studien zu Luthers Liedern, 1907, Das deutsche Kirchenlied, vol. i, 1912, lectures on Bach, Handel and Schütz (1885-86), an essay on the Protestant hymn-books (1909, in the Riemann Festschrift) and contributions to Alsatian Gesangbücher, besides editing Mergner's collection of Gerhardt's hymns (1918) and supplying texts for sacred works by Arnold Mendelssohn and Herzogenberg.

Spitta, Julius August Philipp (n. Hoya, 1841-1894, Berlin), brother of the above. Eminent Hanoverian musicologist, trained in philology at Göttingen University, from 1864 school- and gymnasial teacher at Reval, Sondershausen and Leipzig and from 1875 professor of music-history at Berlin University and teacher at the Hochschule (later vice-director), besides being secretary of the Akademie, gaining the title of Geheimrat in 1891. He was one of the chief promoters of the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst (from 1892), and in 1885-94 (with Chrysander and Adler) edited the Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft. Author of a monumental life of Bach (2 vols. 1873-80), Zur Musik, 1892 (16 essays), Die Passionsmusik von Bach u. Schütz, 1893, Musikal. Aufsätze, 1894, valuable articles in Grove's Dictionary (1st ed.), in Waldersee's Vorträge and in many periodicals, besides editing works by Schütz, Buxtehude and Scheidt. He also left in manuscript a Gesch. d. romantischen Oper in Deutschland. G.

Spofforth, Reginald (Southwell, 1770-1827, London). Gifted English glee-composer, pupil of his father and Benj. Cooke, writing many glees still much prized. G.

Spohr, Louis [Ludwig] (Brunswick, 1784-1859, Kassel). Distinguished North German violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of Kunisch, Hartung, Maucourt and Franz Eck, in 1802-03 traveling to Russia with the latter. At fourteen he had begun to play in the Brunswick court-band and in 1803-05 resumed his place, beginning concert-tours in 1804. From 1805 he was concertmaster in the court-orchestra at Gotha (following F. A. Ernst), in 1806 there marrying the harpist Dorette Scheidler, who became his companion on most of his later tours, and in 1809 conducting the first German festival at Frankenhäusen. In 1812 his success as player at Vienna occasioned his becoming conductor (till 1815) at the Theater an der Wien. After extending his renown in Italy and Holland (1815-17) in 1817-19 he was opera-conductor at Frankfort, in 1820 visiting London and Paris. From 1822 he was court-director at Kassel, where, while maintaining his place as one of the greatest violinists of the period, he still more firmly established himself as a conductor of the first rank and a notable composer. In 1857 he retired on pension (largely because of his vigorous republican sympathies) and in 1858 was incapacitated from public playing by breaking an arm. As composer, he presents romantic qualities that ally him with Schubert and Marschner, combined with technical regularity akin to that of Mendelssohn. His tendency to use chromatic intervals and harmonies amounts to a mannerism, in spite of its ingenuity and effectiveness. His works include the following (opus-nos. in brackets):

Dramatic and Choral Works

Operas—Die Prüfung (1806), Atruna (1808), Die Eulenkönigin (1808), Der Zweikampf mit der Geliebten, 1811, Faust [60], 1816 (revised 1852), Zemire und Azor, 1819, Jessonda [63], 1823 (his masterpiece), Der Berggeist [73], 1825, Pietro von Abano [76], 1828, Der Alchymist, 1830, Die Kreuzfahrer, 1845.
Oratorios—Das Jüngste Gericht, 1812, Die letzten Dinge, 1826 (as The Last Judgment, 1830), Des Heilands letzte Stunden, 1835 (as Calvary, 1839), Der Fall Babylons, 1842.
Other choral works—dramatic cantata, Das befreite Deutschland; mass for 5 soli and 2 choirs [45]; hymns, St. Cäcilia [97] and Gott, du bist gross [98]; Psalms [2, 97a], 84 [134] and 128 [122], with 3 others [85]; 2 Vater Unsers [104].

For Orchestra

Symphonies—1, E-flat [20], D min. [49], 3, C min. [78], 4, F, Die Weihe der Töne [86], 5, C min. [102], 6, G, Historical [116], 7, C, Irdisches und Göttliches im Menschenleben (double orchestra) [121], 8, G min. [137], 9, B min., Die Jahreszeiten [143].
Overtures—in C min. [12], D min., Die Prüfung [15a], E-flat, Atruna [21], B min., Macbeth [75], D, Im ersten Styl [126], (fantasia) on Raupach's Die Tochter der Luft [99] (used as first movement of the 5th Symphony), to Das befreite Deutschland and to the play Der Matrose.
Concertos—for quartet [131]; for violin: 1, A min. [1], 2, D min. [2], 3, C min. [7], 4, B min. [10], 5 E-flat [17], 6, G min. [28], 7, E min. [38], 8, A min., Gesangs-scene [47], 9, D min. [55], 10, A min. [62], 11, G [70], 12, A min. [79], 13, E [92], 14, A min., Sonst und Jetzt [110], 15, E min. [128] (nos. 12–14 are concertinos); (concertantes) for two violins in A min. [48] and [88]; for clarinet in C min. [26] and E-flat [57].
Erinnerung an Marienbad (waltzes) [89]; Polonaise in A min. for violin [40]; Potpourris for violin on Irish airs [59] and from Jessonda [66]; do. for violin and 'cello from Jessonda [64]. Also Notturmo for wind and Turkish band [34].

Chamber-Works

Nonet for strings and wind in F [31]; octet do. in E [32]; piano-septet [147]; string-sextet in C [140]. String-quintets in E-flat, G [33], B min. [69], G min. [91], G min. [106], E min. [129] and G min. [144]; piano-quintet [130]; quintet for piano and wind in C min. [52] (also for piano and strings [53]). Double string-quartets in D min. [65], E-flat [77], E min. [87] and B-flat [136]. String-quartets in C, G [4], D min. [11], C, A [15], G min. [27], E-flat, C min., F min. [29], A [30], E [43], C, E min., F min. [45], E-flat, A min., G [58], B min. [61], A [68], A min., B-flat, D min. [74], E, G, A min. [82], E-flat [83], D min., A-flat, B min. [84], A min. [93], A [132], C [141], G [146] and E-flat [152]. Also 3 quartet-variations [6, 8, 81]; 3 quartet-potpourris [5, 22, 24] and 1 for quartet with wind [23]. Piano-trios in E min. [119], F [123], A min. [124], B-flat [133] and G min. [142]. 20 duos for two violins [3, 9, 13, 39, 67, 148, 150, 153]; for violin and viola [13].

3 harp and violin sonatas [113–5].

For violin with piano—sonata in B [16]; 3 rondos [46, 51, 111]; 3 duos [95–6, 112]; 6 duettinos [127]; 3 potpourris [50, 56, 59]; 2 fantasias [117–8]; 12 salon-pieces [135, 145]. Also an augmented edition of Fiorillo's 36 Études (2d violin-part added).
For harp—fantasia in A-flat [35]; variations in F [36].
For clarinet—potpourri [80].
For piano—sonata in A-flat [125]; Rondoletto [149]; sonatina (with voice) [138].

Smaller Vocal Works

9 books of songs [53] [26, 37, 41, 72, 94, 101, 103, 105, 139] and 6 others [154]; scena and aria [71]. 6 duets [107–8]. 24 part-songs [44, 90, 120, 151].

His Violinschule, 3 parts, 1831, embodies the solid worth of his convictions about style and method. His Selbstbiographie, 2 vols. 1860–61, though running only to 1838, is a remarkable record of observations on persons and affairs. Memoirs by Neumann, 1854, Malibran, 1860, Schletterer, 1881 (in Waldersee's Vorträge), Robert, 1883, La Mara, 1892, and Wassermann, 1910 (on his operas). In 1921 a Spohr Museum was opened at Kassel by Hnr. Stein. G.

Spöner, Alfred von (Vienna, 1870). Austrian teacher and composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1898 head of the Katsch music-school in Leipzig (from 1901 known by his own name). Has written a symphony, 2 piano-quintets, 2 piano-quartets, 4 violin-sonatas, the choral work Weihe der Nacht, songs, etc.

Spontini, Gasparo Luigi Pacifico (n. Jesi, 1774–1851, do.). Distinguished Italian composer and conductor, trained at the Conservatorio de' Turchini in Naples, beginning to write for the stage in 1796 and in 1799–1800 acting as temporary court-director for the Naples royal establishment at Palermo. In 1803 he went to Paris and there relinquished the facile Neapolitan style for one influenced by diligent study of Mozart and by intimacy with the librettist Jouy. In spite of much opposition he made his way and in 1807 his Vestale had brilliant success, followed in 1809 by Cortez. In 1810–12 he was conductor of Italian opera at the Odéon and in 1814 was named court-composer under the Restoration. His third great opera, Olympie, was first given in 1819, but without striking success. From 1820, after long negotiations, he became court-director at Berlin, where, though often at odds with the intendant Brühl, he demonstrated his power as both composer and conductor. In 1829 he sought to compete with the vogue of Weber's German operas by the impressive Agnes von Hohenstaufen. After 1830 he wrote little of importance and got into increasing difficulties through arrogance and tactlessness, retiring in 1842 after being tried (and convicted) of lèse-majesté. His conspicuous achievements were the superb discipline of the orchestra and the dignity of certain performances of his own works, with those of Gluck's Armide and Mozart's Don Giovanni. After 1842 he lived in Italy or at Paris, with several visits to Germany (notably at Dresden in 1844 at Wagner's invitation to conduct La Vestale). His genius was uneven and lacking in spontaneity, but had significance in furthering the advance of the grand or historical opera. But his advent was unfortunate in its relation to that of Weber, Meyerbeer and the young Wagner, and his peculiarities involved him in serious antagonisms, especially at Berlin. His undeniable greatness was, however, recognized by many and signalized by decorations from courts, Academies and Halle Univ. (Ph.D.). In 1809 he married the daughter of the piano-maker J. B. Érard at Paris. His works include 16 operas in Italy (the more notable being L'Isola Disabitata and Berenice, both 1798), La Petite Maison, 1804, Milton, 1804, Julie, 1804, La Vestale, 1807, Fernand Cortez, 1809 (revised, 1817), Pélage, 1814, Les Deux Rivaux, 1816, Olympie, 1819, Nurmahal, 1822, Alcidor, 1825, and Agnes von Hohenstaufen, 1829 (revised, 1837), with the uncompleted Das verlorene Paradies (about 1838–40), the festspiel Lalla Rookh, 1821, cantatas, hymns and songs. Many of his works were extensively altered after being produced. Memoirs by Loménie, 1841, Oettinger, 1843, Montanari, 1851, Raoul-Rochette, 1852, Wagner (in his Schriften, vol. v), Robert, 1883, Spitta, 1892 (in Zur Musik), Altmann, 1903 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), and Pougin, 1922 (in Rivista Musicale). G.

Spontone, Bartolommeo. 16th C. G.

Sporck, Georges (Paris, 1870). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and d'Indy, writing a Symphonie Vivaraise, the symphonic poems Islande, Boabdil and Kermesse, the suite Paysages Normandes, Esquisses Symphoniques, Marche Solennelle (with organ), other orchestral pieces, a violin-sonata, a violin-suite, pieces for violin, for 'cello, for English horn and for piano, and many songs, besides editions of classical piano-works.

Spörr, Martin (n. Innsbruck, 1866). Tyrolese conductor, pupil of the Innsbruck Music School and of Fuchs, from 1883 at Innsbruck as player in the theater-orchestra, in 1888–93 teacher at the Music School and in 1893–99 town-director, in 1899–1902 conductor of the Gratz orchestra, from 1903 of the Kurorchestra at Karlsbad and since 1905 of the Konzertverein at Vienna and also of summer-concerts at Kissingen. Has written the short opera Der Abt von Fiecht, 1914, a symphony (1904), an overture, etc.

Springer, Hermann (Döbeln, 1872). Saxon librarian and historical student, trained at Leipzig, Berlin and Paris Universities (Ph.D. 1895), since 1899 in governmental library-service and now head of the music-division of the Berlin Library, holding the title of royal professor since 1914. Since 1895 he has been critic for the Tageszeitung and in 1901–05 also engaged on Gegenwart. Author of articles on the history of musical typography (1901–07), Das altprovenzal. Klagelied, 1895, Alte italien. Canzonetten, 1913, Die venezian. Liedmusik d. Settecento, 1920, and other studies in Italian music-history, besides joining M. Schneider and

Wolffheim in editing the extensions of Eitner's Quellen-Lexikon.

Springer, Max (Schwendl, 1877). Württemberger organist, pupil of Schachleitner and Klička, from about 1900 organist at the St. Emaus abbey at Prague. Has written 3 organ-sonatas, preludes, postludes, etc., a mass, 2 string-quintets, choruses and songs, besides Die Kunst d. Choralbegleitung, 1907, Der liturg. Choralgesang, 1907, and an edition of the Kyriale Romanum with organ-accompaniment.

Spross, Charles Gilbert (Poughkeepsie, N. Y. 1874). Talented American pianist and organist, pupil of X. Scharwenka, E. Gramm and Lachmund, from 1891 organist in Poughkeepsie, from 1900 in Paterson, N. J., from 1908 in New York and since 1913 in Poughkeepsie again. For years he has also been in request as accompanist for many singers of the first rank. Has written the cantatas The Word of God, The Glory of the Resurrection and Christmas Dawn, anthems, part-songs, over 100 songs and pieces for violin and for piano. A.

Spry, Walter (Chicago, 1868). Gifted American pianist, pupil of Regina Watson, Eddy, Leschetizky, Rudorff and Rousseau, in 1897–1900 head of the Quincy (Ill.) Conservatory, in 1903–05 assistant to Sherwood in Chicago, besides in 1900–03 editing Summy's Music Review, in 1905–17 directing his own school and since 1918 in the Columbia School. Has written an overture, a string-quartet, piano-pieces, choruses and songs. A.

Squire, William Barclay (London, 1855). Eminent English librarian and critic, from 1885 in charge of the printed music in the British Museum, in 1888–94 critic for the Saturday Review, in 1894–1901 for the Globe and in 1900–04 for the Pilot, besides contributing to Grove's Dictionary, the Encyclopædia Britannica, the Dict. of National Biography, etc. Author of catalogues of accessions of old music-books at the Museum since 1886 (1899), of music in the library of Westminster Abbey (1903), of music at the Royal College (1909) and of old printed music at the Museum (1912, 2 vols.). He assisted Fuller-Maitland in editing the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book (1899) and has edited works by Purcell, Byrd and Palestrina. He also wrote the librettos of Stanford's Veiled Prophet (1881) and of J. F. Bridge's Callirrhoe (1888). In 1909 he collaborated on the catalogue of the Radnor picture-collection. G. A.

Squire, William Henry (Ross, 1871). Able English 'cellist, pupil of his father and the Royal College (London), from 1891 rapidly becoming a favorite throughout England, often touring with Clara Butt, and teaching at the Royal College and the Guildhall School, besides being examiner at the Royal Academy. Has written a 'cello-concerto and many pieces, works for violin and for piano and songs. G.

Stabile, Annibale. 16th C.

Stade, Friedrich Wilhelm (Halle, 1817–1902, Altenburg). Noted Saxon organist, conductor and composer, pupil of Fr. Schneider, for a short time leader for Beethmann's theatrical troupe, from about 1840 music-director and organist at Jena University and in 1860-91 court-director and organist at Altenburg. He was the first to produce in Germany Berlioz' Requiem, Roméo and Symphonie Fantastique. Wrote music for Rossmann's Orestes, 2 symphonies, an overture, violin-duets and a sonata, 7 books of organ-pieces, a piano-suite and many excellent pieces, cantatas for Christmas and Easter, other choral works, student-songs, etc., besides arrangements from Bach and Handel and a collection of Minnesongs.

Stade, Friedrich Ludwig Rudolf (Arnstadt, 1844). Thuringian organist and writer, pupil of Riedel and Richter, besides study at Leipzig University (Ph.D.), from about 1865 teacher at Leipzig and contributor to the Neue Zeitschrift, from 1885 organist at the Reformed Church and since 1895 at the Peterskirche, besides from 1886 being secretary of the Gewandhaus concerts. He was made royal professor in 1914. Author of Vom Musikalisch-Schönen, 1870 (2d ed. 1904, against Hanslick), and editor of the 6th ed. of Brendel's Geschichte (1879). Sketch by Prüfer, 1904 (in Musikal. Wochenblatt).

Staden, Johann (1581-1634). 17th C. G.

Staden, Sigmund Theophilus (1607-1655). 17th C. G.

Stadler, Maximilian (Melk, 1748-1833, Vienna). Austrian priest and church-musician, from 1815 in Vienna. Wrote the oratorio Die Befreiung Jerusalems, 1811, masses and much other sacred music, organ-fugues, piano-sonatas, a cantata, choruses for Collin's Polyzena, songs, etc. Author of retorts to the attacks on the genuineness of Mozart's Requiem (1826-27). G.

Stadlmayr, Johann (1560-1648). 16th C. G.

Stadtfeldt, Alexander (Wiesbaden, 1826-1853, Brussels). Short-lived Hessian composer, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1849), writing the opera Hamlet, 1857, and 2 others, 4 symphonies, overtures, 2 piano-concertinos, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a cantata, vocal scenas, a mass, a Te Deum, etc.

Stägemann, Max (Freienwalde, 1843-1905, Leipzig). Prussian baritone and impresario, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory, from 1862 actor at Bremen, from 1865 singing at Hanover, from 1876 at Königsberg and in 1879-82 at Berlin (concerts). From 1882 he was manager of the Leipzig Opera.

Stahlberg, Frederick (Ketzin, 1877). Prussian violinist, pupil of Garn, Schapitz and J. A. Mayer, coming to America in 1899 as member of the Pittsburgh Orchestra and since 1908 of the New York Philharmonic, as well as assistant-conductor. Has written an opera, 2 symphonies, 3 orchestral suites and several other pieces, violin- and piano-pieces and songs. -A.

Stahlknecht, Adolf (Warsaw, 1813-1887, Berlin) and Julius (Posen, 1817-1892, Berlin), brothers, the former violinist and the latter cellist, from about 1835 touring together, from 1844 with the pianist Steifensand and later with Löschhorn, giving trio-recitals at Berlin and finally both playing in the court-orchestra. Adolf wrote an opera, 7 symphonies, many entr'actes, chamber-music and much church-music, and Julius concert-pieces for 'cello.

Stainer [Steiner], Jakob (1621-1683). 17th C. G.

Stainer, John (London, 1840-1901, Verona). Distinguished English organist and composer, trained as choirboy at St. Paul's by Bayley and Steggall, with lessons also from Cooper and later study at Oxford. At fourteen he began playing in London, in 1856 went as the first organist at Ouseley's college at Tenbury and from 1860 was University organist at Oxford, as well as at Magdalen College, becoming Mus. D. in 1865. In 1872-88 he was Goss' successor as organist at St. Paul's (London), soon acquiring a position of unique influence both as player and as promoter of musical education. Besides activity in numerous other enterprises, from 1876 he taught at the Nat. Training School, succeeded Sullivan as principal in 1881 and continued teaching in the Royal College after 1883. From 1882 he followed Hullah as inspector of music in elementary schools throughout the kingdom. In 1889-99 he was professor at Oxford University, succeeding Ouseley. From 1878 he was a member of the Légion d'Honneur, was knighted in 1888 and was made Mus.D. by Durham Univ. in 1892. Wrote the oratorio Gideon (1865), the cantatas The Daughter of Jairus, 1878, St. Mary Magdalene, 1883, and The Crucifixion, 1887, 4 services, about 50 anthems, canticles, organ-pieces and songs. Author of a dictionary of terms (1876, with Barrett), The Music of the Bible, 1879 (enlarged by Galpin, 1914), Dufay and his Contemporaries, 1898, Early Bodleian Music, 2 vols. 1902 (edited by his daughter), and various text-books in harmony, organ-playing, etc. Memoir in Musical Times, 1901. G.

Stainlein-Saareinstein, Louis Charles Georges Corneille de (1819-1867, n. Liège). Hungarian 'cellist (amateur), from about 1845 favorably known in Germany and France and later giving quartet-recitals in Paris with Sivori and others. Wrote a sextet, a quintet, 2 quartets, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, etc.

Stamaty, Camille Marie (Rome, 1811-1870, Paris), son of a Greek father and French mother. Noted piano-teacher, pupil of Kalkbrenner (for a short time of Mendelssohn), from 1835 active in Paris, at first as a brilliant player. Among his pupils were Gottschalk and Saint-Saëns. Wrote a concerto, a piano-trio, 2 sonatas and many études of value. G.

Stamitz, Johann Anton (Mannheim, 1754-1820?, Paris), son of the next. Badenese violinist, pupil of his father, going with his brother Karl (see below) to Paris in 1770, where he was long noted as player and teacher (Kreutzer among his pupils). Wrote 13 symphonies, over 50 quartets, trios, duets, concertos for violin, for 'cello, for bassoon and for piano, trio-sonatas for violin, flute and bass, etc. G.

Stamitz, Johann Wenzel Anton (Deutsch-Brod, 1717–1757, Mannheim). Distinguished Bohemian violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father (schoolmaster and cantor). In 1742 he appeared at Frankfurt as soloist in connection with the coronation of Charles VII as emperor, making so great an impression that in 1743 the Elector Palatine engaged him for his orchestra at Mannheim, making him conductor in 1745. His leadership, teaching and compositions marked an epoch in orchestral style, establishing what is known as the 'Mannheim school' and laying the foundation for the whole 'classical' period. The influence of his work was spread by numerous pupils and observers into Germany, Austria, France, the Low Countries and England. Wrote 50 symphonies, 10 orchestra-trios, 12 violin-concertos, many violin-sonatas, etc. In these the elements of the classical sonata-form are fully present. See Riemann's introductions to vols. iii and vii of the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern. G.

Stamitz, Karl (Mannheim, 1746–1801, Jena), son of the preceding. Eminent Badense violinist, pupil of his father and Cannabich, from 1762 playing in the Mannheim orchestra, from 1770 somewhat steadily on tour throughout Europe, with sojourns in Paris, Nuremberg, Kassel (1789–90) and Petrograd, and from 1794 concertmaster at the academical concerts in Jena. As composer he extended and solidified the innovations introduced by his father. Wrote 70 symphonies (some with a novel fullness of scoring), a symphony for double orchestra, 7 violin-concertos, concertos for viola and for piano, many quartets, trios and duets, etc., besides the operas Der verliebte Vormund (comic, given at Frankfurt) and Dardanus (Petrograd). See Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, viii, xv, xvi. He was also noted as a player on the violon d'amour. G.

Stamm, Thomas Oswalt (n. Sondershausen, 1868). Saxon teacher and choral conductor at Weissenfels, writing a symphony, a prelude to Versunkenen Glocke, a Requiem, motets, choruses, organ-pieces and songs.

Stanford, Charles Villiers (Dublin, 1852). Distinguished Irish conductor and composer, pupil of Stewart, O'Leary, Pauer, Reinecke and Kiel, with a course at Cambridge University (Mus.D. 1888, also at Oxford, 1883). In 1873–92 he was organist at Trinity College, Cambridge and also conductor of the reorganized University Musical Society, and since 1887 has been professor of music in the University. Since 1883 he has taught at the Royal College (London) and in 1885–1902 followed Goldschmidt as conductor of the famous Bach Choir in London. In 1897–1900 he conducted the Leeds Philharmonic and directed the festivals there in 1901–10. He has appeared as conductor at Berlin, Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels and in America. His fertile, versatile and masterful ability has been recognized by election to many leading societies at Berlin, Paris, Amsterdam, etc. He was knighted in 1901. His works include the following (opus-nos. in brackets):

Dramatic Works

Operas—The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan, 1881, Savonarola, 1884, The Canterbury Pilgrims, 1884, Shamus O'Brien, 1896 [61], Much Ado about Nothing, 1900 [76a], The Critic, 1916, and The Travelling Companion (1917). Also 2 others not given.
Incidental music for Tennyson's Queen Mary (1876) [6], Æschylus' Eumenides (1885) [23], Sophocles' Edipus Tyrannus (1887) [29], Tennyson's Thomas a Becket (1893) [48], Binyon's Attila (1907) [102] and Parker's Drake (1912).

Choral Works

Oratorios—The Three Holy Children, 1885 [22], Eden, 1891 [40].
Psalms 46 [8] and 150 [27].
Mass in G [46]; Requiem (in memory of Lord Leighton), 1897 [63]; Te Deum, 1898 [66]; Stabat Mater, 1907 [96]; Resurrection Hymn [5]; motet, The Lord of Might, 1903 [83].
The Revenge, 1886 [24]; The Voyage of Maeldund, 1889 [34]; The Battle of the Baltic, 1891 [41]; Phaëdrig Crohoore, 1896 [62]; The Last Post, 1900 [75]; Fairy Day, 1913; Merlin and the Gleam, 1920.
Elegiac Ode, 1884 [21]; Carmen Sæculare, 1887 [26] (for Queen's Jubilee); The Bard [50]; East to West [52]; Songs of the Sea, 1904 [91]; Songs of Faith [97]; Wellington Ode, 1909 [100]; Welcome Song, 1908 [107]; Songs of the Fleet, 1910 [117].
3 Cavalier Songs, with baritone solo [18]; 18 Elizabethan Pastorals [49, 53, 67]; cycle from The Princess, with soli [68]; 15 other part-songs [47, 106, 110–11].
Church-music—Complete Services in B-flat [10], A [12], F [36], G [81], Gregorian [98] and C [115]; 3 anthems [37–8]; 3 a cappella motets [51]; hymn, Awake, my heart [16]; 4 Bible Songs, with organ [113].

For Orchestra

Symphonies—1, B-flat (1876), 2, D min., Elegiac (1882), 3, F min., Irish (1887) [28], 4, F (1889) [31], 5, D, L'Allegro ed il Penseroso [56], 6, E-flat (1904, in memory of G. F. Watts) [94], 7, D min. [124].
Overtures—Festival (1887), Queen of the Seas (1888, for Armada Tercentenary) [33], In the Style of a Tragedy [90], Ave atque Vale (1909, for Haydn Centenary) [114] (with chorus).
4 Irish Rhapsodies [78, 84, etc.]; 8 Irish Dances [79, 89]; Serenade in G [17].
Concertos—with piano, in G [59] and C min. [126]; with violin, in D (1904) [74]; with 'cello; with clarinet [80]. Also suite with violin (1889) [32]; Variations on an English Theme, with piano [71].

Chamber-Music

String-quintets in F [85] and C min. [86]; piano-quintet in D min. [25]; nonet-serenade, for strings and wind [95].
String-quartets in G [44], A min. [45], D min. [64], G min. [99], B-flat (in memory of Joachim) [104] and ? [122]; piano-quartets in F [15] and G ? [133].
Piano-trios in E-flat [35] and G min. [73].
For violin—sonatas in D [11] and G [70]; 6 Irish Fantasies [54]; 5 Characteristic Pieces [39].
For 'cello—sonatas in A [9] and D min. [39].
For clarinet—sonata [129]; 3 Intermezzi [13].

Keyboard-Music

For piano—sonata in D-flat [20]; suite [2]; toccata [3]; scherzo in B min.; 3 Dante Rhapsodies [92]; 10 dances [58] (5 also arr. for orchestra); 6 pieces [42].
For organ—Fantasia and Toccata [57]; Fantasia and Fugue [103]; 12 Preludes and Postludes [101, 105]; 6 Preludes [88]; Te Deum and Canzona [116].

For Solo Voice

Ballad, Die Wallfahrt nach Kevlaar (Heine) [72]; Irish Idyll, Moira O'Neill [77]; A Child's Garland of Songs (Stevenson) [30]; 5 sonnets from The Triumph of Love (Holmes) [82]; over 50 other songs (Geo. Eliot, Heine, etc.) [1, 4, 7, 14, 19, 43, 65, 112, 118, etc.]. Collections—Moore's Irish Melodies [60]; 130 Songs of Erin, 3 vols.; Songs of Old Ireland, 1882; Irish Songs and Ballads, 1893; The Complete Petrie Collection (nearly 1600 Irish airs), 3 vols. 1902-05.

Author of Studies and Memories, 1908, Musical Composition, 1911, Pages from an Unwritten Diary, 1914, a History of Music, 1916 (with Forsyth), and Interludes, 1922. Sketches in Mus. Times, 1898, and by Streatfeild, 1913, and Porter, 1921. G, A.

Stange, Hermann (Kiel, 1835-1914, do.). North German organist, from 1866 at Schleswig Cathedral, from 1876 at Kiel, where from 1878 he was music-director at the University and from 1887 professor (Ph.D. 1914). His nephew Max (b. 1856) is leader of the Erk Choral Union in Berlin and teacher at the Hochschule, writing an overture, pieces for strings, a violin-suite, the choral work Jauchzet dem Herrn, notable men's choruses, etc.

Stanley, Albert Augustus (Manville, R. I. 1851). Able American organist, conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory (in 1875 assisting Richter and occasionally playing at the Nikolaikirche), in 1875-76 teacher at Delaware, O., from 1876 organist at Grace Church in Providence, R. I. and from 1888 professor at the University of Michigan (Ann Arbor) and from 1893 also conductor of important annual festivals there, resigning in 1921. He has been prominent in musical societies (president of the Music Teachers' Nat. Assoc. in 1893 and of the American section of the I. M. G. in 1906-12). From 1898 he had charge of the fine Stearns Collection of Instruments (extensive Catalogue, 1918, 2d ed. 1921). He now lives in Berlin. Has written a symphony (1896), the symphonic poem Attis, 1898, an orchestral scherzo, a violin-suite, the choral works The City of Freedom, 1883, A Psalm of Victory, 1892, Chorus Triumphalis, 1899, Laus Deo, 1913, and Consecration Hymn and Greek Themes in Modern Musical Settings, 1920 (incidental music for Mackaye's Sappho and Phaon and Euripides' Alcestis and Menæchmi). A.

Stanley, Charles John (London, 1713-1786, do.). English organist (blind), pupil of Reading and Greene, from his eleventh year employed in London churches (from 1734 one of the players at Temple Church) and from 1779 Boyce's successor as master of the Royal Band. He was intimate with Handel and from 1760 (with J. C. Smith) directed the oratorio-concerts instituted by him. Wrote the oratorios Jephtha, 1757, Zimri, 1760, and The Fall of Egypt, 1774, the pastoral Arcadia, 1761, 6 concertos for string-sextet and other instrumental pieces. G.

Starck, Ingeborg. See Bronsart.

Starzewski, Felix (Warsaw, 1868). Polish writer, pupil of the Warsaw Musical Institute and of Humperdinck, Fleischer and d'Indy, author of a life of Karłowicz (1907) and various essays in periodicals or collected (1904-05), besides acting as critic for the Wick.

Stark, Ludwig (Munich, 1831-1884, Stuttgart). Noted Bavarian teacher, pupil of F. and I. Lachner, in 1857 one of the founders of the school at Stuttgart that in 1865 became the Conservatory and teacher in it of singing and other subjects, as well as founder and long conductor of the Gesangverein. He was made royal professor in 1868 and Ph.D. by Tübingen Univ. in 1873. Author of a famous piano-method (with Lebert), a choral-method (with Faiszt), a large collection of piano-classics (with others) and Kunst u. Welt, 1884, besides some choral and instrumental pieces. G.

Stark, Robert (Klingenthal, 1847). Eminent Saxon clarinetist, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory, from about 1865 playing in the Chemnitz orchestra, in 1873-81 soloist at Wiesbaden and since 1881 teacher at the Würzburg Music School, gaining the title of royal professor in 1903. Has written 3 clarinet-concertos, many valuable studies and an extended method, several pieces for clarinet or for trombone with orchestra, a wind-quintet and an oboe-serenade.

Starke, Friedrich (Elsterwerda, 1774-1835, n. Vienna). Saxon hornist and bandmaster in the Austrian army, publishing a Journal für Militärmusik, 300 parts, a Journal für Trompetechöre, 50 nos., a piano-method (1819-20) and church-music.

Starzer, Josef (Vienna?, 1726-1787, do.). Austrian violinist, at first in the Vienna court-band, in 1760-70 court-composer and concert-master at Petrograd and then again at Vienna. He was noted as one of the chief composers of ballets for Noverre. Besides 20 ballets and sing-spiele, wrote an oratorio (1778), symphonies, a violin-concerto and chamber-music.

Stasny, Karl Richard (Mayence, 1855). Hessian pianist, pupil of Brüll, Krüger and Liszt, from 1881 touring with success, from 1885 teacher at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt (with study of Schumann's works under Mme. Schumann) and in 1891 moving to Boston as teacher at the New England Conservatory.

Stasny, Ludwig (Prague, 1823-1883, Frankfurt). Bohemian bandmaster, in 1846-68 in the Austrian army, and from 1871 conductor at the Frankfurt Palmengarten, writing over 200 popular dances, clever orchestral arrangements from Wagner and the operas Liane, 1851, and Die beiden Grenadiere, 1879.

Stassov, Vladimir Vassilievitch (Petrograd, 1824-1906, do.). Eminent Russian critic and biographer, from 1845 employed at the Petrograd Library, where, after a sojourn in Italy in 1851-54 as secretary to Count Demidov, he became assistant to the librarian and from 1872 chief of the fine arts division. He was a voluminous writer on many subjects, an accurate investigator and a sound and progressive critic. His influence had much to do with the advance of the New Russian group of composers. His notable essays from 1847 were collected in 1886 (3 vols.), with a supplementary volume in 1905. They include invaluable biographies of leading masters. He also edited the letters and autobiographies of Glinka, Dargomijsky, Serov and Borodin, besides collecting data regarding the Russian sojourns of Liszt, Schumann, Berlioz and Wagner (1896, 2d ed. 1914). Sketch in Russ. Musikal. Zeitung, 1895. G.

Statkowski, Roman (Szczypiorna, 1860). Polish composer, pupil of Zelenski and the Petrograd Conservatory, from about 1895 teacher of instrumentation and music-history at the Warsaw Conservatory. Has written the operas Philenis, 1904 (prize at the London competition in 1903), and Maria, 1906, an orchestral Polonaise and Fantaisie, a string-quartet, violin- and many piano-pieces.

Staudigl, Josef (n. Gutenstein, 1807-1861, n. Vienna). Famous Austrian operatic bass, from 1827 rapidly advancing at the Vienna Opera from a place in the chorus to that of leading singer there and from 1831 also in the court-choir, besides acquiring fame in oratorio and concert. In 1845-48, owing to friction in the management, he turned aside to take the direction of the Theater an der Wien. He made many tours as far as England, where he sang in the première of Elijah (1846). His interpretations of Schubert were especially noted. G.

Staudigl, Josef (Vienna, 1850-1916, Karlsruhe), son of the above. Excellent Austrian operatic baritone, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, from 1875 engaged at the Karlsruhe Opera, in 1884-86 at the Metropolitan, New York, and then till 1905 at Berlin, Hamburg, Bayreuth and other German stages. In 1885 he married the contralto Gisela Koppmayer, with whom he toured in America in 1898. G.

Stavenhagen, Bernhard (Greiz, 1862-1914, Geneva). Eminent Saxon pianist and conductor, trained at the Berlin Meisterschule and Hochschule (Mendelssohn prize, 1880) and by Liszt, from 1886 establishing an international fame by many tours in Europe and America (1894-95). From 1890 he was court-pianist at Weimar and from 1895 court-director, from 1898 court-director at Munich and in 1901-04 head of the Conservatory, from 1904 again in Weimar and from 1907 conductor of the Geneva orchestra and the choral society of the Conservatory. He was a remarkable exponent of Liszt. Wrote 2 piano-concertos, a cadenza for Beethoven's C min. concerto, etc. G.

Scherbatchev, Nicolai Vladimirovitch (b. 1853). Russian composer (of the New Russian school) of an orchestral Serenade and 2 Idylls, many characteristic piano-pieces, dances and études, with a few songs. G.

Stebbins, George Waring (n. Albion, N. Y. 1869). American organist, pupil of Woodman, Carl, Shelley, Guilman, Sbriglia and Henschel, since 1893 in Brooklyn churches, mostly at the Emmanuel Baptist Church, besides from 1910 teaching at the Teachers' Training Inst. and from 1913 conducting the Singers' Club in New York and from 1916 the Long Island Musical Art Society. Has written about 30 organ-pieces, 20 anthems, choruses and 30 songs. A.

Stecker, Karl (Kosmanos, 1861-1918, Prague). Bohemian teacher and writer, pupil of the Prague Organ School, from 1885 organ-teacher there, from 1889 teacher of music-history at the Conservatory and also lecturer at the University. Author of Critical Notes on Some Problems in Musical Science, 1889, a History of Music, 2 vols. 1892, 1903, and text-books in organ-improvisation (1903, one vol. only) and form (1905), besides many articles in periodicals. Also wrote an organ-sonata, a mass, a Te Deum, motets, songs, etc. From 1907 he edited the Hudební-Revue.

Stefan, Paul (Brünn, 1879). Moravian writer in Vienna (Ph.D. of the University, author of lives of Mahler (1910, 7th ed. 1921), Fried (1911), E. T. A. Hoffmann (1922) and Schönberg (1922), chronicles of Viennese music (1913-21), Die Feindschaft gegen Wagner, 1918, and various collections of writings by Schumann, Hoffmann, Wagner and Viennese musicians.

Stefani, Jan (Prague, 1746-1829, Warsaw). Bohemian violinist and composer, from about 1765 violinist at the Vienna Opera and director for Count Kinsky, from 1771 concertmaster in the Warsaw court-band and later conductor at the Opera. Wrote the opera The Cracowites and the Mountaineers, 1794, and 10 other Polish operas (to 1807), masses and many polonaises. His son Joseph (1800-?) was a fertile composer of church-music, besides 2 comic operas, ballets, popular songs and piano-pieces.

Stefano, Salvatore de (Cagliari, 1887). Sardinian harpist, trained at the Naples Conservatory, making his début in 1912 and for a time teaching at the Accademia S. Dorotea, but since 1913 touring in America. A.

Steffan, Joseph Anton (Kopidlno, 1726-1800?, Vienna). Bohemian teacher and composer, pupil of Wagenseil, from about 1750 prominent in Vienna and later music-master to the princesses Caroline and Marie Antoinette. Wrote many songs of importance (1778-82), church-music and piano-pieces.

Steffani, Agostino (1654-1728). 17th C. G.

Steffens, Julius (Stargard, 1831-1882, Wiesbaden). Pomeranian 'cellist, pupil of M. Ganz and K. Schubert, from about 1850 in the Petrograd court-orchestra, with long tours in company with Jaëll and Vieuxtemps. Wrote 2 'cello-concertos and pieces.

Steggall, Charles (London, 1826-1905, do.). English organist, pupil of the Royal Academy, with study also at Cambridge (Mus.D. 1851), from 1848 engaged at various London churches and from 1864 at Lincoln's Inn Chapel. In 1851-1903 he was a valued professor at the Royal Academy, in 1849-70 secretary of the Bach Society and in 1864 one of the founders of the College of Organists, as well as examiner at Cambridge in 1882-83. Wrote Psalms 33 and 105, services, canticles, organ-pieces, etc., and edited some of Bach's motets and the hymn-books Church Psalmody, 1848, and Hymns Ancient and Modern, 1889 edition. G.

Steggall, Reginald (London, 1867), son of the above. Able English organist and composer, pupil of the Royal Academy and since 1895 organ-teacher there, besides in 1905 succeeding his father as organist at Lincoln's Inn Chapel and serving as examiner for both the Royal Academy and the Royal College. Has written a symphony, the symphonic poem The Spanish Student, a Fantasy-Overture, the dramatic prelude Oreithya, orchestral variations and a suite, a Konzertstück for organ and orchestra, a quintet for wood-wind, fantasias and fugues for organ, an organ-suite, some piano-pieces, the scenas Alcestis and Elaine, a Te Deum and canticles with orchestra, anthems and songs (including the cycle The Seven Ages of Man). G.

Steglich, Rudolf (Dammnitz, 1886). Pomeranian historical student, pupil of B. Roth and Riemann, with courses at Berlin, Munich and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. 1911), author of a thesis on a medieval tractate (1911), an essay on K. P. E. Bach and Homilius (1915, in Bach-Jahrbuch), etc. Since 1919 he has been critic at Hanover and from 1920 musical editor of Blätter der Stunde.

Stegmann, Karl David (Dresden, 1751–1826, Bonn). Saxon conductor and composer, pupil of Zillich, Homilius and Weisse, from 1772 appearing as singer at Breslau, Königsberg, Danzig and Gotha, from 1778 engaged at Hamburg, partly as conductor and in 1798–1808 as one of the managers of the Opera. Wrote about 10 operas (1773–92), ballets, music for plays, 12 symphonies, overtures, concertos, trios, etc.

Stegmayer, Ferdinand (Vienna, 1803–1863, do.). Austrian conductor, pupil of his father (an actor), Triebensee and Seyfried, from about 1820 chorusmaster at Linz and Vienna, from 1825 director of the Königstädter Theater in Berlin, in 1829–30 leader of Roedel's operatroupe in Paris, then at theaters in Leipzig, Bremen, Prague and Vienna (Josephstädter), where in 1853–57 he taught at the Conservatory and in 1858 joined Aug. Schmidt in founding the Singakademie.

Stehle, J. Gustav Eduard (Steinhausen, 1839–1915, St. Gall). Eminent Württemberg church-musician, from 1869 organist at Rorschach and from 1874 organist and director at St. Gall Cathedral, where his great choir of 140 became famous. For 25 years he also edited the Chorwächter. He received many honors, including a Ph.D. from Freiburg Univ. in 1911. Wrote the oratorio St. Cäcilia, the cantata Lumen de Celo, the choral works Vineta, Abend-feier, Oybin, Die Nonnen von Compiègne, Absalom, Fritjofs Heimkehr and many choruses for men's voices a cappella, the humorous choral ballad Die Heinzelmannchen, about 20 masses (some a cappella, some with orchestra), many motets and canticles, the organ tone-poem Saul, fantasias on the Austrian and German national hymns, over 400 preludes (modal), etc.

Stehle, Sophie (Sigmaringen, ?1838–1921, n. Hanover). South German operatic soprano, pupil of Helene Ahlir, in 1860–74 a leading singer at the Munich Opera, with many appearances elsewhere. She sang at the première of Wagner's Rheingold (1869) and Walküre (1870).

Steibelt, Daniel (Berlin, 1765–1823, Petrograd). Famous Prussian pianist, pupil of Kirnberger, from about 1790 in high favor at Paris as representing the new piano-style, though soon involved in questionable transactions with publishers, from 1797 in London, in 1799–1800 on tour in Germany and Austria (at Vienna rashly engaging in a trial of skill with Beethoven), in 1800–02 at Paris, in London in 1802–05, once more at Paris and in 1808–09 on an extensive tour, ending at Petrograd, where in 1811 he followed Boieldieu as court-director and conductor of the French Opera. As player he had a sure sense of effects germane to the piano as distinct from the harpsichord, but tended to magnify execution above expression. As composer he had marked ability when he chose to put it forth, but often produced much that was vapid and mechanical. He also laid himself open to the charge of plagiarism. Yet his daring use of modulation and his experiments with form had some historic importance. Wrote the opera Roméo et Juliette, 1793, and 5 others, 5 ballets, an intermezzo, 8 piano-concertos (1796–1822), about 40 sonatas for piano and violin, about 30 for piano alone, many fantasias, rondos, show-pieces, etc., good études and a method. G. (with full list of works).

Steigleder, Johann Ulrich (1580–1635). 17th C. G.

Stein, Fritz Wilhelm (n. Lauda, 1879). Badenese conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and at Leipzig and Heidelberg Universities (Ph.D. 1910), from as early as 1903 assisting Wolfrum at the latter and appearing as organist, from 1906 music-director at Jena University and from 1907 professor, conducting the Academic Concerts and the Gesangverein, in 1914–15 Reger's successor as court-director at Meiningen and since 1918 organist at the Nikolai-kirche in Kiel, with some duties at the University. In 1910 he discovered the parts of an early symphony of Beethoven (see I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1912). Author of a monograph on music at Heidelberg (1912, extended 1921).

Stein, Johann Andreas (Heidelberg, 1728–1792, Augsburg). Eminent Rhenish maker of organs, harpsichords and pianos, from about 1755 active at Augsburg as organist and builder of large organs. From about 1775 he undertook making pianos with certain features that later were characteristic of the Austrian or Viennese type and his instruments were favorites with Mozart and Beethoven. The business was continued by his daughter and son, who in 1793 removed it to Vienna and from 1802 developed two important factories, the one managed by Nanette (1769–1838), her husband, J. A. Streicher (1761–1833), and their son Joh. Baptist, and the other by Matthäus Andreas (1776-1842) and his son Karl Andreas. G.

Stein, Richard H. (Halle, 1882). Saxon theorist and writer, trained at the Berlin Hochschule and Erlangen University (Ph.D. 1911), becoming conspicuous as an advocate of quarter-tone intervals in addition to the standard scales. He has devised a clarinet and a small piano capable of such effects, besides writing some illustrative pieces for 'cello. Author of various articles on this topic and essays on modern music (1918), Grieg (1921) and Tchaikovsky (in preparation).

Steinbach, Emil (Lengenrieden, 1849-1919, Mayence). Rhenish conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by H. Levi, from 1871 assistant-conductor at Mannheim, in 1874-75 at Hamburg, then court-director at Darmstadt, from 1877 city-director at Mayence and in 1899-1910 conductor of the Opera there. His reputation as interpreter of Wagner led to his directing a Wagner cycle at Covent Garden, London, in 1893. Wrote symphonic poems, overtures, chamber-music, etc. G.

Steinbach, Fritz (Grünsfeld, 1855-1916, Munich), brother of the above. Eminent Rhenish conductor, pupil of his brother and the Leipzig Conservatory (Mozart Scholarship), with further work under Door, Nottebohm and V. Lachner. In 1880-86 he was assistant-conductor at Mayence and from 1883 also teacher at the Raff Conservatory in Frankfurt, from 1886 Von Bülow's successor as conductor of the famous Meiningen orchestra and in 1902-14 Wullner's successor at Cologne as head of the Conservatory, city-director and conductor of the Gürzenich concerts. From the outset he displayed the highest ability, particularly as an interpreter of Brahms. His tours with the Meiningen orchestra were particularly brilliant. Wrote a septet for strings and wind, a 'cello-sonata, etc. G.

Steinberg, Maximilian Osseivitch (Vilna, 1888). Russian composer, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, since about 1910 teacher there. Has written 2 symphonies, the overture Russalka, a Prélude Symphonique, a Dramatische Fantasia, 2 sets of orchestral variations, a string-quartet, songs and the ballet Midas (part given in 1907). He edited Rimsky-Korsakov's Instrumentation (1913).

Steinert, Morris (Scheinfeld, 1831-1912, New Haven, Conn.). Bavarian 'cellist, originally a traveling salesman, from about 1855 in America, where for a time he played in Maretzek's orchestra in New York, joined a minstrel-troupe and was clerk and organist in Savannah. In 1861 he moved to New Haven, in time establishing a large business as piano-dealer and making a remarkable collection of about 500 valuable instruments, which in 1892 he exhibited at Vienna and in 1893 at Chicago and in 1900 presented to Yale University (catalogue, 1893). In 1892 he was a founder of the New Haven Orchestra. His business is now carried on by his sons in New Haven and Boston. Memoir by Marin, 1900. A.

Steingraber. A music-publishing business established in Hanover by Theodor Steingraber (1830-1904) and in 1890 moved to Leipzig. Its head in 1903-16 was Walter Friedel. Under the pseudonym 'Gustav Damm' Steingraber published an extensive Klavierschule.

Steinhard, Erich (Prague, 1886). Bohemian historical student and aesthetician, trained mostly at Berlin and Prague Universities (Ph.D. 1911), becoming librarian at the latter and professor of music-history and aesthetics at the German Academy of Music. He is also editor of the journal Auftakt and has written much for other periodicals. Has published essays on the organum (1911), Hammerschmidt (1914), music in Bohemia (1922), etc.

Steinhauer, Karl (Düsseldorf, 1852). Rhenish choral conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1875 vocal teacher at the Marienschule in Düsseldorf and leader of the Quartettverein (from 1905 conducting popular festivals), and since 1901 town-musician at Oberhausen, leading both choral and orchestral societies and teaching in several schools. From 1906 he has edited Der Deutsche Chorgesang. Has written many men's choruses and several larger works.

Steinhausen, Friedrich Adolf (Potsdam, 1859-1910, Boppard). A Prussian surgeon who published various studies in the anatomy and physiology of playing stringed instruments and the piano (from 1899).

Steinitzer, Max (Innsbruck, 1864). Tyrolean critic and writer, trained at Munich University (Ph.D. 1885), in 1888-1901 variously employed as teacher or conductor in Halle, Elberfeld, Salzburg, Munich, Langenberg and Mülheim-on-Ruhr, from 1903 teacher at the Freiburg (Baden) Conservatory and since 1911 critic for the Leipzig Neueste Nachrichten. Author of the leading biography of Rich. Strauss (1911, 2d ed. 1914), based on lifelong intimacy, besides Die psycholog. Wirkungen d. musikal. Formen, 1885, Musikal. Strafpredigten, 1903 (5th ed. 1914), Musikhistor. Atlas, 1908, Zur Entwicklungsgeschichte d. Melodrams u. Mimodrams, 1918, Meister d. Gesangs, 1920, and handbooks for men's choruses and on training women's voices (in Riemann Festschrift, 1909). Has also written melodramatic music for Die Braut von Korinth (1913).

Steinway & Sons. Famous piano-making firm in New York, established in 1853 by Heinrich Engelhard Steinweg (1797-1871), an expert workman who had migrated from Brunswick with four sons in 1849. Their renown rapidly increased and the excellence of their work was attested by a portentous list of prizes and honors from 1855, when they exhibited a square piano with a cast frame in one piece and an overstrung scale. They began making grands in 1856 and uprights in 1862. Their total output has been about 200,000 instruments. The eldest son, Theodor (1825-1889), who had remained at Seesen, came to New York in 1865 to join his brothers William (1836–1896) and Albert (1840–1877), and became the chief factor in the brilliant technical development of the business. Later the leadership fell to Charles H. Steinway (1857–1919), Frederick T. Steinway (b. 1860) and Henry Ziegler (b. 1857), all grandsons of the founder. In 1875 a branch was opened in London and in 1880 one in Hamburg. See Floersheim's life of William Steinway (1894) and Hubbard's Story of the Steinways, 1911. G (under Piano and firm-name).

Stelzner, Alfred (?–1906, Dresden). An instrument-maker, originally at Wiesbaden, who invented the violotta and cellone (stringed forms of increased power) and employed them in the operas Rübezahl, 1902, Swatowits Ende, 1903, and 2 others not given.

Stendhal [Marie Henri Beyle] (Grenoble, 1783–1842, Paris). French military and civil official under Napoleon and later in Italy, author of several novels and lives of Haydn, Mozart and Metastasio (1814, reprinted 1817) and of Rossini (1823), both based upon or copied from books by Carpani. For the first he used the pseudonym 'César Bombet' in the first issue. Memoirs by Paton, 1874, Chouquet, 1902, and Paupe, 1904.

Stenhammar, Wilhelm (Stockholm, 1871). Eminent Swedish pianist, conductor and composer, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory and by Barth, from 1890 becoming known as a gifted player. From 1897 he conducted the Stockholm Philharmonic and from 1900 assisted at the Opera and in Aulin's quartet-concerts, in 1906–07 was in Italy and since 1907 has conducted the choral and orchestral societies in Gothenburg (made Ph.D. there in 1916). Has written the dramas Tirfing, 1898, and Das Fest auf Solhaug, 1899, the choral works Princess and Page, 1892, Snöfärd, Mid-Winter, The Folk of Nifheim, and Spring Night, several ballads with orchestra, notable songs, a symphony, the overture Excelsior, a violin-concerto, 2 piano-concertos, 4 string-quartets, a quartet-serenade, a violin-sonata, a piano-sonata and other pieces.

Stephan, Clemens. 16th C.

Stephan, Rudolf (Worms, 1887–1915, in battle). Gifted, but short-lived, Hessian composer of 'Musik' for orchestra (1913), for violin and orchestra and for string-quintet with piano and harp (1912), the ballad Liebeszauber, piano-pieces and songs, besides the opera Die ersten Menschen (not given).

Stephani, Hermann (Grimma, 1877). Saxon choral conductor, pupil of Hempel and the Leipzig Conservatory, with study at Munich University (Ph.D. 1902), in 1903–05 leader of an oratorio-society at Sonderburg, in 1905–06 of choral and orchestral concerts at Flensburg, from 1906 at Eisleben as town-director and organist at the Andreaskirche, in 1913–14 also leader of the Philharmonic Chorus in Leipzig and since 1921 director at Marburg University. He has advocated the use of the G-clef only in written music (issued an edition thus of Schumann's Manfred overture, 1905). Has written the choral works Herbstwald and Dankgesang, songs, vocal canons, an overture and editions of Handel's Judas Maccabæus and Jephtha and of Weber's Euryanthe, besides some articles in journals.

Stephens, Catherine (London, 1794–1882, do.). English operatic soprano, pupil of Lanza and Welsh, in 1813–35 a favorite at Covent Garden and Drury Lane, as well as in concerts and at festivals. In 1838 she married the aged Earl of Essex. G.

Stephens, Charles Edward (London, 1821–1892, do.), nephew of the above. English pianist and organist, pupil of Potter, Hamilton and Blagrove, in 1843–75 organist at various churches and from 1850 active in the Philharmonic and other societies. Wrote 2 symphonies, several overtures, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, organ- and piano-pieces, church-music, glees and songs. G.

Stephenson, Morton (London, 1884). English composer, pupil of the Royal Academy, writing the symphonic poems Dawn and The Sea, the orchestral suite The Jungle Book, a Miniature Ballet for orchestra, a Miniature Suite for quartet, 3 violin-sonatas, music for St. Ursula's Pilgrimage and Shakespearean Masque, piano-pieces and songs.

Sterkel, Johann Franz Xaver (Würzburg, 1750–1817, do.). Eminent Bavarian ecclesiastic (abbé) and amateur pianist and composer, from 1775 active at Neumünster, from 1778 court-chaplain and pianist at Mayence (in 1793 appointed to succeed Righini as court-director, but driven to Würzburg by the French invasion) and in 1805–14 court-director to the Elector of Mayence (at Aschaffenburg or Ratisbon). He was a refined and expressive player. In 1791 he met the young Beethoven at Aschaffenburg and made a deep impression as the first fine player that he had heard. Wrote 10 symphonies, 2 overtures, 6 piano-concertos, a quintet, trios, violin- and piano-sonatas, besides popular songs, etc. G.

Sterling, Antoinette (Sterlingville, N. Y. 1850–1904, Hampstead). Noted American contralto, pupil of Abella, Mme. Marchesi, Mme. Viardot-Garcia and Manuel Garcia, in 1871–73 singing at Beecher's church in Brooklyn and in concert and then removing to England, where she became a leading ballad-interpreter (many songs, like Sullivan's Lost Chord and Cowen's Better Land, being specially written for her). In 1875 she toured in America and in 1893 in Australia, where her husband, John MacKinlay, died. Memoir by her son, 1906. G.

Sterling, Winthrop Smith (Cincinnati, 1859). American organist and teacher, trained at the Cincinnati College of Music and the Leipzig Conservatory, with study also under R. Hoffmann, Frau Unger-Haupt, Turpin, Behnke and Shakespeare, from 1887 organ-teacher at the Cincinnati College of Music and from 1903 founder and dean of the Metropolitan College of Music there. He has appeared as recitalist and lecturer elsewhere. Has written an overture, an orchestral suite, organ- and piano-pieces, church-music and songs. A.

Stern, Adolf (Leipzig, 1835–1907, Dresden). Saxon poet and historian of literature, long professor at the Dresden Polytechnikum, author (among other works) of a Wanderbuch, 1877 (about Bayreuth), Die Musik in d. deutschen Dichtung, 1888, Glück in Versailles, 1904, and editions of Cornelius' poems (1890) and Liszt's letters to K. Gille (1903). In 1881 he married the gifted pianist Margarete Herr (1857–1899), a pupil of Liszt and Mme. Schumann, and wrote a memoir of her (1901).

Stern, Julius (Breslau, 1820–1883, Berlin). Able Silesian conductor and teacher, pupil of Lüstner, Maurer, Ganz, St. Lubin and Rungenhagen, with studies also at Dresden and Paris (where in 1844–46 he led a German choral society), from 1847 director of his own Gesangverein in Berlin, which had a notable career till its disbanding in 1912 (under others after 1874). In 1850 he established the Stern Conservatory (for a few years with Kullak and Marx), making it one of the established institutions of the city. In 1867–71 he followed Liebig as conductor of the Sinfoniekapelle and in 1873–74 had charge of the Reichshalle concerts. From 1860 he held the title of royal professor. Wrote the opera Ismene (not given), choruses and songs. Memoir by Rich. Stern, 1886. G.

Stern, Julius (Vienna, 1858–1912, do.). Austrian composer of the operas Juan Galeano, 1891, and Narcisse Rameau, 1907, operettas and many farces.

Stern, Leopold Lawrence (Brighton, 1862–1904, London). Gifted English 'cellist, pupil of the Royal Academy (London) and of Klengel and Davidov, from 1886 appearing in London, in 1888 touring with Patti, later associated with Sauret, Paderewski, Godard, Massenet and Dvořák, and in 1897–98 and 1902–03 visiting America. His second wife (from 1898) was the singer Suzanne Adams. Wrote 'cello-pieces and songs. G.

Sternberg, Constantin Ivanovitch von (Petrograd, 1852). Eminent Russian pianist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, the Berlin Akademie, Liszt and Kullak, in 1867–69 conductor at Brühl's in Leipzig and second chorumaster at the Opera, in 1870 conductor at Würzburg and Kissingen (summer) and in 1871 at the court-opera at Neu-Strelitz. In 1875 he made his début as player at Berlin and became court-pianist and head of the Music School at Schwerin, but in 1877 set out on tours with Désirée Artôt that finally reached into Siberia and to Egypt. From 1880 he came annually to America (after a few seasons with Wilhelmj and Minnie Hauk) and from 1886 taught in Philadelphia, which he still directs. Has written 6 piano-trios, Danses Cosaques for violin, a 'cellofantasia, 5 concert-études for piano and over 200 salon-pieces. Author of Ethics and Esthetics of Piano-Playing, 1917. A.

Sternfeld, Richard (Königsberg, 1858). Prussian historian, long professor at Berlin University, author of lives of Von Bülow (1898) and Alb. Niemann (1904), Beethoven u. Wagner, 1885, Beethovens Missa Solemnis, 1900, Schiller u. Wagner, 1905, Wagner u. d. Bayreuther Festspiele, 2 vols. 1906, and Aus Wagners Pariser Zeit, 1906 (edited essays of W.), Musikal. Skizzen u. Humoresken, 1919, besides many articles in periodicals.

Stevens, Richard John Samuel (London, 1757–1837, do.). English organist and gleecomposer, as choirboy at St. Paul's pupil of Wm. Savage, from 1786 organist at Temple Church, from 1796 also at the Charterhouse and from 1801 professor at Gresham College. Wrote nearly 50 glees, a few harpsichord-sonatas and songs, besides editing a collection of church-music. G.

Stevenson, Frederick (Newark, 1845). English organist, pupil of Macfarren and J. F. Bridge, from 1867 engaged in London suburbs, from 1883 precentor at Denver (Colo.) Cathedral and later at St. Mark's there and head of the Conservatory, from 1894 at Los Angeles, from 1905 at Santa Barbara and from 1918 at Los Angeles again. Has written several cantatas, anthems, other church-music and instrumental works, besides developing studies in modern harmony. A.

Stevenson, John Andrew (Dublin, ?1762–1833, n. Galway). Irish organist and vocal composer, trained as chorister in Dublin, from 1783 vicar-choral in the cathedrals there and from 1814 organist at the Castle Chapel. Mus.D. of Dublin Univ. in 1791 and knighted in 1803. Wrote the oratorio Thanksgiving, 1831, music for several stage-plays, church-music, glees and songs, besides collaborating with Moore in the latter's Irish Melodies (from 1807). Memoir by Bumpus, 1893. G.

Stewart, Humphrey John (London, 1856). Eminent English organist, from his eleventh year engaged at churches in London, from 1886 removing to San Francisco, where he served three churches, in 1901–03 at Trinity Church in Boston, then again in San Francisco (St. Dominic's) and since 1915 organist for the open-air organ at San Diego, giving long series of recitals of notable variety and value. While in San Francisco he was also identified with various choral organizations. Has written the opera Bluff King Hal, 1889, the comedies His Majesty, 1890, and The Conspirators, 1900, the 'grove-plays' Montezuma, 1903 The Cremation of Care, 1906, and Gold, 1916, the oratorio The Nativity, 1888, the orchestral suites Montezuma, 1903, and Scenes in California, 1906, 3 masses, choruses, songs, pieces for violin, for organ and for piano, and music for some plays. Several works have been awarded prizes. Mus.D. of the Univ. of the Pacific, 1898. A.

Stewart, Robert Prescott (Dublin, 1825-1894, do.). Able Irish organist, conductor and teacher, trained as choirboy at Christ Church Cathedral (Dublin), in 1844 becoming organist there and also at Trinity College, besides from 1846 conducting the University Choral Society, in 1852-61 also organist at St. Patrick's Cathedral, from 1862 professor at Dublin University, from 1872 teacher at the Irish Royal Academy and from 1873 conductor of the Philharmonic. Mus. D. of Dublin Univ. in 1851 and knighted in 1872. He exerted a notable influence as musical educator. Wrote the cantatas A Winter's Night Wake and The Eve of St. John, several odes, services, anthems, fine glees and songs, besides editing the Irish Hymnal, 1876. Memoirs by Vignoles, 1899, and Culwick, 1902. G.

Stiastný, Franz Johann [Jan] (Prague, 1764-1820?, do.). Fine Bohemian 'cellist, active at Frankfurt, Nuremberg, Mannheim, London and Paris, writing a few notable works, including a concertino, 2 sonatas, 9 duets, variations with quartet, etc. His elder brother was also an expert 'cellist. G.

Stich, Jan Václav [Johann Wenzel, Giovanni Punto] (n. Czeslau, 1746-1803, Prague). Famous Bohemian hornist, for a time protégé of Count Thun and pupil of Hampel, from about 1765 highly successful in central Europe and Italy, in 1781 court-musician at Würzburg and from 1782 in the service of Comte d'Artois at Paris. In 1788 he visited England and after 1799 was in Vienna and Prague. Mozart wrote a quartet-sinfonie for him (now lost) and Beethoven his horn-sonata, op. 17. Wrote 14 horn-concertos, a sextet, a quintet, 24 quartets, 20 trios, many duets, solos, studies, etc., besides a Hymne à la Liberté (with orchestra) and a method. G.

Stieger, Franz (Marburg, 1843). Styrian railway engineer, till 1908 active at Vienna. He has been a lifelong collector of facts about opera-history, contributing to Riemann's Lexikon (from 1882) and Opernhandbuch (1885) and to Kastner's Chronik and Opern-Lexikon, 1889.

Stiehl, Heinrich Franz Daniel (Lübeck, 1829-1886, Reval), brother of the following. Able North German organist and conductor, pupil of Lobe and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1853-66 organist at the Peterskirche (German) at Petrograd and leader of a Singakademie, then living at Vienna, in Italy and at London, in 1874-77 conductor of orchestral and choral societies at Belfast (Ireland), then teacher at Hastings and from 1880 organist at St. Olaf's in Reval (Russia) and conductor of the Singakademie. Wrote 2 operettas, a pantomime, the choral work Elfenkönigin, 2 piano-quartets, 3 piano-trios, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, many effective piano-pieces and songs, besides an overture and other orchestral pieces. G.

Stiehl, Karl Johann Christoph (Lübeck, 1826-1911, do.), brother of the above. North German organist, pupil of his father, from 1848 organist at Jever, from 1858 court-director and organist at Eutin and in 1878-97 leader of the Lübeck Musikverein and Singakademie, besides writing for the Zeitung and becoming music-librarian at the Library (catalogue, 1893). Wrote monographs on music and musicians in Lübeck (1885-1902) and edited Buxtehude's sonatas for the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst.

Stiehl, Ludwig Maximilian Adolf (Frankfurt, 1850-1896, Mülhausen). Hessian violinist, pupil of Vieuxtemps, Heermann and Joachim, from 1872 successively in the Quartets of Alard at Paris, Baron von Dervies at Nice and Hochberg at Dresden, from about 1880 at Mülhausen, going to Basel to assist Huber in quartet-concerts. He made a fine collection of early chamber-music.

Stier, Alfred (Greiz, 1880). Saxon organist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1904 cantor at Limbach and since 1911 organist and cantor at the Versöhnungskirche in Dresden. Has written the choral work Rhapsodie, a string-quartet, a string-trio, a trio for clarinet, horn and piano, 2 violin-sonatas, a piano-sonata, 2 masses, motets and songs.

Stierlin, Johann Gottfried Adolf (Adenau, 1859). Rhenish singer and teacher, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, from about 1885 engaged as bass at various theaters and since 1897 head of his own music-school at Münster. Has written the operas Scapina, 1887, and Zamora, 1893, a ballet, a Christmas oratorio and a cappella men's choruses.

Stimpson, James (Lincoln, 1820-1886, Birmingham). Able English organist, pupil of Ingham, from 1836 at Newcastle, in 1841-42 Ingham's successor at Carlisle Cathedral and from 1842 active at Birmingham, till 1855 as organist at the new Town Hall and leader of the Festival Choral Society, as organist for the festivals and later as teacher at the Blind Institution. Edited a collection of organ-music (1850). G.

Stirling, Elizabeth (Greenwich, 1819-1895, London). Gifted English organist, pupil of Wilson, Holmes, Hamilton and Macfarren, from 1839 at All Saints' (Poplar) and in 1858-80 at St. Andrew's (Undershaft), becoming noted as an executant. In 1853 she qualified for the Mus.B. degree at Oxford, but was debarred because a woman. In 1863 she married F. A. Bridge. Wrote 6 organ-fugues, other pieces and effective part-songs. G.

Stivori, Francesco. 16th C.

Stobäus, Johann (1680-1646). 17th C. G.

Stock, Frederick A. [Friedrich Wilhelm August] (Jülich, 1872). Distinguished Rhenish conductor and composer, pupil of his father and the Cologne Conservatory, from 1890 violinist in the Cologne Orchestra, but in 1895 induced by Theodore Thomas to migrate to America. After serving as violist in the Chicago Orchestra, in 1901 he became Thomas' assistant, from 1903 leading concerts outside of Chicago, and in 1905 followed Thomas as conductor with sustained success. In 1918-19 he retired temporarily, pending the completion of his American citizenship. In 1907-09 he also directed the Musical Art Club and in 1920 took charge of the Civic Music Student Orchestra. Mus.D. of Northwestern Univ. in 1915. Has written symphonies in C min. (1910) and E-flat (1915), the symphonic poem Life, 1905 (in memory of Thomas), the overtures Life's Springtide, 1913, To a Romantic Comedy, 1918, and Nature, the 4 symphonic sketches The Seasons, 1912, Symphonic Variations, 1904, an orchestral waltz (1907), Improvisation and Wedding Music, 1907, a violin-concerto (1915), Festival March and Hymn to Liberty, 1910 (for 20th anniversary of the Chicago Orchestra), a string-sextet, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, pieces for violin and for piano and songs, besides many orchestral arrangements. G, A.

Stockhausen, Franz (Gebweiler, 1839), brother of the following. Alsatian choral leader and teacher, pupil of Alkan and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1863 conductor at Thann, in 1866-68 with his brother at Hamburg, from 1868 choirmaster at Strasburg Cathedral and conductor of the Société de Chant Sacré (till 1879) and in 1871-1907 the efficient director of the Conservatory and conductor of the city-concerts.

Stockhausen, Julius (Paris, 1826-1906, Frankfurt), brother of the above. Distinguished Rhenish-French baritone and teacher, deriving musical aptitude from both parents (harapist and concert-singer respectively), pupil also of the Paris Conservatory and of Manuel Garcia, appearing as both singer and instrumentalist from early youth, in oratorio from 1848 (Basel), then in the Rhineland, France and England as lieder-singer and in 1857-59 at the Opéra-Comique. In 1862-67 he was conductor of the Singakademie and Philharmonic at Hamburg, from 1869 for a time was chamber-musician at Stuttgart and made many tours and sojourns elsewhere. In 1874-78 he directed the Stern Gesangverein in Berlin with notable success and then settled at Frankfurt as teacher, in 1878-79 and '82-98 at the Hoch Conservatory, attracting many gifted pupils. He was noted as interpreter of Schubert and Brahms. Author of a famous Gesangsmethode, 2 vols. 1886-87, a Gesangstechnik and some songs. G.

Stockhoff, Walter William (St. Louis, 1887). American pianist, self-taught, since 1904 in St. Louis, writing 3 piano-trios, other chamber-music, a piano-sonata (1916), the piano-suite In the Mountains, 1914 (7 'impressions'), 12 Quodlibets, 1903, and other pieces. A.

Stoeckel, Gustav Jakob (n. Neustadt, 1819-1907, Norfolk, Conn.). Rhenish organist, in America from 1847, in 1849-96 as organist and professor at Yale University (New Haven, Conn.), gaining the title of Mus.D. in 1864. His son Carl (b. 1858) has since 1900 been the promoter and munificent patron of the unique festivals at Norfolk, Conn. A.

Stoessel, Albert Frederic (St. Louis, 1894). American violinist, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, from 1913 appearing in Germany and from 1915 in America. In Berlin he was a member of the Willy Hess Quartet. In 1921 he became conductor of the New York Oratorio Society and in 1923 also professor at New York University. Has written a string-quintet (1915), a string-quartet (1914), a violin-sonata (1921) and pieces, and songs. A.

Stoeving, Carl Heinrich Paul (Leipzig, 1861). Able Saxon violinist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Léonard, in 1881-82 teaching at the Königsberg Conservatory, in 1882-83 concertmaster at Hamburg and then touring in Russia and Scandinavia. From 1884 he was for a time in the United States, making tours with the Mendelssohn Quintette Club. From 1896 he lived in London, from 1898 teaching at the Guildhall School and from 1907 at the Trinity School, but in 1914 returned to America, teaching in New York and New Haven. Has written a short violin-concerto, a prize Romance for violin and orchestra, pieces for strings, a string-quartet, a Capriccio for four violins, many violin-pieces, 2 song-cycles, etc. Author of The Art of Violin-Bowing, 1902, The Story of the Violin, 1905, Elements of Violin-Playing and a Key to Sevcik's Works, besides stories and novellettes. A.

Stöhr, Richard (Vienna, 1874). Austrian theorist and composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and since 1901 teacher there. Has written 2 symphonies, an orchestral serenade, a suite for strings, a trumpet-concerto, a Fantasia for organ and orchestra, a Kammersymphonie (nonet for strings, wind and harp), an octet for strings and wind, 2 piano-quintets, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, piano-variations, characteristic pieces and études, the oratorio Der verlorene Sohn, 1920, the choral works Das Klostergrab, Johannisfeier and Des Landsknechts Abendritt, the fairy-opera Rumpelstilzchen, many choruses, duets and songs. Author of text-books in harmony, counterpoint, form and modulation (from 1909).

Stojanovits [Sztjanovics], Eugen. Hungarian composer of the opera Ninon, 1898, 5 operettas and 5 ballets, all produced at Pest.

Stojanovits, Peter Lazar (Pest, 1877). Hungarian violinist, pupil of Hubay and the Vienna Conservatory, in 1909-10 teaching at the New Conservatory there, in 1911-13 inspector at the City Music School in Pest and then head of his own school in Vienna. Has written the comedies Tigris, 1905, and Floribella, a ballet, a violin-concerto, a piano-quintet, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata and some pieces.

Stojowski, Sigismund Denis Antoine (Strzelce, 1870). Eminent Polish pianist and composer, pupil of the Cracow and Paris Conservatories and of Gorski and Paderewski, appearing first as a child (at thirteen with orchestra) and more formally at Paris in 1891 with a program of his own works. Till 1905 he lived in Paris, with many tours, and then migrated to New York, where in 1905-11 he taught at the Inst. of Musical Art and then (till 1917) at the Von Ende School, but with frequent concert-trips in Europe. He is an authorized exponent of Paderewski and has trained many gifted players. During the war he was active on behalf of Poland. Has written the choral works Le Printemps and A Prayer for Poland, a symphony, an orchestral suite, 3 piano-concertos, a Rhapsodie Symphonique for piano and orchestra, a 'cello-concerto, a Romanza for violin and orchestra, Variations and Fugue for string-quartet, 2 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, a Fantaisie for trombone, about 75 piano-pieces and some songs. In 1918 he married his pupil Luisa Morales-Machado of Lima. A.

Stokowski, Leopold Anton Stanislaw (London, 1882). Eminent Polish-English conductor, pupil of Parry, Stanford and the Paris Conservatory, from about 1900 organist in London and in 1905-08 at St. Bartholomew's in New York. In 1908 he conducted summer-concerts in London, from 1909 took charge of the reorganized Cincinnati Orchestra and in 1912 succeeded Pohl as conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, bringing it to a remarkable degree of efficiency. Mus.D. of Univ. of Pennsylvania in 1917. In 1911-23 his wife was the pianist Olga Samarov. A.

Stoltz, Rosine [Victorine Noeb] (Paris, 1815-1903, do.). Famous French operatic soprano, pupil of Choron's school, from 1832 appearing at Brussels, Spa, Antwerp and Lille (using varied stage-names), from 1834 at Amsterdam and Brussels again, in 1837-47 in extreme favor at the Paris Opéra, then touring in France and after 1850 visiting Brazil, with an unsuccessful reappearance at Paris in 1856. Her singing was unequal, but she excelled as a passionate, temperamental actress. Among many premières at which she sang were those of Donizetti's Favorita (1840) and Dom Sébastien (1843), Halévy's Reine de Chypre (1841) and Lazzarone (1844), Niedermeyer's Marie Stuart (1844), Balfe's Étoile de Séville (1845) and Rossini's ill-starred pasticcio Roberto Bruce (1846). Sketches or memoirs by Scudo, Lamer, 1847, Cantinhou, 1847, Pérignon, 1847, and especially Borde, 1909. G.

Stolzer, Thomas (?1450-1526?). 15th C. G.

Stolze, Heinrich Wilhelm (Erfurt, 1801-1868, Celle). Thuringian organist, pupil of Kittel, M. G. Fischer and Gebhardi, in 1828-29 at Clausthal and then court- and town-organist at Celle, leader of the Gesangverein and teacher at the Gymnasium. Wrote an oratorio, cantatas, motets, an operetta, organ-pieces, part-songs and songs, besides editing Choralbücher for Thuringia and Hanover.

Stölzel, Gottfried Heinrich (Grünstädtl, 1690-1749, Gotha). Prolific and able Saxon composer, pupil of his father, Umlauf and M. Hofmann, from 1710 living at various places (Breslau, Naumburg, Prague and Bayreuth, with a trip to Italy) and from 1719 court-director at Gotha. Wrote over 20 operas (from 1711), 14 oratorios, 8 two-year sets of church-cantatas and motets, masses, sinfonie, trio-sonatas, etc., much of his work being of excellent workmanship.

Stolzenberg, Benno (Königsberg, 1827-1908, Berlin). Prussian operatic tenor, pupil of Manntius and H. Dorn, from 1852 successful at Karlsruhe, Leipzig and elsewhere, in 1878-82 opera-director at Danzig, then teacher at Berlin, in 1885-96 at the Cologne Conservatory and then again at Berlin.

Stöpel, Franz David Christoph (Heldringen, 1794-1836, Paris). Saxon school-teacher, in 1820 sent by the Prussian government to London to report on Logier's system of class-instruction, which he then introduced in Berlin, elsewhere in Germany and finally in Paris. Author of several text-books, largely taken from Logier.

Stör, Karl (Stolberg, 1814-1889, Weimar). Thuringian violinist, pupil of Götte and Lobe, from 1827 in the court-band at Weimar and after 1848 associated with Liszt, following him in 1858 as one of the court-directors (in charge of the opera and later of the subscription-concerts). His Jubilee was celebrated in 1877 with notable honors. Wrote the opera Die Flucht, 1843, the orchestral Tonbilder von Schillers Lied von der Glocke (with recitation), 2 overtures, a violin-concerto, a Ständchen for 'cello and orchestra, choruses and songs.

Storace, Ann Selina (London, 1766-1817, n. do.), sister of the following. Brilliant English operatic soprano, pupil of her father, Rauzzini and Sacchini, appearing in oratorio when but eleven and from 1780 in opera in Italy, from 1784 at Vienna and in 1787-1809 in England. Her best success was in comic opera. She sang at the première of Mozart's Figaro (1786). In 1786 she was unhappily married to the violinist J. A. Fisher, from whom she soon separated. From 1797 she toured on the Continent with the tenor Braham. G.

Storace, Stephen (London, 1763-1796, do.). English composer, pupil of his father and the Conservatorio S. Onofrio in Naples, in 1785 beginning opera-production at Vienna and from 1788 continuing in England. Of his 18 stage-pieces the more notable were Gli Equivoci, 1786, The Haunted Tower, 1789 (his best work), The Siege of Belgrade, 1791, The Pirates, 1792, and Mahmoud, 1796 (completed by his sister and Kelly). In several cases he adapted numbers from Dittersdorf, Martini, Salieri, Cherubini and Kreutzer. Wrote also a sextet, 2 quintets, harpsichord-sonatas and songs. G.

Storck, Karl G. L. (Dürmenach, 1873-1920, Berlin). Alsatian littérateur and critic, educated at Strasburg and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1897), settling in Berlin as editor of Der Türmer, critic for the Deutsche Zeitung, writer of poems and novels, etc. Among his works are lives of Mozart (1908) and Jaques-Daleroze (1912), an Opernbuch, 1905 (12th ed. 1917), Gesch. d. Musik, 1905 (4th ed. 1919), Der Tanz, 1903, Die kulturelle Bedeutung d. Musik, 1907, Musik u. Musiker in Karikatur u. Satire, 1911, Musik-Politik, 1911, and selections from the letters of Beethoven (1905), Mozart (1905) and Schumann (1907).

Storer, John (n. Derby, 1858). Versatile English organist, pupil of J. Naylor, in 1879-81 at St. Michael's, Whithby, from 1882 at the Parish Church, Scarborough, and director of the Philharmonic, then at Folkestone and in 1887-91 at St. Mary's, Clapham. From 1891 he held positions in London theaters for some years, ultimately resuming church-work in London, at Downside Abbey (Somerset), in Sheffield and latterly at Waterford (Ireland), where he is organist at the Cathedral, teacher at St. John's College and head of a music-school and an opera-company. Mus.D. of Toronto Univ. in 1886. Has written the comedies The Punchbowl, 1887, and Gretna Green, 1889, the oratorio Deborah and Barak, 1881, several masses (one for 3 choirs), services, anthems, etc., the symphonies The Holiday, 1909, and Vita, 1914, the overture The Tournament, 1886, a string-quartet (1907), organ-pieces, part-songs and songs.

Stöwe, Gustav (Potsdam, 1835-1891, do.). Prussian piano-teacher, pupil of the Stern Conservatory (Berlin) and of Marx and Zech, from 1875 founder and head of the Potsdam Music School, writing a notable Klaviertechnik, 1886, articles in the Klavierlehrer, prize-choruses, piano-pieces and songs.

Stradal, August (Teplitz, 1860). Able Bohemian pianist, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory and of Liszt, in 1893-95 teaching at the Horák Piano School in Vienna, then devoting himself to the virtuoso-career and since 1919 settled in Schönlinde (Bohemia) as teacher. Has published piano-pieces and songs, with many arrangements of works by Liszt, Bach, Handel, etc. He is preparing a monograph on Liszt.

Stradella, Alessandro (?1645-1681). 17th C. G.

Stradivari, Antonio (1614-1737), Francesco (1671-1743) and Omobono (1679-1742). 17th C. G.

Strakosch, Maurice [Moritz] (Lemberg, 1825-1887, Paris). Galician pianist and impresario, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory and of Pasta, from 1848 active in America, at first as concertist with Maretzek or Amalia Patti (whom he married), from 1850 an early teacher of Adelina Patti, in 1857-60 manager of the Academy of Music in New York, and then mostly in Europe. Wrote the operas Sardanapalus and Giovanna di Napoli, piano-pieces and Souvenirs d'un Impresario, 1887, besides some vocal lessons. With him were associated his brothers Ferdinand (as European agent) and Max (1834-1892), the latter taking up the New York business in 1860. G. A.

Stransky, Josef (n. Deutsch-Brod, 1874). Distinguished Bohemian conductor, originally trained in medicine at Prague and Leipzig Universities (M.D. 1896), in music pupil of Jadas-sohn and the Vienna Conservatory, from 1898 conductor at the German Opera in Prague, from 1903 at the Hamburg Opera, but with many appearances elsewhere, in 1909-10 conductor of the Blüthner Orchestra in Berlin and the Wagner series at the New Opera, and in 1910-11 in charge of the Musikfreunde concerts at Dresden, with further tours. In 1911 he removed to America to succeed Mahler as conductor of the New York Philharmonic, continuing and perfecting its reorganization on progressive lines until 1923. Has written the operetta Der General, an orchestral suite, some chamber-music and songs, besides arrangements of Berlioz' Béatrice et Bénédicte and Gluck's Paride ed Elena. A.

Strantz, Ferdinand von (Breslau, 1821-1909, Berlin). Silesian stage-singer and manager, at first in the army, from 1848 singer at Hanover and Darmstadt and actor at various places, from 1870 manager and later acting-director at the Leipzig Opera and in 1876-87 director of the Berlin Opera. Author of Erinnerungen, 1901, '06, and an Opernführer, 1907.

Strässer, Ewald (Burscheid, 1867). Rhenish composer, trained at the Cologne Conservatory and long teacher there, gaining the title of professor in 1918. In 1921 he taught at Cologne University for a time, but soon removed to the Stuttgart Conservatory. Has written (somewhat in the style of Brahms) 2 symphonies, a Tragödien-Ouvertüre, the suite Frühling, Stimmungsbilder for strings, a Sinfonische Fantasie, a violin-concerto, a piano-quintet, a clarinet-quintet, 4 string-quartets, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a piano-suite and various pieces, choruses and songs.

Stratton, Stephen Samuel (London, 1840-1906, Birmingham). English organist and writer, pupil of C. Gardner and Lucas, from 1862 teacher near London and from 1866 in Birmingham as organist at different churches (till 1882) and writer for various papers. Author of lives of Mendelssohn (1901) and Paganini (1907) and (with Brown) British Musical Biography, 1897.

Straube, Karl (Berlin, 1873). Eminent Prussian organist, trained by Reimann, Rüfer and A. Becker, from 1897 at Wesel Cathedral and since 1902 at the Thomaskirche in Leipzig, in 1903 becoming also conductor of the Bachverein, in 1907 teacher at the Conservatory and in 1908 organist at the Gewandhaus, from 1908 holding the title of royal professor. In 1918 he followed Schreck as cantor at the Thomasschule. As early as 1894 his recitals made a deep impression and he has continued to give notable historical programs, besides being a foremost exponent of Reger. Has edited 2 collections of older organ-works (1904, '07), Bach's Magnificat (1909) and Handel's Dettingen Te Deum (1913), besides works of Bach and Liszt in preparation. In 1904-20 he directed five Bach-Festivals at Leipzig. See Robert-Tornow, Reger und Straube, 1907.

Straus, Ludwig (Presburg, 1835-1899, Cambridge). Able Hungarian violinist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1850 appearing throughout central Europe, Austria, Germany, Italy and Scandinavia, from 1860 concertmaster at the Frankfurt Opera and from 1862 also at the Museum concerts there, in 1864-88 concertmaster of the Hallé Orchestra at Manchester (England) and then in London in court-service till 1893.

Straus, Oskar (Vienna, 1870). Talented Austrian conductor and composer, pupil of Prosnitz, Grädener and Bruch, in 1895-1900 theater-conductor at Brünn, Teplitz and Mayence and in 1901-03 associated with Wolzogen's 'Ueberbrettel' enterprise, then making great success with many operettas, including Der tapfere Soldat, 1908, Das Tal der Liebe, 1909, Rund um die Liebe, 1914, Die schöne Unbekannte, 1915, Liebeszauber, 1919, and Nixchen, 1921. Has also written the overture Der Traum ein Leben, a serenade and All-Wiener Reigen for strings, a violin-sonata, a trio-suite, violin-, 'cello- and piano-pieces.

Strauss, Edmund von (Olmütz, 1869-1919, Berlin). Moravian manager of theaters in Prague, Lübeck, Bremen and finally Berlin (Opera and also, from 1910, the Blüthner Orchestra).

Strauss, Eduard (Vienna, 1835-1916, do.), son of Johann, Sr., below. Eminent Austrian dance-music leader and composer, pupil of Preyer, beginning to conduct in 1862, in 1865 substituting for his brother Johann at Petrograd and from 1870 succeeding him as director for the court-balls at Vienna. He continued to give concerts both at Vienna and on extended tours through Europe and in America (1892 and 1901-02) till 1902, when the famous band, started by his father in 1826, was broken up. Wrote over 300 dances and also Erinnerungen, 1906. G.

Strauss, Franz (n. Weiden, 1822-1905, Munich). Noted Bavarian hornist, long engaged at the Munich Opera (till 1889), teacher at the Conservatory (till 1896) and in 1875-96 leader of the Wilde Gungl (amateur orchestra). Wrote a horn-concerto, pieces, études and exercises.

Strauss, Johann (Vienna, 1804-1849, do.). Eminent Austrian dance-musician, pupil of Polyschansky and Seyfried, from 1819 playing under Pamer and from 1823 in the Lanner Quartet. In 1826 he started his own band, speedily attaining artistic and popular success, so that from 1833 he began making tours that reached to Paris and London in 1837. From 1834 he was bandmaster in the city-militia in Vienna and began to provide music for official balls, and in 1845 was made conductor for the court-balls. Wrote over 150 dances (waltzes, galops, polkas, quadrilles, marches, etc.), of which his son Johann issued a complete edition (1899). Memoirs by Scheyrer, 1851, Kleineecke, 1894, and F. Lange, 1904. G.

Strauss, Johann (Vienna, 1825-1899, do.), son of the above and brother of Joseph and Eduard. Distinguished Austrian violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of Drechsler, the most brilliant member of a famous family. He first appeared in 1844 and in 1849 united his band with that of his father, soon undertaking tours and in 1855-65 being engaged for summer-concerts at Petrograd. In 1863-70 he was director for the court-balls at Vienna. In 1872 he made a concert-trip to America. After 1870 he devoted himself mainly to operettas. Wrote about 500 dances, especially waltzes (An der schönen blauen Donau, Tausend und eine Nacht, Künstlerleben, etc.), about 15 operettas (from 1871), including Die Fledermaus, 1874, Cagliostro, 1875, Der lustige Krieg, 1881, Eine Nacht in Venedig, 1883, Fürstin Ninetta, 1893, Waldmeister, 1895, etc., besides the ballet Aschenbrödel and the orchestral Traumbilder. Memoirs by Eisenberg, 1894, Procházka, 1900, Specht, 1909, and F. Lange, 1912. G.

Strauss, Joseph (Brünn, 1793-1866, Karlsruhe). Able Moravian violinist and conductor, pupil of his father, Blumenthal, Urbani, Schuppanzigh and Albrechtsberger, from 1798 playing in the Vienna opera-orchestra, from 1810 soloist at the Pest Opera, in 1813-14 conductor at Temesvár, then at Hermannstadt, from 1817 at Brünn, in 1822-23 at Strasburg and in 1823-24 at Mannheim. In 1824-63 he was court-director at Karlsruhe. In 1840 he conducted German opera in London and in 1841 the festival at Speyer. Wrote 7 operas (from 1815), including Der Wahrwolf, 1840, music for plays, the oratorio Judith, cantatas, masses, other church-music, 2 symphonies, a violin-concerto, a sextet for harp and wind, a string-quartet, violin-variations and songs.

Strauss, Joseph (Vienna, 1827-1870, do.), son of Johann, Sr., above and brother of Johann and Eduard. Austrian violinist, in 1853 temporarily taking Johann's place as conductor and then forming a band of his own. His public career was checked by ill-health and his death came from injuries inflicted by brutal Russians in Warsaw. Wrote almost 300 dances, from which Reiterer and Sommer have made up several operettas (1903-08). G.

Strauss, Richard (Munich, 1864), son of Franz above. Distinguished Bavarian conductor and composer, precociously developed under the court-musicians Tombo (harpist) Walter (violinist) and Meyer (director), beginning to compose at six and to have works performed with care at sixteen. In 1882 he completed his gymnasial course and took one year at the University. In 1883-84 he was in Berlin, where he met Von Bülow and for five months in 1885-86 was the latter's successor as court-director at Meiningen. Here he came under the influence of Alex. Ritter and turned from his previous devotion to classical forms and methods and from a transient interest in the style of Brahms to the colorful possibilities of delineative and dramatic music. From 1886, after a trip in Italy, he was third conductor at the court-opera in Munich and in 1889-94 court-director at Weimar (with a trip to Sicily and the Orient in 1892-93 to recover from overwork). At Munich he wrote his first symphonic poems and while at Weimar his first drama. From 1894 he held the office of court-director at Munich (jointly with Levi), but made many trips elsewhere, as especially in 1896-97, when he visited both Russia and Spain, besides many cities nearer by. In the summer of 1894 he conducted at Bayreuth and in 1894-95 replaced Von Bülow as head of the Berlin Philharmonic. In 1898 he was made conductor of the Berlin Opera and in 1908 director in general. In 1910 he was elected to the Akademie and from 1917 was head of the Meisterschule of the Hochschule (following Georg Schumann). In 1919 he was made conductor at the Vienna Opera, but without altogether severing his relations with Berlin.

The progressive unfolding of his genius has aroused much discussion, largely because it has had so many sudden shifts. From the first his extraordinary mastery of technical procedure has been manifest. But he has chosen to apply his gifts not only in contrasted styles, but apparently whimsically, as if to confound the critics. He has again and again shown his power to create beauty of rare freshness and then has dropped to the commonplace of the merely sensational. This lack of consistency and earnestness still keeps him from taking the place as the successor of Wagner to which his skill seems to entitle him. He has reached his highest success with his symphonic poems and his many fine songs. Of his operas the light Rosenkavalier has been the most effective, though Salome has achieved the greater notoriety.

He has been honored by many governments and societies, including membership in the Légion d'Honneur (Officier, 1914) and a Ph.D. from Heidelberg Univ. in 1902. In 1901-09 he presided over the Allgem. Deutscher Musikverein. In 1894 he married the accomplished singer Pauline de Ahna. In 1921 he made a notable visit to America.

His works include

Operas—Guntram, 1894, Feuersnot, 1901, Salome, 1905, Elektra, 1909, Der Rosenkavalier, 1911, Ariadne auf Naxos (interlude for Molière's Bourgeois Gentilhomme), 1912 (revised, 1916), Die Frau ohne Schatten, 1919. Also Josefs-Legende (ballet), 1914; Enoch Arden and Das Schloss am Meer (melodramas with piano); Intermezzo ('Spieloper') and Schlagobers (ballet-pantomime).

Symphonies—in D min. (1881), in F min. (1884), Sinfonia Domestica, 1904, Eine Alpensinfonie, 1915. Symphonic Poems—Aus Italien (fantasia), 1887, Don Juan, 1889, Tod und Verklärung, 1890, Macbeth, 1890, Till Eulenspiegels lustige Streiche, 1895, Also sprach Zarathustra, 1896, Don Quixote (variations), 1898, Ein Heldenleben, 1899.

Concertos for violin in D min. and for horn in E-flat (both early). Also Burleske for piano and orchestra, 1886.

Other orchestral works—overture in C min. (1883); Festliches Präludium, 1913 (with organ); Feierlicher Einzug des Ritter des Johanniter-Ordens (brass and drums); Festmarsch; Königsmarsch; 4 military marches.

Chamber-music—string-quartet in A (1881); piano-quartet in C min.; violin-sonata in E-flat; 'cello-sonata in F; serenade for 13 wind-instruments (1882). For piano—sonata in B min.; fugue in A min.; 5 Stimmungsbilder; 5 other pieces.

For chorus—Tailefer (ballad); Eine deutsche Motette (chorus 16-part); Wanderers Sturmlied (6-part); Bardengesang (men's voices); 8 a cappella choruses (2 16-part for mixed voices, 6 for men).

For solo voice—(with orchestra) Noturno, Nächtlicher Gang, Das Thal, Der Einsame and 4 others; (with piano) 6 Lotosblätter; 5 Schlichte Weisen; 4 Mädchenblumen; over 100 other songs.

Arrangement of Gluck's Iphigénie en Tauride; harmonizations for Peters' Volksliederbuch. Also has edited his father's horn-works (with Rüdel) and translated and enlarged Berlioz' Instrumentation (1905).

Biographies by Seidl and Klatte, 1896, Hut-schenruijter, 1898, Brecher, 1900, Urban, 1901, Bie, 1906, '16, Newman, 1908, Steinitzer, 1911 (rewritten, 1914), Finck, 1917, and Walters-hausen, 1921, with numerous essays and critiques. G. A.

Stravinsky, Igor Fedorovitch (n. Petrograd, 1882). Eccentric Russian composer, at first a law-student, then pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov, coming into notice in 1908 as an extreme futurist. He lives at Morges (Switzerland). Has written the opera Le Rossignol, 1914, the ballets L'Oiseau de Feu, 1910, Petrushka, 1911, Le Sacre du Printemps, 1913, Les Abeilles, 1917, and Les Noces Villageoises, the orchestral works Scherzo Fantastique, Feu d'Artifice and a symphony in E-flat, a Symphonic Concertante for wind (1920), the choral works Les Rois des Étoiles and Chant Funèbre (in memory of Rimsky-Korsakov), Le Faune et la Bergère and 3 Japanese songs with orchestra, several other songs, a piano-sonata and some études, a concerto (1921) and pieces for string-quartet, etc. Sketches by Van Vechten, 1915, Wise, 1916, and Montagu-Nathan, 1917 (all in collective works or journals).

Streatfield, Richard Alexander (Carshalton, 1866-1919, London). English critic and writer, from 1889 assistant in the printed-books division of the British Museum and in 1898-1912 critic for the Daily Graphic. Author of Masters of Italian Music, 1895, The Opera, 1897 (4th ed. 1917), Modern Music and Musicians, 1906, a life of Handel (1909), Life-Stories of Great Composers, 1911, and Musiciens Anglais Contemporains, 1913 (only in French translation).

Street, Georges Ernest (Vienna, 1854-1908, do.) French-Austrian critic, pupil of Draeske, Bizet and Damcke, from about 1890 writing for Le Matin and from 1898 for L'Éclair. Wrote the parody-opera Mignonette, 1896 (on Thomas' Mignon), several operettas and ballets (Scaramouche, 1891, with Messager) and the mimodrama Fides, 1894. His mother was a pupil of Liszt, the recipient of the latter's Briefe an eine Freundin in 1853-55.]

Streicher, Johann Andreas (Stuttgart, 1761-1833, Vienna). Württemberger piano-maker, from 1793 husband of Nanette Stein and partner with her in Vienna. He was one of the inventors of the down-striking action. G.

Streicher, Theodor (Vienna, 1874), great-grandson of the above. Austrian vocal composer, chiefly self-taught, writing the choral works Mignons Exequien, 1907, Die Schlacht bei Murten, 4 Kriegslieder and Kleiner Vogel Kolibri, the scena Um Inez weinten, 36 songs from Des Knaben Wunderhorn, 4 books of Hafis-Lieder, etc., besides Die Monologe des Faust for string-sextet and orchestrations of ballads by Loewe. He lives at Krumpendorf on the Wörther See (Carinthia).

Strelezki, Anton [real name said to be Bur-nand] (Croydon, 1859). English pianist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Mme. Schumann, writing many popular piano-pieces and some songs, besides Personal Recollections of Chats with Liszt, 1895.

Strepponi, Giuseppina (Lodi, 1815-1897, Busseto). Eminent Italian operatic soprano, trained at the Milan Conservatory, in 1835-49 extremely successful in tragic rôles both in Italy and at Vienna. In 1849 she married the composer Verdi. She sang at the première of his Nabucco (1842).

Striegler, Kurt (Dresden, 1886). Able Saxon conductor, trained at the Dresden Conservatory, where in 1913 he followed Draeseke as teacher. Since 1912 he has conducted at the Dresden Opera, besides for five years leading the Volks-Singakademie. Has written 3 symphonies, a Kammersinfonie, a symphonic prelude, a concerto and a rondo for violin and orchestra, a scherzo for six drums and orchestra, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, an organ-symphony, sonatas for violin and for flute, various choral works, many songs, the fairy-plays Schneewittchen and Frau Holle, music for Hebbel's Herodes und Mariamme and the operas Der Thomas-kantor and Hand und Herz.

Striggio, Alessandro (?1535-1587). 16th C. G.

Strong, George Templeton (New York, 1856). Gifted American composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and from 1880 in contact with the Liszt circle, from 1886 at Wiesbaden (intimate with MacDowell) and since 1889 at Vevey (Switzerland), except for teaching in 1891-92 at the New England Conservatory (Boston). At one time he turned from music to water-color painting and started an aquarellists' society. Has written the symphonies In der Bergen, Sintram and An der See, the symphonic poem Undine, Die Nacht (4 symphonic sketches), the 'märchen' for violin and orchestra Gestrebt, gewonnen, gescheitert, 2 American Sketches for do., string-quartets with horn, the humorous string-trio Der Dorfmusikdirektor, a Tonstück for horn and organ, the choral works Wie ein fahrender Hornist sich ein Land erblickt, Die verlassene Mühle and Knights and Naiads, the symphonic idyl Am der Nixenquelle for two pianos, 4-hand arrangements of organ-works by Bach, many characteristic piano-pieces and some songs. G. A.

Strong, Susan (Brooklyn, ?1875). American operatic soprano, pupil of Korbay, in 1895 appearing in England and Italy and from 1896 in America (under Mapleson and Damrosch and at the Metropolitan in 1899-1900) and since 1900 in England, latterly in concert. A.

Strozzi, Barbara, Bernardo and Gregoric. 17th C.
Strozzi, Pietro. 16th C.

Strube, Gustav (Ballenstedt, 1867). Able Saxon violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father and the Leipzig Conservatory, playing in the orchestra when but ten, from about 1885 in the Gewandhaus Orchestra, then teacher at the Mannheim Conservatory, in 1891 removing to Boston, where he joined the Symphony Orchestra and later conducted popular summer-concerts, besides often assisting at the Worcester festivals. In 1913 he became teacher of theory at the Peabody Conservatory (Baltimore) and in 1916 also conductor of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. Has written the opera Ramona (not yet given), 2 symphonies, the symphonic poems Longing (with viola), Fantastic Dance (do.), Narcissus and Echo and Lorelei, the overtures The Maid of Orleans, Puck and Fantastic, orchestral Variations and a Rhapsody, 3 violin-concertos, a cello-concerto, Poème Antique for violin and orchestra, a wind-quintet, a string-quartet, an Elegy and Serenade for quartet, sonatas for violin and for viola, a violin-suite and many pieces, the choral works Hymn to Eros and Rhapsody, Iphigenia's Prayer for soprano, piano-pieces and songs. A.

Strungk, Delphin (1601-1694) and Nikolaus Adam (1640-1700). 17th C. G.

Struss, Fritz (Hamburg, 1847). North German violinist, pupil of Unruh, Auer and Joachim, from 1866 in the Schwerin orchestra and from 1870 long in the court-orchestra at Berlin, becoming concertmaster in 1887 and having the title of chamber-virtuoso from 1885. At one time he also taught at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory. Has written 2 violin-concertos and many violin-pieces.

Stuart, Leslie [Thomas A. Barrett] (Southport, 1866). English organist and vocal composer, from 1881 at the R. C. Cathedral in Salford and in 1888-95 at the Church of the Holy Name in Manchester, then removing to London. Has written 8 operettas (1899-1911), of which the chief was Floradora, 1899, and many popular songs.

Stuck, Johann Baptist [called Batistin] (Florence, ?1680-1755, Paris). German-Italian 'cellist in the opera-orchestra at Paris, probably the first to use the 'cello there. Wrote 3 operas (1709-20), many ballets for the court, 4 books of cantatas and 1 of airs.

Stumpf, Johann Christian (?-1801, Frankfurt). German bassoonist, active in Paris about 1785, later in Altona and from 1798 trainer at the Frankfurt Opera. Wrote 4 bassoon-concertos, a flute-concerto, numerous ensemble-pieces with bassoon, string-trios and duets, orchestral entr'actes, etc.

Stumpf, Carl (Wiesentheid, 1848). Eminent Bavarian psychologist, from 1873 professor at Würzburg University, then at Prague, Halle, Munich and Berlin (since 1894). Author (among other works) of Tonpsychologie, 2 vols. 1883-90, Gesch. d. Konsonanzbegriffs, 1897, Beiträge zur Akustik u. Musikwissenschaft, 7 parts, 1898-1913, Die Anfänge d. Musik, 1911, and many articles in journals.

Stuntz, Joseph Hartmann (n. Basel, 1793-1859, Munich). Swiss conductor, pupil of Winter, after some years in Italy, from 1824 chorusmaster at the Munich Opera and in 1826 court-director (following Winter). Wrote 7 operas (1819-45), a ballet, much church-music, 2 overtures, a string-quartet, etc.

Sturani, Giuseppe. Italian conductor, from about 1905 active in Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro, from 1908 at the Manhattan, New York, from 1910 at the Metropolitan and since 1912 with the Chicago Opera Company. A.

Succo, Reinhold (Görlitz, 1837-1897, Breslau). Silesian organist, trained at the Berlin Akademie, from 1863 organist at the Thomaskirche there and from 1874 also teacher at the Hochschule, becoming in 1888 member of the Akademie. Wrote motets, Psalms, other church-music, organ-pieces, a Choralbuch, etc.

Such, Henry (London, 1872). English violinist, appearing when but eight, then pupil of the Berlin Hochschule and later of Wilhelmj, from 1892 touring in central and northern Europe and in 1898 returning to London as teacher at the Guildhall School. G.

Such, Percy Frederick (London, 1878). brother of the above. English 'cellist, pupil of Ludemann, Hausmann and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1898 appearing in Germany, Holland and England, especially as extra 'cellist in the Joachim Quartet and as leader at the Popular Concerts in their last two seasons. G.

Sucher, Joseph (n. St. Gottard, 1844-1908, Berlin). Eminent Hungarian conductor, trained as choirboy in the Vienna court-choir and by Sechter, from about 1865 active in Vienna as choral leader, trainer at the Opera and conductor of the Komische Oper, in 1876-78 conductor at the Leipzig Opera, there marrying the soprano Rosa Hasselbeck (see below), from 1878 at the Hamburg Opera and in 1888-99 at the Berlin Opera. Both were famous as interpreters of Wagner. Wrote the choral works Waldfräulein, Seeschlacht bei Lepanto and Aus alten Märchen, the song-cycle Ruheort, etc. G.

Sucher, Rosa, née Hasselbeck [Haslbeck] (Velburg, 1849). Eminent Bavarian operatic soprano, pupil of her father and the Munich Conservatory, singing in church &c. Freising and about 1860 in opera at Treves, Königsberg, Berlin, Danzig and Leipzig, in 1877 marrying the conductor Sucher (see above) and going with him to Hamburg and Berlin (continuing there till 1903). After 1880 she was in much request elsewhere, from 1882 in England, in 1895 under Damrosch at the Metropolitan, New York, in 1886-99 regularly at Bayreuth and at many Lower Rhine Festivals. Besides taking all of the Wagner rôles with conspicuous power, she was equally famous in many other works. Since 1909 she has taught in Vienna. Author of Aus meinem Leben, 1914. G.

Suchsland, Leonard (Vacha, 1871). Thuringian 'cellist, conductor and composer, pupil of the Weimar Music School and of Klengel, from about 1895 leading player in the Leipzig Philharmonic and then in the Kaim Orchestra at Munich, but moving to Gratz as leader of the Styrian Musikverein (till 1912) and later of the Singverein and the Urania. Has written 2 symphonies, the prelude Lenzfahrt, a symphonic Tranermusik, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, 5 piano-trios, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, many choruses and songs.

Suda, Stanislaus (Pilsen, 1865). Bohemian composer of the Czech operas U Božich Muk, 1897, Lešdinský Kovač, 1903, and Bar Kochba, 1905.

Suk, Josef (Křečovice, 1874). Eminent Bohemian violinist and composer, trained by his father and at the Prague Conservatory, from 1892 second in the famous Bohemian Quartet and of late years often engaged as conductor of orchestras. He married the daughter of Dvořák. Has written symphonies in E and E min. (Asrael), the symphonic poems Praga, 1905, Ein Sommermärchen, 1909, and Zrání, 1918, the overtures Dramatische and The Winter's Tale, an orchestral suite (from incidental music for Radúz und Mahulena), a Scherzo Fantastique, a Fantasia for violin and orchestra, a serenade for strings, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, an Elegie for trio, some violin- and many piano-pieces, the choral work Under the Apple-Tree and several choruses a cappella, besides editing the last works of Dvořák.

Suk, Váša (Kladno, 1861). Bohemian violinist and conductor, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, in 1879-81 playing in the Warsaw orchestra, in 1881-84 conducting opera at Kiev and Moscow, then at various places in Russia and since 1906 again at the Moscow Opera. Has written the opera The Forest-King, 1900, the symphonic poem Jan Huss, a serenade for strings, etc.

Sullivan, Arthur Seymour (London, 1842-1900, do.). Distinguished English conductor and composer, trained as choirboy in the Chapel Royal under Helmore and at the Royal Academy, London, and the Leipzig Conservatory. In 1856-60 he was the first to hold the Mendelssohn Scholarship. Until 1871 he served as organist at two London churches, from 1874 was often engaged as conductor, notably at the Leeds Festivals in 1880-98 and the London Philharmonic in 1885-87. In 1876-81 he was principal of the Nat. Training School and later on the Council of the Royal College in which it was merged. His eminent success as composer both of serious instrumental and vocal works and also of a long series of charming operettas brought him many decorations and honors, including a Mus.D. from Cambridge and Oxford

Univs. in 1876 and '79, membership in the Légion d'Honneur in 1878 and knighthood in 1883. From 1887 he was grand organist of the Freemasons. His extraordinary vogue as operetta-writer was largely dependent on his close association with the librettist W. S. Gilbert (1836-1911), who joined him in 1871. They visited America in 1879, chiefly to protect their copyrights. The list of his works includes the following:

Operas—Ivanhoe, 1891, The Beauty-Stone, 1898, The Rose of Persia, 1900, The Emerald Isle, 1901 (finished by German).

Operettas—The Contrabandista, 1867, Cox and Box, 1867, Thespis, 1871, Trial by Jury, 1875, The Zoo, 1875, The Sorcerer, 1877, H. M. S. Pinafore, 1878, The Pirates of Penzance, 1880, Patience, 1881, Iolanthe, 1882, Princess Ida, 1884, The Mikado, 1885, Ruddigore, 1887, The Yeomen of the Guard, 1888, The Gondoliers, 1889, Haddon Hall, 1892, Utopia (limited), 1893, The Chieftain, 1894 (revised from The Contrabandista), The Grand Duke, 1896.

Incidental music to The Tempest (1862), The Merchant of Venice (1873), The Merry Wives of Windsor (1874), Henry VIII (1878), Macbeth (1888), Tennyson's The Foresters (1892), and Carr's King Arthur (1894).

Ballets—L'Île Enchantée, 1864, Victoria and Merrie England, 1897 (for the Queen's Jubilee).

Oratorios—The Prodigal Son, 1869 (Worcester), The Light of the World, 1873 (Birmingham), The Martyr of Antioch, 1880 (Leeds, also arranged for the stage).

Cantatas—Kenilworth, 1864 (Birmingham), On Shore and Sea, 1871, The Golden Legend, 1886 (Leeds). Also Festival Te Deum, 1872, and 2 occasional odes (1886, '87).

For orchestra—symphony in E (1866); overtures, The Sapphire Necklace, 1864, In Memoriam, 1866 (for his father), Marmion, 1867, and Di Ballo, 1870; cello-concertino (1866); marches, Procession, 1863, Princess of Wales, 1863, and Imperial, 1893.

Church-music—Morning Service in D; about 20 anthems; nearly 60 hymn-tunes.

About 15 part-songs; about 100 songs. Also some piano-pieces and a Duo concertante for 'cello and piano.

Edited Church Hymns, 1872, for the S. P. C. K.

Memoirs by Lawrence, 1900, Wells, 1901, Wyndham, 1904, Findon, 1904, '08, and (including Gilbert) Goldberg, 1913, Bridgeman, 1914, and Mackenzie, 1920. G.

Sulzer, Johann Georg (Winterthur, 1720-1779, Berlin). Swiss æsthetician, at different times professor in the Joachimsthal Gymnasium and other Berlin institutions. Author of Allgem. Theorie d. schönen Künste, 4 vols. 1772 (2d ed. 1792-94, extensions by others, 11 vols. 1792-1806), an essay on the origin of fine art (1757, in reports of the Akademie), etc.

Sulzer, Salomon (Hohenems, 1804-1890, Vienna). Austrian Jewish cantor, pupil of Seyfried, from 1825 at the leading Vienna synagogue and in 1844-47 also teacher at the Conservatory. Besides being a noted singer he effected great reforms in Jewish service-music, receiving in consequence many honors. Author of Schir Zion, 2 vols. 1838, '65 (for synagogues), Dudaim (for school and home), etc. His son Julius (1834-1891) was an excellent violinist, from 1875 conductor at the Hofburgtheater in Vienna. G.

Suppé, Franz von (Spalato, 1819-1895, Vienna). Famous Dalmatian (Belgian) conductor and composer of comic operettas, trained by Cigala and Ferrari and at the Vienna Conservatory, from about 1845 employed at theaters in Vienna, Presburg and Baden and after 1865 at the Leopoldstädter in Vienna. Wrote in all about 210 stage-works, including 31 operettas (from 1834), such as Fatinitza, 1876, Boccaccio, 1879, Bellmann, 1887, etc., a symphony, overtures, quartets, a mass (1867), a Requiem (1860), etc. His vogue resembled that of Offenbach. Memoir by Keller, 1905. G.

Surette, Thomas Whitney (Concord, Mass. 1862). American organist and lecturer, pupil of Foote and Paine, in 1883-93 organist at Concord and in 1895-96 in Baltimore. In 1895 he began university-extension work in music under the American society and in 1909 added similar work for Oxford University. Author of The Appreciation of Music, 1907 (with D. G. Mason), The Development of Symphonic Music, 1915, Music and Life, 1917, class-syllabi and magazine-articles. Has also written the opera Cascabel, 1899, the operetta Priscilla, 1917, the choral ballad The Eve of St. Agnes, 1898, anthems and piano-pieces. A.

Suriano [Soriano], Francesco (1549-1620). 16th C. G.

Surzynski, Joseph (Schrimm, 1851-1919, Kosten). Polish-Prussian church-musician, pupil of the Ratibon Music School, writing masses and other church-music and editing part ii of the Polish Denkmäler (1887).

Susato, Tylman. 16th C. G.

Süssmayer, Franz Xaver (Steyr, 1766-1803, Vienna). Austrian conductor and composer, pupil of Salieri and Mozart (in his last year), from 1792 conductor at the Nationaltheater in Vienna and from 1794 assistant at the Opera. Wrote the opera Moses, 1792, many operettas, a cantata and considerable church-music. He completed the score of Mozart's Requiem and also that of his Clemenza di Tito. G.

Suter, Hermann (Kaiserstuhl, 1870). Able Swiss organist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father, G. Weber, the Basel Music School and the Stuttgart and Leipzig Conservatories, from 1892 organist at Zurich and leader of choral societies at Schaffhausen and Winterthur, in 1902 Vöckland's successor at Basel as conductor of the Musikgesellschaft concerts, the Gesangverein and the Liedertafel, and in 1918-21 Huber's successor as head of the Music School. Ph.D. of Basel Univ. in 1913. Has written 2 symphonies, the symphonic poem Walpurgisnacht (with chorus), music for Bernoulli's St. Jakob an der Birs (1912), a string-sextet, 3 string-quartets, the choral work Die Schmiede im Walde, many a cappella choruses and songs.

Sutor, Wilhelm (Edelstetten, 1774-1828, n. Hanover). Bavarian singer and conductor, pupil of Valesi, at first in court-service at Eichstädt, from 1806 choromaster or concertmaster at the Stuttgart Opera and from 1818 court-director at Hanover. Wrote 5 operas (1808-17), an oratorio, music to Macbeth, a melodrama, cantatas and arias.

Sutro, Rose Laura (Baltimore, 1870) and Ottile (Baltimore, 1872), sisters. American pianists, pupils of the Berlin Hochschule, since 1894 noted for two-piano recitals of unique character, till 1914 mostly in Europe and then in America. Many works have been written for them by Rudorff, Schütt, Hollaender, Floersheim and others, including Bruch's double concerto, op. 88 (1915). A.

Svečenski, Louis (Osijek, 1862). Croatian violinist and violist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, in 1885-1903 in the Boston Symphony Orchestra (violin) and in 1885-1917 in the Kneisel Quartet (viola), then teaching in New York. Has written viola-exercises. A.

Svedborn, Vilhelm (b. 1843). Swedish composer, from 1876 secretary of the Musical Academy at Stockholm and in 1901-04 director of the Conservatory. Has written the choral works In the Rose-Garden, Fyris, etc., vocal quartets, songs and piano-pieces.

Svensden, Johan Severin (Christiania, 1840-1911, Copenhagen). Distinguished Norwegian violinist, conductor and composer, son of an army-bandmaster and at fifteen in similar service and later in orchestras at Christiania. When twenty-three he was enabled by a royal grant to study at the Leipzig Conservatory, graduating in 1867 with high honor. After touring in Scandinavia and Great Britain, he spent 1868-70 in Paris, but left for Leipzig on the eve of the Franco-Prussian War, there being concertmaster for the Euterpe in 1871-72. In 1872-77 he was conductor of the Musical Union in Christiania, from 1874 receiving an annual stipend from the government, and continuing in 1880-83, after sojourns in Leipzig, Munich, Rome, London and Paris. In 1883 he became court-director at Copenhagen and from 1896 also conductor at the Opera, retiring in 1908. His career was delayed and at several points hampered by poverty, and his achievements as violinist checked by hand-disability. But as composer he won a sure place by fine workmanship and sustained nobility of conception. His wide experience made his style more cosmopolitan than national. His works include

For orchestra—symphonies in D and B-flat; legend, Zorahayde; overtures, Sigurd Slembe and Romeo and Juliet; 4 Rhapsodies Norvégiens; Carnaval à Paris; Carnaval des Artistes Norvégiens; Polonaise; Funeral March for Charles XV and Coronation March for Oscar II (both 1872); violin-concerto in A; cello-concerto in D min.; Romance for violin and orchestra. Also arrangements of various works by Bach, Schubert, Schumann and Wagner, and (for strings) of Scandinavian folk-music.

Chamber-music—string-octet in A min.; string-quintet in C; string-quartet in A min. Also settings of Scandinavian airs for quartet, and arrangement of a Romance by Popper for cello.

For voice—Wedding Cantata; men's part-songs; 9 songs.

His letters have been edited by Gunnar Hauch (1914, in Sametiden). See Grönwold, Norske Musikere, 1883. G, A.

Sweelinck, Jan Pieterszoon (1562-1621). 16th C. G.

Swieten, Gottfried, Baron von (Leyden, 1734-1803, Vienna). Dutch diplomat, in 1771-78 at Berlin (Potsdam) and then at Vienna, becoming head of the Imperial Library and a noted musical patron. He maintained musical performances and gave commissions to composers (6 symphonies from K.P.E. Bach, additional accompaniments for works by Handel from Mozart, etc.), besides arranging Handel's Athaliah and Choice of Hercules, translating the text of Haydn's Creation and drafting that of The Seasons. To him Beethoven dedicated his 1st Symphony (1800). He also started an aristocratic Musikalische Gesellschaft, prefiguring the later Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde. G.

Swoboda, Adalbert Viktor (Prague, 1828-1902, Munich). Bohemian writer, from 1880 founder and editor of the Neue Musikzeitung at Stuttgart and author of a Musikgeschichte, 2 vols. 1893.

Sykora, Bogumil (Glinsk, 1890). Gifted Russian 'cellist, pupil of the Kiev Music School and the Leipzig Conservatory, since 1911 appearing in Russia, Siberia, Austria, Germany and America (1916). Has written a concerto, sonatas, variations and other pieces.

Szabados, Béla (Pest, 1867). Hungarian composer of the operas Mária, 1905 (with Szendy) and The Buffoon and several operettas (from 1892). Since 1896 he has taught at the Pest Conservatory.

Szántó, Theodor (Vienna, 1877). Hungarian-Austrian pianist, trained at the Pest Academy, since about 1900 active in Paris, writing a violin-sonata (in Hungarian style), brilliant piano-pieces and arrangements from Bach's organ-works.

Székely, Imre [Emeric] (Matyasfalva, 1823-1887, Pest). Hungarian pianist, touring from 1846 and, after sojourns in Paris, London and Hamburg, from 1852 teacher at Pest. Wrote concertos, 30 Hungarian Fantasias, salon-pieces, études and some orchestral and chamber-works.

Széll, Georg (Pest, 1897). Precocious Hungarian pianist and composer, pupil of Mandyczewski, J. B. Förster and Robert, appearing when but ten at Vienna, Dresden, etc., from 1917 opera-conductor at Strasburg, from 1919 at the German Opera in Prague, in 1921-22 in similar work at Darmstadt and then at Düsseldorf. Has written a symphony, orchestral variations, a rondo for piano and orchestra, an overture, a piano-quintet, etc.

Szendy, Árpád (Szarvás, 1863-1922, Pest). Hungarian pianist, pupil of the Pest Academy and of Liszt, from 1890 teacher at the Academy, writing a string-quartet, violin-pieces, many piano-pieces of national flavor, etc., besides assisting on Szabados' Maria (1905).

Szenkar, Eugen (Pest, 1891). Hungarian conductor, pupil of his father and the Pest Akademie, from 1911 chorusmaster at the Pest Opera, from 1912 chorusmaster and conductor at the German Opera in Prague, from 1913 conductor at the Volksoper in Pest, in 1915-16 leader at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, from 1916 court-director at Altenburg and since 1920 chief conductor at the Frankfort Opera (following Brecher). Has written an orchestral suite, an overture, a string-quartet, piano-sonatas, etc.

Szumowska, Antoinette (Lubin, 1868). Gifted Polish pianist, pupil of the Warsaw Conservatory and of Paderewski, since 1892 appearing in Europe and America. In 1896 she married the 'cellist Joseph Adamowski and with him and his brother formed the Adamowski Trio. In the World War she was active in Polish relief-work. A.

Szymanowski, Karol von (Timoshevka, 1882). Polish-Russian composer, pupil of Noskowski and now living in Warsaw. Has written the operas Hagith, 1922, and Le Roi Roger, 2 symphonies, the symphonic poem Penthesilea, an overture, a piano-concerto, a violin-concerto, a violin-sonata and a Romanze, 3 piano-sonatas, a fantasia, 2 sets of variations, the pieces called Masken and Mythes, études, preludes, etc., somewhat in Chopin's style, and many songs. His sister is a leading concert-singer. See essay by Jachimecky, 1922 (in Musical Quarterly).

T

Tacchinardi, Nicola (Leghorn, 1772-1859, Florence). Eminent Italian operatic tenor, originally active as violinist, but from about 1795 becoming known as a singer of rare gifts and by 1805 famous throughout Italy. In 1811-14 he was engaged at the Italiens in Paris and soon after was in court-employment at Florence, with trips to Vienna and in Spain, retiring from the stage in 1831 and then training several fine pupils. Wrote vocalises and a pamphlet on Italian opera. G.

Tadolini, Giovanni (Bologna, 1793-1872, do.). Italian composer, pupil of Mattei and Babbini, in 1811-14 accompanist and chorus-master at the Italiens in Paris and again in 1830-39, in the interval writing 8 operas for Italian stages, with some other vocal and instrumental works. His wife was the soprano Eugenia Savorini. G.

Taffanel, Claude Paul (Bordeaux, 1844-1908, Paris). Able French flutist and conductor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1861 playing in the orchestra at the Opéra and from 1867 also at the Conservatory concerts, in 1892-1903 becoming conductor at the latter (following Garcin) and from 1893 at the Opéra. From 1893 he taught at the Conservatory. In 1879 he formed a Quintet of wind-instruments. G.

Tag, Christian Gotthilf (Bayerfeld, 1735-1811, n. Zwickau). Saxon church-musician, pupil of the Kreuzschule in Dresden, cantor at Hohenstein (Saxony) for over a half-century (1755-1808), writing a large amount of church-music, organ-preludes, arias and songs (many with organ), etc., all in the earlier style of Haydn.

Tagliafico, Joseph Dieudonné (Toulon, 1821-1900, Nice). Italian-French operatic bass, pupil of Piermarini, from 1844 appearing in Paris and from 1847 steadily at London, with trips to Russia and America, and in 1877-82 stage-manager at the Italian Opera in London. G.

Tagliana, Emilia (Milan, 1854). Gifted Italian operatic soprano, pupil of the Milan Conservatory and of Lamperti and Hans Richter, in 1870-82 appearing in Italy and at Paris, Odessa, Vienna and Berlin (local première of Carmen).

Taglischbeck, Thomas (Ansbach, 1799-1867, Baden). Bavarian violinist, pupil of Rovelli, from 1817 playing in the opera-orchestra at Munich (occasionally conductor), finally undertaking long concert-tours, in 1827-48 court-director at Hohenzollern and then active at Strasburg, Löwenberg (Silesia), Dresden and Baden. Wrote 2 symphonies, a violin-concerto and concertino, many other violin-works, a piano-trio, a mass, an opera, part-songs and songs. G.

Taglioni, Ferdinando (Naples, 1810-?). Italian violinist, in 1842-49 conductor at Lanziano, in 1849-52 concertmaster at San Carlo in Naples and later editor of the Gazzetta Musicale

there. In 1856 he was the first in Italy to give historical recitals and in 1865 founded a popular singing-school, for which he prepared text-books.

Tagore, Surindro Mohun (Calcutta, 1840-1914, do.). Distinguished Hindu scholar, in music trained by both Hindu and European teachers, in 1871 the founder of the Bengal Musical Society and in 1881 of the Bengal Academy of Music, remaining the patron and president of both through his life. He early devised a simplified form of notation for Hindu music, which has been widely adopted. He also made unique collections of books and instruments, the latter often on commission for European or American museums. Author (among other works not on music) of A Treasury of the Musical Instruments of Ancient and Modern India, 1875, Hindu Music from Various Authors, 1875 (2d ed. 2 vols. 1882), Short Notices of Hindu Instruments, 1877, The Essential Elements of Hindu Music, 1881, The Musical Scales of the Hindus, 1884, and The 22 Musical Srutis of the Hindus, 1886. See articles by Chrysander, 1879 (in Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung) and 1885 (in Vierteljahrsschrift).

Talbot, Howard (Yonkers, N. Y. 1865), name properly Munkittrick. American light-opera composer, trained at the Royal College, London, and since 1900 conductor at various London theaters, writing over 20 effective operettas (from 1894), including A Chinese Honeymoon, 1899. A.

Tallis, Thomas (?-1585). 16th C. G.

Talon, Pierre (Rheims, 1721-1785, Paris). French 'cellist, till 1782 in the court-band at Paris, writing quartets and trios (from 1753) of notable quality. See L'Année Musicale, 1911.

Tamagno, Francesco (Turin, 1851-1905, Varese). Noted Italian operatic tenor, pupil of the Turin Conservatory, from 1873 appearing in Italy and from 1880 famous there and then in South America and at Lisbon, Madrid, Paris, London (from 1889) and New York (1890, '94), becoming the most sought-for tenor of the time. In 1887 he sang at the première of Verdi's Otello. Sketch by E. de Amicis, 1902. G.

Tamberlik, Enrico (Rome, 1820-1889, Paris). Famous Italian operatic tenor, pupil of Borgna and Guglielmi, making his début in 1840 at Naples and then engaged there and in Spain and Portugal. In 1850-64 he was regularly at the Royal Italian Opera in London, but with many trips throughout Europe and both Americas, with further visits to London in 1870 and 1877. In his later years he lived at Madrid, engaged in arms-making. G.

Tamburini, Antonio (Faenza, 1800-1876, Nice). Eminent Italian operatic bass-baritone, pupil of his father, A. Rossi and Ascoli, from 1818 rapidly becoming noted for the extraordinary beauty of his voice, in 1824-32 engaged by Barbaja for Naples, Milan and Vienna, in 1832-41 alternately at Paris and London and then for some ten years in Russia, retiring in 1859. At Paris he was associated with Grisi, Persiani, Rubini and Lablache in a combination of great artists then unexampled. His vocal facility is said to have been extraordinary, if not unsurpassed. G.

Tanaka, Shohé. Acute Japanese physicist, educated at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1890), becoming a specialist in the subject of musical acoustics and tuning in pure intonation.

Taneiev [Tanieiev], Alexander Sergeievitch (Petrograd, 1850-1918, ?). Russian composer, educated at Petrograd University and then employed in government offices, becoming chief chancellor. In music he was a pupil of Reichel, Petrov and Rimsky-Korsakov, besides being influenced by Balakirev. Wrote the operas Cupid's Revenge and The Snowstorm, 3 symphonies, the overture Hamlet, 2 orchestral suites, the orchestral ballad Aliosha Popovitch, a Festival March and 2 mazurkas, a Réverie for violin and orchestra, 3 string-quartets, 'cello- and piano-pieces, choruses and songs. G.

Taneiev [Tanieiev], Sergei Ivanovitch (n. Vladimir, 1856-1915, n. Moscow), nephew of the above. Eminent Russian pianist and composer, trained at the Moscow Conservatory (becoming specially intimate with Tchaikovsky), from 1875 making notable concert-tours (at first with Auer or N. Rubinstein) in Russia, Turkey, Greece, Italy, France, etc., from 1878 professor at the Moscow Conservatory (succeeding Tchaikovsky and in 1881 N. Rubinstein) and in 1885-89 its director. Here he founded a library of books on theory (in memory of Rubinstein), to which he left his own collections. He was the chosen agent in introducing Tchaikovsky's piano-works and ranked among the best of Russian players, though not often heard after his early years. His compositions have great finish and dignity, without reaching the highest level of inspiration or warmth. They include the dramatic trilogy Oresteia, 1895 (Agamemnon, Choëphorai, Eumenides), the cantata Johannes Damascenus, 4 symphonies, an overture on Russian themes, a suite for violin and orchestra, 2 string-quintets, 8 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 3 string-trios, a piano-trio, a Prelude and Fugue for two pianos, a cappella choruses, tertzets and about 50 songs, besides instrumenting two works by Tchaikovsky and making piano-arrangements of symphonies by him, Glazunov, Arensky and others. Author of an important treatise on Imitative Counterpoint, 2 vols., with an unfinished sequel on Canon and Fugue, besides translating Bussler's Formenlehre and Der strenge Stil. See Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers, 1917. G., A.

Tan'sur, William (n. Rugby, 1706-1783, St. Neot's). English organist and teacher of psalmody at various places, writing several text-books and tune-collections (from 1725). G.

Tapper, Thomas (Canton, Mass. 1864). Able American educator, musically trained at the Petersilea Academy in Boston, where in 1903-04 he edited the Musical Record and in 1904-07 the Musician. Since 1905 he has lectured at the Inst. of Musical Art in New York, in 1907-09 was head of the Music School Settlement and from 1908 music-director at New York University. Litt.D. of Bates College in 1911. In 1895 he married the accomplished Norwegian pianist Bertha Feiring (1859-1915). Author of Chats with Music-Students, 1890, The Music-Life, 1892, Education of the Music-Teacher, Essentials in Music-History, 1914 (with Goetschius), and many other practical text-books, especially for piano-students. A.

Tappert, Wilhelm (n. Bunzlau, 1830-1907, Berlin). Silesian writer, pupil of the Kullak Academy (Berlin) and of Dehn, from 1866 living in Berlin, where in 1876-80 he edited the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung. His fine library went to the Berlin Library. Author of Musik u. musikal. Erziehung, 1866, Musikal. Studien, 1868, Das Verbot d. Quintenparallelen, 1869, Wagner-Lexikon, 1877 (2d ed. 1903), Wandernde Melodien, 1890, 54 Erbkönig-Kompositionen, 1898 (2d ed. 1906), and Sang u. Klang aus alter Zeit, 1906, besides some collections. Reports on his researches in tablatures are contained in the catalogue of his books. G.

Tarantini, Gaetano (Trani, 1872). Self-taught Italian composer of the opera Maritana, 1911, the short La Principessa di Valdieri (1902), the symphonic poems Impressione Campestre, Poema del Mare, Pompei, etc., a piano-concerto (1913) and other works.

Tarantini, Leopoldo (Trani, 1872). Italian composer of the operas Manuel Garcia, 1904, and Marion de Lorme, 1910, and the ballet of Il Sindaco di Lebonnard, 1903. He is a pupil of Dubois, Serrao and Romaniello.

Tarchi, Angelo (Naples, 1760-1814, Paris). Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio de' Turchini, writing over 30 operas for Italian stages (from 1781), with 1 for London (1789) and several for Paris (from 1798), including the popular D'Auberge à Auberge, 1800.

Tarditi, Orazio. 17th C.

Tarengi, Mario (Bergamo, 1870). Italian pianist and composer, pupil of the Bergamo and Milan Conservatories, writing the operas Marcella, 1901, Gara Antica, 1907, and La Notte di Quarto, 1910, an orchestral Scena Orientale, a string-quartet, a flute-suite, 2-piano variations on a theme by Schumann, fine piano-pieces, etc. He is head of the Scuola Musicale di Milano.

Tarisio, Luigi (?-1854, Milan). Famous Italian violin-expert and dealer, from 1827 bringing to Paris at intervals some of the rarest specimens and gradually amassing a fortune, besides leaving at his death about 200 valuable instruments (including the 'Messie' Stradivari). His collection was acquired by Vuillaume. See Hart, The Violin, 1875, Haweis, Old Violins, 1898, and Hill, Stradivari, 1909. G.

Tartini, Giuseppe (Pirano, 1692–1770, Padua). Distinguished Italian violinist, the son of rich parents and given a good education at Padua University (intended for the law), but proscribed because of a secret marriage and forced to take refuge at a monastery at Assisi, where he studied under Czernohorsky and became noted for his playing, though keeping incognito. In 1715, however, the ban upon him being removed, he returned to Padua, whence his fame spread, so that in 1716 he was asked to compete with Veracini at Venice and in 1721 was made leader at S. Antonio in Padua. On leave, in 1723–25 he served as musician to Count Kinsky in Prague. In 1728 he established at Padua his noted violin-school, attracting pupils from far and near (among them Nardini, Pasqualino, Bini, Ferrari, Lahoussaye, etc.). He occasionally toured in Italy, but declined flattering invitations to Paris and London. As to his mastery and the beauty of his style there are many testimonies. His method of bowing, like his skill in composition, has remained standard even to recent times. In acoustics he was the discoverer of 'combination-tones', which he used as guides to precise intonation. In theory he followed Zarlino and Rameau in regarding the minor mode as the inverted replica of the major. The number of his works is large, including some 18 concertos and 50–60 sonatas that have been published, with more than as many in manuscript. Author of Trattado di Musica secondo la Vera Scienza dell' Armonia, 1754, a defense thereof against criticisms by Le Serre of Geneva (1767), De' Principj dell' Armonia, 1767, a letter to Maddalena Lombardini giving careful directions as to playing (1770) and a manual of embellishments (1782, in French translation only). Memoirs by Fanzagò, 1770, J. A. Hiller, 1784, Forno, 1792, Ugoni, 1802, Fayolle, 1810, Benedetti, 1897, and Tamaro, 1897. G.

Tasca, Pier Antonio (Noto, 1864). Sicilian nobleman, composer of the operas Bianca, 1885, A Santa Lucia, 1892, Pergolesi, 1898, and Madre, the short comedy Studenti e Sartine, 1901, (under the pseudonym 'Anthony'), an Elegy on the death of De Amicis, symphonies, quartets, etc.

Taskin, Émile Alexandre (Paris, 1853–1897, do.), grandson of the next. French operatic baritone, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1875 singing in the provinces and from 1878 in Paris, in 1880–94 regularly at the Opéra-Comique. He assisted at many premières (Delibes' Jean de Nivelles, 1880, Offenbach's Contes d'Hoffmann, 1881, Massenet's Manon, 1884, and Esclarmonde, 1889, Saint-Saëns' Proserpine, 1887, Cui's Flibustier, 1894, etc.). In 1887, when the Opéra-Comique was burned, he helped by his coolness to reduce the panic. G.

Taskin, Henri Joseph (Versailles, 1779–1852, Paris), son of Pascal Joseph below. French organist, pupil of his aunt (Mme. Couperin), writing a piano-concerto, piano-trios, violin- and piano-pieces, 3 operas and much Masonic music. G.

Taskin, Pascal (Theux, 1723–1795, Paris). Able Belgian instrument-maker at Paris, introducing many improvements in harpsichords and pianos, with several specially designed instruments. G.

Taskin, Pascal Joseph (Theux, 1750–1829, Paris), nephew and assistant of the foregoing, in 1772–91 in charge of the royal instruments. He married a sister of A. F. Couperin's wife (née Blanchet). G.

Taubert, Ernst Eduard (Regenwalde, 1838). Pomeranian composer, pupil of Dietrich and Kiel, from about 1865 teacher at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin and critic for the Post, gaining the title of professor in 1898 and membership in the Akademie in 1905. He has long contributed to Die Musik. Has written an orchestral Ballade, a suite for strings, a piano-quintet, a wind-quintet, 5 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, the choral works Brautgesang, Festpsalm and Hymnus an Amor, many songs and piano-pieces.

Taubert, Karl Gottfried Wilhelm (Berlin, 1811–1891, do.). Eminent Prussian pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of Neithardt, L. Berger and B. Klein, besides a course at Berlin University. From about 1825 he became known as player and from 1831 was accompanist at the court-concerts. From 1841 he was conductor at the Opera and of the court-orchestra and in 1845–70 court-director. From 1834 he was member of the Akademie and from 1875 head of its music-section. Wrote the operas Die Kirmess, 1832, Der Zigeuner, 1834, Marquis und Dieb, 1842, Joggeli, 1853, Macbeth, 1857, and Cesario, 1874, music for Euripides' Medea, Tieck's Der gestiefelte Kater (1844), Blaubart (1845) and Shakespeare's Tempest (1891), 3 symphonies, 2 overtures, orchestral marches and other pieces, a violin-concerto, 2 piano-concertos, 4 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 2 piano-trios, 3 violin-sonatas, a cello-sonata, 3 Psalms, a Vater Unser, the choral work Der Landsknecht, a cappella choruses, about 300 songs, including noted Kinderlieder, 6 piano-sonatas and other pieces. G.

Taubert, Otto (Naumburg, 1833–1903, Torgau). Saxon teacher, pupil of Claudius, with study at Halle and Bonn Universities (Ph.D. 1859), from 1863 gymnasial professor at Torgau, cantor at the Stadtkirche and leader of the Gesangverein. Wrote choral music and songs, two histories of Torgau music (1868, '70) and a study of Daphne, das erste deutsche Operntextbuch, 1878.

Taubmann, Otto (Hamburg, 1859). Able North German conductor and choral composer, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory, from about 1880 theater-conductor, in 1886–89 head of the Wiesbaden Conservatory, in 1891–92 conducting in Petrograd, from 1892 director of the Cäcilienverein in Ludwigshafen and since 1895 in Berlin, from 1898 as critic for the Börsen-Courier. He gained the title of royal professor in 1910. Has written the opera Portia, 1916, a famous Deutsche Messe, 1898, the choral dramas

Sängerweihe and Siegmar und Heliša, 1904 (6-part, with supplemental chorus as 'ideal spectator'), the cantata Krieg und Frieden, 1916, Psalm 13, the choral Tauwetter, a cappella men's choruses and a symphony (1920), besides editions of Schütz's Christmas oratorio and Wagner's Rienzi.

Taudou, Antoine Barthélemy (Perpignan, 1846). Able French violinist, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1869) and since 1883 professor there, besides playing at the Opéra. Has written a Marche-Ballet, Chant d'Automne and Marche-Nocturne for orchestra, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a trio for flute, viola and 'cello, the cantata Francesca da Rimini, 1869, and one for the dedication of the Arago statue at Perpignan in 1879, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Tausch, Franz (Heidelberg, 1762-1817, Berlin). Noted Badense clarinetist, when but eight entering the Mannheim orchestra and going with it to Munich in 1778, from 1789 in the Berlin court-orchestra. At Berlin he started a school for wind-instruments in 1805 (H. J. Bärmann among the pupils). Wrote 2 clarinet-concertos, 3 two-clarinet concertantes, 6 military marches for wind-ensemble, quartets for basset-horns and bassoons, trios for clarinets and bassoon, etc.

Tausch, Julius (Dessau, 1827-1895, Bonn). North German pianist and conductor, pupil of F. Schneider and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1846 living at Düsseldorf, where in 1847 he followed Rietz as leader of the Künstlerliedertafel, in 1853 began to assist Schumann and in 1855 succeeded him as director of the Gesangverein and the subscription-concerts, retiring in 1890. He led Lower Rhine Festivals in 1863, '66, '69, '72 and '75, and also some concerts at the Glasgow Festival of 1878. Wrote music for As You Like It, the choral works Der Blumen Klage auf den Tod des Sängers, Dein Leben schied, dein Ruhm begann, Germannenzug and Rheinfahrt, an Ave Maria for voice and orchestra, an overture, etc. G.

Tausig, Karl (Warsaw, 1841-1871, Leipzig). Distinguished Bohemian-Polish pianist, pupil of his father (a disciple of Thalberg) and Liszt, becoming early amazingly perfect in technique and soon exhibiting musicianship of the highest order. In 1855-58 he was in the midst of the Liszt circle at Weimar, in 1858 made his formal début at Berlin under Von Bülow, then touring from Dresden as a center, in 1862 went to Vienna, where he undertook concerts with programs like those of Von Bülow at Berlin, and from 1865 lived in Berlin, opening a school for advanced pianists and touring in Germany and Russia. Early in 1871 he projected the plan for assuring the giving of Wagner's Ring by subscriptions from patrons (1000 at 300 thalers each), but died of typhoid fever a few months later. Wrote 2 Études de Concert, Ungarische Zigeunerweisen (comparable with Liszt's Rhapsodies), Nouvelles Soirées de Vienne (valse-caprices after Strauss) and notable Tägliche Studien (chromatic transposing exercises), besides superb transcriptions of Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D min., Praeludium, Fugue and Allegro, Choral-Vorspiele and selections from Das Wohltemperiertes Klavier, Scarlatti's Pastorale, Capriccio and 3 sonatas, 6 movements from Beethoven's string-quartets, Weber's Invitation à la Valse, several works by Schubert, Schumann's El Contrabandista, Chopin's Concerto in E min. and scenes from Wagner's Walküre, as well as a piano-score of Die Meistersinger. Memoirs by Weitzmann, 1868, and Lenz, 1872 (both in general works on virtuosi). G.

Tauwitz, Eduard (Glatz, 1812-1894, Prague). Silesian conductor and prolific composer, from 1837 theater-conductor at Vilna, from 1840 at Riga, from 1843 at Breslau and in 1846-63 at Prague, where he also directed the Sophien-Akademie and a men's Gesangverein. Wrote the operas Trilby, 1836, Bradamante, 1844, Schmolke und Bakel, 1846, and Helena's letzter Tag, 1848, church-music, men's choruses and part-songs, etc.

Taverner, John. 16th C. G.

Taylor, David Clark (New York, 1871-1918, do.). American writer, long connected with the Macmillan Company, author of The Psychology of Singing, 1908, New Light upon the Old Italian Method, 1916, and other vocal guides, besides editing the division on vocal music in The Art of Music, 1914-17 and writing many magazine-articles. A.

Taylor, Edward (Norwich, 1784-1863, Brentwood). English bass-singer and critic, in early life engaged in business, pupil of Chas. Smyth and Beckwith, in 1824 one of the chief promoters of the Norwich Festival, at which he sang in 1827 and directed in 1839 and '42. In London he was critic for the Spectator in 1829-43, from 1837 lectured at Gresham College, joined in founding the Purcell Club (president from 1842) and the Musical Antiquarian Society (with Rimbault and Chappell) and gathered a valuable library. Besides editing Purcell's King Arthur and translating the texts of various choral works, author of some Gresham lectures (1838), The English Cathedral Service, 1845, and vocal text-books (with Turle). G.

Taylor, Franklin (Birmingham, 1843-1919, London). Able English pianist and teacher, pupil of Flavell, Bedsmore and the Leipzig Conservatory, with some lessons from Mme. Schumann, since 1862 settled in London as concert-player, organist at several churches and from 1876 teacher at the Nat. Training School and after 1882 at the Royal College, besides in 1873-97 being president of the Academy for Advanced Piano-Playing. Author of a Primer of the Piano-forte, 1877, a Piano-Tutor, Technique and Expression in Pianoforte-Playing, 1897, many articles in Grove's Dictionary and translations of Richter's treatises on harmony, counterpoint and canon and fugue. G.

Taylor, Joseph Deems (New York, 1885). American composer, pupil of O. Coon, with study at New York University, since 1921 critic for the New York World. Has written the symphonic poem The Siren Song, 1913 (prize from Nat. Federation of Musical Clubs), the suite Through the Looking-Glass for strings, wind and piano, the choral works The Chambered Nautilus, 1915, and The Highwayman, 1914, the song-cycle The City of Joy, other songs and piano-pieces. A.

Taylor, Raynor (1747-1825, Philadelphia). Talented English organist and singer, trained in the Chapel Royal, from about 1765 organist at Chelmsford and later director at a London theater. In 1792 he moved to America, after 1793 becoming influential at Philadelphia as organist at St. Peter's, harpsichordist, stage-singer and (from 1820) a leader in the Musical Fund Society. Of his works only a few songs remain. A.

Tchaikovsky, Peter [Piotr] Ilyitch (Kamsko-Votinsk, [May 7] 1840-1893 [Nov. 6], Petrograd). Distinguished Russian theorist and composer, at first trained as a lawyer, but pupil also of Kündinger, Zarembo and the new Petrograd Conservatory, becoming intimate with the young Laroche and graduating in 1865. In 1866-77 he was harmony-teacher under N. Rubinstein at the new Moscow Conservatory, besides acting as critic for the Russky Vedomosti (in 1876 assigned to report on the first Bayreuth festival). N. Rubinstein undoubtedly exercised a strong influence upon him and in 1868 he began to understand the aspirations of the New-Russian group, though without much sympathy with their radicalism. In 1868, also, occurred his short engagement to the operatic singer Désirée Artôt and in 1877 came his equally short marriage to Antonina Milyukova, followed by a nervous breakdown that forced him to retire to Switzerland. At this point the wealthy widow Von Meek became his benefactor, giving him an annual stipend of 6,000 rubles (in 1888 almost doubled by a grant from the Czar). Thus relieved from financial anxiety, he devoted himself mainly to composition, though in 1887 he began to appear as conductor of his own works, at first in Moscow and Petrograd and from 1888 throughout northern and western Europe, in 1891 even coming to America. In 1890 his allowance from Mme. von Meek ceased, owing to her pecuniary difficulties, and the correspondence then cut off with pain what had been a singularly beautiful relation. But by this time he had won his place as one of the most gifted composers of his time, especially great in melodic invention, in ready and original construction and especially in orchestral color. His tendency is to pass to and fro between contrasted moods, as from hilarity to despair, from wildness to suavity, with a rather persistent penchant for melancholic expression. He uses much folk-song material, though not with the sympathy and passion of the nationalists. The topics of many of his operas are Russian, but the treatment is often not specially characteristic. It is not strange that the intense New-Russians disowned him. Their antipathy, however, could not disturb his essential eminence as one of the great masters of his period.

His works include the following (opus-nos. in brackets):

Dramatic Works

Operas—The Voyevode, 1869 [3] (destroyed, except the overture and a dance), Undine (written 1869, destroyed), The Guardsman, 1874, Vakula the Smith, 1876 [14] (rewritten as The Little Slippers, 1887, also known as Ozana's Caprice), Eugen Onegin, 1879 [24], The Maid of Orleans, 1881, Mazeppa, 1884, The Enchantress, 1887, Pique-Dame or The Queen of Spades, 1890 [64], Iolanthe, 1892 [69].

Ballets—The Swan Lake, 1876 [20], The Sleeping Beauty, 1890 [66], Nutcracker, 1892 [71].

Incidental music to Ostrovsky's Snow-Maiden [12], Shakespeare's Hamlet [67a], Ostrovsky's False Demetrius, etc.

Also recitatives for Mozart's Figaro and Auber's Domino Noir.

For Orchestra

Symphonies—1, G min., Winter-Storms (or Winter-Daydreams), 1868 [13], 2, C min., Little Russia, 1873, [17], 3, D. Polish, 1875 [29], 4, F min., 1877 [36], 5, E min., 1888 [64], 6, B. min., Pathetic, 1893 [74].

Symphonic Poems—La Tempête (after Shakespeare) [18], Francesca da Rimini [32], Manfred (after Byron) [58], Fatum [77], Le Voyevode [78].

Overtures—Triumphale (on Danish national hymn) [15], 1812 [49], Hamlet [67], to Ostrovsky's Storm [76], Roméo et Juliette. Also in F and G min. (early).

Suites—in D [43], in C, Caractéristique [53], in G [55], Mozartiana [61], and two from the ballets The Sleeping Beauty and Nutcracker [66a, 71].

Concertos—for piano, B-flat min. [23], G [44] and E-flat [75]; for violin, in D [35]. Also, for piano, Fantaisie de Concert [56] and Andante et Finale [79] (orchestrated by S. Taneiev); for violin, Sérénade Melancolique [26] and Valse-Scherzo [34]; and for cello, Variations on a rococo theme [33] and Pezzo Capriccioso [62].

For strings—Serenade in C [48]; Élégie.

Marches—Slavonic [31], Coronation (for Alexander III, 1883), Militaire and Solennelle. Also Capriccio Italien [45].

Chamber-Music

String-sextet in D min., Souvenir de Florence [70].

String-quartets in D [11], F [22] and E-flat min. [30]. Piano-trio in A min. (in memory of N. Rubinstein) [50].

Souvenir d'un Lieu Cher, 3 pieces for violin [42].

For Piano

Sonatas in G [37] and C-sharp min. [80].

Souvenir de Hapsal (3 pieces) [2]; The Months (12) [37a]; Kinderalbum (24) [39].

Dumka (village scene) [59]; Romance in F min. [5]; Capriccio in G-flat [8]; Scherzo and Impromptu [1]; Valse Caprice in D [4]; Valse Scherzo in A [7]; about 55 other pieces [2, 9, 10, 19, 21, 40, 51, 72].

For Voices

Church-music—Liturgy of St. Chrysostom (a cappella) [41]; Vesper Service (do.) [52].

Cantata for the Polytechnic Exposition (1872); Coronation-cantata, Moskva, 1883; Hymn to Joy (Schiller); Chorus from the uncompleted opera Mandragora.

Duet-scena, Roméo et Juliette (completed by Taneiev). About 95 songs [6, 16, 25, 27-8, 38, 47, 54, 57, 60, 63, 65, 73]; 6 duets [46].

Author of a Manual of Harmony, 1870 (6th ed. 1897), Short Manual of Harmony, 1895 (2d ed.), and translations of Gevaert's Instrumentation (1866, 2d ed. 1903) and Lobe's Katechismus

d. Musik 1870), besides the text of Mozart's Figaro. He also edited Bortniansky's works (1881). His critical essays, etc., were collected by Laroche (1898). Thematic catalogue of works by Jurgenson (1897). Memoirs by Tcheshichin, 1893, Laroche and Kashkin, 1894, Kashkin, 1897, Modest Tchaikovsky, 2 vols. 1900-02, Knorr, 1900, Newmarch, 1900 (2d ed. 1908), Hrubý, 1902, Lee, 1904, Evans, 1905, Lipiaiev, 1905, Miaskovsky, 1912, O. Keller, 1914, etc. See also correspondence with Balakirev, edited by Liapunov (1912). G.

Tcherepnin, Nikolai Nikolaievitch (Petrograd, 1873). Russian conductor and composer, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory and since 1901 professor there, besides conducting the Russian Symphony Concerts. Has written the ballets Le Pavillon d'Armide, Narcisse and The Masque of the Red Death, the symphonic poem Narcisse et Écho, 2 orchestral suites, prelude to Rostand's La Princesse Lointaine, a Fantaisie Dramatique, the tone-picture Dans la Caverne des Sorcières (from Macbeth), an orchestral gavotte, a piano-concerto (Belaiev prize, 1909), a Poème Lyrique for violin and orchestra, a string-quartet, the choral works Sappho's Song, Night and The Old Song, a setting of the Liturgy of St. Chrysostom and many choruses (all a cappella), songs and piano-pieces. See Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers, 1917.

Tcheshichin, Vsievod Yevgrafovitch (Riga, 1865). Russian lawyer and self-taught critic, in 1888-94 writing for the Riga Messenger and from 1896 for the Journal. Author of a life of Tchaikovsky (1893), a guide to 100 operas (1894), criticisms of opera and concert (1896), Hist. of Russian Opera, 1902 (2d ed. 1904), translations of the texts of Tristan and Parsifal and a critical study of the latter (1899). In 1898 he started the Riga branch of the Imperial Musical Society.

Tebaldini, Giovanni (Brescia, 1864). Eminent Italian church-musician and historical student, at fifteen choromaster at the Brescia theater and organist at the Cathedral, in 1883-86 pupil at the Milan Conservatory (excluded for criticizing a work by one of the professors) and later of the Church Music School at Ratisbon. From 1889 he was in charge of choir-reforms at S. Marco in Venice, from 1894 maestro at S. Antonio in Padua, from 1897 director of the Parma Conservatory and since 1902 maestro at the Chiesa della Santa Casa at Loreto. He has been active in promoting progress in ecclesiastical music throughout Italy and has received many decorations and honors. Has written many masses, motets, offertories, etc., 2 Requiems (one with Bossi, the other for Humbert I, 1908), organ-pieces and a large organ-method (with Bossi), a Fantasia Araba for orchestra and redactions of the scores of Cavalleri's Anima e Corpo and of Peri and Caccini's Euridice (the latter given 1916, Milan). Author of La Musica Sacra in Italia, 1894, an account of the choir-library at A. Antonio (1895) and (in the Rivista) articles on Palestrina (1894), Gounod (1895), Pedrell (1897), L'Elemento Lirico nella Musica Sacra, 1906, L'Anima Musicale di Venezia, 1908, Telepatia Musicale, 1909 (concerning Gnecci's Cassandra), etc.

Tedesco, Ignaz Amadeus (Prague, 1817-1882, Odessa). Brilliant Bohemian pianist, pupil of Triebensee and Tomaschek, acquiring the name of 'the Hannibal of octaves' and touring extensively in southern Russia. Wrote much salon-music, concert-pieces and a piano-concerto.

Telemann, Georg Michael (n. Kiel, 1748-1831, Riga), grandson of the next. North German church-musician, in 1773-1828 cantor and director at Riga, writing organ-pieces (1785), a collection of church-melodies (1812), a treatise on the choice of such melodies (1821), a textbook on playing from a figured bass (1773) and a short autobiography (1831).

Telemann, Georg Philipp (Magdeburg, 1681-1767, Hamburg). Eminent Saxon conductor and voluminous composer, educated in law and languages at Leipzig University, in music self-taught. When but twelve he wrote an opera and at fourteen was choirmaster in Hildesheim, in 1704 was for a time organist at the Neukirche in Leipzig and head of a students' Collegium Musicum, in 1704-08 director for Count Promnitz at Sorau, from 1708 concertmaster in the court-band at Eisenach and from 1709 Hebenstreit's successor as court-director there, from 1711 choirmaster at the Katharinen- and Barfüsserkirchen in Frankfurt, as well as court-director to the Prince of Bayreuth, leader of the Frauenstein (singing-society) and also retaining his official position at Eisenach. In 1721 he became city-director at Hamburg, including duties as choirmaster at the Katharinenkirche and as cantor at the Johanneum, besides much activity as composer for the Opera. In 1722 he declined an invitation to succeed Kuhnau as cantor at the Thomasschule in Leipzig. He was extraordinarily facile in every department of composition, from intricate counterpoint to chamber-music and operas in the French style. The number of his works became so large that he could not enumerate them. Those that were published were often engraved by his own hand. Wrote over 40 operas and singspiele (mostly after 1721), several oratorios, about 45 Passions, 12 cycles of cantatas and motets for the entire church-year (about 3000 pieces with organ or orchestra), over 100 special services (as for weddings, funerals, installations, jubilees or other celebrations, including 33 Capitänsmusiken), over 600 overtures (suites), many serenades and other pieces of chamber-music, etc. The oratorios Der Tag des Gerichts and Ino are given in the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst, xxviii. Autobiography in Mattheson's Ehrenpforte, 1740. See Ottzenn, Telemann als Opernkomponist, 1902, and (on his sacred works) Winterfeld, Der evangel. Kirchengesang, iii. 1847. G.

Tellefsen, Thomas Dyke Acland (Trondhjem, 1823-1874, Paris). Norwegian pianist, from 1842 pupil of Chopin and later teacher in Paris, with tours in Norway and England. Wrote 2 concertos, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, much salon-music and a collection of pieces by Chopin. G.

Templeton, John (n. Kilmarnock, 1802-1886, n. London). Gifted Scottish operatic tenor, pupil of Blewitt, Welsh and T. S. Cooke, from 1828 appearing in London in English and foreign operas, in 1833-36 often in conjunction with Malibran and in 1836-37 on tour in Scotland and Ireland. After 1840 he sang mostly in concert, in 1842 visited Paris and in 1845-46 gave lecture-recitals in America. He retired in 1852. His fine voice and finished style led to his being engaged for many English premières (as of Meyerbeer's Robert, 1832, Spohr's Alchymist, 1832, Auber's Gustave III, 1833, etc.). G.

Tenaglia, Antonio Francesco. 17th C. G.

Tenducci, Giusto Ferdinando (Siena, ?1736-after 1800). Italian artificial operatic soprano, from about 1755 known in Italy and in 1758-91 in great favor in England, not only in opera, but also at the Handel Commemorations of 1784 and '91. Wrote a comic opera, an overture, some harpsichord-pieces and a vocal method. G.

Ternina, Milka (n. Agram, 1864). Eminent Croatian operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Winterberg and Gänsbacher, making her début in 1882 at Agram, followed by engagements at Leipzig in 1883-84, at Gratz from 1884, at Bremen from 1886, at Munich from 1890 (with visits to America in 1896, to London in 1895 and '98 and to Bayreuth in 1899), and in 1899-1904 at the Metropolitan, New York, retiring in 1906 because of ill-health. She was everywhere acclaimed both as a superior Wagner interpreter and as lieder-singer. G.

Terrabugio, Giuseppe (n. Trent, 1842). Influential Italian church-composer, trained at Padua and the Munich Conservatory. Since 1883 he has been active at Milan as editor of Musica Sacra and composer of about 100 sacred works, including many masses, a Requiem, motets, litanies and some organ-pieces, overtures, a string-quartet and manuals for organists (including an edition of Mitterer's Orgelschule). He is member of several academies.

Terradellas [Terradeglias], Domingo Miguel Bernabé (Barcelona, 1711-1751, Rome). Spanish composer, pupil of the Conservatorio S. Onofrio in Naples, from 1739 having rapid success with operas in Italy (with 2 in London in 1746-47) and from 1747 maestro at S. Giacomo degli Spagnuoli in Rome. Wrote 12 operas, an oratorio and a mass. Memoirs by Carrera y Bulbena, 1908, and Volkmann, 1912 (in J. M. G. Zeitschr.). G.

Terrasse, Claude (n. Vienne, 1870). French composer of about 30 effective operettas and ballets (from 1900), besides the heroic comedy Pantagruel, 1911, and music for the drama Ubu-Roi (1902).

Terry, Richard Runciman (Ellington, 1865). Eminent English organist and church-musician, from 1890 organist and music-master at Elstow School (n. Bedford), from 1892 organist at the Cathedral in Antigua (West Indies), from 1896 at Downside Abbey and since 1901 at the new Westminster Cathedral (R. C.) in London. In 1911 he was extension-lecturer for Oxford University, in 1913 lectured at Birmingham University and in 1915-17 was examiner for both Birmingham and Dublin. Knighted in 1922. Throughout his career he has laid stress upon the revival of the fine church-music of English composers of the 16th century, not only reproducing much of it with his choir, but preparing the collections Downside Masses, Downside Motets, Motets Ancient and Modern and many single works, besides editing the Official Catholic Hymnal for England and acting as head of the committee on the English supplement to the Vatican Antiphony. Has written 5 masses, a Requiem, many motets, etc., and Catholic Church Music. G (appendix), A.

Terschak, Adolf (Hermannstadt, 1832-1901, Breslau). Noted Transylvanian flutist, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, from about 1853 becoming known throughout Europe and in Siberia by many tours. Wrote about 150 works for flute, including several fantasias with orchestra, 2 suites, 2 sonatas, many studies, an École de Mécanisme, etc.

Terziani, Eugenio (Rome, 1824-1889, do.). Italian conductor and composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, from about 1850 conductor at the Teatro Apollo in Rome, in 1867-71 at La Scala in Milan, then again at the Apollo and from 1877 teacher at the Liceo S. Cecilia in Rome. Wrote the operas Giovanna di Napoli, 1844, Alfredo, 1852, and Niccolò de' Lupi, 1883, the oratorio La Caduta di Gerico, 1844, a Requiem (for Victor Emmanuel, 1878), Inno Sinfonico, etc. His son Raffaele (Rome, 1860) has taught at the Liceo S. Cecilia since 1890, in 1895-1910 was conductor of its concerts, in 1915-16 was director and then vice-director. He has written a Requiem (for Humbert I, 1900), the short opera Amana, string-quartets, choruses, etc.

Teschner, Gustav Wilhelm (Magdeburg, 1800-1883, Dresden). Saxon vocal teacher, pupil of Zelter, Klein, Ronconi, Bianchi, Crescentini and Miksch, from about 1835 active in Berlin. Published many sets of vocalises by Italian masters and important collections of songs by German composers of the 16-17th centuries. G.

Teschner, Melchior (1584-1635). 17th C. G.

Tesi-Tramontini, Vittoria (Florence, 1700-1775, Vienna). Noted Italian operatic contralto, pupil of Redi and Campeggi, from 1716 appearing in Italy, with sojourns at Dresden in 1719 and under Farinelli at Madrid from 1739. About 1748 she went to Vienna and started a school for singers, appearing there in Jommelli's Didone as late as 1749. Her voice had a masculine sonority and her acting was full of dramatic fire. G.

Tessarini, Francesco (Venice, 1820-?). Italian pianist, pupil of Fanna and G. B. Ferrari, from about 1840 teaching in Venice, where in 1859 he became intimate with Wagner. Wrote the opera L'Ultimo Abencerragio, 1858, the cantata Inno Saluto, 1875, church-music, piano-fantasias, etc.

Tessarini, Carlo (Rimini, 1690-?). Notable Italian violinist, probably pupil of Corelli, from 1725 active at Venice (from 1729 playing at S. Marco and SS. Giovanni e Paolo), later at Urbino Cathedral and finally concertmaster for Cardinal Hannibal at Brunn. He was one of those who helped establish the three-movement plan for the violin-sonata. Wrote various concerti grossi, concertini, trio-sonatas, duets and solo-sonatas, besides a method. See Schering, Gesch. d. Instrumentalkonzerts, 1905.

Testore, Carlo Giuseppe. Italian violin-maker at Milan, active in 1690-1715. He was a pupil of Crancino and noted for his 'cellos and basses (Bottesini's favorite bass was one of his). His two sons made violins after the style of Guarneri. G.

Tetrazzini, Luisa (Florence, 1874). Brilliant operatic soprano, pupil of her sister Eva (Mme. Cleofonte Campanini) and Ceccherini, mastering many rôles by ear when but twelve and making her début in 1895 at Florence. After varied successes in Italy she toured in Spain, Portugal, Russia, South America and Mexico, in 1904 made a hit at San Francisco, in 1907 appeared in London, in 1908-10 was a leading figure at the Manhattan, New York, in 1910-13 traveled with concert-troupes in the United States, in 1913-14 was with the Chicago Opera Company and during the war was active at Florence in relief-work. In 1919-20 she made another American tour. She is wife of Signor Bazelli. Author of La Mia Vita di Canto (My Life of Song), 1921. G. A.

Tetzel, Eugen Karl Gottfried (Berlin, 1870). Prussian pianist, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, author of several manuals regarding piano-technique (1902, '03, '09 [2d ed. 1918]).

Teyber [Tayber], Anton (Vienna, 1754-1822, do.), brother of the next. Able Austrian composer, pupil of Martini, from 1792 cellist at the Vienna Opera and assistant to Salieri and from 1793 court-composer and teacher in the imperial family. Wrote an opera, a melodrama, 2 oratorios, many masses, a symphony, string-quartets, many dances and songs.

Teyber [Tayber], Franz (Vienna, 1756-1810, do.), brother of the above. Austrian pianist, pupil of Wagenseil, touring in southern Germany and Switzerland and after about 1780 conductor in Schikaneder's opera-troupe, then concertmaster at Karlsruhe and Bern and from 1799 composer for the Theater an der Wien in Vienna (again under Schikaneder). Just before his death he became court-organist. Wrote several operas, an oratorio, a mass, other church-music, songs, etc.

Teyte [Tate], Maggie (Wolverhampton, 1889). Gifted English operatic soprano, trained at the Royal College (London) and by Jean de Reszké, making her début in 1907 at Monte Carlo, from 1908 at the Opéra-Comique in Paris, in 1910-11 with the Beecham Company in London, in 1911-14 with the Chicago Opera Company, in 1915-17 with the Boston National Opera Company and at intervals touring in concert in both America and England. In 1909-15 she was the wife of Eugène Plumon, a Parisian lawyer. A.

Thadewaldt, Hermann (Bodenhausen, 1827-1909, Berlin). Pomeranian conductor, in 1850-51 bandmaster at Düsseldorf, in 1853-55 conductor of the Kurorchestra at Dieppe, in 1857-69 at the head of his own orchestra in Berlin and from 1871 conductor at the Zoological Garden there. In 1872 he founded the Allgemeine Deutscher Musikerverband, becoming its president and faithful promoter. Wrote the symphonic poem Das Rätsel der Sphinx, the orchestral Im Walde, Meermusik for strings, a Herbstlied for string-quintet, etc.

Thalberg, Marcian (Odessa, 1877). Russian (French?) pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1899-1901 teaching in England and in 1902-13 in Paris, with many tours throughout Europe. Since 1913 he has taught advanced pupils at the Cincinnati Conservatory. A.

Thalberg, Sigismund (Geneva, 1812-1871, Naples). Distinguished Swiss pianist (natural son of an Austrian nobleman), brought up in Vienna, pupil of Mittag, Sechter and Hummel, appearing privately when about fourteen and from 1830 recognized as a virtuoso of extraordinary capacity, so that from 1834 he held the title of court-pianist at Vienna. From 1835 he was somewhat steadily on tour, securing great applause in Paris, London and most of the other leading capitals. In 1856-57 he visited Brazil and the United States. In 1851 and '55 his operatic experiments resulted disastrously. After 1858 he lived mostly at his villa in Posilippo (n. Naples), but in 1862 made a tour to Paris and London and in 1863 to Brazil. He was one of the most finished executants of his time, excelling in every device of agility and effect, with notable control of melodic smoothness and tone-color. But his capacity as interpreter was not remarkable and his taste ran mainly to showy and shallow salon-music. His works (about 100 in all) include a concerto in F min., a piano-trio in A, a sonata in C min., a long line of fantasias, divertissements, impromptus and variations on themes mostly derived from operas from Weber to Verdi, 3 chief Nocturnes and 5 others, 2 Caprices, a Scherzo, a Tarantelle, a Ballade, a Marche Funèbre, several Valses, Romances, Études, etc., besides over 50 songs and the operas Florinda, 1851, and Cristina di Svezia, 1855. G.

Thatcher, Howard Rutledge (Baltimore, 1878). American organist, trained at the Peabody Conservatory (Baltimore) and since 1910 teacher there, besides playing at the Mt. Vernon Place Church (from 1902) and the Eaton Place Synagogue (from 1905) and serving as music-master at the Maryland College for Women (Lutherville). Has written an overture (1906), a string-quintet, synagogue-services, piano-pieces and songs. A.

Thayer, Alexander Wheelock (South Natick, Mass. 1817-1897, Trieste). Eminent American biographer of Beethoven, educated at Harvard College, in 1843-49 assistant-librarian there and then mostly in Europe (except 1852-54 in New York and 1856-58 in Boston), from 1862 attached to the American embassy at Vienna and from 1865 consul at Trieste. From about 1850 he wrote much for newspapers and in 1852-54 was engaged on the New York Tribune. From 1852 he was one of the chief contributors to Dwight's Journal of Music. For more than fifty years his consuming occupation was the completion of his monumental life of Beethoven, based on exhaustive original research and executed with utmost thoroughness. It was drafted in English, but first published in German, translated by Deiters (vol. i, 1866, ii, 1872, iii, 1879, iv, 1907, v, 1908, the revision of vol. i by Deiters meanwhile appearing in 1901, and vols. iv and v coming out under Riemann's care). The authoritative English edition, edited and augmented by Krehbiel, was published by the Beethoven Society in 1921 (3 vols.). See Musical Quarterly, 1917. In 1877 Thayer issued Ein kritischer Beitrag zur Beethoven-Litteratur. G, A.

Thayer, Whitney Eugene (Mendon, Mass. 1838-1889, Burlington, Vt.). Able American organist, pupil of Haupt and Wieprecht, from 1863 prominent in Boston (one of the regular players at the new Music Hall) and in 1881-87 engaged in New York. From 1868 he was widely known as recitalist and lecturer, besides editing the Organist's Journal and the Choir Journal and conducting choral societies. Wrote a Festival Cantata, a mass, 5 organ-sonatas, a fugue, variations for two players, many organ-pieces, a School of Organ-Playing, etc. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. A.

Theil, Fritz (Altenburg, 1886). Saxon conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1905 employed as opera-conductor at Altenburg, Sondershausen, Thorn, Plauen and Würzburg in succession and in recent years chiefly as concert-director in a long list of cities. Has written the tone-poems King Lear, Judith, Sieg des Lebens und Lebenskampf, an Intermezzo for strings, a violin-concerto and songs with orchestra.

Theile, Johann (1646-1724). 17th C. G.

Theodorini, Helena (Krajova, 1862). Able Rumanian operatic soprano (mezzo), pupil of the Milan Conservatory, in 1879 appearing as contralto, but soon essaying higher rôles, from 1881 at La Scala (Milan), from 1884 at Madrid, from 1886 at various cities in Europe and South America, and in 1899-1902 at Bucharest. After 1905 she was for a time teacher in Paris, then in Buenos Aires and since 1916 in New York. In 1893-1902 she was the wife of Georges de Coquel and from 1903 of Baron d'Harmezak. A.

Thermignon, Delfino (Turin, 1861). Italian church-musician, trained at the Turin Conservatory and the Ratisbon Music School, in 1900 becoming maestro at S. Marco in Venice. Has written the operas Un' Astuzia d' Amore, 1890 (comic), and L' Assedio di Canelli, 1894, the oratorios San Marco, 1908, and L' Annunciazione, 1911, much church-music and several textbooks.

Thern, Karl [Károly] (Igló, 1817-1886, Vienna). Hungarian conductor and composer, pupil of his father, from 1841 conductor at the Pest Opera and in 1853-64 teacher at the Conservatory. In 1864-68 he travelled with his sons Willi (1847-1911) and Louis (b. 1848), who, trained by him and at the Leipzig Conservatory, became famous for two-piano performances. After 1868 he lived for a time at Pest and finally at Vienna, where Louis is now professor at the Conservatory. Wrote the operas Gizul, 1841, Die Belagerung von Tihany, 1845, and Der Hypochonder, 1855, music for The Notary of Paleska, many effective Hungarian songs, etc.

Thibaud, Jacques (Bordeaux, 1880). Eminent French violinist, pupil of his father and Marsick, from 1896 quickly acquiring prestige as both soloist and ensemble-player at the Colonne concerts in Paris and later throughout Europe and in America (from 1903). During the war he was in service for a year and since 1916 has resumed concertizing, often with Bauer. His recent playing has exhibited extraordinary dignity and power. His brother Joseph (b. 1875) is an accomplished pianist (pupil of Diémer). In 1895-96 he toured in America with Marsick and has often appeared with his brother. G, A.

Thibaut IV (1201-1253). 13th C.

Thibaut, Anton Friedrich Justus (Hameln, 1774-1840, Heidelberg). Eminent Hanoverian student of jurisprudence, from 1806 professor at Heidelberg University. Author of the famous treatise Ueber Reinheit d. Tonkunst, 1825 (many later eds.). He also made a fine collection of folk-songs, later acquired by the Munich Library. G.

Thiel, Karl (Klein-Oels, 1862). Silesian organist, pupil of the Institut für Kirchenmusik and the Meisterschule in Berlin, with further study in Italy (Mendelssohn prize in 1894), from about 1895 organist at the Sebastiankirche in Berlin and later teacher at the Institut, where he made the a cappella choir notable, and in 1922 director (following Kretzschmar). He gained the title of royal professor in 1903 and in 1922 was made Ph.D. by Breslau University. Has written several masses, motets, a Busspsalm, the cantata Maria and much other sacred music, besides editing old a cappella music.

Thiele, Johann Friedrich Ludwig (Quedlinburg, 1816-1848, Berlin). Gifted, but short-lived, Saxon organist, pupil of A. W. Bach and intimate with Haupt, in 1839 becoming organist at the Parochialkirche in Berlin. Wrote effective concert-pieces, variations, preludes, etc.

Thiem, Kurt (Pössneck, 1880). Able Thuringian organist and choral leader, pupil of J. H. Löffler, the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, Müller-Hartung, Scheidemantel and Reger, in 1905-14 active at Jena as concert-organist, choir-master and vocal teacher and since 1914 court-organist at Weimar and teacher at the Seminary. Has written organ- and piano-pieces, choruses, songs, a string-trio and a manger-play, besides editing a song-book for Thuringian schools.

Thierfelder, Albert Wihlem (Mühlhausen, 1846). Eminent Thuringian teacher and composer, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1869) and Conservatory, in 1869-70 leading a choral society in Elbing, from 1870 cantor at Brandenburg and teacher at the Gymnasium and since 1888 Kretschmar's successor as music-director at Rostock University, gaining the title of professor in 1898. Has written the operas Die Jungfrau vom Königsee, 1877, Der Trentenjäger, 1883, Almansor, 1884, Florentina, 1896 (original text), and Der Heiratsschein, 1898 (do.), the dramatic cantatas Frau Holde, 1902, Kaiser Max und seine Jäger, 1903, and Horand und Hilde, 1911, the choral works Zlatorog and Edelweiss, 2 symphonies, several chamber-works, part-songs, songs and piano-pieces, besides valuable transcriptions of ancient melodies for concert-use (1899, 1900, '19). Author of a thesis on the Ambrosian hymns (1869), a study of a thesis on the Greek instrumental notation (1897, and see I. M. G. Zeitschr. 1904) and a manual of practical metrics (1919).

Thiériot, Ferdinand (Hamburg, 1838-1919, do.). Able North German choral conductor and composer, pupil of Marxsen and Rheinberger, from about 1860 active at Hamburg, Leipzig and Glogau, in 1870-95 artistic director of the Styrian Choral Union at Gratz and then settled at Hamburg. Wrote an overture to Schiller's Turandot, the orchestral fantasy Loch Lomond, a Sinfonietta, the idyl Leben und Sterben des vergnügten Schulmeisterlein Wuz, a serenade and 2 waltzes for strings, a violin-concerto, a concerto for two pianos, a string-octet, an octet for strings and wind, a piano-quintet, a wind-quintet, a string-quartet, 2 piano-quartets, a quartet for strings and flute, 7 piano-trios, 2 violin- and 2 'cello-sonatas, concert-pieces for organ, for two pianos, etc., the choral works Am Truensee, Kantate der Klage und des Trostes, Requiem, Tanzlied, Das Märchen vom Schnee (with declamation), Christnacht, La Régine Avrillouse and Abschied vom Meer, a cappella motets, many choruses and songs.

Thillon, Sophie Anne [Anna], née Hunt (London, ?1816-1903, Torquay). Gifted English operatic soprano, pupil of Bordogni, Tadolini and C. T. Thillon (whom she married about 1832), making her début in 1838 at Paris, where she was specially favored by Auber, and from 1844 appearing steadily in England. In 1851-54 she visited America (the first to sing in opera at San Francisco) and soon after retired because of throat-trouble. She was noted for her charming presence and acting. G.

Thimus, Albert, Freiherr von (Aix, 1806-1878, Cologne). Rhenish jurist, author of Die harmonikale Symbolik d. Altertums, 2 vols, 1868-76 (with introduction by Hasenclever), containing data of use in support of the dualistic theory.

Thoinan, Erneste [Antoine Erneste Roquet] (Nantes, 1827-1894, Paris). French merchant and musical writer, author of La Musique à Paris en 1862, 1863, L'Opéra Les Troyens au Père Lachaise, 1863 (satire), Les Origines de la Chapelle-Musique des Souverains de France, 1864, Les Origines de l'Opéra Français, notices on Crestin (1864), Maugers (1865) and De Cousu (1866), Curiosités Musicales, 1866, notices on the Mazuel family and Louis Constantin (1878), Notes Bibliographiques sur la Guerre Musicale des Gluckistes et Piccinnistes, 1878, and Les Hotteterre et les Chédeville, 1894. He collected a notable library. G.

Thoma, Rudolf (n. Steinau, 1829-1908, Breslau). Silesian church-musician, pupil of the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, from 1857 cantor at Kirschberg and from 1862 at the Elisabethkirche in Breslau, besides starting a choral society and a music-school. Wrote the operas Helgas Rosen, 1890, and Ione, 1894 (short), the oratorios Moses and Johannes der Täufer, a Deutsches Te Deum, Psalm 28, other sacred music, etc.

Thomas, Arthur Goring (n. Eastbourne, 1851-1892, London). Talented English composer, pupil of E. Durand, Bruch and the Royal Academy in London (Lucas prize, 1879), writing the operas The Light of the Harem (parts in concert, 1879), Esmeralda, 1883, Nadeshda, 1885, and The Golden Web (completed by Waddington, given 1893), the choral works The Sun-Worshippers, 1881, The Swan and the Skylark, 1894 (orchestrated by Stanford), and Psalm 130, the scena Hero and Leander, 1880, an orchestral Suite de Ballet, a violin-sonata, various duets and songs. G.

Thomas, Charles Louis Ambroise (Metz, [Aug. 5] 1811-1896 [Feb. 12], Paris). Distinguished French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1832), beginning to write operas in 1837, but not winning decided success till about 1850 or great fame till the production of Mignon and Hamlet in 1866 and '68. In 1871 he followed Auber as head of the Conservatory. From 1845 he was enrolled in the Légion d'Honneur (Officier in 1858 and Commandeur in 1868) and in 1851 took Spontini's place in the Académie. He is justly counted as one of the masters of opéra comique. His technical skill and taste was united to a fine poetic sensibility and a ready sympathy with the most varied dramatic situations. His orchestration is particularly notable. The list of his works includes Operas—La Double Échelle, 1837, Le Perruquier de la Régence, 1838, Le Panier Fleurs, 1839. Carlène, 1840,

Le Comte de Carmagnola, 1841, Le Guerillero, 1842, Angélique et Médor, 1843, Mina, 1843, Le Caïd, 1849, Le Songe d'une Nuit d'Été, 1850, Raymond, 1851, La Tonelli, 1853, La Cour de Clémène, 1855, Psyché, 1857, Le Carnaval de Venise, 1857, Le Roman d'Elvire, 1860, Mignon, 1866, Hamlet, 1868, Gille et Gilloin, 1874, Françoise de Rimini, 1882.

Ballets—La Gipsy, 1839, Betty, 1846, La Tempête, 1889.

Choral works—cantata, Hermann et Kelly, 1832; cantatas in honor of Lesueur (1852, Abbeville) and of Boieldieu (1875, Rouen); Messe de Requiem (1836); Messe Solennelle, 1857; Marche Religieuse, 1865 (for the Association des Artistes Musiciens); a series of Chœurs Orphéoniques (men's voices); 3 motets with organ. Also 6 Neapolitan songs.

Instrumental works—fantasia for piano and orchestra; string-quintet in F; string-quartet in E; piano-trio in D min.; piano-pieces (some 4-hands).

His administration of the Conservatory was marked by high executive ideals, especially on the side of improving the staff and system of instruction. Memoirs by Delabond, Jules Simon, 1896 (in Revue de Paris), Bellaigue, 1898 (in Études Musicales), Destranges, Brancour, etc. G.

Thomas, Eugen (Surabaya, 1863-1922, n. Gmunden). Dutch (Javanese) conductor, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory (with early study at Delft), in 1882-84 conductor of the Euterpe at Delft, in 1884-85 of a musical society in Samarang (Java), in 1887 at a theater in Pilsen, in 1888 of German opera at Groningen and from 1889 living in Vienna, where he started an a cappella chorus in 1902 and from 1905 had charge of choral classes at the Conservatory. Author of Die Instrumentation d. Meistersinger von Wagner, 2 vols. 1899 (2d ed. 1907). Also wrote 2 operas, works for orchestra and chamber-ensemble, choruses and songs, besides a Chorschule (for the Conservatory).

Thomas, Gustav Adolf (n. Zittau, 1842-1870, Petrograd). Able, but short-lived, Saxon organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1864-66 at the Reformed Church in Leipzig and then at the Peterskirche in Petrograd (following H. Stiehl). Wrote a concert-fantasia, Fuga Eroica, 12 trios on chorale-melodies, studies, etc., besides editions of Handel's concertos and Bach's Kunst der Fuge.

Thomas, John (Bridgend, 1826-1913). Eminent Welsh harpist and composer, trained at the Royal Academy (London), in 1851 playing at the Opera, in 1852-62 making frequent concert-tours to all parts of the Continent, from 1862 giving annual concerts of Welsh music in London (chorus and harp-ensemble), in 1871-77 directing the Welsh Choral Union there and for many years teaching at the Royal College. In 1872 he succeeded Chatterton as harpist to the Queen. He was prominent at the Eisteddfodau for about half a century (performer or judge) and in 1861 was named 'Chief Bard'. He was also a member of various Italian Academies. In 1883 he endowed a Welsh Scholarship at the Royal Academy. In 1893 he visited America. Wrote 3 harp-concertos, numerous duets (two harps, harp and piano, harp and violin), solos, études and transcriptions, besides the choral works Llewelyn, 1863, and The Bride of Neath Valley, 1866, patriotic choruses, songs, a symphony, overtures, quartets, 2 operas, etc. G.

Thomas, Otto (n. Schandau, 1857). Excellent Saxon organist, pupil of Merkel, from 1890 at the Paulikirche in Dresden, retiring in 1910 with the title of Church Music Director. Has written fugues, Christmas fantasias, festival preludes and postludes, variations and other organ-pieces, motets, sacred songs with organ, etc.

Thomas, Robert Harold (Cheltenham, 1834-1885, London). English pianist, trained at the Royal Academy (London), from 1850 appearing often in concert and from about 1870 teaching at the Royal Academy and the Guildhall School. Wrote the overtures As You Like It, 1864, and Mountain, Lake and Moorland, 1880, piano-pieces, transcriptions and songs. G.

Thomas, Theodore (Esens, East Friesland, 1835-1905, Chicago). Distinguished North German violinist and conductor, pupil of his father and appearing in public when but six. In 1845 the family migrated to New York, where he was soon active in orchestras and as soloist, after 1851 making several tours alone or with vocalists like Jenny Lind, Sontag and Mario. In 1855-68 he joined William Mason in notable series of chamber-recitals. In 1864-69 and 1872-78 he carried on symphony-concerts of equal importance, from 1866 added summer-concerts and from 1869 made annual tours with his orchestra. In 1873 he founded the Cincinnati Festivals (biennial), which he conducted regularly till his death. These led to the starting of the Cincinnati College of Music, of which he was president in 1878-80. In 1877-78 he had been conductor of the New York Philharmonic, as also in 1862-63, '66-68 and '73-78 of the Brooklyn Philharmonic. In 1880 he resumed both of these posts. His connection with various choral societies was also taken up afresh, and in 1885-87 he was director of the ambitious American Opera Company. Through all these manifold activities he stamped his sterling and progressive musicianship upon the musical life not only of a few large cities, but also through extended and repeated tours outside. The effectiveness of his work as a musical missionary was greatly increased by the genius with which his programs were made up. In 1891 he was called to take charge of the new Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Here he had the chance to realize his finest ambitions and at the same time to develop taste in an area that he had not touched. His success led to the erection (by a great popular subscription) of a splendid Hall for the Orchestra. This was dedicated on Dec. 14, 1904. Exposure in connection with a rehearsal for the festival that followed led to his death three weeks later. Autobiography, edited by Upton, 2 vols. 1905, and memoir by his wife, 1911. G., A.

Thomas, Vincent (Wrexham, 1872). English business-man (engaged in banking), in 1895 organizing an amateur orchestra of bank-clerks in London and writing the operas Eos and Gwernil, 1902, Gwenevere, 1905, Enid, 1908, and Dagonet, choral and orchestral works and songs.

Thomas, William Edwin (Oxford, 1867). English organist, pupil (as choirboy) of C. W. Corfe, early beginning as player in Oxford, from 1886 at All Saints' in Bloxham and leader of a choral society, from 1894 conductor of the Philharmonic at Boscombe (Bournemouth) and from 1895 also organist at St. Clement's. In 1900 he removed to New Zealand, becoming music-professor at University College, conductor of the Choral Society and Liedertafel and from 1902 also organist at St. Mary's Cathedral. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1894. Has written the cantata The Nativity, Psalm 71, services, anthems, glees, madrigals and part-songs.

Thomas-San Galli, Wolfgang Alexander (n. Mühlheim, 1874–1918, Baden). Badenese violinist and writer, originally educated for the law (Jur.D. 1898, Marburg), from 1899 violinist in the South German Quartet at Freiburg (Baden), from 1908 editor of the Rheinische Musik-u. Theaterzeitung at Cologne and from 1911 in Berlin. Author of biographical studies of Brahms (1905, '12), and Beethoven (1912), discussions of the latter's 'unsterbliche Geliebte' (1909, '10), Musik u. Kultur, 1908, Musikal. Essays, 1908, and Mozart-Schatzbüchlein, 1911, besides editions of Beethoven's letters (1910, '13).

Thomassin, Désiré (Vienna, 1858). Austrian landscape-painter and talented composer, in music pupil of the Munich Conservatory, writing symphonies, overtures, a violin-concerto, a string-quintet, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a quartet with piano and oboe, 2 string-trios, 2 piano-trios, 2 violin- and 2 'cello-sonatas, a Missa Solemnis, choruses and songs.

Thomé, François Luc Joseph [Francis Lucien] (Port Louis, 1850–1909, Paris). French-Mauritian composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory, writing the operas Martin et Frontin, 1877, La Caprice de la Reine, 1892, Le Château de Königsburg, 1896, and Le Chaperon Rouge, 1900, the operetta Barbe-Bleuette, 1889, several ballets and other stage-works, including music for Roméo et Juliette (1890), the effective 'mystery' L'Enfant Jésus, 1891, the choral works Hymne à la Nuit and Vénus et Adonis, an orchestral suite, a 'cello-concerto, a piano-trio, many graceful piano-pieces and songs. G (appendix).

Thompson, John Winter (Leland, Mich. 1867). American organist, trained at the Oberlin and Leipzig Conservatories, since 1890 (except in 1892–94, when studying abroad) teacher at Knox College (Galesburg, Ill.) and organist at the Central Congregational Church. Mus.D. of Knox College in 1909. Has written various organ-pieces for church or concert, motets and anthems. A.

Thomson, César (Liège, 1857). Eminent Belgian violinist, trained at the Liège Conservatory and under Vieuxtemps, Léonard, Wieniawski and Massart, early touring with success in Italy and Spain, from 1875 in the service of Baron von Derwies at Lugano, from 1879 concertmaster of the Bilse orchestra in Berlin, in 1882–97 teacher at the Liège Conservatory, but with many further tours (in 1894–95 to America), from 1898 Ysaÿe's successor as teacher at the Brussels Conservatory and since 1914 at the Paris Conservatory. As a player he excels in brilliant feats of technique. Has edited works by early Italian masters and written a Hungarian fantasia and a method (1913). G, A.

Thomson, George (n. Dunfermline, 1757–1851, Leith). Scottish business-man, in 1780–1830 secretary of the Society for Encouraging Arts and Manufactures. From about 1790 he devoted himself to collecting Scottish, Irish and Welsh airs and publishing them with special accompaniments (including preludes, codas and ad libitum solo-parts) by eminent composers. He not only gathered a remarkable amount of fresh material, but enlisted the aid of musicians like Pleyel, Koželuch, Haydn and Beethoven. His Scottish collections appeared in 1793–1841 (6 vols.), 1822 (6 vols., songs by Burns, Scott, etc.) and 1839 (20 melodies); the Irish in 1814–16 (2 vols.); the Welsh in 1809 (3 vols.). Memoir by Hadden, 1898. G.

Thomson, John (n. Kelso, 1805–1841, Edinburgh). Scottish teacher, pupil of Schnyder von Wartensee and intimate with Mendelssohn, Schumann and Moscheles, from 1839 the first music-professor at Edinburgh University (on the Reid foundation), having previously become conductor of the Professional Society. For a concert of the latter in 1837 he prepared what is probably the earliest 'analytical program'. Wrote the operas Herman, 1834, The House of Aspen, 1834, and The Shadow on the Wall, 1835, some instrumental pieces and songs. G.

Thooft, Willem Frans (Amsterdam, 1829–1900, Rotterdam). Dutch composer, pupil of A. Dupont and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1860 establishing and directing the German Opera at Rotterdam. Wrote the opera Aleida von Holland, 1866, the choral work Gevonden, 3 symphonies (one, Kaiser Karl V, 1861, with chorus), the overture Die Jungfrau von Orleans, the orchestral fantasia In Leid und Freud, piano-sonatas, Psalms and songs.

Thorne, Edward Henry (Cranbourne, 1834–1916, London). Able English organist, trained (as choirboy) by Elvey, from 1853 engaged at Henley, from 1863 at Chichester Cathedral, from 1870 at several churches in Brighton or London and from 1891 at St. Anne's (Soho), where he gave notable recitals and special services, especially of Bach's works. Mus.D. from the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1913. Wrote Psalms 47, 57 and 125, services, anthems, many organ- and piano-pieces, part-songs and songs, besides the overture Peeveril of the Peak, 2 piano-trios, violin- and 'cello-sonatas, a clarinet-suite, etc. G.

Thouret, Georg (Berlin, 1855). Prussian teacher and specialist in military music, since 1902 director of the Helmholtz-Realgymnasium in Berlin (Schöneberg). About 1890 he unearthed neglected band-music at Berlin, Charlottenburg and Potsdam, which he gathered for preservation at Berlin, and also prepared an exhibit for the Vienna Exposition of 1892 (catalogues, 1892, '95). Author of Friedrich der Grosse als Musikfreund u. Musiker, 1898, Analyse d. 12 Metamorphosen-Symphonien von Dittersdorf, 1899, and many articles on the history of military music.

Thrane, Waldemar (Christiania, 1790-1828, do.). Notable Norwegian violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of K. Schall and the Paris Conservatory, from 1817 leader of musical societies in Christiania, becoming famous both as player and as the first to utilize distinctively Norwegian themes and forms. Wrote the dramatic scene Fjeldeventyret, 1824 (the first Norwegian opera), cantatas, overtures and dances. See Conradi's history, 1878.

Thuille, Ludwig Wilhelm Andreas Maria (Bozen, 1861-1907, Munich). Eminent Tyrolean teacher and composer, trained by J. Penzabaur and the Munich Conservatory, in 1883 becoming a highly-valued teacher at the latter and also conducting the men's chorus Liederhort. In 1891 he gained the title of royal professor. Wrote the operas Theuerdank, 1897 (Luitpold prize), Lobetanz, 1898, and Gugeline, 1901, a Romantische Ouvertüre (prelude to Theuerdank), a Symphonischer Festmarsch, the choral work Traumsommernacht, a sextet for piano and wind, a piano-quintet, 2 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, an organ-sonata, piano-pieces, effective men's choruses, many songs (including the cycle Von Lieb und Leid) and a vocal score of Cornelius' Cid. Author (with R. Louis) of a notable Harmonielehre, 1907 (4th ed. 1913). G.

Thunder, Henry Gordon (Philadelphia, 1865). Able American organist and conductor, pupil of his father and Jarvis, from 1881 engaged at various Philadelphia churches (since 1912 at St. Stephen's), in 1897-1900 conducting his own symphony-orchestra, since 1897 also the Choral Society and other vocal organizations. Has written the choral works Delosain and Erator and The Simargh, a mass, a cappella choruses, etc. A.

Thuren, Hjalmar Lauritz (Copenhagen, 1873). Danish school-teacher at Frederiksberg (Copenhagen) and investigator of folk-music in Denmark, the Faroe Islands and among the Eskimos, author of various monographs and articles since 1901.

Thürlings, Adolf (Kaldenkirchen, 1844-1915, Bern). Rhenish theologian, from 1887 professor in Bern University, author of a thesis on harmonic dualism (1877), Die schweizer. Tonmeister im Zeitalter d. Reformation, 1903, and articles in periodicals, besides editing motets by Palestrina.

Thurner, Friedrich Eugen (Mömpelgard, 1785-1827, Amsterdam). Famous Würtemberger oboist, pupil of Ramm, making many tours and playing in orchestras at Brunswick, Kassel, Frankfurt and Amsterdam (from 1818).

Wrote 3 symphonies, an overture, 4 oboe-concertos, 4 quartets for oboe and strings and much other ensemble-music.

Thursby, Emma Cecelia (Brooklyn, 1854). Eminent American soprano, pupil of Jul. Meyer, Errani, Mme. Rudersdorff, Lamperti and Sangiovanni, from 1875 appearing with great success in concert in America and Europe, continuing a favorite till after 1890, when she turned mostly to teaching in New York. In 1903, however, she toured in Japan and China. G, A.

Tiburtino da Tivoli, Giuliano. 16th C.

Ticciati, Francesco (Rome, 1893). Italian pianist, pupil of the Liceo S. Cecilia in Rome, from about 1915 known as concertist and writing music for Gozzi's L'Amore delle Tre Melarance (1915), a Poema Gregoriano for piano and orchestra, Intermezzi Sinfonici, etc.

Tichatschek, Joseph Aloys (n. Braunau, 1807-1886, Dresden). Eminent Bohemian (-Austrian) operatic tenor, pupil of Cicimara, from about 1830 singing in the chorus or in minor parts at the Kärnthnerthor Theater in Vienna or at Gratz and in 1838-72 regularly engaged at the Dresden Opera. In 1841 he visited England. He sang at the premières of Wagner's Rienzi (1842) and Tannhäuser (1845). He was intimate with Mme. Schröder-Devrient and a favorite of Wagner. G.

Tiedeböhl, Otto von (Voronezh, 1863). Russian violinist, from 1893 touring in southern Russia, from 1895 teacher at the music-school in Tambov and soon concertmaster in the orchestra there. After some study in Berlin he undertook further tours, but was checked by ill-health. Has written an orchestral suite, a violin-concerto and various pieces. Author of an essay on the execution of Beethoven's violin-concerto (1909).

Tieffenbrucker, Kaspar (1514-1571). 16th C. G.

Tiersch, Otto (n. Artern, 1838-1892, Berlin). Able Thuringian theorist, pupil of Töpfer, H. Bellermann, Marx and Erk, long a singing-teacher at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin) or in the city-schools. Author of a series of textbooks in harmony (1868, '74, '76, '81), counterpoint (1879), general theory (1885, with Erk), rhythmic, dynamics and phrasing (1886), etc. He sought to popularize the doctrines of Hauptmann and Helmholtz. G.

Tiersot, Jean Baptiste Elisée Julien (Bourgen-Bresse, 1857). Eminent French librarian and historical writer, trained at the Paris Conservatory and since 1883 connected with its library, at first as assistant and from 1909 as chief (following Weckerlin), besides lecturing elsewhere on French folk-songs, especially at the École des Hautes Études Sociales. Author of Histoire de la Chanson Populaire en France, 1889 (Prix Bordin, 1885), Musiques Pittoresques, 1890, a life of Rouget de Lisle (1894, Prix Kastner-Bourgault), Les Types Mélodiques dans la Chanson Populaire Française, 1894, Étude sur les Maîtres-Chanteurs, 1899, Ronsard et la Musique de son Temps, 1903, Index Musical pour le Romancero Populaire de la France par G. Doncieux, 1904, Berlioz et la Société de son Temps, 1904, Notes d'Ethnographie Musicale, 2 parts, 1905, '10, Les Fêtes et les Chants de la Révolution Française, 1908, lives of Gluck (1910) and Rousseau (1912), Histoire de la Marseillaise, 1915, Un Demi-Siècle de Musique Française, 1870-1917, 1917, and numerous essays in learned periodicals, besides editing Berlioz' letters (1907) and some six valuable collections of French popular songs from various periods and sections and arranging many of them for orchestra or chorus. He has also prepared an edition of Adam de la Hail's Robin et Marion (given 1896) and added notes to Mlle. Pelletan's editions of Gluck's Orfée and Écho et Narcisse. Has written incidental music for Corneille's Andromède, some a cappella choruses, etc. G. A.

Tiessen, Heinz (Königsberg, 1887). Prussian composer, pupil of Rüfer, Kleffel and Klatte, of late serving as critic for the Berlin Allgem. Musikzeitung. Has written 2 symphonies, the orchestral Eine Ibsenfeier, music for Immermann's Merlin (1918) and for Hamlet (1920), a septet for flute, clarinet, horn and strings, a piano-sonata, Lyrik and Natur-Trilogie for piano, over 40 songs, etc. Author of a Führer to Strauss' Josef-Legende (1914).

Tietjens [Titiens], Therese Johanna Alexandra (Hamburg, 1831-1877, London). Distinguished North German operatic soprano (of Hungarian descent), appearing from 1849 at Hamburg, elsewhere in Germany and at Vienna with impressive success. After 1858 she settled in London, where she became a supreme favorite, and visited Paris in 1863 and America in 1876. Her voice had both majestic power and great sweetness, while her dignity and extreme conscientiousness gave her interpretations of both opera and oratorio a singular nobility. G.

Tilborghs, Joseph (Nieuwmoer, 1830-?). Belgian organist and theorist, from 1855 teacher at the Lierre Normal School and from 1882 at both the Ghent and the Antwerp Conservatories, writing organ-pieces and motets with organ.

Tillmetz, Rudolf (Munich, 1847-1915, do.). Able Bavarian flutist, from 1864 playing in the court-orchestra at Munich and from 1883 teaching at the Conservatory, besides joining Franz Strauss and Reichenbächer in giving chamber-concerts with wind-instruments. He was also chamber-musician to Prince Ludwig Ferdinand. Wrote several concert-pieces for flute and orchestra, a flute-quintet, cadenzas for Mozart's concertos, many solo-pieces and études, besides a text-book for the Böhm flute and Orchesterstudien, 3 books.

Tillyard, Henry Julius Wetenhall (Cambridge, 1881). English specialist in ancient and medieval music, educated at Cambridge University and in Rome and Athens, becoming lecturer at Edinburgh University. Author of monographs on Greek and Byzantine music in the Musical Antiquary, Byzantine Journal, I. M. G. Zeitschr., Am. Journal of Archaeology, etc.

Tilman, Alfred (Brussels, 1848-1895, n. do.). Belgian church-composer, writing a Requiem (1875, in memory of Queen Louise), Te Deum Solennel, a Chant Sacré, 1874, Hymne à la Nature, Cantate Patriotique, the cantata La Sirène, a set of 24 vocal fugues, the bass-scena Marnix, a horn-quartet, etc.

Tilmant, Théophile Alexandre (Valenciennes, 1799-1878, Asnières). Noted French violinist and conductor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1828 sub-conductor of the new Société des Concerts, from 1834 assistant at the Théâtre des Italiens, becoming chief in 1838, and in 1849-68 conductor at the Opéra-Comique, succeeding Labarre, besides having charge of the Conservatory Concerts in 1860-63. In 1838, with his brother Alexandre (1808-1880), an accomplished 'cellist, he formed a Quartet that continued popular till about 1850. G.

Timanova, Vera (Ufa, 1855). Gifted Russian pianist, pupil of Novitzky, A. Rubinstein, Tausig and Liszt, in 1871-72 active in Prague and Vienna, then touring repeatedly and finally settling as teacher at Petrograd.

Tinctoris, Johannes (?1446-1511). 15th C. G.

Tinel, Edgar (Sinay, 1854-1912, Brussels). Eminent Belgian pianist and composer, trained at the Brussels Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1877), from 1881 head of the Church Music School at Mechlin (founded by Lemmens) and from 1896 teacher at the Brussels Conservatory, where in 1909 he succeeded Gevaert as director. From 1889 he was state-inspector of music-schools. Wrote the drama Godoleva, 1897, the sacred opera Katharina, 1909, the oratorio Franciscus, 1888 (his ablest work), music for Corneille's Polyeucte, the cantatas De Klokke Roeland, 1877, De Drie Ridders and Kollebloemen, a mass, 2 Te Deums, Psalms 6, 29 and 150, motets and other choruses, sacred and secular songs, sonatas for organ and for piano, besides a manual of Gregorian music (1890). Memoir by Van der Elst, 1901. G. A.

Tiraboschi, Girolamo (Bergamo, 1731-1784, Modena). Italian historian of literature in whose extensive works (1772-86) are many data regarding music and musicians in Italy. G.

Tirindelli, Pier Adolfo (Conegliano, 1858). Italian violinist and teacher, pupil of the Milan Conservatory and of Grün and Massart, in 1877-80 band-leader at Gorizia, from 1884 teacher at the Liceo Marcello at Venice and from 1892 its director (in association with Grazzini), besides conducting the Verdi Orchestra. In 1895 he migrated to America, appeared as soloist and since 1896 has taught at the Cincinnati Conservatory (including leadership of the orchestra and opera-class). Has written the operas Atenaide, 1892, and lanc et Noir, 1897, 2 symphonic poems, a violin-concerto, violin-pieces and many songs. A.

Tischer, Gerhard (n. Belzig, 1877). Prussian editor, trained in musicology at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1903), since 1904 lecturer on music-history at the Handelshochschule in Cologne, from 1906 editor of the Rheinische Musik- u. Theaterzeitung and since 1910 head of the publishing-house of Tischer & Jagenberg. Author of a thesis on Aristotle's Music-Problems (1903).

Titelouze, Jean (1563–1633). 16th C.

Titov, Alexiei Nikolaievitch (1769–1827, Petrograd). Russian cavalry-officer and clever composer (after Mozart's style) of the operas The Brewer, 1796, The Judgment of Solomon, 1805, Yam, 1805, Nurzachad, 1807, Emmerich Tekkely, 1812, The Mogul's Feast, 1823, etc., including some that may be by his brother Sergei (b. 1770).

Titov, Nikolai Alexieievitch (Petrograd, 1800–1875, do.), son of the above. Long considered the first Russian to write a true art-song (1820) and certainly the first to gain popular recognition in that field (about 60 songs). Also wrote marches and dances. See articles in the Russkaya Starina, 1870, and the Gazeta, 1900. G.

Tittel, Bernhard (Vienna, 1873). Austrian organist and conductor, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, for a time engaged in Vienna churches, but from 1897 coach and conductor at the Karlsruhe Opera, from 1901 at Halle, from 1907 at Nuremberg and since 1912 in Vienna, at first at the Volksoper, from 1915 at the Staatsoper and from 1920 in charge of his own symphony-concerts. Has written the opera Cesare Borgias Ende, a symphony, overtures and choruses.

Toch, Ernst (Vienna, 1887). Gifted Austrian composer, self-taught except for some piano-study with Rehberg, in 1909 gaining the Mozart and in 1910 the Mendelssohn scholarships, besides in four successive years taking the Austrian Staatspreis for composition. From 1909 he lived at Frankfurt and since 1913 has taught at the Hochschule für Musik in Mannheim. In 1921 he gained a Ph.D. with a thesis on melodic style. Has written the 'symphony' An mein Vaterland (with soli, chorus and organ), a Kammersinfonie, an orchestral scherzo, music for Der Kinder Neujahrstraum, a piano-concerto, 12 string-quartets, sonatas for various instruments, pieces for violin and for piano, etc.

Todi, Luiza Rosa de Aguiar (Setúbal, 1753–1833, Lisbon). Eminent Portuguese operatic mezzo-soprano, pupil of Perez, first appearing at fifteen at Lisbon and more formally in 1772 at London, which she revisited in 1777. Her fame began in 1777, when success at Madrid led to striking prominence at Paris (from 1778), in southern Germany and at Vienna. In 1782 for a time she was engaged at the Berlin Opera, from 1784 was in high favor with Empress Catherine at Petrograd and in 1786–89 alternated between the two capitals. In 1783 a violent popular strife sprang up at Paris between the partisans of Todi and those of Mara. After a tour in Italy in 1791 she retired to Lisbon, in her last years becoming blind. Though not uniformly admired, she was one of the great artists of her period, excelling in sentiment and pathos. Memoir by Vasconcellos, 1873. G.

Todt, Johann August Wilhelm (n. Uecker-munde, 1833–1900, Stettin). Able Pomeranian organist, pupil of Loewe and the Institut für Kirchenmusik, Berlin, from 1860 cantor at Küstrin and from 1863 organist at Stettin, in 1875–92 at the Johanniskirche. Wrote a symphony, Psalms, piano-sonatas, pieces for organ and for piano and songs.

Toësch, Carlo Giuseppe (in the Romagna, 1724–1788, Munich). Able Italian violinist and composer, pupil of Joh. Stamitz and a follower of his general style, from 1752 playing in the Mannheim orchestra, going with it to Munich in 1778 (in 1759 becoming concertmaster and in 1780 conductor). Wrote over 60 symphonies, many quartets, trios, violin-sonatas, etc. His brother Johann Baptist (d. 1800) was also a violinist, joining the Mannheim orchestra in 1756 and also going to Munich in 1778, where he succeeded his brother as conductor in 1788. Wrote 18 symphonies, 10 quartets and 6 trio-sonatas.

Tofano, Gustavo (Naples, 1844–1899, do.). Gifted Italian pianist, trained at Naples, Pisa and Bologna (Gotinelli), in 1872 becoming professor at the Bologna Liceo. Wrote the opera Amore a suo Tempo, 1875, the ballet Alfa ed Omega, 1875, the cantata Margherita delle Alpi, piano-pieces and songs.

Tofft, Alfred (Copenhagen, 1865). Danish organist and fine song-composer, pupil of Nebelong and Bohlmann, taking the Ancker scholarship in 1892. Has written the opera Vifandaka, 1898, many sets of songs and effective piano-pieces.

Tofte, Lars Valdemar (Copenhagen, 1832–1907, do.). Eminent Danish violinist and teacher, pupil of C. Petersen, Selmer, Spohr and Joachim, appearing as soloist from 1856, in 1863–93 member of the court-orchestra at Copenhagen, in 1868–92 leader of the Neruda Quartet and in 1866–1904 a highly-valued teacher at the Conservatory (Svendsen, Hilmer, Henriques and Schytte among his pupils).

Tolbecque, Auguste (Paris, 1830–?), son of the next. Fine French 'cellist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from about 1850 active in Paris both as teacher and as collector and restorer of old instruments, in 1865–71 teacher at the Marseilles Conservatory, then again at Paris, where he played at the Conservatory Concerts. Author of Souvenirs d'un Musicien en Provence, 1896, Notice Historique sur les Instruments à Cordes et à Archet, 1898, and L'Art du Luthier, 1903, besides writing the short comedy Après la Valse, 1894, a Konzertstück for 'cello and orchestra, 'cello-pieces and exercises. G.

Tolbecque, Auguste Joseph (n. Châtelineau, 1801–1869, Paris), brother of the next. Belgian violinist, pupil of Kreutzer, long in the orchestra at the Paris Opéra and that of the Conservatory Concerts, besides serving repeatedly at Her Majesty's in London. G.

Tolbecque, Jean Baptiste Joseph (n. Châtelineau, 1797–1869, Paris), brother of the preceding. Belgian violinist and conductor of dance-music, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, in 1820–25 playing at the Italiens in Paris and then noted as conductor at the Tivoli and later at the court-balls, besides playing at the Conservatory Concerts. Wrote the short comedy Charles V et Duguesclin, 1827 (with Gilbert and Guiraud), the ballet Vert-Vert, 1851 (with Deldevez), and a quantity of taking waltzes, quadrilles, galops, etc. G.

Tollefsen, Carl Henry (Hull, 1882). English violinist, brought up in America, studying with Lichtenberg, Kneisel, Schradieck, Goetschius and Goldmark, in 1908–10 playing in the Symphony Society in New York and then teaching at the National Conservatory, the Berkeley Institute (Brooklyn) and other schools, besides being concertmaster of the Scandinavian Symphony Orchestra. In 1907 he married the pianist Augusta Schnabel (b. 1885) and in 1909 formed with her and Michael Penha the Tollefsen Trio, which has toured widely. A.

Tollins, Jan (1550–1603). 16th C.

Tolstoy, Theophil Matveievitch (1809–1881, Petrograd). Russian nobleman, in music pupil of Rubini, Fuchs, Miller, Raimondi and Hebel, writing an opera for Naples (1832) and about 200 songs. From 1850 he was active as critic, largely as advocate of Italian styles (pen-name 'Rostislav'). Author of analyses of operas by Glinka (1854) and Serov (1870–71), a critique of Oulibischeff's Beethoven (1850), Tagebuch eines Musikers, 1855, and various Reminiscences, 1871–74.

Tomaschek, Johann Wenzel [Jan Václav Tomašek] (Skuč, 1774–1850, Prague). Eminent Bohemian pianist and composer, pupil of Wolf (at Chrudim) and the Minorite cloister at Iglau, with law-study at Prague, but largely self-taught (from 1798 greatly influenced by hearing Beethoven). He held the place of musician to Count Bucquoi de Longeval and was soon the most conspicuous teacher in Prague (Dreyschock, Kittl, Schulhoff, Dessauer, S. Goldschmidt, Hanslick, and many others among his pupils). He was a highly expert player and a most conscientious and dignified composer, but his fame was obscured by the contemporary genius of Beethoven. His works include the operas Seraphine, 1811, and 2 not given, scenes from Faust, Wallenstein, Maria Stuart and Die Braut von Messina, a Krönungsmesse, a Requiem, cantatas, hymns, a Te Deum, 3 symphonies, an overture, 2 piano-concertos, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, 7 piano-sonatas, over 40 Écloques, 15 Rhapsodies, various other piano-works, about 60 songs, etc. Autobiography, 1845 (in Libussa). See Hanslick, Aus meinem Leben, 1894, Procházka, Arpeggien, 1897, and Van Bruyck in Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, 1873. G.

Tomasini, Luigi [Aloysius] (Pesaro, 1741–1808, Esterház). Able Italian violinist, from 1757 in Prince Esterházy's orchestra and thus intimate with Haydn. Wrote 2 violin-concertos, duos concertantes, 12 quartets, 24 trios with baryton, etc. G.

Tomicich, Hugo (Veglia, 1879). Istrian writer, living in Berlin, author of questions about the relative value of Wagner's works (1899, 1904) and studies of Smareglia's La Falena (1899) and Nozze Istriane (1908).

Tomkins, Thomas (1607–1656). 17th C. G.

Tomlins, William Lawrence (London, 1844). English singing-master, pupil of Macfarren and Silas, from 1864 teaching at the new Tonic Sol-Fa College in London. In 1870 he removed to America and in 1875–98 was director of the Apollo Glee Club in Chicago (at first men's voices only) and from 1883 extremely successful with children's choruses and in training school-teachers for music-teaching. For the latter he established a school in 1903 and from 1904 was in the employ of the city school-board. In 1910–20 he was in London. Author of Children's Songs and How to Sing Them, 1885. A.

Tommasi, Giuseppe Maria, Cardinal (1649–1713). 17th C.

Tommasini, Vincenzo (Rome, 1880). Italian composer, pupil of Pinelli, Falchi and Bruch, writing the operas Medea, 1906, Amore di Terra Lontana (1908) and Uguale Fortuna, 1913 (short), the ballet Le Donne di Buon Umore, 1917 (music adapted from Dom. Scarlatti), the overture Das Leben ein Traum, 1904, an orchestral suite (1914), the orchestral pieces Poema Erotico, 1911, Inno alla Bellà, 1912, Chiari di Luna, 1916, and Il Beato Regno, 1922, a string-quartet and a violin-sonata (1917). He also contributes to the Rivista. Sketch by Gatti, 1921 (in Musical Times).

Tonning, Gerard (Stavanger, 1860). Norwegian teacher and composer, pupil of Olsen and the Munich Conservatory, removing to America in 1887 as choral conductor at Duluth, Minn., and leader of a Trio, in 1905 going thence to Seattle. Has written the opera Leif Erikson, 1910, 2 operettas, a pantomime, a piano-trio, a violin-suite, a Rapsodie Norvégienne for 'cello, Norwegian Dances, nocturnes and other piano-pieces, part-songs and songs. A.

Tonsor, Michael. 16th C.

Töpfer, Johann Gottlob (n. Sangerhausen, 1791–1870, Weimar). Eminent Thuringian organist, pupil of Schlömilch, Destouches, Aug. Riemann and A. E. Müller, besides study at the Weimar Seminary, where from 1817 he taught. From 1830 he was town-organist there, becoming famous as both player and expert. Author of Die Orgelbaukunst, 1833, Die Scheiblersche Stimm-Methode, 1842, Die Orgel, 1843, and Lehrbuch d. Orgelbaukunst, 4 vols. 1856 (2d ed. 1888, edited by Allihn). Wrote also a Konzertstück for organ, sonatas, fugues, fantasias, preludes, etc., an Organistenschule, 1845, a piano-trio, a flute-sonata with variations, a piano-sonata, the cantata Die Orgelweihe, a Choralbuch, etc. G.

Töpler, Michael (n. Glatz, 1804–1874, Brühl). Silesian church-musician, pupil of Jos. Schnabel and the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, in 1825 settling at Brühl (n. Cologne) as teacher. He exercised a useful influence in reviving interest in the older styles of church-music, publishing Alle Chormelodien, 1832, '36, Kathol. Kirchengesänge, 1855, Hymne an d. deutsche Vaterland, 1871, the collection Laudate Dominum, 1837 (5th ed. 1875), etc.

Torchi, Luigi (n. Bologna, 1858-1920, do.). Eminent Italian musicologist, editor and composer, trained at the Bologna, Naples and Leipzig Conservatories, from 1885 teacher of music-history at the Liceo Rossini at Pesaro and from 1891 professor at the Bologna Conservatory (in 1895-1916 of both history and composition), as well as librarian. He was twice president of the Bologna Accademia. In 1894-1904 he was the first editor of the new Rivista Musicale Italiana. Editor of collections of 17th-century canzoni (1893) and of old violin-pieces, besides the monumental L'Arte Musicale in Italia (7 vols. from 1897 out of the projected 34). Author of a monograph on Wagner (1890), a memoir of A. Busi (1896), many translations from Wagner (including Oper und Drama), of Hanslick's Vom Musikalisch-Schönen, etc., and many essays in the Gazzetta Musicale and the Rivista. He also wrote the opera La Tempesta, 1875, and another not given, a Dies Irae, Credo and Gloria, a symphony, an overture to Heine's Almansor, a string-quartet, etc. Memoir by Vatielli, 1920 (in Rivista Musicale).

Torelli, Gasparo. 16th C.

Torelli, Giuseppe (?1660-1708). 17th C. G.

Torrance, George William (n. Dublin, 1835-1907, Kilkenny). Irish clergyman, trained (as choirboy) at Christ Church Cathedral in Dublin and later at Leipzig, before taking orders in 1866 organist at churches in or near Dublin and maintaining musical activity throughout his clerical life. In 1869-97 he served various parishes in or near Melbourne (Australia) and on his return to Ireland held offices in the diocese of Ossory, in 1900 becoming canon of St. Canice's Cathedral at Kilkenny. Mus.D. of Dublin Univ. in 1879 and later of Melbourne Univ. Wrote the oratorios Abraham, 1855, The Captivity, 1864, and The Revelation, 1882, the opera William of Normandy, 1859, canticles, anthems, hymn-tunes, madrigals, etc., besides compiling a Chant-Book for Ireland. G.

Torre Franca, Fausto (Monteleone, 1883). Eminent Italian historical scholar, at first an engineer, in music largely self-taught, from 1914 teaching music-history at the Naples Conservatory and from 1915 its librarian, besides from 1907 being editor of the Rivista Musicale. Author of many essays in this and other reviews, La Vita Musicale della Spirito, 1910, and Puccini e l'Opera Internazionale, 1912. In 1910 he argued in favor of Platti as a pioneer in the change in style in the middle of the 18th century and in 1913 emphasized the work of the brothers Sammartini.

Torri, Pietro (?1665-1737). 17th C.

Torrington, Frederick Herbert (Dudley, 1837-1917, Toronto). Able English organist, pupil of James Fitzgerald, from 1853 at St. Anne's, Bewdley. In 1856 he migrated to Canada, where from 1857 he was organist at the St. James Street (M. E.) Church in Montreal, in 1869 took a Canadian orchestra to the Boston Peace Jubilee and till 1873 remained there as organist at King's Chapel, teacher at the New England Conservatory and violinist in various orchestras. From 1873 he was organist at the Metropolitan (M.E.) Church in Toronto and conductor of the Philharmonic Society, besides in 1888 founding the College of Music. In 1886 he organized the first local festival and in 1903 co-operated with Mackenzie on his Canadian tour. From 1892 he was president of the Canadian Society of Musicians. Mus.D. of Toronto Univ. Wrote organ-pieces, services, choruses and songs. A.

Törsleff, Ludwig Christian (Assens, 1849-1914, Munich). Danish singing-teacher, originally in business at Flensburg, from about 1880 tenor at the Copenhagen Opera, but almost lost his voice while seeking improvement in Italy. He then turned with success to vocal teaching, from 1888 at Leipzig, from 1898 at Copenhagen and from 1902 at Munich, following the method of Müller-Brunow.

Toscanini, Arturo (Parma, 1867). Distinguished Italian conductor, pupil of the Parma Conservatory, at first playing 'cello in various orchestras. In 1886, while at Rio de Janeiro, he impulsively replaced a nerveless conductor (in Aida) with electric success. On returning to Italy, though still serving somewhat as 'cellist, he soon made a name as conductor at Turin, Treviso, Bologna, Genoa and from 1898 at La Scala in Milan. Thence in 1908-15 he went to the Metropolitan in New York, where his genius found fullest expression. During this period he directed the premières of Puccini's Fanciulla del West (1910) and Giordano's Madame Sans-Gêne (1915), as well as the first American renderings of many other works. In 1913 he twice appeared in symphony-concerts. From 1915 he was much engaged in patriotic enterprises, in 1916-18 leading concerts on behalf of welfare-work. In 1919 he led festivals in Turin and Milan and in 1920 became artistic director at La Scala. His repertoire includes about 100 operas and an immense range of concert-music, all from memory. A.

Tosi, Pier Francesco (1647-1727). 17th C. G.

Tosti, Francesco Paolo (Ortona, 1846-1916, Rome). Noted Italian vocal teacher and song-composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, where till 1869 he was a pupil-teacher. From about 1870 he became teacher in the royal family at Rome and custodian of the court-music. In 1875 he began visiting London as singer and composer, removing thither about 1880 to teach in the royal family and from 1894 at the Royal Academy. Knighted in 1908. In 1913 he returned to Rome. Wrote a long list of highly effective Italian and English songs and edited Canti Popolari Abruzzesi. G.

Tottmann, Karl Albert (Zittau, 1837-1917, n. Leipzig). Saxon violinist and writer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1857 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra and in 1868-70 conducting at the Altes Theater. Author of an important Kritisches Repertorium d. gesamten Violin- u. Bratschen-Litteratur, 1873 (3d ed. 1900), Abriss d. Musikgeschichte, 1883, Der Schulgesang u. seine Bedeutung, 1887 (2d ed. 1904), Das Büchlein von d. Geige, 1890 (2d ed. 1904), Die Hausmusik: Das Klavierspiel, 1904, a study of Mozart's Zauberflöte (1908) and many essays in periodicals, besides the melodrama Dornröschen and other vocal music.

Toulmouche, Frédéric Michel (Nantes, 1850-1909, Paris). French composer of the comedies Le Moutier de St. Guignolet, 1885, La Veillée des Noces, 1888, L'Âme de la Patrie, 1892, La Perle du Cantal, 1895, and La St. Valentin, 1895, besides ballets and operettas. From 1894 he directed the Théâtre Menus-Plaisirs.

Tourjée, Eben (Warwick, R. I. 1834-1891, Boston). American teacher, self-taught, in 1851 beginning class-teaching at Fall River and Newport, in 1859 starting a music-school at East Greenwich, R. I., and, after a trip to Europe in 1863 to study the conservatory-system, another at Providence. In 1867 he founded the New England Conservatory in Boston, where his enthusiasm and organizing ability brought rapid expansion. He was a strong advocate of the class-method of instruction. In 1876 he was the first president of the new Music Teachers' Nat. Association. He helped edit the Methodist Hymnal of 1878. Mus.D. of Wesleyan Univ. in 1869. G, A.

Tournemire, Charles Arnould (Bordeaux, 1870). French organist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of d'Indy, since 1898 Pierné's successor as organist at Ste.-Clothilde. Has written the choral work Le Sang de la Sirène, 1904 (City of Paris prize), Psalm 57, a symphony, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, 4 Pièces Symphoniques and other organ-works, piano-sonatas, songs, etc. G.

Tourret, André (Amiens, 1882). Able French violinist, trained at the Amiens Music School and the Paris Conservatory, from 1896 playing in the Colonne Orchestra (from 1902 second concertmaster) and in 1904-13 at the Conservatory Concerts, besides in 1903-08 being second in the Quatuor Capet. In 1913-19 he lived in New York. He is noted as an ensemble-player, making many tours both in Europe and the United States. A.

Tours, Barthélemy (Rotterdam, 1797-1864, do.). Dutch (Belgian) organist, from 1813 at the Nieuwkerk in Rotterdam, and from 1830 at the Grootkerke (St. Laurent), besides joining in the founding of the Erudition Musica (society) and of regular chamber-concerts.

Tours, Berthold (Rotterdam, 1838-1897, London), son of the above. Dutch (Belgian) violinist and editor, pupil of his father, Verhulst and the Brussels and Leipzig Conservatories, from 1861 employed as violinist at the London Opera and in other orchestras, and after 1878 adviser and editor for Novello & Co. Wrote services, about 20 anthems, hymn-tunes, songs and piano-pieces, including arrangements, besides a Violin-Primer. His son Frank E. (b. 1877) is well known as conductor of light opera, writing many operettas and popular songs. G.

Tourte, François (Paris, 1747-1835, do.). The inventor of the modern violin-bow, which he perfected about 1775, perhaps with some advice from Viotti. His model has been standard ever since. G.

Tovey, Donald Francis (Eton, 1875). Gifted English pianist and composer, early developed under Sophie Weisse, Parratt, Higgs and Parry, from about 1900 becoming known in London and later in Berlin and Vienna through concerts of his own works. In 1906-12 he directed the Chelsea Concerts (chamber-music), in 1914 followed Niecks as professor at Edinburgh University and there has developed (from 1916) an orchestra of students and professionals and (from 1917) the Reid Symphony Orchestra. Has written the opera The Bride of Dionysus (published 1913), music for Maeterlinck's Aglavaine et Sélysette, a symphony (1913), a piano-concerto (1903), a suite for wind (1907, Oxford Pageant), a National March for military-band (for the Sultan of Zanzibar), a piano-quintet variations on a theme by Gluck for flute and string-quartet, 2 string-quartets, variations for do., a piano-quartet, 2 piano-trios, trios for violin, horn and piano and for clarinet, bassoon and piano, a Sonata Eroica for violin alone, a sonata for 'cello alone and one for two 'cellos, 'cello-variations, a clarinet-sonata, a few piano-pieces and songs. He has edited the collection Laudate Pueri (16th-century church-music) and wrote over 40 articles for the Encyclopædia Britannica, 11th ed. G, A.

Trabacci, Giovanni Maria. 17th C. G.

Traetta, Filippo (Venice, 1777-1854, Philadelphia), son of the following. Italian singing-teacher, pupil of Fenaroli, Perillo and Piccinni, in 1799, escaping from the political tangle at Naples, came to America, where, after sojourns in Boston and New York, work with a traveling-troupe and some life in Virginia, in 1822 he located in Philadelphia and soon started a music-school (with U. C. Hill). Wrote several choral works, an opera, part-songs, songs and text-books in singing. A.

Traetta, Tommaso Michele Francesco Saverio (Bitonto, 1727-1779, Venice). Eminent Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio S. Maria di Loreto in Naples, from 1751 producing a rapid series of operas throughout Italy, from 1758 in the employ of the Duke of Parma, in 1765-68 head of the Conservatorio della Ospedaleto in Venice, then court-director for Catherine II in Petrograd (following Galuppi), in 1775-76 on an unsuccessful visit to London and finally again in Venice. Though not the equal of Piccinni and Sacchini, he had skill, versatility and dramatic vigor. He has been thought by some to have made steps toward Gluck's reforms. Wrote over 40 operas (from 1751), including Ezio, 1754, Olimpiade, 1758, Ifigenia in Aulide, 1759, Antigono, 1764, L'Isola Disabitata, 1768, etc., the oratorio Salomone, 1768, a Passion, a Stabat Mater, masses, motets, duets, arias and the divertimento for four orchestras The Seasons and the Months, 1770. Memoir by Capruzzi, 1878, and see Bitter's Die Reform d. Oper, 1884. G.

Tramonti, Enrico (Palermo, 1876). Sicilian harpist, pupil of Lebano and Godefroid, from 1894 appearing in Italy, in 1896-1901 teacher at the Geneva Conservatory, with tours throughout Europe (except Russia) and since 1902 soloist in the Chicago Orchestra. A.

Trapp, Max (Berlin, 1887). Prussian pianist, pupil of Dohnányi and Juon, for a time teaching in Berlin. Has written a Sinfonia Giocosa, a string-quartet, 3 piano-quartets, a 'cello-sonata, piano-pieces and songs.

Trasuntino, Vito. 16th C. G.

Trautmann, Gustav (Brieg, 1866). Silesian teacher, trained at Breslau and Frankfurt, in 1888-93 holding the Mozart Scholarship, from 1892 teacher at the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfurt) and leader of the Männerchor and since 1896 music-director at Giessen University, receiving the title of professor in 1906.

Trautner, Friedrich Wilhelm Lorenz (in Upper Franconia, 1855). Bavarian organist and vocal teacher, pupil of Joh. Zahn and J. G. Herzog, since 1882 organist and cantor at Nördlingen, teacher at the Gymnasium and leader of the Evangelischer Chorverein. Has written the choral works Sängers Gebet and Martin Luther, motets, choruses, 2 organ-fugues and many pieces, besides accounts of the organ in the Nördlingen Hauptkirche (1899) and of church-music there (1913).

Trebelli, Zelia [name properly Gilbert] (Paris, 1838-1892, Étretat). Famous French operatic mezzo-soprano, pupil of Wartel, from 1859 brilliantly successful at Madrid, in Germany and from 1862 almost steadily at London, with a tour in America in 1884, retiring in 1889. Her voice was notably clear and her acting full of intensity. From 1863 for a time she was the wife of the tenor Bettini. G.

Treharne, Bryceson (Merthyr Tydfil, 1879). Talented Welsh composer, trained at the Royal College, London (Érard Scholar), in 1900-01 teacher at the University of Wales (Aberystwyth), from 1901 at Adelaide University (Australia) and also in 1908-11 director at the Repertory Theatre there (writing much incidental music for plays), from 1911 living in Paris. Milan, Berlin and Munich, in 1914-16 interned in Germany and then removing to New York. Has written 2 operas, the cantatas A Song of Spring and England, my Mother, over 200 notable songs (mostly at the time of his imprisonment) and some orchestral pieces. A.

Trémisot, Édouard (b. 1874). French composer of the operas Pyrame et Thisbé, 1914, L'Auréole, 1913 (both to original texts), and L'Épave, 1919.

Trento, Vittorio (Venice, 1761-?). Italian composer, pupil of Bertoni, from 1780 known in Venice as ballet-composer and cembalist at the S. Samuele and Fenice Theaters, from about 1805 in charge of the Italian Opera at Amsterdam and from about 1815 in similar work at Lisbon. Wrote nearly 40 facile operas, about 50 ballets, several oratorios, etc. (till 1825). G.

Treu, Daniel Gottlieb [in Italy known as Fedele] (Stuttgart, 1695-1749, Breslau). Württemberger violinist and composer, pupil of Kusser and (as ducal protégé) of Vivaldi, at Venice producing 12 operas with success, in 1725-27 repeating many at Breslau, then conductor at Prague and from 1740 serving Count Schaffgotsch at Hirschberg.

Tréville, Yvonne de (Galveston, Tex. 1881). American (part French) operatic soprano, since 1898 favorably known in light opera and, after study with Mme. Marchesi, from 1902 at the Opéra-Comique and the Opéra in Paris, later at all the leading European capitals, in 1911-12 with the Boston Opera Company and since 1913 touring in the United States.

Trial, Antoine (Avignon, 1736-1795, Paris), brother of the next. French operatic tenor, from 1764 prominent at the Opéra-Comique in Paris, where many works were specially written for him. His wife was a dexterous coloratura singer. Their son Armand Emmanuel (1771-1803) was a fine accompanist and composer of 5 comedies (1791-93). G.

Trial, Jean Claude (Avignon, 1732-1771, Paris), brother of the above. French composer, protégé of Prince Conti, from 1767 associated with P. M. Berton as manager of the Paris Opéra, there producing 5 operas and other music. G.

Triébert, Charles Louis (1810-1867) and Frédéric (1813-1878), brothers. Skillful Parisian oboe- and bassoon-makers, the elder also a fine oboist, playing at the Italiens and the Conservatory Concerts and from 1863 teacher at the Conservatory. G.

Trifonov, Porphyrius Alexeievitch (Petrograd, 1844-1896, n. do.). Russian writer of the New-Russian party, author of lives of Liszt (1884), Schumann (1885), Dargomijsky (1886), Borodin (1888), Rimsky-Korsakov (1891) and Mussorgsky (1893), issued in the Europäischer Bote.

Tritto, Giacomo (Altamura, 1733-1824, Naples). Prolific Italian composer, trained at the Conservatorio della Pietà (Naples), where he was at first pupil-teacher, then Cafaro's assistant as harmony-teacher and from 1800 professor of composition. From 1787 he was conductor at San Carlo (following Cafaro) and after 1816 court-conductor (following Paisiello)

Besides being an effective teacher of such pupils as Spontini, Farinelli, Raimondi and others, wrote over 50 operas (from 1764), cantatas, masses, Requiems, a Te Deum, motets, etc., and text-books in harmony (1821) and counterpoint (1823).

Trneček, Hans (Prague, 1858-1914, do.). Bohemian harpist, trained at the Prague Conservatory and, after in 1882-88 playing at the Schwerin Opera, professor there, with some tours as virtuoso. He was also an expert performer on the Jankó keyboard. Wrote the operas Der Geiger von Cremona, 1886, Amaranth, 1890, Andrea Crini, 1900, and another not given, a symphony, an orchestral suite, concertos for violin and for piano, chamber-music, pieces for harp and for piano, etc., and a text-book in piano-playing (with Hoffmeister).

Troilo, Antonio. 17th C.

Trombetti, Ascanio. 16th C. G.

Tromboncino, Bartolomeo. 15th C. G.

Tromlitz, Johann Georg (Gera, 1726-1805, Leipzig). Saxon flutist and flute-maker at Leipzig, writing 3 concertos for flute and strings, sonatas and pieces, besides textbooks (1786-1800).

Troostwyk, Isidore (Zwolle, 1862-1923, New Haven). Able Dutch violinist, pupil of Joachim, in 1881-83 touring in Germany and Holland with Schott and then teacher at the Amsterdam Conservatory and from 1883 concertmaster of the Orchestral Union there and in 1888-90 of the Concertgebouw-Orkest. In 1890 he came to America, where from 1895 he was professor at the Yale School of Music (New Haven, Conn.), concertmaster of the Symphony Orchestra and conductor of the String Orchestra. A.

Troutbeck, John (Blencowe, 1832-1899, London). English clergyman, from 1865 precentor at Manchester Cathedral and from 1869 canon at Westminster (London). Editor of a Psalter and Chant-Book for Manchester (1868, '71), a Psalter and Hymn-Book for Westminster, a Music Primer for Schools, 1873, Church Choir-Training, 1879, and many fine translations of texts of works by Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Fél. David, Dvořák, Gade, Gluck, Goetz, Gounod, Graun, Hiller, Jensen, Liszt, Mozart, Reincke, Romberg, Saint-Saëns, Schumann, Tchaikovsky, Wagner and Weber. G.

Trowbridge, John Eliot (Newton, Mass. 1845-1912, do.). American organist at Boston and Newton, writing the oratorio Emmanuel, a mass, other church-music, a patriotic cantata, part-songs and songs. A.

Trowell, Arnold (Wellington, New Zealand, 1887). English 'cellist, pupil of his father, Hugo Becker and the Brussels Conservatory, from 1905 touring on the Continent and from 1907 settled in London. He has specialized in the older literature of his instrument. Has written 3 symphonic poems, 3 'cello-concertos, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, many 'cello-suites, études and pieces, besides editing works of the past.

Truette, Everett Ellsworth (Rockland, Mass. 1861). Able American organist, pupil of the New England Conservatory (Boston) and of Haupt, Guilman and Best, from 1885 playing in Boston churches and since 1897 at the Eliot Church in Newton, where he has given many oratorios and cantatas, besides appearing often as recitalist there and elsewhere. Has written an organ-suite, many pieces, anthems and a treatise on Organ Registration, 1919, besides editing several collections of organ-works. A.

Tschirch, Friedrich Wilhelm (Lichtenau, 1818-1892, Gera). Westphalian choral leader and composer, pupil of the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, from 1843 conductor at Liegnitz and in 1852-89 court-director at Gera. Wrote the opera Meister Martin und seine Gesellen, 1861, many fine choral works for men's voices (Eine Nacht auf dem Meer, Der Sängerkampf, Die Harmonie, etc.), a cappella choruses do., the overture Am Niagara and salon-pieces for piano (under the pen-name 'Alexander Czersky'). In 1869 he toured in America as guest of various German singing-societies.

Tschudi, Burkhardt [Burkat Shudi] (1702-1773, London). Swiss harpsichord-maker, in 1718 coming to England as a joiner and probably turning to instrument-making soon after 1730, his earliest extant specimen being dated 1740. John Broadwood entered his employ in 1761, married his daughter in 1769 and, with Tschudi's son, carried forward the business, soon becoming famous for his pianos. Two of Tschudi's harpsichords were bought by Frederick the Great (dated 1766). G (Shudi).

Tua, Teresina [Maria Felicita] (Turin, 1867). Gifted Italian violinist, pupil of Massart, from 1880 becoming notable for her extreme refinement of tone and style. From 1883 she was often in England, in 1887 visited America, in 1889 married Count Franchi-Verney of Rome and retired from public activity till 1895, when she resumed wide tours, keeping her home at Rome. G.

Tucher, Gottlieb, Freiherr von (Nuremberg, 1798-1877, Munich). Bavarian jurist, throughout his life a student of the church-music of the 16-17th centuries, publishing collections of old Italian masters (1827, dedicated to Beethoven) and of early Reformation usage (1848, 2 vols), besides assisting Zahn and Faiszt on a Choralbuch (1854) and writing a treatise on Protestant congregational song (1867).

Tuckerman, Samuel Parkman (Boston, 1819-1890, Newport, R. I.). American organist, pupil of Zeuner, in 1840-49 and '53-56 at St. Paul's in Boston, spending the interval 1849-53 in studies among the English cathedrals, which he continued in 1856-64, then accumulating a notable library. In 1864-66 he followed Hodges at Trinity Church in New York and then lived mostly in Switzerland. In 1853 he was made Mus.D. by the Archbishop of Canterbury. Wrote 4 services, several anthems, chants and hymn-tunes, besides editing collections of tunes and anthems. G, A.

Tuczek, Vincenz Franz (Prague, ?1755–after 1820, Pest). Bohemian conductor and composer, pupil of his father, early employed in Prague theaters as tenor or accompanist, in 1797–99 in court-service at Sagan, from 1801 for a time director at the Leopoldstädter Theater at Vienna and then at Pest. Wrote several sing-spiele, including Lanassa, 1813, 2 oratorios, cantatas, dances for piano, etc. G.

Tudway, Thomas (?1650–1726). 17th C. G.

Tulou, Jean Louis (Paris, 1786–1865, Nantes). Eminent French flutist, trained at the Paris Conservatory (1st prize at fourteen), from 1804 playing at the Italiens, from 1813 at the Opéra (following his teacher, Wunderlich) and from 1829 also professor at the Conservatory, retiring in 1856. In 1816 he made a great hit in the first performances of Lebrun's Rossignol, being hailed as the finest living player. In 1822–26 he withdrew from the Opéra because of a slight caused by his rash political comments. He persisted always in using the old 4-keyed instrument. Wrote 2 Symphonies Concertantes for woodwind, 5 flute-concertos, flute-trios and duets, many solo-fantasias and other pieces. From about 1830 he was engaged successfully in making flutes that received prizes at Expositions from 1834 to 1855. G.

Tuma, Franz (Kosteletz, 1704–1774, Vienna). Eminent Bohemian church-composer and gambist, pupil of Czernohorsky and Fux, in 1741–50 in the employ of the Dowager Empress Elisabeth at Vienna. Wrote 30 notable masses (especially those in E min. and D min.), a Miserere, much other sacred music and some instrumental works. See O. Schmid's Musik u. Weltanschauung, 1901. G.

Tunder, Franz (1614–1667). 17th C. G.

Tunsted, Simon (?–1369). 14th C. G.

Turina, Joaquín (Seville, 1882). Able Spanish composer, pupil of Torres, Tragó, M. Moszkowski and d'Indy, since 1905 active at Madrid. Has written music for Sierra's Margot (1914) and Novidad (1916) and for Moreto's Adultera Penitente (1917), the symphonic poem La Procepción del Rocío, a Sinfonía Sevillana (prize-work), Danzas Fantásticas, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, Escena Andaluza for piano, viola and quartet, a Sonata Romántica for piano and many other piano-pieces, various songs and an Enciclopedia de Música, 2 vols. 1917.

Turini, Francesco (?1589–1656). 17th C. G.

Turini, Gregorio (?1560–1600?). 16th C.

Türk, Daniel Gottlob (n. Chemnitz, 1750–1813, Halle). Noted Saxon organist and teacher, pupil of his father, Homilius and J. A. Hiller, with studies at Leipzig University, playing violin in orchestras there. From 1776 he was cantor at the Ulrichskirche in Halle, teacher at the Gymnasium, from 1779 also music-director at the University and after 1787 organist at the Liebfrauenkirche. In the last two positions he exercised decided influence. Mus.D. of the Univ. in 1808. Author of Von d. wichtigsten Pflichten eines Organisten, 1787, a famous Clavierschule, 1789 (also abbreviated, 1792), Kurze Anweisung zum Generalbass-Spielen, 1791 (2d ed. 1800), and Einleitung zu Temperaturberechnungen, 1806 (a pendant to Kirnberger's Kunst d. reinen Satzes). Wrote an oratorio, an opera, much church-music, symphonies, piano-natas and sonatas, many training-pieces, some organ-works and songs. Among his pupils were Naue and Loewe. Monograph by Gleene-winkel, 1909. G.

Turle, James (Somerton, 1802–1882, London). English organist and able teacher, pupil (as choirboy at Wells) of Perkins, from 1819 at Christ Church, Southwark (London), in 1829–31 at St. James', Bermondsey, also from 1819 assistant to Greatorex at Westminster Abbey and in 1831–75 his successor there. In 1829–56 he taught at the School for the Indigent Blind and in 1840–43 was one of the conductors at the Antient Concerts. Wrote services, anthems, tunes and glees, besides editing collections and The Art of Singing at Sight, 1846 (with E. Taylor). G.

Turner, William (1652–1740). 17th C. G.

Turnhout, Gerard de (?1520–1580), and Jean de. 16th C.

Turpin, Edmund Hart (Nottingham, 1835–1907, London). Able English organist, pupil of C. Noble, Hullah and Pauer, beginning church-playing at thirteen and appearing in recital at the London Exhibition of 1851, from 1857 settled in London, where from 1869 he was at St. George's (Bloomsbury) and from 1886 at St. Bride's (Fleet Street), besides from 1875 being secretary of the College of Organists and from 1892 warden of the Trinity College of Music. From 1880 he edited the Musical Standard and later was on the staff of other papers. Mus.D. in 1889 from the Archbishop of Canterbury. Wrote the oratorios St. John the Baptist and Hezekiah, the cantatas A Song of Faith, 1867, and Jerusalem, 2 masses (one a cappella), a Stabat Mater, services, anthems, many organ-pieces, the symphony The Monastery, overtures, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, piano-pieces and songs besides editing a collection of piano-works and completing organ-collections by Best. G.

Turchaninov, Piotr Ivanovitch (n. Kiev, 1779–1856, Petrograd). Russian priest and church-musician, pupil of Sarti, from about 1815 leader of the cathedral-choir in Petrograd and from 1827 teacher at the court-chapel. He edited a great collection of old ecclesiastical melodies (4 vols.), with skillful adaptation of their form to modern requirements. Autobiography, 1863, and memoirs by Preobrazhensky, 1910, and Liebediev, 1910.

Tutkovsky, Nikolai Apollonovitch (Lipovetz, 1857). Russian teacher, pupil of Puchalsky, in 1888–90 teaching at the Petrograd Conservatory and since 1893 head of his own school at Kiev. Has written a symphony, the orchestral Pensée

Élégiaque and Bacchanale Bohémienne, piano-pieces, songs and a text-book in harmony (1905).

Tye, Christopher (?-1572). 16th C. G.

Tyler, Abram Ray (Brooklyn, 1868). American organist, pupil of Buck, Wm. Mason, Bowman and Rybner, from about 1890 in New York churches, in 1902-11 music-director at Beloit College (Wis.) and since 1916 at Temple Beth-El in Detroit, with many recitals elsewhere. Has written a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, both Protestant and Jewish sacred music and settings of Greek plays. A.

Tyndall, John (n. Carlow, 1820-1893, Haslemere). Distinguished Irish physicist, from 1853 professor at the Royal Institution, London, author of Sound, 1867 (several later eds.), and other acoustical studies. G.

Tyrwhitt. See Berners.

Tzarth, Georg (n. Deutsch-Brod, 1708-1778, Mannheim). Able Bohemian violinist, early intimate with Franz Benda, from 1734 in the band of Crown Prince Friedrich at Rheinsberg and from 1758 in the Mannheim orchestra. Wrote various symphonies, concertos, trios, sonatas, etc., of marked ability.

U

Über, Alexander (Breslau, 1783–1824, Karolath), son of the next. Excellent Silesian 'cellist, long court-director at Karolath, writing a 'cello-concerto, a septet for strings and wind, variations for various ensembles, solo-pieces, etc.

Über, Christian Benjamin (Breslau, 1746–1812, do.). Silesian lawyer and enthusiastic musical amateur, holding regular concerts at his house and writing an operetta, a cantata and other choral works, chamber-music, piano-sonatas, etc.

Über, Christian Friedrich Hermann (Breslau, 1781–1822, Dresden), son of the foregoing. Silesian violinist and conductor, pupil of Türk, from about 1800 musician to Prince Louis Ferdinand of Prussia, in 1807 in the Brunswick orchestra, from 1808 opera-conductor at Kassel, from 1814 the same at Mayence, in 1816 leader of the seconda troupe and from 1817 cantor at the Kreuzschule in Dresden. Wrote 2 operas, music for several plays, a Seven Words, cantatas, a violin-concerto and songs.

Uberti [Hubert], Antonio (Verona, 1697–1783, Berlin). Noted German-Italian artificial operatic soprano, pupil of Porpora (hence called Il Porporino), long a favorite in Germany and from 1741 employed by Frederick the Great. G.

Uccellini, Marco. 17th C.

Udbye, Martin Andreas (Trondhjem, 1820–?). Norwegian organist and composer, at first self-taught, then pupil of Hauptmann and K. F. Becker, from about 1845 at the Hospitalskirke at Trondhjem and later at the Fruekirke. Wrote an opera, 2 singspiele, an operetta, cantatas, military marches, 2 string-quartets, organ- and piano-pieces and songs.

Ugalde, Delphine, née Beaucé (Paris, 1829–1910, do.). Gifted French operatic soprano, pupil of her mother, Moreau-Sainti and Cinti-Damoreau, from 1848 a favorite at all the leading Parisian theaters, especially the Opéra-Comique and the Lyrique, assisting at the premières of many works and, after a period devoted to Offenbach, retiring in 1871 and becoming a prominent teacher. Her second husband was the manager Varcollier. G.

Ugolini, Vincenzo. 17th C.

Uhe, Arthur Emil (Chicago, 1892). Talented American violinist and conductor, pupil of his father, the Chicago Musical College and Thomson, from 1911 touring in Norway, Belgium, Switzerland and England, and since 1914 conductor of the orchestra at Lindsborg, Kan., and teacher at Bethany College there, besides many tours as soloist. Has written a violin-concerto and pieces for violin or piano. A.

Uhl, Edmund (Prague, 1853). Bohemian pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory (Helbig prize), since 1878 teacher at the Freudenberg music-school at Wiesbaden, organist at the Synagogue and critic for the Rheinischer Courier. Has written the opera Jadwiga, a prelude to Die versunkene Glocke, 3 Slavische Intermezzi for orchestra, a Romance for violin and orchestra, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, piano-works, men's choruses and songs.

Uhlig, Theodor (Wurzen, 1822–1853, Dresden). Able Saxon violinist, composer and critic, pupil of Frdr. Schneider, from 1841 playing in the Dresden orchestra. Though at first an active opponent of Wagner, from 1846 he was his devoted friend, especially when Wagner became an exile (letters published in 1888). Author of Die Wahl d. Taktarten, a discussion of the rule against fifths and Druckfehler in d. Symphonie-Partituren Beethovens, besides singspiele, symphonies, chamber-music, etc. (including a violin-concerto). Memoir by Ahrend, 1904. G.

Uji, Franz Maria Bela von (Vienna, 1873). Austrian composer (blind) of the operas Der Bauernfeind, 1897, and François Villon (not yet given), the 'volksoper' Der Müller und sein Kind, 1907, and 6 operettas (1903–14).

Ulrich, Bernhard (Hasselfelde, 1880). Saxon baritone and vocal specialist, trained at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1909), in 1910–11 teaching at the Riemann Conservatory in Danzig and then head of his own school in Berlin and lecturer at the Freie Hochschule and (from 1916) at the Humboldt-Hochschule. Author of a dissertation on voice-training in the 16–17th centuries, (1909), a study of Mayr's Pythagorische Schmidsfünklein [1692] (1907, in I. M. G. Sammelbde.) and many articles on vocal science.

Ulrich, Hugo (Oppeln, 1827–1872, Berlin). Silesian composer, pupil of Kotzoldt, Mosewius, Brosig and Dehn, with some study at Berlin University, without official position except as teacher at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin) in 1859–63, being meagerly supported by editing for publishers. Wrote 3 symphonies (the Triumphale won Belgian Academy prize in 1853), a Fest-Ouverture, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, piano-pieces and songs, besides the opera Bertrand de Born (unfinished) and fine 4-hand arrangements of Beethoven's symphonies. His obvious genius was thwarted by adversity. G.

Umbreit, Karl Gottlieb (n. Arnstadt, 1763–1829, do.). Able Thuringian organist, pupil of Kittel, long located at Sonneborn (n. Gotha). Wrote a large amount of organ-music (chorale-preludes and elaborations, a series of 72 pieces, etc.) and edited 2 Choralbücher (1811, '17). Memoir by his son, 1829 (in Allgem. Kirchenzeitung).

Umlauf, Ignaz (Vienna, 1756–1796, Meidling). Popular Austrian composer, at first a violinist at the Vienna Opera, from 1778 conductor there for German singspiele and from 1789 Salieri's assistant as court-director. Wrote the operas or singspiele Die Bergknappen, 1778, Die Apotheke, 1778, Die pücefärbenen Schuhe, 1779, Die glücklichen Jäger, 1785, Der Ring des Liebe, 1785, Das Irrlicht and Aeneas in Carthago, some ballets, etc. G.

Umlauf, Michael (Vienna, 1781–1842, do.), son of the foregoing. Austrian conductor and composer, long connected with the German Opera in Vienna, replacing Weigl as conductor (in 1814 he appears as conductor in connection with Beethoven's Fidelio). Wrote the operas Der Grenadier, 1810 (short), and Das Wirtshaus in Grenada (not given), several ballets, church-music, a violin-sonata, a 4-hand piano-sonata, etc. G.

Umlauf, Paul (Meissen, 1853). Saxon composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory (Mozart Scholarship in 1879–83), gaining the title of professor in 1918. Has written the operas Evanthia, 1893 (Gotha prize), and Betogene Betrüger, 1899, the dramatic choral work Agandecca, a Mittelhochdeutsches Liederspiel for solo, vocal quartet and piano, various other vocal works and piano-pieces.

Unger, Caroline [in Italy known as Carlotta Ungher] (n. Pest, 1803–1877, n. Florence). Eminent Hungarian operatic soprano, pupil of D. Ronconi, Aloysia Langer and J. M. Vogl, early in contact with both Schubert and Beethoven, from 1821 becoming a leading artist in Vienna (she sang at the première of Beethoven's 9th Symphony in 1824). From about 1825 she had immense success for several years in Italy and in 1833 visited Paris. In 1839 she was for a time engaged to the poet Lenau, but in 1841 married the young scholar François Sabatier at Florence and then gave up public work. She had remarkable dramatic power and a noble, sonorous voice (not perfect in the upper range). Her ability led to the writing of many works especially for her. G.

Unger, Georg (Leipzig, 1837–1887, do.). Saxon operatic tenor, originally studying for the church, but from 1867 variously engaged in opera at Leipzig, Kassel, Zurich, Bremen, Neustrelitz, Brunn, Elberfeld and Mannheim, though not famous till chosen by Wagner for the Bayreuth premières (1876) as Siegfried (rôle prepared under Hey). In 1877–81 he sang at Leipzig. G.

Unger, Gustav Hermann (Kamenz, 1886). Gifted Saxon composer, originally trained in philology at Freiburg, Leipzig and Munich Universities (Ph.D. 1910), in music pupil of Istel, Jos. Haas and Reger, after 1913 settling in Cologne as critic for the Musik- u. Theaterzeitung. Has written music for Hofmannsthal's Tor und Tod and Schnabel's Wiederkehr, a symphony, the orchestral suites Nacht and Jahreszeiten, a choral Japanisches Liederspiel, Goethe's Der Gott und die Bajadere for chorus and orchestra with recitation, a Divertimento for string-quartet, a string-trio, a trio for clarinet, viola and piano, a violin-sonata, variations for two pianos, 3 sets of Miniaturen for piano, Narrenlieder for baritone, many other songs and a cappella choruses.

Unger, Johann Friedrich (Brunswick, 1716–1781, do.). North German jurist who invented one of the first devices for recording music as played from the keyboard (described in 1774, but said to have antedated Hohlfeld's machine of about 1752). G.

Unger, Max (Taura, 1883). Saxon historical student, in music pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1911), in 1906–07 assistant at the Leipzig Stadttheater, in 1907–08 teacher at the Bromberg Conservatory, from 1911 conductor of the Madrigal Choral Union in Leipzig and in 1919–20 editor of the Neue Zeitschrift. Author of a life of Clementi (1914), involving investigations that threw light on many points in Beethoven's life, which he elucidated in two studies in 1911. In 1919 he gathered the materials for a Festschrift in honor of Riemann's 70th birthday, the presentation of which (in manuscript) was prevented by the latter's death.

Untersteiner, Alfred (Rovereto, 1859–1917, as interned alien in Austria). Tyrolese writer, pupil of Pembaur, living at Meran. Wrote Storia della Musica, 1893 (2d ed. 1902), Storia del Violino, 1904, and contributions to the Gazetta Musicale.

Upton, George Putnam (Roxbury, Mass. 1835–1919, Chicago). Eminent American critic and journalist, from 1855 identified with Chicago, where from 1860 he was on the staff of the Tribune, besides reporting all the early important musical events of the city's history. In 1872 he became the first president of the Apollo Club and then and later was a zealous coadjutor of Theodore Thomas. He was a member of many historical associations. Author of Letters of Peregrine Pickle, 1869, Woman in Music, 1880, Standard Operas, 1886, Standard Oratorios, 1887, Standard Cantatas, 1888, Standard Symphonies, 1889, Musical Pastels, 1902, Standard Light Operas, 1902, Standard Concert-Guide, 1908 (revised, 1918), Standard Concert-Reperatory, 1909, Standard Musical Biographies, 1910, In Music-Land, 1913, The Song, 1914, a life of Reményi (1906), the Autobiography of Theodore Thomas, 2 vols. 1905, and his own valuable Musical Memories, 1908. He also translated Nohl's lives of Haydn, Liszt, Beethoven and Wagner. A.

Urbach, Otto (Eisenach, 1871). Saxon pianist, pupil of Müller-Hartung, Stavenhagen, the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfort), Draeseke and Klindworth, winning the Liszt and Mozart scholarships in 1890 and '93, since 1898 teacher at the Dresden Conservatory. He was given the title of royal professor in 1911. Has written the opera Der Müller von Sans-Souci, 1896, the overture Bergfahrt, the string-quartet Horsila, a wind-septet, a violin-suite, piano-pieces and songs.

Urban, Friedrich Julius (Berlin, 1838–1918, do.), brother of the next. Prussian vocal teacher.

trained as choirboy in the Berlin Domchor, pupil also of H. Ries, Hellmann, Grell, Elsler and Mantius, from 1860 a favorite teacher in Berlin. Author of Die Kunst d. Gesangs.

Urban, Heinrich (Berlin, 1837–1901, do.), brother of the above. Able Prussian violinist, theorist and composer, pupil of H. Ries, Laub, Hellmann, etc., from 1881 teacher at the Kullak Academy in Berlin. Wrote the symphony Frühling, the overtures Scheherazade, to Schiller's Fiesco and Zu einem Fastnachtsspiele, the orchestral fantasy Der Rattenfänger von Hameln, a violin-concerto, a Dramatische Szene for violin and orchestra, Romanze do., Barcarole for 'cello and orchestra, violin-pieces and songs.

Urban, Chrétien (n. Aix-la-Chapelle, 1790–1845, Paris). French (-Rhenish) violinist, pupil of Lesueur, from 1816 playing in the opera-orchestra at Paris and soloist both there and at the Conservatory Concerts. He was expert on all bow-instruments and revived the use of the viola d'amore, as well as often using the 5-stringed violon-alto. In Baillot's Quartet he played viola. For years he was also organist at St.-Vincent-de-Paul. Wrote 4 string-quintets, piano-pieces, songs and duets. G.

Urich, Jean (in Trinidad, 1849). French (West Indian) composer, pupil of Damcke, Lenepveu and Gounod, in 1890 the founder of the Édition Paul Dupont at Paris and later proprietor of Le Figaro Musical. Has written the operas L'Orage, 1879, Flora Macdonald, 1885, Le Pilote, 1889, Le Carillon, 1895, Hermann und Dorothea, 1899, La Cigale et la Fourmi, 1912 (as The Cicada), Tsing-Tau, 1914, and Ariane (overture, 1904), a double piano-concerto, chamber-music, etc.

Urio, Francesco Antonio. 17th C. G.

Urlus, Jacques (Amsterdam, 1688). Distinguished Dutch operatic tenor, early taught at Tilburg and Utrecht, later by Hol, Noltenius, and at the Amsterdam Conservatory, making his début in Amsterdam in 1894 and continuing there till 1900, when he was engaged at Leipzig, but with many appearances elsewhere in Europe (Bayreuth from 1911) and in New York (1913–17). He has long been recognized as one of the finest interpreters of Wagner.

Ursillo, Fabio. Italian virtuoso on the arch-lute and other instruments, living at Rome in the middle of the 18th century and writing concerti grossi, trio-sonatas, etc.

Urso, Camilla (Nantes, 1842–1902, New York), Eminent French violinist, pupil of her father and Massart, in 1852–55 appearing as a child in America (partly with Alboni and Sontag) and from 1862 as a mature artist of high rank, becoming widely known on both sides of the ocean, as well as in Australia in 1874 and '94 and in South Africa in 1895. From 1896 she lived in New York. From 1862 she was the wife of Frédéric Luères. A.

Urspruch, Anton (Frankfort, 1850–1907, do.). Important Hessian pianist and composer, pupil of I. Lachner, Wallenstein, Raff and Liszt, from about 1875 teacher at the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfort) and from 1887 at the new Raff Conservatory. Wrote the operas Der Sturm, 1888, and Das Unmögliche von Allem, 1897 (comic, original text), the choral works Die Frühlingsfeier, Ave Maris Stella and Menschenloos, a symphony, a piano-concerto, a piano-quintet, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, pieces for violin and small orchestra, a 4-hand piano-sonata, variations and fugue for two pianos on a theme by Bach, many piano-pieces, including 5 sets of Deutsche Tänze, and songs. Author of Der gregorian. Choral, 1901.

Ursprung, Otto (Günzlhofen, 1879). Bavarian clergyman and musicologist, educated at Munich University (Ph.D. 1911), author of a biography of Jacob van Kerle (1913) and a monograph on Raymund Fuggers Musik-Kammer (ready for publication).

Usandizaga, José Maria (?1890–1919?). Gifted, but short-lived, Spanish composer of the operas Mendi-Mendiyan and La Llama, the zarzuela Las Golondrinas, the choral work Umezurtza, pieces for orchestra and songs.

Utendal, Alexander (?–1581). 16th C. G.

Uttini, Francesco Antonio Bartolommeo (Bologna, 1723–1795, Stockholm). Italian conductor and composer, early a member of the Bologna Accademia Filarmonica and in 1751 its president, from about 1755 court-director at Stockholm (in 1777 superseded by J. G. Naumann at the Opera and replaced by Kraus in 1788). Wrote about 15 operas, 4 of which (1773–77) were the earliest works on Swedish texts, 2 oratorios, 3 symphonies, many trio-sonatas, etc.

Vaccai, Niccolò (Tolentino, 1790-1848, Pesaro). Noted Italian singing-master and composer, pupil of Jannaconi and Paisiello, from 1815 producing a steady stream of operas for various Italian stages, but also making a name as an effective teacher (at Venice from 1818, Trieste from 1821, Vienna in 1823, Paris in 1829-31, London in 1831 and '33-34, etc.). In 1838-44 he succeeded Basili as theory-teacher and director at the Milan Conservatory. Wrote in all 16 operas, including especially Giulietta e Romeo, 1825, of which the third act was often used in place of that in Bellini's Capuletti e Montecchi (1830), with 4 ballets, cantatas, church-music, many duets, arias and songs, besides a favorite vocal method. He joined Coppola, Donizetti, Mercadante and Pacini in preparing a funeral-cantata for Malibran in 1837. Memoir by his son, 1882. G.

Vaccari, Francesco (Modena, ?1773-after 1823, in Portugal). Italian violinist, pupil of Nardini, from about 1786 known in Italy, in 1804-08 in court-service at Lisbon and then touring in Spain, France, Germany and England. G.

Vachon, Pierre (Arles, 1731-1802, Berlin). French violinist, pupil of Chabran, making his début in 1758 at Paris and in 1761 becoming concertmaster to Prince Conti. In 1772 he visited London, from 1784 toured in Germany and in 1786-98 was Franz Benda's successor as court-concertmaster at Berlin. Wrote 2 operas, quartets, trios, violin-sonatas and concertos, etc. G.

Vaqueras, Beltrame. 15th C.

Vaet, Jacob (?-1567). 16th C. G.

Valdighi, Luigi Francesco (Modena, 1837-1899, do.). Italian nobleman, author of many monographs on music in Modena (1879-93), partly collected as Musurgiana, studies in the history of lute- and violin-music, the opera, etc. His collection of old instruments was exhibited at Bologna in 1889 and bequeathed to the Modena Museum. Memoir by Zoccoli, 1899.

Valente, Vincenzo (Corigliano, 1855-1921, Naples). Italian (Calabrian) composer of several operettas (from 1889) and canzonets.

Valentini, Giovanni. 17th C. G.

Valentini, Giuseppe (?Rome, ?1680-?). Italian violinist and composer, about 1710 at Bologna and from about 1735 in court-service at Florence, from 1701 publishing various concerted works of importance (sinfonie, concerti grossi, sonatas, etc.). G.

Valentini, Pier Francesco (?-1654). 17th C. G.

Valentini, Roberto. Italian violinist (and perhaps flutist), probably active at Rome about 1715 and at London about 1730, writing many sonatas and chamber-works for flute or violin. G.

Valentini [Valentino Urbani]. Italian artificial operatic contralto (later tenor), prominent in London in 1707-14. Wrote the opera Il Trionfo d'Amore, 1708. G.

Valentino, Henri Justin Armand Joseph (Lille, 1785-1865, Versailles). Excellent French conductor, beginning at fourteen to lead theater-orchestras and (having married a relative of Persuis in 1813) from 1818 employed at the Opéra, at first as assistant to Kreutzer and from 1820 conjointly with Habeneck as chief, in 1831-36 conductor at the Opéra-Comique, in 1837-41 director of the Concerts Valentino (in rivalry with the Conservatory Concerts) and, after leading concerts at London in 1839, in retirement at Versailles. In 1846 he declined an invitation to return to the Opéra. G.

Valerius, Adrianus (?-1625). 17th C. G.

Valesi [Wallishauser], Johann Evangelist (Unterhattenhofen, 1735-1811, Munich). Gifted Bavarian operatic singer and teacher, pupil of Camerloher, from 1754 employed by the Bishop of Freising, with visits to Amsterdam and Brussels in 1755, and in 1756-98 at the Munich court and Opera, until 1778 with many tours elsewhere. Among his pupils were Adamberger and Weber, besides his son and three daughters.

Valle de Paz. See Del Valle de Paz.

Valleria, Alwina (Baltimore, 1848). Able American operatic soprano, trained at the Royal Academy (London) and by Arditi, in 1871 appearing in London and Petrograd, as well as in Germany and at Milan, from 1873 in much favor in London and in 1879 in New York, gradually extending her repertoire and becoming a favorite in oratorio and concert. In 1879 she married R. H. P. Hutchinson and virtually retired in 1886, living near Rugby. [Her name is said to have been originally Schoening, but in 1867 she registered in London under that of Lohman.] G., A.

Valle-Riestra, José (Lima, 1859). Peruvian composer, largely self-taught, with lessons also from Gédalge, since 1909 professor at the new Academia Nacional de Música at Lima. He has been active in promoting interest in Peruvian melodies and subjects, writing the operas Jollanta, 1901, Atahualpa and Las Rosas de Jamaica (short), a Requiem, the orchestral En Oriente, an Elegia for strings, a cappella choruses and songs. A.

Vallet, Nicolas. 17th C.

Vallotti, Francesco Antonio (Vercelli, 1697-1780, Padua). Eminent Italian organist, composer and theorist, pupil of Calegari, from 1728 maestro at S. Antonio in Padua, where from 1720 he had also been one of the organists. Wrote a large number of masses, motets, responsoria, etc., a Requiem for Tartini (1770), etc., besides projecting a vast work on theory in 4 vols., of which only the first appeared (1779). His treatment of tone-relations is singularly lucid and sound, as well as his effort to unite the old modal and the modern systems of tonality. Summaries of his system were made by his pupil L. A. Sabbatini (1799, 1802) and its principles exemplified by Vogler, also his pupil. Memoir by Sabbatini, 1780. G.

Valverde, Joaquim (d. 1910) and Quirino, father and son. Prolific Spanish composers of zarzuelas (about 60 works each), often in company with Chucca, Torregrosa, Serrão and others. The father's La Gran Via, 1886, had a great vogue.

Van Broekhoven, Johan A. (Beek, 1856). Dutch violist, singing-teacher and composer, in 1889-99 theory-teacher at the College of Music in Cincinnati, where he also led an orchestra and played in Thomas' festival-orchestras, and since 1905 teaching in New York. Has written the operas A Colonial Wedding, 1905 (short) and Camaralzaman, the overture Columbia, a Creole Suite for orchestra, a string-quartet and choruses. Author of works on vocalization (1905, '08), harmony, etc. A.

Van Cleve, John Smith (Maysville, Ky. 1851). American pianist and writer (blind), pupil of Steinbrecher, Lang and Apthorp, from 1872 teaching at Columbus, O., from 1875 at Janesville, Wis., from 1879 at Cincinnati, where he lectured at the College of Music and the Cincinnati Conservatory and was critic for the Commercial and the News-Journal, from 1897 in Chicago, then in Troy, N. Y., and since 1913 in New York. He has given many lecture-recitals. A.

Van den Boorn-Coclet, Henriette (Liège, 1866). Belgian composer, trained at the Liège Conservatory and from about 1890 teacher there. Has written a symphony, the symphonie poem Le Renouveau, an Andante Symphonique, a violin-sonata, a 'cello-serenade, piano-pieces, the cantata Callirrhoe and songs.

Van den Borren, Charles Jean Eugène (n. Brussels, 1874). Eminent Belgian critic and musicologist, at first trained as a lawyer and till 1905 in active practice, in music pupil of Clossons, from about 1900 on the staff of L'Art Moderne, later also lecturing at Brussels University and the Institut des Hautes Études Musicales, and in 1919 becoming librarian at the Brussels Conservatory (following Wotquenne). Author of L'Œuvre Dramatique de César Franck, 1907, an analytical study of early English virginal-music (1912), Les Musiciens Belges en Angleterre à l'Époque de la Renaissance, 1913, Les Origines de la Musique de Clavecin dans les Pays-Bas jusque vers 1630, 1914, Les Débuts de la Musique à Venise, 1914, and various shorter essays.

Van der Meulen, Joseph. Belgian composer of the Flemish operas Liva, 1902, Dolmen, 1905, and De Viesgaard, 1905 (all given at Ghent).

Van der Straeten, Edmond (Oudenarde, 1826-1895, do.). Eminent Belgian music-historian, pupil of Bosselot and Fétis, from 1857 for a time the latter's secretary and from about 1860 employed by the Brussels Library and on several governmental commissions, involving visits to Germany, France and Italy. Author of works on music in Oudenarde (1851, '55, '56), biographical studies of Charles Félix de Hollande (1854), Jacques de Gouy (1863), Janssens (1866), Voltaire as musician (1878), Jacques de St.-Luc (1886), Charles V as musician (1894) and the Willems [luthiers of Ghent] (1896, with Snoeck), a critical analysis of Coussemaker's Chants Populaires (1858), the monumental La Musique au Pays-Bas avant le XIX<sup>e</sup> Siècle, 8 vols. 1867-88, Le Noordsche Balck du Musée Communal d'Ypres, 1868, a report on Wagnerian works as given at Weimar (1871), Le Théâtre Villageois en Flandre, 2 vols. 1874-80, Les Musiciens Belges en Italie, 1875, Turin Musical, 1880, Notes sur quelques Instruments, 1891, Les Billets des Rois en Flandre, 1892, Nos Périodiques Musicaux, 1893, etc. Also wrote the youthful opera Le Proscrit, 1849. Memoir by Meerens, 1877 (in Italian trans.). G.

Van der Straeten, Edmund Sebastian Joseph (Düsseldorf, 1855). Eminent Rhenish 'cellist, pupil of Høke, L. Ebert, Libotton, Prout, Hegyesi and Humperdinck, appearing at Cologne from 1875 and from 1881 in England, where since 1888 he has taught at the Hackney Institute. At Cologne he played in Heckmann's chamber-concerts and about 1890 formed a chamber-music society in London. From 1889 he took up the viola da gamba and later (with his son and Greiffenhagen) gave trio-concerts of old viol-music. In 1911-13 he trained a large chorus for renderings of Humperdinck's music for Vollmüller's Mirakel. Has written the opera The Lily of Kashmir, a piano-quintet, many pieces for 'cello (some with orchestra), for viola da gamba and for violin, a Christmas cantata, choruses and songs. Author of Technics of Violoncello-Playing, 1898 (2d ed. 1905), The Romance of the Fiddle, 1911, History of the Violoncello, the Viol da Gamba, their Precursors and Collateral Instruments, 1915, and text-books in harmony and form.

Van der Stucken, Frank Valentin (Fredericksburg, Tex. 1858). Able American conductor, trained in Europe by Benoît, Wambach, Reinicke, Langer, Grieg and Liszt, in 1881-82 conductor at the Breslau Opera, from 1884 L. Damrosch's successor as leader of the Arion in New York (German tour in 1892), besides often directing orchestral concerts, from 1895 conductor of the Cincinnati Orchestra (till 1907) and also head of the College of Music (till 1903), besides following Thomas in 1906-12 as director of the biennial Festivals (also in 1923). Among special engagements at festivals were those at Indianapolis in 1887, at Paris in 1889 (American program), at Newark in 1891, at New York in 1894, at Antwerp in 1913-14 and at Copenhagen in 1919. He was the first to present orchestral programs wholly of American works

(from about 1885). Since 1910 he has lived much abroad, chiefly at Hanover. Has written the opera Vlasda, 1883, music for The Tempest (1862), a prologue to Heine's William Ratcliffe (1883), the prologue Pax Triumphans (1900), the festival-march Louisiana, a suite, various other orchestral pieces, a waltz for strings, a Festival Hymn for men's voices and orchestra, many a cappella choruses and songs. G, A.

Van Dresser, Marcia (Memphis, Tenn. 1880). American operatic soprano, pupil of Mrs. Robinson-Duff, Hermine Bosetti and Jean de Reszké, from 1898 appearing with the Bostonians, at Daly's Theatre and somewhat at the Metropolitan, New York, and from 1907 taking leading rôles in grand opera at Dresden, Dessau (1908-10) and Frankfort (1911-14), besides guest-appearances elsewhere in Germany and England. In 1914 she returned to America and has since been active in concert as well as with the Chicago Opera Company (1915-17, mostly in Wagner's works) and at the Metropolitan, New York (1917-18). A.

Van Duyze, Florimond (Ghent, 1843-1910, do.). Belgian lawyer, composer and historian, pupil of the Ghent Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1873). Wrote 7 operas for Antwerp and Ghent, the cantata Tassos Dood, 1873, and the symphonic ode De Nacht. Author of the valuable collection Het Oude Nederlandsche Lied, 4 vols. 1903-08, besides earlier studies (1889, '96) and new editions of works by Phalèse and Susato. Memoir (anonymous), c. 1910.

Van Dyck, Ernest Marie Hubert (Antwerp, 1861-1923, do.). Eminent Belgian operatic tenor, pupil mainly of St. Yves-Bax, making his début in concert in 1883 at Paris and at once engaged by Lamoureux for his Wagnerian concerts. In 1887 he had phenomenal success at the French première of Lohengrin and also at Bayreuth in 1888 in Parsifal (prepared under Mottl), leading to his engagement at the Vienna Opera in 1888-98, with many leaves to appear in Germany and England. In 1898-1902 he was at the Metropolitan, New York, and later sang in Wagnerian works in Europe, especially at Paris and Brussels. From 1906 he taught at the Antwerp and Brussels Conservatories. In 1886 he married Augusta Servais. G, A.

Van Hoose, Ellison (Murfreesboro, Tenn. 1868). American operatic tenor, pupil of Perry Averill, Luckstone, Fidèle Koenig, Jean de Reszké, Henry Wood, Navora and Cotogni, in 1897-99 engaged with the Damrosch Opera Company, in 1899-1900 at the Mayence Opera and in 1911-12 with the Chicago Opera Company. Since 1897 he has also been constantly in concert-work, in 1903-05 touring with Melba and in 1906-07 with Sembrich, besides spending 1908-10 in European tours. He sang at the American première of Elgar's Dream of Gerontius (1903). A.

Vanneo, Stefano (1493-?). 16th C.

Vannuccini, Luigi (Fojano, 1828-1911, Montecatini). Noted Italian pianist and vocal teacher, pupil of his father and the Florence Conservatory, from 1848 for some years opera-conductor at Florence and elsewhere, but chiefly known as teacher at Florence. Wrote church-music, songs and piano-pieces.

Van Rooy, Antonius [Anton] Maria Josephus (Rotterdam, 1870). Eminent Dutch operatic baritone, pupil of J. Stockhausen, appearing at Bayreuth in 1897, followed by further success at Berlin and London, where and in New York he was almost regularly engaged till 1908, when he went to the Frankfort Opera. Besides being most impressive as actor and singer in opera he has also a wide repertory in oratorio and songs. G.

Van Vechten, Carl (Cedar Rapids, Ia. 1880). American writer and critic, graduate of the University of Chicago, in 1906-13 on the staff of the New York Times and in 1913-14 on that of the Press, besides editing program-notes for the Symphony Society in 1910-11 and supplying biographical material for the Century Dictionary (revised ed. 1911). He is a champion of modern tendencies in musical art. Author of Music after the Great War, 1915, Music and Bad Manners, 1916, Interpreters and Interpretations, 1917, The Merry-Go-Round, 1918, The Music of Spain, 1919, etc. He was one of the first Americans to exploit Stravinsky, Ornstein and Satie, and has given much attention to the subject of stage-decoration. His wife is the Russian actress Fania Marinov. A.

Van Vliet, Cornelius (Rotterdam, 1886). Able Dutch 'cellist, trained by O. Eberle and Mossel, early playing under Mengelberg in the Concertgebouw-Orkest at Amsterdam, from 1903, after engagements at Leipzig and Prague and a tour through Bohemia, Poland and Russia, soloist with the Helsingfors Orchestra and teacher at the Conservatory there, in 1905-08 with the Kaim Orchestra at Munich and from then at the Vienna Opera. Moving to America in 1911, he concertized for a year, in 1912-19 was with the Minneapolis Orchestra and Trio and then settled in New York, where he is a member of the New York Trio. A.

Van Westerhout, Niccolò (Mola di Bari, 1862-1898, Naples). Gifted Dutch-Italian composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory and teacher there in 1897-98. Wrote the operas Tilde, Cimbelino, 1892, Fortunio, 1895, Dona Flor, 1896 (short), and Colomba, 2 symphonies, other orchestral pieces, a violin-concerto and sonata, fine piano-pieces and songs.

Van Zandt, Marie (New York, ?1860-1920 Cannes). Noted American operatic soprano, pupil of Lamperti, making her début at Turin in 1879 and in 1880-85 engaged at the Opéra-Comique in Paris (where in 1884 she suffered a temporary loss of voice), returning there in 1896-97. From 1879 she was also frequently heard in London, as well as elsewhere in Europe and in America (from 1891). In 1898 she married Professor Teherinov of Moscow and left the stage. Delibes wrote Lakmé for her in 1883 and she was a favorite in Mignon. See Curzon, Croquis d'Artistes, 1898. G (Zandt), A.

Van Zanten, Cornelia (Dordrecht, 1855). Able Dutch operatic soprano and vocal teacher, pupil of Geul, Karl Schneider and Lamperti, from about 1875 favorably known in Italy and Germany, in 1886-87 with the National Opera Company under Thomas in America (assisting at the American première of Rubinstein's Nero, 1887), then at Hamburg, with Wagnerian performances also at Petrograd and Moscow, and later at the Dutch Opera in Amsterdam, besides in 1895-1903 teaching at the Conservatory. Since 1903 she has taught at Berlin. Has written songs in Dutch and German and (with Poser) Leitfaden zum Kunstgesang, 1908.

Varlamov, Alexander Igorovitch (Moscow, 1801-1848, Petrograd). Russian church-musician and singing-teacher, trained in the Imperial Choir and by Bortniansky, from 1819 choirmaster for the Russian Embassy at The Hague, from 1823 till 1845 teacher at Moscow, but in 1829-31 instructor in the Imperial Choir at Petrograd, where after 1845 he taught privately. Wrote about 225 highly effective songs, some of which have almost a folk-song vogue. Author of the first Russian vocal method (1840). See Russ. Mus. Gaz. 1901. G.

Varney, Louis (Paris, 1844-1908, Cauterets), son of the following. French composer of about 40 operettas and other light stage-works (from 1876), including Les Forains, 1894, Le Pompier de Service, 1897, Mlle. George, 1900, etc. G.

Varney, Pierre Joseph Alphonse (Paris, 1811-1879, do.). French theater-conductor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1825 employed at Ghent, The Hague, Rouen, Paris and Bordeaux (1865-78). Wrote 7 short operettas, the oratorio Atala and set Dumas' Mourir pour la Patrie in 1848. G.

Vasconcellos, Joaquim de (Oporto, 1849). Able Portuguese lexicographer, since 1883 professor of German at the Oporto Lyceum and also director of the Industrial Museum. Author of the biographical dictionary Os Musicos Portuguezas, 1870, a facsimile (1874-76, extended 1905) of the catalogue of the Lisbon Library (destroyed in 1755), monographs on Luisa Todt (1873) and on the catalogue of João IV (1873) and articles for Pougin's extension of Fétis' Biographie (1878-80).

Vasquez y Gomez, Marino (Granada, 1831-1894, Madrid). Spanish violinist and composer, pupil of Miro, from 1856 concertmaster at the Zarzuela Theater in Madrid and later at the Royal Opera. Wrote many popular zarzuelas and also church-music, including a Requiem annually sung at Granada in memory of the Spanish kings.

Vasseur, Félix Augustin Joseph Léon (Bapaume, 1844-1917, Paris). French organist and light-opera composer, trained at the École Niedermeyer, from 1870 organist at Versailles Cathedral and later conductor at the Folies-Bergère and the Concerts de Paris. Wrote over 30 operettas and other stage-works (from 1872), including La Timbale d'Argent, 1872, La Famille Vénus, 1891, Aspasie, etc., collections of masses, motets, etc., and harmonium-transcriptions.

Vassilenko, Sergei Nikoforovitch (Moscow, 1872). Russian composer, pupil of the Moscow Conservatory (medal in 1901), writing the cantata The Invisible City of Kitezh, 1901 (revised as an opera, 1903), 2 symphonies, the symphonic poems Wyr, Le Jardin de la Mort, and Hyrcus Nocturnus, the suite Au Soleil, incidental music to Nebukadnezar and Daphnis, Poème Épique, Valse Fantastique, choruses and songs.

Vatielli, Francesco (Pesaro, 1877). Italian music-historian, pupil of the Pesaro Liceo, from 1905 lecturer on history and from 1906 librarian at the Bologna Liceo Musicale. Author of a life of Zaccani and a study of his Canonici (both 1904), a study of Doni's Lyra Barberina (1909), many shorter works (Rossini a Bologna, 1911, an account of the library of the Bologna Liceo, 1916, the satire La Civiltà Musicale di Moda, 1913, etc.), studies of the times of Corelli (1916), of music in Bologna (1922), of musical material and form (1922), etc., and articles in the Nuova Musica and the Cronaca Musicale, besides collections of 17th-century arias and works by Bolognese masters. In 1905 he supplied intermezzi and other numbers for Poliziano's Favola d'Orfeo.

Vaucorbeil, Auguste Emmanuel (Rouen, 1821-1884, Paris), name originally Veaucorbeille. French composer and manager, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1842 teaching in Paris, writing the operas La Bataille d'Amour, 1863, and Mahomet, the scena La Mort de Diane, 1870 (with chorus), 2 string-quartets, some violin-sonatas, a viola-sonata, 2 piano-suites and songs. From 1872 he was commissioner for the subsidized theaters in Paris, in 1878 gained the title of Inspecteur des Beaux-Arts and from 1879 was director of the Opéra, but with only moderate success. G.

Vavrinecz, Mauritius (Czegled, 1858). Hungarian church-musician and composer, pupil of the Pest Conservatory and of R. Volkmann, since 1886 choirmaster at the Pest Cathedral (Matthiaskirche) and also critic. Has written the operas Ratcliff, 1895, and Rosamunde, 1895, the oratorio Christus, a Stabat Mater, the cantata Der Totensee, 5 masses, a Requiem, a symphony, an overture for Byron's Bride of Abydos, an orchestral Dithyrambe, etc.

Vecchi, Orazio (?1550-1605). 16th C. G.

Vecchi, Orfeo (?1540-1604?). 16th C.

Vecsey, Franz von (Pest, 1893). Highly gifted Hungarian violinist, pupil of his father and Jenő Hubay, making a sensational début at Berlin when but ten and then beginning to tour Europe and America with extraordinary success. His later development places him among the best artists of the time.

Veit, Wenzel Heinrich (n. Leitmeritz, 1806-1864, do.). Bohemian civil official and excellent composer, self-taught, writing a symphony, an overture, 5 string-quintets, 6 string-quartets, a piano-trio, a festival-mass, men's part-songs and many songs. Memoirs by John, 1903, Ankert, 1904, and Lachmann, 1906.

Velluti, Giovanni Battista (n. Ancona, 1781-1861, S. Bursan). Italian artificial operatic soprano, the last of the series, appearing from 1800 in small places and from 1805 with rapid success at Rome and then throughout Italy. In 1812 he achieved a triumph at Vienna and in 1825-26 and '29 was in London. G.

Venezia, Franco da (Venice, 1876). Italian pianist and composer, pupil of Frugatta, Galli, Ferroni, Grieg, Rheinberger, Reinecke and others, from 1904 teaching at the Turin Liceo and from 1907 in a private school there. Has written the opera Il Domino Azzurro, 1904 (Sonzogno prize), the symphonic poem La Tempesta, a Suite Veneziana for orchestra, intermezzi for Gozzi's Amore della Tre Melarance, orchestral variations (Sonzogno prize, 1908), a piano-concerto, 2 concert-allegros for piano and orchestra, a fantasia for two pianos do., sonatas for violin and for 'cello and many piano-pieces. He is also active as a writer.

Venosa. See Gesualdo.

Venth, Carl (Cologne, 1860). Able Rhenish violinist and conductor, trained at the Cologne and Brussels Conservatories (last pupil of Wieniawski), from 1877 concertmaster successively for the Utrecht orchestra, at the Flemish Opera in Brussels and at the Opéra-Comique in Paris. In 1880 he removed to New York, where in 1884 he was concertmaster at the Metropolitan, in 1888-1906 was head of his own school in Brooklyn and in 1889-1902 conducted the Brooklyn Symphony Orchestra and two men's choruses. In 1908 he went to Texas, till 1911 teaching at Sherman, in 1911-13 conducting the Dallas orchestra and then becoming conductor of the Fort Worth orchestra, dean of fine arts at the Texas Woman's College and church-organist. During the war he trained bands at two camps. Has written the operas The Monk of Iona and Fair Betty (comic), the cantatas The Resurrection, Myth-Voices, From Olden Times and The Quest of Beauty, several orchestral pieces, 2 violin-concertos, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 3 violin-sonatas, many violin-pieces, the piano-suite Frithjof and Ingeborg, piano-pieces, many songs, etc. A.

Vento, Ivo de (?1540-1575). 16th C. G.

Vento, Mattia (Naples, 1736-1776, London). Italian composer, active in England about 1763. Wrote several operas for Naples and London, many trios, some clavier-sonatas, canzonets, etc. G.

Venturelli, Vincenzo (Mantua, 1851-1895, do.). Italian composer of the operas Il Conte di Lara, 1876, and Maria di Xerès (not given) and songs.

Venturi, Stefano. 16th C. G.

Venturini, Francesco (?-1745, Hanover). Italian violinist, from 1698 in the court-band at Hanover, in 1713 succeeding J. B. Farinelli as conductor and later becoming court-director.

Venzano, Luigi (Genoa, ?1814-1878, do.). Italian 'cellist, long connected with the Opera at Genoa and the Conservatory. Wrote the opera Benvenuto Cellini, 1870?, an operetta, a ballet, piano-pieces and many songs (one often used in Rossini's Barbiere).

Venzl, Josef (Munich, 1842-1916, do.). Bavarian violinist and composer, from 1858 in the court-orchestra at Munich, writing a violin-concerto, many concert-pieces for violin (solo or with piano), violin-methods and studies, etc., besides editing sonatas by Viotti and Cam-pagnoli. He advocated changing the method of writing viola-parts.

Veracini, Antonio. 17th C. G.

Veracini, Francesco Maria (Florence, 1685-1750, n. Pisa), nephew and pupil of the above. Eminent Italian violinist, from 1714, after successful tours, active at Venice (where his playing greatly impressed Tartini), apparently visiting London in 1714 and afterward, from 1717 was chamber-musician at Dresden, from 1723 was long in the service of Count Kinsky at Prague, visited England again about 1735 and 1745, and lived finally in Italy. He ranked among the best players of the time and his compositions show remarkable originality and force. Wrote 24 violin-sonatas, many quintet-concerti, etc., sonatas for violin and flute, 3 operas, 2 cantatas, etc. G.

Verbonnet, Jean. See Ghiselin.

Verbruggen, Henri (Brussels, 1874). Eminent Belgian violinist, trained at the Brussels Conservatory, from 1893 playing in the new Scottish Orchestra at Glasgow, in 1903 becoming concertmaster and assistant-conductor, besides following Cowen as conductor of the Choral Union in 1911. During this period he also served at times as player in the Lamoureux Orchestra at Paris (1894-95), as concertmaster at summer-concerts at Llandudno (1895-97) and also at Colwyn (1898-1902) and as concertmaster for the Queen's Hall concerts in London (1902-05). In 1914 he arranged a Beethoven festival in London, with another in 1915 for works by Bach, Beethoven and Brahms. In 1903 he formed a fine Quartet (with Cullen, Nichols and Messeas). In 1915 he moved to Sydney (N. S. W.), to take charge of the State Conservatory. His Quartet accompanied him to Australia and assisted at the Conservatory and in annual series of chamber-concerts. In 1918 he visited America and in 1923 succeeded Oberhoffer as conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Verdelot, Philippe. 16th C. G.

Verdi, Giuseppe (n. Busseto, [Oct. 10] 1813-1901 [Jan. 27], Milan). Distinguished Italian composer, one of the chief opera-writers of modern times. Of very humble origin, his precocious musical gifts had at first small opportunity, but he gained useful instruction from the village-organist (whom he succeeded when but ten) and from Provesi, organist at Busseto and director of the choral society there. As protégé of Barezzi and other friends at Busseto, in 1831 he went to Milan, where he was not accepted as a student at the Conservatory, but had lessons from Lavigna, the cembalist at La Scala. Since 1826 he had been diligently at work in various kinds of composition and now undertook orchestral writing on a large scale. In 1833 Provesi died and Verdi returned to Busseto as director of the choral society, in 1836 marrying the daughter of his patron Barezzi and pushing on in composition to a full opera. In 1838 he moved to Milan, where this opera (Oberto) was given with success in 1839, followed by further commissions from Merelli, the director at La Scala. The first work undertaken was a failure and at the same time he lost both his wife and his two children, so that for a time he was in despair. Merelli, however, finally induced him to resume composition and in 1842 his Nabucco opened the long series of his striking triumphs. In I Lombardi and Ernani (1843-44) he not only further demonstrated his dramatic genius, but struck the note of national patriotism that at once endeared him to the Italian public and roused the opposition of the Austrian officials. Now everywhere in demand, he produced a series of clever, but not significant works, completing what constitutes his first period.

In 1851-53 his second period opened with the brilliant Rigoletto, Il Trovatore and La Traviata, all of which soon achieved international success, placing him at the head of Italian dramatic writers. But, again, these were followed by others, most of which do not rise to the same height of inspiration, though they contain signs of a constant advance in technical mastery, especially in the treatment of the orchestra.

His third period was marked by but few works, but all of superlative value. They include Aida, the Manzoni Requiem, Otello and Falstaff, the last written when he was nearly eighty. His creative activity thus continued more than a half-century and, as his final efforts were by far his strongest, his exhibition of sustained advance stands unsurpassed in music-history. It is true that his last two operas rest on texts by Boito much superior to most librettos. But the entire musical texture has a brilliant energy all his own. This vigor is often attributed to his coming under Wagner's influence, though none of Wagner's theories, methods or idioms was directly adopted by Verdi, except the general emphasis on the orchestra as a chief vehicle of expression.

His personality was notably independent, modest and wholesome. He hated artificiality and hypocrisy. To the ardor of his race he united decided intellectual acumen and studiousness, with large resources of imagination and of constructive judgment. His abundant flow of melody was vivified by fresh devices of rhythm and harmony and energized by a steadily growing command of counterpoint and instrumentation. Through all his best work ran a virility and verve that are often thrilling and not seldom a nobility of conception that challenges admiration. It is not strange that as both man and artist he has been idolized in Italy and that his fame has become world-wide.

The list of his works comprises

Operas—Oberto, Conte di S. Bonifacio, 1839, Un Giorno di Regno, 1840 (also as Il Finto Stanislao), Nabuccodonosor, 1842, I Lombardi alla Prima Crociata, 1843 (later rearranged as Jerusalem, 1847, and also as Giselda, 1851), Ernani, 1844, I Due Foscari, 1844, Giovanna d'Arco, 1845, Alzira, 1845, Attila, 1846, Macbeth, 1847, I Masnadieri, 1847, Il Corsaro, 1848, La Battaglia di Legnano, 1849 (later as L'Assedio d'Arlem), Luisa Miller, 1849, Stiffelio, 1850 (later as Guglielmo Wellingrode and, with new text, as Aroldo, 1857), Rigoletto, 1851 (later also as Viscardello, Clara di Pert and Lionello), Il Trovatore, 1853, La Traviata, 1853 (later also as Violetta), Les Vêpres Siciliennes, 1855 (later also as Giovanna di Guzman), Simone Boccanegra, 1857, Un Ballo in Maschera, 1859, La Forza del Destino, 1862, Don Carlos, 1867, Aida, 1871, Otello, 1887, Falstaff, 1893.

Inno delle Nazioni, 1862 (London Exhibition).

Church-music—Messa da Requiem, 1874 (in memory of the poet Alessandro Manzoni); Pater Noster, 1880; Ave Maria, 1880; 4 Pezzi Sacri (Ave Maria, Stabat Mater, Laudi alla Vergine Maria, De Deum, the first and third a cappella), 1898; several other works (early), including a mass, a Stabat Mater, 3 Tantum ergos, etc.).

Other choral works—choruses for Manzoni's tragedies; Il Cinque Maggio (cantata).
For orchestra or band—2 symphonies; several marches. 2 sets of 6 Romanze; other songs; duets; terzets; arias; etc.

In 1849 he took for his second wife the soprano Giuseppina Strepponi. He bought the villa S. Agata, near Busseto, for his summer residence, but usually spent the winters at Genoa. When his second wife died (1897) he founded in her memory a Casa di Riposo Pei Musicisti at Milan (opened in 1899), which he richly endowed. Here there is a Verdi Museum and a large concert-hall, and here he was buried.

Verdi naturally received a great number of honors and decorations, including an offer from the king of Italy of the title Marchese di Busseto, which he was too good a democrat to accept.

Memoirs by Pougin, 1881, Hanslick, 1885, Prince Valori, 1894, Parodi, 1895, Crowest, 1897, Monaldi, 1899, Perinello, 1899, Cavarretta, 1899, Basso, 1901, Checchi, 1901, Boni, 1901 (2d ed. 1913), Colonna, 1902, Sorge, 1904, Voss, 1904, Garibaldi, 1904, Visetti, 1905, Bragnuolo and Bettazzi, 1905, d'Angeli, 1910 (2d ed. 1912), Bellaigue, 1911, Lottici, 1913, Righetti, 1913, Mackenzie, 1913, Chop, 1913, Roncaglia, 1914, and Neisser, 1914, besides many critiques and articles. One issue of the Rivista Musicale in 1901 was entirely given to articles about him and his works. G.

Verdonck, Cornelius (1564-1625). 16th C. G.

Vere, Clementine Duchêne de. French operatic soprano (father Belgian, mother English), born at Paris, trained there and by Mme. Albertini-Baucardé, appearing in Florence when sixteen and soon becoming known in Italy, France, Spain, Mexico, Germany, England and Australia as competent both in opera and concert. In 1892 she married the conductor Sapio in New York and in 1897 sang at the Metropolitan. Later she was with the Moody-Manners Opera Company in New England. Since 1914 she has taught in New York. A.

Verhey, Theodoor H. H. (Rotterdam, 1848). Dutch composer, pupil of the Hague Conservatory and of Bargiel, since about 1870 teaching at Rotterdam. Has written the operas Eine Johannisfeier auf Amrom, 1880, Imilda, 1885, and König Arpad, 1888, the choral ballad Der Ritter von den Kränzen, a Requiem, a Te Deum, concertos for violin, for flute (2) and for clarinet, a quintet for piano and wood-wind, a violin-sonata, etc.

Verhulst, Johannes [Jean] Josephus Herman (The Hague, 1816–1891, do.). Eminent Dutch conductor and composer, pupil of the Hague Conservatory and of Jos. Klein and Mendelssohn, in 1838–42 conductor of the Euterpe in Leipzig and from 1842 holding the position of court-director at The Hague, but from 1848 also serving as conductor for the Maatschappij there, at Rotterdam and at Amsterdam. At Amsterdam he also led the Felix Meritis and the Cecilia, as well as the Diligentia at The Hague (from 1860). For over thirty years from 1850 he was the chief director of many festivals in Holland, retiring in 1886. Wrote a symphony, 3 overtures, the intermezzo Gruss aus der Ferne, 3 string-quartets, Clemens est Dominus for double chorus and orchestra, 4 masses, Psalms 84 and 145, a Requiem, a Te Deum, 7 festival cantatas and many effective choruses. He was intimate with Schumann and the latter dedicated his Ouverture, Scherzo und Finale (op. 52) to him. G.

Vernier, Jean Aimé (Paris, 1769–?). French harpist, from 1795 employed at the Opéra-Comique in Paris and in 1813–38 at the Opéra. Wrote a quartet for harp, piano, oboe and horn, trios for harp, flute and 'cello, sonatas for harp solo and for harp and violin, harp-duets, many pieces for harp and the opera La Jolie Gouvernante, 1798.

Véron, Louis Désiré (Paris, 1798–1867, do.). French journalist, in 1831–36 director of the Paris Opéra, under whose management Meyerbeer's Robert (1831), Cherubini's Ali Baba (1833) and Halévy's Juive (1835) were produced. G.

Verstovsky, Alexiey Nikolaievitch (n. Tambov, 1799–1862, Moscow). Popular Russian composer, pupil of Field, Steibelt and others at Petrograd, beginning to produce light stage-works in 1819 and becoming in 1824 theater-inspector at Moscow and in 1842 general manager. Though counted Glinka's chief predecessor, he remained more of a talented amateur than a constructive artist. Wrote the operas Pan Tvardovsky, 1828, Vadim, 1832, Askold's Grave, 1835 (still given), Homesickness, 1835, The Boundary Vale, 1841, and Gromoboi, 1858, over 20 operettas and vaudevilles, many scenes and music for plays, etc. Memoir by Findeisen, 1896–97 (in Theater Year-Book), and see Russ. Mus. Gaz. 1899. G.

Vesque von Püttlingen, Johann (Opole, 1803–1883, Vienna), of Belgian ancestry. Polish lawyer, pianist and composer, pupil of Moschles and Sechter, under the pen-name of 'J. Hoven' writing the operas Turandot, 1838, Johanna d'Arc, 1840, Liebeszauber, 1845, Ein Abenteuer Karls II, 1850, Der lustige Rath, 1852, and Lips Tellian, 1854. Author of Das musikal. Autorrecht, 1865. He had a wide acquaintance with prominent musicians, including Mendelssohn, Schumann, Berlioz and Liszt. Memoirs (anonymous), 1887, and by Hanslick, 1888 (in Musikal. Skizzenbuch). G.

Vessella, Alessandro (Piedemonte d'Alife, 1860). Italian bandmaster, in 1885 Pezzini's successor as head of the Banda Comunale in Rome and influential in improving band-music throughout Italy, besides teaching at the Liceo Musicale. Author of a manual of band-instrumentation. He retired in 1921.

Vestris, Lucia Elizabeth, née Bartolozzi (London, 1797–1856, do.), of Italian descent. Popular English stage-contralto, pupil of Corri, from 1815 a favorite in London and Paris, with several visits to Dublin. She had a fine voice and charming presence, but lacked the finish of a great artist, though appearing in many works by Rossini, at the première of Weber's Oberon, etc. For a short time from 1813 she was the wife of the dancer Vestris and from 1838 of Charles Mathews, with whom she was associated as manager of the Olympic, Covent Garden and the Lyceum. G.

Vetter, Andreas Nikolaus (1666–1710). 17th C.

Viadana, Ludovico da [Grossi] (1564–1645). 16th C. G.

Vianesi, Auguste Charles Léonard François (Leghorn, 1837–1908, New York). Able Italian conductor, trained in Italy and at Paris, from 1859 variously employed in directing Italian operas at London, New York, Petrograd, Moscow, Vienna, Madrid and many other places, including twelve years at Covent Garden (London). In 1883–84 and '91–92 he was at the Metropolitan, New York, and from 1887 succeeded Altès at the Paris Opéra. G.

Viardot-Garcia, Michelle Ferdinande Pauline (Paris, 1821–1910, do.). Eminent French operatic mezzo-soprano, daughter of Manuel del Popolo Garcia, pupil of her parents, Vega, Reicha, Meysenberg and Liszt. She first appeared in concert in 1837 at Brussels and in opera in 1839 at London, then being engaged for the Italiens in Paris by the manager Viardot (1800–1883), whom she soon married and with whom she later toured throughout Europe, everywhere securing recognition as an artist of the highest rank. She sang at the premières of Meyerbeer's Prophète (1849) and of Gounod's Sapho (1851), as well as at the revivals of Gluck's Orphée and Alceste (1859, '61). In 1863 she retired from the stage, living first at Baden-

Baden and after 1871 at Paris or Bourgival. For some years she taught at the Paris Conservatory, forming many noted pupils. Wrote the short operas Le Dernier Sorcier, 1869, L'Ogre, Cendrillon and Trop de Femmes (all given at her private theater at Baden-Baden), about 60 songs, some violin-pieces and a vocal method. She made a notable collection of autograph-scores. To her Schumann dedicated his Liederkreis (op. 24). Of her four children, Louise Pauline Marie (1841-1918), wife of the Consul-General Hérítte, was known as teacher at Petrograd, Frankfurt, Berlin and Heidelberg and as composer of the opera Lindora, 1879, and the choral work Le Feu du Ciel, cantatas, 2 piano-quartets, etc., and Paul (b. 1857) is both violinist and conductor, writing a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, various pieces for violin, for 'cello, and for other instruments and also a Histoire de la Musique, 1905, a report on Scandinavian music (1908) and Souvenirs d'un Artiste, 1910. Two other daughters became fine concert-singers. Memoirs by La Mara, 1882, and Torrigi, with letters edited by Kaminski (1907). See also letters to Rietz in Mus. Quarterly, 1915. G.

Vicentino, Nicola (1511-1572). 16th C. G.

Victoria [Vittoria], Luis Tomas de (?1540-1613?). 16th C. G.

Vidal, Louis Antoine (Rouen, 1820-1891, Paris). French 'cellist, pupil of Franchomme, author of the valuable Les Instruments d'Archet, 3 vols. 1876-78, and La Lutherie et les Luthiers, 1889. G.

Vidal, Paul Antonin (Toulouse, 1863). French conductor and composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1883), soon beginning varied forms of dramatic work, for a time conductor of the Sunday concerts at the Opéra, in 1896 becoming concertmaster and in 1906 conductor. Has written the operas Guernica, 1895, La Reine Fiammette, 1898, La Burgonde, 1898, and Ramses, 1908, the ballet La Maladetta, 1893, 3 pantomimes, the fantasy Eros, 1892, the mystery La Dévotion à St.-André, 1894, the operetta Le Mariage d'Yvette, 1893, music for two plays, the scena Le Gladiateur, choral works, the orchestral suite Les Mystères d'Eleusis, etc. G., A.

Vieira, Ernesto. Author of Diccionario Biographico de Musicos Portuguezes, 2 vols. 1900.

Vierdank, Johann. 17th C.

Vierling, Georg (Frankenthal, 1820-1901, Wiesbaden). Rhenish organist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father, Neeb, Rinck and Marx, from 1847 was at the Oberkirche in Frankfurt-on-Oder and conductor of the Singakademie, in 1852-53 leader of the Mayence Liedertafel and then in Berlin, where he founded the Bach-Verein, which he conducted for six years, besides directing concerts at Potsdam and also at Frankfurt-on-Oder. In 1882 he gained the title of royal professor and soon after gave up his public positions. Wrote the choral works Hero und Leander, Zur Weinlese, Der Raub der Sabiner-Aninen, Iarichs Tod and Konstantin, Psalm 100,

2 Zechkantaten, many choruses and part-songs, a symphony, the overtures Im Frühling, The Tempest, Maria Stuart, Die Hermannsschlacht, and Die Heze, a Capriccio for piano and orchestra, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, various Phantasiestücke for violin or 'cello with orchestra or piano, piano- and organ-pieces, etc. G.

Vierling, Johann Gottfried (n. Meiningen, 1750-1813, Schmalkalden). Important Saxon organist, pupil of Tischer, K. P. E. Bach and Kirnberger, from about 1785 Tischer's successor as town- and castle-organist at Schmalkalden. Wrote several sets of organ-pieces, 2 cantata-cycles for the church-year, a piano-quartet, 2 piano-trios, 6 piano-sonatas, a Choralbuch, 1789, and text-books.

Vierne, Louis Victor Jules (Poitiers, 1870). Eminent French organist, trained by Franck and Widor at the Paris Conservatory, since 1900 organist at Notre-Dame and also teacher at the Schola Cantorum. He has made extensive concert-tours throughout Europe and in England. Has written a symphony, 4 organ-symphonies, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, pieces for viola, for oboe and for harp, many organ-pieces, a piano-suite (partly also arranged for orchestra), piano-preludes, nocturnes and other piano-pieces, a Messe Solennelle and other choir-music, the choral legend Praxinoe, 3 poems for voice and orchestra, many songs, etc. A.

Vietinghoff-Scheel, Boris Alexandrovitch (1829-1901, Petrograd). Russian composer, self-taught except for piano-lessons from his mother. Wrote the operas Mazeppa, 1859, Judith, 1884 (in concert), The Demon, 1885, Tamara, 1886, and Juan de Tenorio, 1888, besides the unfinished Maria Stuart and Heliodora, the ballets The Tulip of Harlem and Zodushka, the orchestral sketches Don Quichotte and Les Djinns, etc.

Vieuxtemps, Henri (Verviers, 1820-1881, in Algiers). Eminent Belgian violinist, pupil of his father, Lecloux, De Bériot, Sechter and Reicha, entering on a tour when but eight, appearing at Paris at ten and, except in 1846-52, when he was court-soloist at Petrograd and teacher at the Conservatory, almost incessantly on tour in Europe and America (1857, with Thalberg, and 1870, with Nilsson and Krebs). From 1871 he was professor at the Brussels Conservatory and in 1873 had a paralytic stroke, which ended his public career, though not at once his teaching. He is commonly ranked with De Bériot as representing the finest qualities of the French school of playing. As composer, he often attains great beauty of sentiment and dignity of style, though his works are unequal. In 1844 he married the pianist Josephine Eder (1815-1868). Wrote 6 violin-concertos, a violin-sonata, several fantasias (some with orchestra), a violin-suite, striking operatic transcriptions, 2 'cello-concertos, a sonata for viola or 'cello, a duo for violin and 'cello (with Servais), 3 cadenzas for Beethoven's violin-concerto, an overture on the Belgian national hymn, etc. Memoirs by Kufferath, 1882, and Radoux, 1891. His brothers Jean (1828–1901) and Jules (1832–1896) were respectively pianist at Brussels and 'cellist in England. G.

Vila, Luis Ferrán and Pedro Alberto (1517–1582). 16th C.

Vilbac, Alphonse Charles Renaud de (Montpellier, 1829–1884, Paris). Gifted French pianist and organist, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1844), best known as organist at the new church of St.-Eugène in 1856–71 and as composer of many graceful piano-pieces and transcriptions, besides 2 comic operettas (1857–58). G.

Vilim, Joseph Alois (Chicago, 1861). American violinist, graduate of the Prague Conservatory in 1883, from 1884 teaching at the Chicago Musical College, from 1887 at the American Conservatory, from 1899 at his own school and since 1918 at Coronado, Cal. Author of a textbook on advanced technique. A.

Villanis, Angelo (Turin, 1821–1865, Asti). Italian composer of 9 operas (1849–65) for Turin, Venice and Milan, including Alina, 1852, Una Notte di Festa, 1859, etc.

Villanis, Luigi Alberto (n. Turin, 1863–1906, Pesaro). Eminent Italian writer, at first trained as a lawyer (degree in 1887), but also pupil in music of Thermignon and Cravero, from about 1890 writing on topics in musical history and aesthetics in the Gazzetta Musicale (Milan) and other journals and at times lecturing at the Turin Liceo (1891–92) and the University (1894–96), besides in 1898 serving as secretary of the music-section of the Turin Exposition and in 1901 giving the memorial address at the Cimarosa centenary. In 1905 he went to the Liceo Rossini in Pesaro as lecturer and librarian. Author of the historical studies L'Arte del Clavicembalo, 1901, L'Arte del Pianoforte in Italia [Clementi to Sgambati], 1907, Une Chanson Française au XVI<sup>e</sup> Siècle, 1902, Un Compositore Ignoto alla Corte dei Duchi di Savoia, 1903, brief summaries of musical bibliography (1906) and paleography, and the psychological essays L'Estetica e la Psiche Moderna nella Musica Contemporanea, 1895, Come si Sentì e come si Dovrebbe Sentire la Musica, 1896, Lo Spirito Moderno nella Musica, 1903, Saggio di Psicologia della Compagna, 1905, etc. Also wrote the text for Bossi's Paradiso Perduto (1903) and other poems, besides a string-quartet.

Villar, Rogelio (Leon, 1873). Spanish critic and composer of orchestral works, 2 string-quartets, several violin-sonatas, piano-pieces and songs. Author of a dictionary of Spanish composers and conductors, essays on school-music, aesthetics, criticism, etc., and (till 1917) editor of the notable Revista Musical Hispano-Americana.

Villarosa, Marchese di [Carlantonio de Rosa] (Naples, 1762–1847, do.). From 1823 royal historian at Naples, author of Memorie dei Compositori di Musica del Regno di Napoli, 1840, and a life of Pergolesi (1831, 2d ed. 1841). G.

Villars, François de (Île Bourbon, 1825–1879, Paris). French critic for the Paris L'Art Musical and L'Europe, author of studies on La Serva Padrona (1863), the brothers Ricci (1866) and the two Iphigénies of Gluck (1868).

Villebois, Konstantin Petrovitch (Petrograd, 1817–1882, Warsaw). Russian army-officer, somewhat expert in music, writing 3 operas, including Natasha, 1861, many popular songs, some piano-pieces and 2 collections of folk-songs.

Villoing, Alexander Ivanovitch (Petrograd, 1808–1878, do.). From about 1830 the leading piano-teacher at Moscow, where from 1837 he became the master of Rubinstein, whom he took to Paris in 1840 (see Russkaya Starina, 1890). Wrote a piano-concerto and various pieces, besides an able method.

Villoing, Vassily Yulievitch (Moscow, 1850), nephew of the above. Russian teacher, trained by his uncle and at the Moscow Conservatory, from about 1880 settled at Nijni-Novgorod, becoming head of the branch of the Imperial Musical Society there. Wrote the children's opera Prince Lelio and various instrumental pieces, with an elementary text-book in harmony (1900).

Villoteau, Guillaume André (Bellême, 1759–1839, Tours). French singer, trained as choir-boy at Le Mans Cathedral, later at Notre-Dame in Paris and at the Opéra, where he became one of the trainers. Study at the Sorbonne led to his being sent with Napoleon to Egypt in 1798 as member of the scientific corps, embodying his notes on ancient and modern music in the Orient in 4 essays in the Description de l'Egypte (1809–26). He also wrote an essay seeking to explain music as a form of language (1807). His oriental studies opened up a field of research later much further developed. G.

Vincent, Alexandre Joseph Hydulphe (Hesdin, 1797–1868, Paris). French mathematician and librarian, from 1845 writing many essays on Greek music, especially to show that it was based on a use of practical harmony.

Vincent, Charles John (Houghton-le-Spring, 1852), brother of the following. English organist, pupil of his father, Armes and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1869–76 at Monkwearmouth, from 1877 at Tavistock and Kelly College and in 1882–92 at Christ Church, Hampstead (London), then becoming examiner for Trinity College (with trips to South Africa in 1893 and to Australia in 1897) and editor of The Organist and Choirmaster. Has written the oratorio Ruth, 1886, the cantatas The Day of Rest and The Crowning of the Wheat, a choral fugue a 8, cantatas for women's voices, the overture The Storm, pieces for organ, for piano and for violin and several text-books. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1885. His brother George Frederick (b. 1855), trained at Leipzig, is also a well-known organist, from 1882 at Sunderland and since 1900 at St. Michael's (Cornhill) in London, writing the cantata Sir Humphrey Gilbert, operettas, organ- and piano-pieces, etc.

Vincent [Winzenhörlein], Heinrich Joseph (n. Würzburg, 1819–1901, Vienna). Bavarian operatic tenor and choral conductor at Vienna (from 1847), Halle and Würzburg, from 1872 at Czernowitz and later at Vienna. He was a strong advocate of the 12-tone system of harmony (several essays, 1860–1900). Wrote the operas Die Bettlerin, 1864, and König Murat, 1870, operettas and songs.

Vincent, Henry Bethuel (Denver, Colo. 1872). American organist, pupil of Sherwood, Paur and Widor, for many years teacher and organist at Erie, Pa., leader of choral societies there and at Conneaut, O., and organist for the Chautauqua Institution (Chautauqua, N. Y.). Has written the opera Esperanza, 1906, the oratorio The Prodigal Son, 1901, 2 operettas, anthems, organ-pieces and about 50 songs (including the cycle The Garden of Kama).

Vinci, Leonardo (Strongoli, 1690–1730, Naples). Italian (Calabrian) composer, pupil of Greco, at first in the service of Prince Sansovero and from 1725 one of the maestri at the Royal Chapel in Naples. Wrote about 40 operas (from 1719), including especially Ifigenia in Tauride and Astianatte, both 1725, 2 oratorios, cantatas, masses, motets, etc. He was one of the early users of the developed aria da capo. G.

Vinci, Pietro (1540–?). 16th C.

Vinée, Anselme. French composer of the orchestral suites Paysage and Bretagne, a prize-sextet for piano and wind, a prize-serenade for piano (or harp), flute and English horn (or oboe), a Lamento for 'cello and orchestra, sonatas for violin (one solo), for 'cello and for clarinet, duets for violins or for violin and 'cello, trumpet-variations, songs, etc. Author of two textbooks in harmony (1901, '10). He was a pupil of Guiraud.

Vinogradsky, Alexander Nikolaievitch (Kiev, 1854). Able Russian conductor, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, in 1884–86 director of the Saratov Music School and since 1889 head of the branch of the Imperial Musical Society at Kiev and conductor of the symphony-concerts, besides often leading concerts elsewhere in Russia and at Paris (1894, '96), Vienna, Berlin and Antwerp. Has written the symphonic poem La Nonne, an Air Finnois for violin and orchestra, 2 string-quartets, a violin-sonata, etc.

Viola, Alfonso della. 16th C.

Viole, Rudolf (n. Mansfeld, 1825–1867, Berlin). Saxon pianist, pupil of Liszt, from about 1850 teaching in Berlin. Wrote 11 piano-sonatas, Die Musikal. Gartenlaube (100 études, edited by Liszt), Caprice Héroïque, Poésies Lyriques, etc.

Viotta, Henri (Amsterdam, 1848). Able Dutch conductor, teacher and writer, originally a lawyer (in practice till 1883), pupil in music of his father, Smit, Hol and the Cologne Conservatory, from 1883 founder and leader of the Wagner Society at Amsterdam and later of the Excelsior and the Cæcilia, besides in 1889–95 editing the Maandblad voor Musiek and writing for other papers, in 1896–1917 Nicolai's successor as director of the Hague Conservatory, conductor of the Residentie-Orkest and editor of Cæcilia, and then retiring. Author of an important Lexicon der Toonkunst, 3 vols. 1889, Onze Heden-daagsche Toonkunstenaars, 1896 (2d ed. 1901), and Het Auteursrecht van der Componist, 1877. Has also written orchestral and choral works.

Viotti, Giovanni Battista (n. Crescentino, 1753–1824, London). Distinguished Italian violinist, at first mostly self-taught and at thirteen, as protégé of a nobleman in Turin, pupil of Pugnani. In 1770, with Pugnani at the outset, he began an extensive tour to Geneva, Dresden, Berlin, Warsaw, Petrograd and finally Paris (1782), where he remained for ten years, for a time giving many concerts, then engaged as musician to Marie Antoinette and conductor for Prince de Soubise, and in 1789 (with Léonard) in charge of the Théâtre de Monsieur. Driven out by the Revolution, he moved to London, resuming public playing and soon succeeding W. Cramer as concertmaster at the Opera, but in 1798–1801, under suspicion of political intrigue, was forced to retire to a small town near Hamburg. On returning to London he took up the wine-business, with disastrous financial results. He kept up some artistic activity and often visited Paris, where his genius was especially admired by Baillet. In 1818 he moved to Paris and in 1819–22 was director of the Opera, a post just then of peculiar difficulty and which brought him neither satisfaction nor honor. In spite of his business misfortunes, he fully established himself as the greatest player of his time and also as one of the foremost composers for his instrument. With him begins the treatment of the concerto on the fullest scale. He is often called 'the father of modern violin-playing.' Wrote 29 concertos, 2 concertantes for two violins, 21 string-quartets, 21 trios (violins and viola), over 50 duos, 18 sonatas, 3 divertissements and a piano-sonata. Memoirs by Fayolle, 1810, Baillet, 1825, Miel, 1827, and Pougin, 1888. G.

Virdung, Sebastian. 16th C. G.

Visetti, Alberto Antonio (Spalato, 1846). Italian-Dalmatian pianist and vocal teacher, pupil of the Milan Conservatory, for a time engaged in dramatic work at Nice and Paris (where the score of an opera, on a text by Dumas, was destroyed under the Commune) and since 1871 in London as teacher at various institutions, notably the Royal College and the Guildhall School. In 1878–90 he was also conductor of the Philharmonic Society at Bath. In 1880 he received the order of the Crown of Italy. Has written a cantata, songs and piano-pieces. Author of a life of Verdi (1905), a history of singing and translations of works by Hullah and Hueffer. G.

Vitali, Filippo. 17th C. G.

Vitali, Giovanni Battista (?1644–1692). 17th C. G.

Vitali, Tommaso Antonio. 17th C. G.

Vitry, Philippe de. 14th C.

Vittadini, Franco (Pavia, 1884). Gifted Italian composer of the operas Il Mare di Tiberiade (not given, though accepted by Sonzogno), Anima Allegra, 1921, and Sirenella, besides orchestral and church-music. His training was at the Milan Conservatory and he is choirmaster at Varese.

Vittori, Loreto (1604-1670). 17th C.

Vittoria. See Victoria.

Vivaldi, Antonio (Venice, ?1680-1743, do.).

Noted Italian violinist and composer, probably pupil of his father (a violinist at St. Mark's), early becoming a priest (later with the title of abbatte), for a time in the court-band at Darmstadt and from 1713 director of the Conservatorio della Pietà in Venice. He was an expert virtuoso and many of his works emphasize display, but he also had decided originality and power in form and treatment, so that 16 of his concertos were used by J. S. Bach as the basis for extended fresh development and many have been taken for study otherwise. Wrote in all nearly 150 concertos for violin, of which 35 are noted, 6 quintets for flute, violin, viola, 'cello and organ-bass, 12 trios (violins and 'cello), 18 violin-sonatas, nearly 40 operas (from 1713), mostly for Venice, many cantatas, arias, etc. On his instrumental style, see Schering, Gesch. d. Instrumental-Konzerts, 1905. G.

Vivell, Cölestin (Wolfach, 1846). Badense Benedictine, from about 1870 at Beuron, from 1875 at Maredsous (Belgium) and since 1883 at Seckau (Styria), author of several works on Gregorian music (from 1904), including indexes of medieval tractates.

Vives, Amedeo. Spanish composer of the operas Artus, 1897, Don Lucas de Cigarral, 1899, and Euda d' Uriach, 1900, and about 30 zarzuelas.

Vivier, Albert Joseph (Huy, 1816-1903, Brussels). Belgian theorist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, writing the opera Padilla le Tavernier, 1857, and a notable Traité Complet d' Harmonie, 1862 (many later eds.), containing a useful discussion of secondary chords, besides acoustical and other essays.

Vivier, Eugène Léon (Ajaccio, 1821-1900, Nice). Famous Corsican hornist, pupil of J. F. Gallay, long engaged at the Italiens and the Opéra in Paris, besides making many wide tours as soloist. He managed in some unexplained way to produce two, three and even four tones simultaneously, so as to secure harmonic effects. Memoir by Limouzin, 1900. G.

Vix, Geneviève (in Brittany, 1887). Talented French operatic soprano, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1909 engaged at the Opéra there, at Madrid and at Buenos Aires, in 1917-18 appearing with the Chicago Opera Company. In 1918 she married the Russian banker Narishkin. A.

Vizentini, Louis Albert (Paris, 1841-1906, do.). French violinist, conductor and impresario, pupil of the Brussels and Paris Conservatories, from 1861 soloist at the Lyrique in Paris and under Padeloup and critic for Figaro, from 1866 conductor at various theaters in Paris and London, in 1879-89 manager of the Imperial Theater in Petrograd and for one season also conductor of orchestral concerts at Pavlovsk then again in Parisian theaters, for some years director of the Opera at Lyons and finally manager of the Opéra-Comique in Paris. Wrote a ballet, 2 operettas, orchestral pieces, songs and various essays.

Vleeshouwer, Albert de (Antwerp, 1863). Belgian composer of the operas L'Ecole des Pères, 1892, and Zryni, 1895, the symphonic poem De Wilde Jager and other orchestral pieces.

Vockner, Josef (Ebensee, 1842-1906, Vienna). Austrian organist, pupil of Bruckner, long teacher at the Vienna Conservatory, writing the oratorio Das jüngste Gericht, a piano-quartet, a violin-sonata, organ-fugues and pieces, etc.

Vogel, Adolf Bernhard (Plauen, 1847-1898, Leipzig). Saxon editor and writer, trained at Leipzig University and Conservatory, from about 1870 contributor to the Leipzig Nachrichten, Tageblatt and Neue Zeitschrift, besides editing the Deutsche Liederhalle in 1885. Author of brochures on Volkmann (1875), Liszt, Wagner (1883) Von Bülow (1887), Brahms and Koczalski (1896), on Schumanns Klaviertonpoesie, 1887, and on the Leipzig Conservatory, 1888 (with Kipke). Wrote also the drama Die Brüder, symphonic poems and other orchestral pieces, choruses, songs, etc.

Vogel, Charles Louis Adolphe (Lille, 1808-1892, Paris). Grandson of Joh. Christoph below. French violinist and composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory. Wrote 7 operas, beginning with Le Podestat, 1833, and ending with La Filleule du Roi, 1875, symphonies, chamber-works, church-music, piano-pieces and songs (including the revolutionary air Les Trois Couleurs, 1830). G.

Vogel, Emil (Wriezen, 1859-1908, n. Berlin). Prussian bibliographer, educated at Greifswald and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1887), in 1883 sent by the government as assistant to Haber in Palestrina research in Italy and in 1893-1901 organizer and librarian of the Peters Musical Library at Leipzig, also editing the Jahrbuch Peters. Author of monographs on Monteverde (1887) and on Gagliano and his times (1889) and catalogues of music-manuscripts at Wolfenbüttel (1890) and of printed secular vocal music in Italy from the 16-17th centuries (1892).

Vogel, Friedrich Wilhelm Ferdinand (Havelberg, 1807-1892, Bergen). Prussian organist, pupil of Birmbach, from about 1830 on tour as virtuoso, in 1838-41 teacher at Hamburg, from 1845 at the Reformert Kirche in Copenhagen and from 1852 head of the organ-school at Bergen. Wrote organ-preludes, postludes and fugues, a concertino for organ and trombones, a symphony, an overture, an orchestral suite (in canon), chamber-music, choruses and 2 operettas.

Vogel, Johann Christoph (Nuremberg, 1756-1788, Paris). Gifted, but short-lived Bavarian composer, pupil of Riepel, from 1776 a follower of Gluck at Paris. Wrote the operas La Toison d'Or, 1786, and Démophon, 1789, 3 symphonies, 2 concertantes for two horns, 1 do. for oboe and bassoon, 3 clarinet-concertos, a bassoon-concerto, 15 quartets (6 for strings and the rest for horn or bassoon with strings), 6 string-trios, clarinet- and bassoon-duets, etc.

Vogel, Wilhelm Moritz (n. Freiburg, 1846). Silesian pianist and choral conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1870 organist at the Matthäikirche in Leipzig, teacher at the Töchterschule, conductor of choral clubs and critic, gaining the title of professor in 1914. Has written many organ- and piano-pieces, a piano-method, duets and songs. Author of a Gesch. d. Musik, 1900, text-books in harmony and singing and a collection of part-songs for school-use.

Vogeleis, Martin (Erstein, 1861). Alsatian priest and choirmaster, stationed at Zillesheim, Grafenstaden, Behlenheim and Schlettstadt (from 1908), author of the valuable Quellen u. Bausteine zu einer Gesch. d. Musik u. d. Theaters im Elsass [to 1800], 1911, and many articles in periodicals and books on music in Alsace, besides editing (with Bronner) a collection of Latin hymns.

Voggenhuber, Vilma von (Pest, 1845-1888, Berlin). Able Hungarian operatic soprano, pupil of Stoll, in 1862-65 engaged at Pest, then heard at Berlin, Hanover, Prague, Stettin, Cologne, Aix, Rotterdam, Bremen and Vienna, and from 1868 regularly employed at Berlin, where she married the bass Krolop.

Vogl, Adolf (Munich, 1873). Bavarian composer of the opera Maja, 1908, and songs, besides writing on Wagner's Tristan and Parsifal (1913, '14).

Vogl, Heinrich (Munich, 1845-1900, do.). Eminent Bavarian operatic tenor, pupil of F. Lachner and Jenk, making his début in 1865 at Munich and then permanently engaged there. He was early conspicuous as an interpreter of Wagner, singing at the premières of Das Rheingold and Die Walküre (1869, '70) and often at Bayreuth from 1876. His wife, née Theresa Thoma (b. 1845), whom he married in 1868, was also a fine Wagnerian singer, engaged at Munich in 1865-92. He produced the opera Der Fremdling, 1899. Memoirs by Pfordten, 1900, and Pottgiesser, 1900 (in Allgem. Musikzeitung). G.

Vogl, Johann Michael (Steyr, 1768-1840, Vienna). Able Austrian operatic tenor (or baritone), originally trained for the law, but induced by Süssmayer to join his opera-company in 1794 and engaged at the court-opera in Vienna in 1795-1822. From about 1816 he was one of Schubert's best friends and was among the earliest to make the latter's songs known. He continued singing in concert till 1833. G.

Vogler, Georg Joseph (Würzburg, 1749-1814, Darmstadt). Noted Bavarian organist, theorist and composer, trained as a priest (gaining the title of abbé) and pupil in music of Martini and Vallotti. From the first his eccentric and restless personality asserted itself, leading him to seek unusual paths of study, to propose radical procedures in teaching and in organ-making and to make himself known far and wide through extensive visits to various parts of Europe. In 1773-75 he was in Italy as student and in some ecclesiastical prominence. In 1775-83 he was in court-service at Mannheim and Munich (from 1780) as chaplain and assistant-director, establishing at Mannheim an ambitious music-school and undertaking large compositions, besides becoming known as a concert-organist. From this time he was for more than twenty years much occupied in an extraordinary series of travels, though in 1786-99 nominally court-director at Stockholm, where he started another music-school. His tours included France, England, Spain, Portugal, Holland, Scandinavia and Russia, as well as Greece, North Africa and perhaps Asia Minor and even Greenland. During this period he posed much as an expert in organ-construction, urging several 'simplifications' or improvements (doing away with many large pipes by employing combination-tones from smaller ones, discarding many mutation-stops, rearranging the pipes on the wind-chests and introducing free-reed stops). His enthusiasm over free-reeds (somehow connected with the advent of the Chinese cheng in Russia) had much to do with the rise of the making of reed-organs in France about 1810. He also constantly appeared as organ-virtuoso, combining unexampled facility in contrapuntal interpretation and improvisation with many claptrap devices to attract popular attention. He declaimed against pedantic methods of teaching and in general took the position of an iconoclast. He thus became everywhere conspicuous, but also encountered hostility and ridicule. After 1807 he settled at Darmstadt as court-director and established still another music-school, among his pupils being Weber and Meyerbeer. These and others were doubtless considerably affected by their master's aggressive and revolutionary theories. His literary works include three treatises on composition combined into the Mannheimer Tonschule, 1776-78, supplemented by monthly Betrachtungen, 1778-81, various practical text-books in Swedish (1795-97) and German (from 1800), handbooks on acoustics and tuning (1800, '07) and books on church-music (1800, '07, '14). His musical works include the operas Albert III von Bayern, 1780, La Kermesse, 1783, Castor und Pollux, 1784, Egle, 1787, Gustavus Adolphus, 1792, Samori, 1804 and Der Admiral, 1810, incidental music for several plays, operettas, ballets, etc., much church-music, including 6 masses, a Requiem, Psalms, motets, canticles and many hymns, 4 symphonies, a piano-concerto, variations for piano and orchestra, a nocturne for piano-quintet, a piano-quartet, 18 piano-trios, many piano-sonatas, variations and pieces, two programs of national melodies (Polymelos) for piano and strings or for organ, over 30 organ-preludes, arrangements of chorales by Bach, etc. Memoirs by Fröhlich, 1845, Künzel, 1867, Pasqué, 1884, Schafhütl, 1888 (with list of works), Brenet, 1891 (in Archives Historiques, etc.), and Simon, 1904. G.

Vogrich, Max Wilhelm Karl (Hermannstadt, 1852-1916, New York). Transylvanian pianist and composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1870 engaged in long tours throughout Europe, in Mexico and South America, in the United States (1878, with Wilhelmj) and in Australia, where he remained in 1882-86. In 1886-1902 he made his home in New York, with several trips to Europe, then in Weimar, in 1908-14 in London and finally again in New York, where he did important editorial work for Schirmer. Wrote the operas Vanda, 1875, King Arthur, 1893, and Der Buddha, 1904 (all to original texts), music for Wildenbruch's Lieder des Euripides (1905), the oratorio The Captivity, 1884, the scena The Highland Widow, the cantatas The Diver, 1890, and The Young King and the Shepherdess, a mass, many anthems, tertets, duets and songs, 2 symphonies, a piano-concerto, the violin-concerto E Pur si Muove, 1913, an Andante and Intermezzo and Memento Mori, 1910, both for violin and orchestra, 12 concert-studies for piano, the piano-cycle Romanzero, sonatinas, a fugue, an album of 20 dances, old and new, and many other piano-pieces, besides 3 caprices (after Paganini) for violin and editions of Schumann's piano-works, of Clementi's Gradius, of modern Russian composers, etc. A.

Vogt, Augustus Stephen (Washington, Ont. 1861). Eminent Canadian organist and choral conductor, trained at the New England Conservatory (Boston) and at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1888 teaching at the Toronto College of Music and from 1892 at the Toronto Conservatory, where since 1913 he has been director, raising it to high rank. In 1888-1906 he was also organist at the Jarvis Street Baptist Church and in 1894-1917 conductor of the new Mendelssohn Choir, which has become famous. Mus.D. of Toronto Univ. in 1907. Has written a cap-pella choruses and a book on piano-technique (1900). A.

Vogt, Gustave (Strasbourg, 1781-1879, Paris). Able Alsatian oboist, pupil of Sallantin, as early as 1801 playing at the Italiens in Paris and also teaching at the Conservatory. In 1805-07 he was in army-service, at Vienna meeting both Haydn and Beethoven. He then played at the Opéra-Comique and in 1814-34 at the Opéra, as well as in 1814-34 at the Conservatory Concerts, and succeeded Sallantin as professor at the Conservatory in 1814. In 1815-30 he was also in the court-band. In 1825 he visited London. Wrote 4 oboe-concertos, some fantasias, variations, duets, etc., and military music. G.

Vogt, Johann [Jean] (n. Liegnitz, 1823-1888, Eberswalde). Silesian pianist, pupil of A. W.

Bach, Grell, Hesse and Seidel, in 1850-55 teacher at Petrograd, then on tour, in 1861-65 at Dresden and then at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin except for a sojourn in New York in 1871-73. Wrote the oratorio Lazarus, 1858, a string-quintet, a piano-trio, an Andante and Allegro for piano and orchestra, and many piano-pieces.

Vohánka, Rudolf (n. Laun, 1880). Bohemian composer of the oratorio Johannes Hus, the melodrama Petruslegende, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, choruses and songs. From 1904 he was in government employ in Vienna, but in 1918 moved to Prague.

Voigt, Henriette, née Kuntze (Leipzig, 1808-1839, do.). Gifted amateur pianist, pupil of L. Berger, who (with her husband) was intimate with Schumann, Mendelssohn, Rochlitz, Hauptmann, Loewe and other leading musicians. To her Schumann inscribed his sonata in G min. (op. 22). See letters edited by Gensel, 1892, 1906. G.

Voigt, Johann Georg Hermann (Osterwieck, 1769-1811, Leipzig). Saxon organist, from 1790 at Zeitz and from 1801 in Leipzig, at first at the Peterskirche and then at the Thomaskirche. Wrote orchestral minuets, a viola-concerto, 7 string-quartets, a string-trio, 3 piano-sonatas, etc.

Voigt, Karl (Hamburg, 1808-1879, do.). North German choral conductor, from 1836 Schellble's assistant in the Cäcilienverein at Frankfurt, in 1838 his successor and after 1840 the founder and leader of a similar society at Hamburg.

Voigt, Woldemar (Leipzig, 1850). Eminent physicist, from 1875 professor at Königsberg University and since 1883 at Göttingen, where in 1884-1909 he organized and led a Bach-Chor and in 1885-86 also conducted symphony-concerts. He is a specialist on Bach, author of lectures or monographs on his church-music (1881), the St. Matthew Passion and Handel's Samson (1885), the cantatas, the Christmas Oratorio (1908), and the Bach Festivals at Duisburg (1910) and Leipzig (1911).

Voigtländer, Gabriel (?1580-1643). 17th C.

Volavy, Marguerite (Brünn, 1886). Gifted Moravian pianist, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory and of Schütt and Leschetizky, in 1902 beginning brilliant tours through Europe (notably in Russia) and since 1914 in America. A.

Volbach, Fritz (n. Cologne, 1861). Eminent Rhenish pianist, conductor and composer, trained at the Cologne Conservatory and the Berlin Akademie, with study also at Heidelberg and Bonn Universities (Ph.D. 1899), from 1887 teaching music-history and Gregorian music at the Institut für Kirchenmusik in Berlin and leader of the Klindworth Chorus and the Academic Liedertafel, from 1891 at Mayence, directing the Oratorio and Handel Societies, etc., from 1907 music-director and soon professor at Tübingen University and since 1919 in similar positions at Münster University. He has been active in producing many of Chrysander's redactions of Handel's works, in 1898 was conductor at the congress of the Allgem. Deutscher Musikverein, in 1900 managed the Gutenberg Festival at Mayence and during the World War gave symphony-concerts for soldiers. Has written the comic opera Die Kunst zu lieben, 1910, incidental music for the tragedy König Tulga, the choral works Vom Pagen und der Königstochter, Festkantate (Gutenberg Festival), Raffael, Der Troubadour, Am Siegfriedbrunnen, König Laurins Rosengarten and Reigen (for tenor, women's voices and piano), a symphony, the symphonic poems Ostern (with organ), Es waren zwei Königskinder and Alt Heidelberg, a piano-quintet, (1912), and many arrangements. Author of lives of Handel (1898) and Beethoven (1905), the thesis Die Praxis d. Handel-Aufführung, 1900, Die deutsche Musik im 19. Jahrh. 1909, Das moderne Orchester in seiner Entwicklung, 1910 (2d ed. 1919), Die Instrumente d. Orchesters, 1913, a text-book in Gregorian music (1888), analyses for Schlesinger's Musikführer and many articles. Sketch by Hagemann in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1909. G. A.

Volborth, Eugen von (Petrograd, 1854). Russian publicist, living at Baden-Baden, composer of the operas Ringo, 1898, Der Glücksritter, 1899, Marienburg, 1903, and Die Zaubersaite, 1904, etc.

Volckland, Alfred (Brunswick, 1841–1905, Basel). North German pianist and conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1866 court-pianist and then director at Sondershausen, from 1869 conductor of the Euterpe at Leipzig and also founder (with Holstein and Spitta) of the Bach-Verein, and in 1875–1902 director at Basel of the Allgem. Musikgesellschaft, Gesangverein and Liedertafel. Ph.D. of Basel Univ. in 1889.

Volckmar, Wilhelm Valentin (Hersfeld, 1812–1887, Homberg.). Able Hessian organist, educated at Marburg University (Ph.D.), from 1835 teacher at the Homberg Seminary and well known as a virtuoso. Wrote several organ-concertos, an organ-symphony, 20 organ-sonatas and many pieces for organ, for piano and for violin, 2 organ-methods and much vocal music, chiefly sacred. Memoir by Gehrig, 1888.

Volckelt, Johannes (Lipnik, 1848). Galician aesthete, from 1883 professor at Basel University, from 1889 at Würzburg and since 1894 at Leipzig. Author of many treatises, including Aesthetik d. Tragischen, 1897 (2d ed. 1906), Schopenhauer, 1900 (3d ed. 1907) and System d. Aesthetik, 2 vols. 1905–10. See essays by Moos in the Riemann and Liliencron Festschriften (1909, '10).

Volkert, Franz (n. Bunzlau, 1767–1845, Vienna). Bohemian conductor of light opera, from 1821 at the Leopoldstädter Theater in Vienna, writing over 100 comic operas and other stage-works, church-music, piano-concertos, trios, organ-pieces, etc.

Volkmann, Friedrich Robert (Lommatzsch, 1815–1883, Pest). Eminent Saxon composer, pupil of his father, Friebel, Anacker and K. F. Becker, with assistance from Schumann, in 1839–40 teacher at Prague, then removing to Pest, where, except for a sojourn in Vienna in 1854–58, he remained, from 1875 being professor at the Akademie. He received honors from the Vienna Musikfreunde and the Berlin Academy. Without reaching the highest power, his style was marked by fluent and graceful finish. Wrote 2 symphonies, 3 overtures, 3 serenades for strings, a 'cello-concerto, 6 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, a Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, a Schlummerlied for harp, clarinet and horn, various pieces for violin and for 'cello, a piano-sonata and many pieces and transcriptions (some for 4 hands), the scena Sappho, 2 masses, offertories, sacred choruses and solos, part-songs and songs (some with orchestra). Memoirs by B. Vogel, 1875, Hans Volkmann, 1902, '15 (also Briefe, 1917), and Preiss, 1912. G.

Volkmann, Hans (Bischofsverda, 1875), grandnephew of the above. Saxon writer at Dresden, author of a life of d'Astorga (2 vols. 1911–19) and Neues über Beethoven, 1904, besides books about Robert Volkmann noted above.

Volkov, Fedor Grigorievitch (Kostroma, 1729–1763, Petrograd). Librettist for Araja's Titus the Merciful (1751), the first text entirely in Russian. In 1752 he formed a theatrical troupe that was encouraged by the Empress Elizabeth, so that in 1756 he held the title of 'first court-actor.' He may have written the first Russian opera, Tanyusha, 1756.

Vollerthun, Georg (n. Elbing, 1876). Prussian composer of the opera Beeda, 1916, and various songs. From 1899 he was theater-conductor in Prague, Berlin, Barmen and Mayence, then mostly in Berlin as vocal teacher and (till 1922) in Holstein.

Vollhardt, Emil Reinhardt (n. Dippoldiswalde, 1858). Saxon church-musician, in 1883–86 organist at Hirschberg (Silesia) and then cantor of the Marienkirche at Zwickau, conductor of the Gesangverein and librarian at the Ratschule, in 1915 gaining the title of royal professor. Has written many a cappella choruses and songs, besides a library-catalogue (1896) and a history of Saxon cantors and organists (1899).

Vollweiler, Karl (Offenbach, 1813–1848, Heidelberg). Hessian composer, pupil of his father, long a teacher in Petrograd and finally at Heidelberg. Wrote a symphony, 2 piano-trios, variations for string-quartet, a piano-sonata, études and other pieces. G.

Volpe, Arnold (Kovno, 1869). Russian violinist, pupil of Lotto, Auer and Soloviev, since 1898 active in New York, in 1902 forming an orchestra for young players that in 1904 became the Volpe Symphony Orchestra, besides from 1910 directing the orchestra at the Brooklyn Institute and in 1910–13 and '18 municipal concerts in New York (at the Stadium). In 1916 he opened his own music-school. A.

Voretzsch, Johannes Felix (Altkirchen, 1835-1908, Halle). Saxon conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1865 director at Glogau and in 1868-1903 conductor of the Franz Singakademie at Halle and also of the Neue Singakademie, holding the title of royal professor.

Vossnessensky, Ivan Ivanovitch (in Kostroma, 1838). Russian church-musician, author of several treatises (from 1896) on music in the Greco-Russian Church.

Voss, Charles (n. Demmin, 1815-1882, Verona). Pomeranian pianist, from 1846 popular in Paris as teacher and composer of many salon-pieces, transcriptions, etc., besides some more serious works (concertos, études and variations). G.

Voss [Vossius], Gerhard Johann (1577-1649). 17th C.

Vredeman, Jacques. 17th C.

Vretblad, Viktor Patrik (Svartnäs, 1876). Able Swedish organist, pupil of the Stockholm Conservatory and of Hilda Thegerström and Dente, twice holding a scholarship for foreign study (1902 and '14), from 1900 organist at the French Reformed Church in Stockholm and since 1907 at the Oskarskyrka, besides in 1901-12 writing for the Dagblad. Has written pieces for organ, for piano and for violin, songs and a valuable life of Roman (1914), with other historical papers. His wife, née Katarina Bodman (b. 1883) is a fine violinist.

Vreuls, Victor (Verviers, 1876). Gifted Belgian composer, pupil of the Verviers and Liège Conservatories and of d'Indy, in late years teacher at the Schola Cantorum in Paris. In 1903 he won the Prix Picard of the Belgian Académie Libre. Has written a symphony (with violin-solo), the symphonic poem Jour de Fête, an Adagio for strings, a Poème for 'cello and orchestra, a Triptyque for voice and orchestra, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces and songs.

Vrieslander, Otto (Münster, 1880). Westphalian song-composer, pupil of Steinhauer, Buths, the Cologne Conservatory and later Schenker, living in or near Munich. He first won attention by cycles of songs (after Wolf's manner) by single authors, notably Pierrot Lunaire (46 poems by A. Guiraud), poems by K. F. Meyer, 12 Goethe-Lieder, 22 songs from Des Knaben Wunderhorn, etc. Later he edited clavier-pieces and songs by K. P. E. Bach (1914-'22) and made 4-hand arrangements of his symphonies, besides a monograph (1923). He is now collaborating on an edition of Mendelssohn's letters.

Vroye, Théodore Joseph de (Villers-la-Ville, 1804-1873, Liège). Belgian priest, from 1835 choirmaster at Liège Cathedral, author of several manuals (from 1829) of Gregorian music, both practical and theoretical, including De la Musique Religieuse, 1866 (with Elewyck), which concerns the congresses on service-music at Paris and Mechlin in 1860 and '63-64. G.

Vuillaume, Jean Baptiste (Mirecourt, 1798-1875, Paris). Noted French violin-maker, deriving his skill from his father, Chanot and Lété, from 1828 proceeding alone at Paris, though with meager success until he began to make imitations of old instruments. His replicas of Stradivari and Tieffenbrucker violins and 'cellos proved extraordinarily popular. He also invented in 1851 the octo-basse (a gigantic 3-stringed double-bass), in 1855 the contre-alto (a big viola), in 1867 a muting-device, operated by the chin and a machine for making strings of uniform thickness. He perfected some details in the Tourte bow. His three brothers and his son were also expert makers. G.

Vulpus, Melchior (?1560-1615). 16th C. G.

Vyssotzky, Michail Timofeievitch (1790-1837, Moscow). Able Russian guitar-player, from 1813 settled at Moscow. Wrote fantasias, variations on Russian airs and many arrangements from Mozart, Beethoven, Field and even some fugues of Bach, besides a method. Memoir by Russanov, 1901.

Waack, Karl (Lübeck, 1861). Able North German conductor, trained at the Weimar Conservatory and by Riemann, in 1882-83 at Åbo (Finland), from 1883 at Riga as conductor of the Harmonie, from 1891 also of the Wagner-Verein and from 1903 of the Bach-Verein and the Liedertafel, besides writing for the Zeitung, and since 1915 in charge of the popular concerts in Lübeck of the Musikfreunde-Verein. In 1897 he directed a Schubert Festival at Riga. Has prepared summaries of motifs in the Wagner operas and fuller editions of Tristan and Lohengrin for Breitkopf & Härtel. Author of Wagner, ein Erfüller u. Vollender deutscher Kunst, 1918.

Wachtel, Theodor (Hamburg, 1823-1893, Frankfurt). Noted North German operatic tenor, pupil of Julie Grandjean, from 1849 known at Hamburg, Schwerin, Dresden, Würzburg, Darmstadt, Hanover, Kassel, Vienna, London (from 1862), Berlin (from 1865) and Paris. In 1871 and '75 he visited America, and in 1887 retired. His voice was brilliant and strong and he was a good actor in comedy. G.

Wackernagel, Philipp (Berlin, 1800-1877, Dresden). While director of the Industrial School at Elberfeld author of various works in literary history, including Das deutsche Kirchenlied von Luther bis N. Hermann, 2 vols. 1841, Bibliographie d. deutschen Kirchenliedes im 16. Jahrh. 1855, and especially Das deutsche Kirchenlied von d. ältesten Zeiten bis zu Anfang d. 17. Jahrh. 5 vols. 1863-77.

Waddington, Sidney Peine (Lincoln, 1869). English pianist, pupil of the Royal College (London), with study at Frankfurt and Vienna, Mendelssohn Scholar in 1890-92, in 1894-1905 choirmaster at St. Mary's (Bayswater) and from 1896 head of an amateur operatic society and chorusmaster at Covent Garden. Since 1905 he has taught at the Royal College and served as examiner there and at the Royal Academy. Has written the children's operetta Whimland, the choral works John Gilpin, 1894, and Ode to Music, an overture, a piano-concerto, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a string-trio, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, a 4-hand piano-suite, piano-pieces, etc. G.

Waefelghem, Louis van (Bruges, 1840-1908, Paris). Skillful Belgian violinist and violist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, from 1860 appearing in Weimar, Dresden and Pest, from 1863 violist in Paris (at the Opéra, Pasdeloup concerts, etc.) and teacher at the Conservatory, as well as from 1881-95 in the Lamoureux orchestra, with frequent visits to London. He played in the Quartets of Marsick and Musin. After 1895 he devoted himself to exploiting the old viole d'amour and (with Grillet, Diémer and Delsart) started the Société des Instruments Anciens, an ensemble soon heard throughout Europe. For the viole d'amour he wrote many solos. G.

Waelput, Hendrik (Ghent, 1845-1885, do.). Belgian conductor and teacher, trained at the Brussels Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1866), in 1869-70 director of the Bruges Conservatory and conductor of popular concerts and at the Opera, then in Dijon, from 1875 opera-conductor at Ghent and finally teacher at the Antwerp Conservatory. Wrote 4 symphonies, an opera, 3 cantatas, songs, a festival march, etc. Memoirs by Callaerts, 1886, and Bergmans, 1886.

Waelrant, Hubert (?1517-1595). 16th C. G.

Wagenaar, Johan (Utrecht, 1862). Able Dutch organist, pupil of Hol and Herzogenberg, from 1888 organist at Utrecht Cathedral and from 1904 also head of the Music School and town-director, and in 1918 director of the Hague Conservatory and conductor of the Oratorio Society there. Has written the operas De Doge van Venedie, 1904, and De Cid, 1916, the symphonic poems Fritjofs Meerfahrt and Saul und David, overtures to Cyrano de Bergerac, Taming of the Shrew and one other, an orchestral Truermarsch, a piano-quintet, organ- and piano-pieces and songs.

Wagenmann, Josef Hermann (Endingen, 1876). South German specialist in voice-building, pupil of Törsleff and in Italy, from about 1900 active in Leipzig and later in Berlin. Author of several books on vocal culture (from 1903), including discussions of Lilli Lehmann's, Póssart's and Caruso's theories or praxis.

Wagenseil, Georg Christoph (Vienna, 1715-1777, do.). Able and fertile Austrian composer, pupil of Wöger, Palotta and Fux, from 1739 court-composer and music-master in the royal family. Wrote about 15 operas, 3 oratorios, 2 masses, a Requiem, Psalms, motets, many ensemble-pieces for clavier and strings, 30 symphonies, clavier-concertos, nearly 20 clavier-divertimenti, etc. G.

Wagenseil, Johann Christoph (1633-1708). 17th C.

Waghalter, Ignaz. From 1910 conductor at the Komische Oper in Berlin and from 1914 at the Deutsches Opernhaus in Charlottenburg, writing the operas Der Teufelsweg, 1912, Mandragola, 1914, Jugend, 1919, Der späte Gast, 1922, and Sataniel, 1923 (burlesque), a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, etc.

Wagner, Ernest David (Dramburg, 1806-1883, Berlin). Pomeranian church-musician, trained at the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik and Akademie, from 1827 organist in Stettin, from 1838 cantor at the Matthäikirche in Berlin and from 1848 organist at the Trinitatiskirche. Wrote an oratorio, motets, Psalms, a Choralbuch, organ- and piano-pieces and songs, besides a manual on embellishments (1869).

Wagner, Franz Max Georg (Schweidnitz, 1870). Saxon organist and choral conductor, pupil of the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, from 1890 active at Neumittelwalde, Bunzlau and Guben and since 1903 singing-teacher at Grunewald and director of the Berlin Liedertafel, with which he has made wide tours in eastern and northern Europe. In 1910 he was named royal professor. Has written a cappella choruses, the choral works Das Märchen vom Glück, Donaulieder and Glückliche Zeiten, pieces for organ, for violin and for 'cello, an operetta, etc.

Wagner, Gerrit Antonie Alexander (Amsterdam, 1862-1892, Antwerp). Dutch choral leader, pupil of Brandts-Buys and the Antwerp Conservatory, for a time conductor of the Mannenkoor and Liedertafel at Antwerp. Wrote the choral works Babylonische Gevangenissen (Psalm 139) and Lentezang, part-songs and songs.

Wagner, Hans (Schönkirchen, 1872). Austrian choral conductor, teacher at the Vienna Normal School from 1898, leader of the Akademischer Gesangsverein from 1901, founder in 1912 of the a cappella Lehrchor and active in teachers' associations. Has written the cantata Erste Mahnung, many choral works and choruses for men's voices, including national folk-songs from northern countries, and edited the 4th ed. of Heinze's Harmonielehre (1913).

Wagner, Johanna (n. Hanover, 1828-1894, Würzburg), niece of Richard below. Able Hanoverian operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Viardot-Garcia, appearing first as a child at Würzburg and Bernburg, in 1844-46 engaged at Dresden (sang at the première of Tannhäuser in 1845), in 1849-50 was at Hamburg and in 1850-62 at the Berlin Opera, then turning almost wholly to the spoken drama. In 1876 she sang at the first performances at Bayreuth. In 1882-84 she taught at the Munich Conservatory and then in Berlin. From 1859 she was the wife of the jurist Jachmann. G.

Wagner, Karl Jakob (Darmstadt, 1772-1822, do.). Noted Hessian hornist, pupil of Portmann and Vogler, from 1790 in the court-band at Darmstadt, becoming in 1808 concertmaster and in 1811 director, besides touring much as virtuoso. Wrote the operas Pygmalion, 1809, Der Zahnarzt, 1810, Herodes, 1810, Nitétis, 1811, and Chimène, 1821, a melodrama, various dramatic cantatas, 2 symphonies, 4 overtures, much chamber-music, including many horn-duos, 3 violin-sonatas, etc., piano-variations and an expansion of Portmann's Unterricht (1802).

Wagner, Peter Josef (n. Treves, 1865). Able Rhenish church-musician and historian, trained at the cathedral-school at Treves and Strasburg University (Ph.D. 1890) and by Bellermann and Spitta, from 1893 lecturer at Freiburg (Switzerland) University and since 1902 full professor. In 1901 he started there a Gregorianische Akademie. Author of Einführung d. liturg. Gesangsformen, 1895 (2d ed. 2 parts, 1901-05), Das Freiburger Dreikönigspiel, 1903, Ueber traditionellen Choral u. Choralvortrag, 1905, Der Kampf gegen d. Editio Vaticana, 1907, Elemente d. gregorian. Gesangs, 1909, Gesch. d. Messe, 1914 (vol. i), and Einführung in d. kathol. Kirchenmusik, 1919, besides numerous articles in periodicals in Germany, France and Italy.

Wagner, Siegfried (Triebtschen, 1869), son of the following. Saxon (-Swiss) conductor and composer, at first trained as an architect, then pupil of Kniese and Humperdinck, in 1893-94 successful in concert in various places and then one of the conductors at Bayreuth. Has written the operas (to original texts) Der Bärenhäuter, 1899, Herzog Wildfang, 1901, Der Kobold, 1904, Bruder Lustig, 1905, Sternengebot, 1908, Banadietrich, 1910, Schwarzwildschwanenreich, 1918, and Sonnenflammen, 1918, besides Der Heidenkönig, (1915) Der Friedensengel (1915), An allem ist Hütchen schuld, (1916), and Der Schmied von Marienberg (1920), not yet given, the symphonic poem Sehnsucht, 1895, a Konzertstück for flute and small orchestra (1913), a violin-concerto (1915) and the choral work Der Fahnen Schwur, 1914. G.

Wagner, Wilhelm Richard (Leipzig, [May 22] 1813-1883 [Feb. 13], Venice). Distinguished Saxon composer, by many counted the greatest, at least in dramatic music. His father, a petty civil official, died soon after his birth and his mother married the actor and painter Ludwig Geyer (1780-1821), moving to Dresden. There in 1822-27 the boy attended the Kreuzschule, followed by studies in Leipzig at the Nikolai Gymnasium and the University (for a time from 1831). At Dresden he came under Weber's influence and at Leipzig studied with C. G. Müller and especially the cantor Weinlig. His earliest enthusiasms were literary, but he soon became deeply stirred by Beethoven's music, beginning his exhaustive acquaintance with his orchestral scores. Before 1830 he had undertaken composition in large forms for piano, ensemble or orchestra. Not till 1832 did he enter upon experiments with dramatic music. In that year he visited Vienna and Prague, beginning to know musicians like Dorn, Dionys Weber and Mendelssohn. In 1833 his symphony was given at the Gewandhaus. In that year he was choromaster at the Würzburg theater, where his brother Albert was stage-manager. In 1834 he was greatly impressed by the singer Schröder-Devrient and by hearing operas by Bellini and Auber. In 1834-36 he was director at the Magdeburg theater, with a good company of singers and players, at length producing his opera Das Liebesverbot (with small success). In 1836-37 he was at Königsberg, giving concerts and conducting at the theater. Here he married the actress Wilhelmina Planer (1809-1866). In 1837-39 he held the somewhat important post of director at the Riga theater, including symphony-concerts, and began Rienzi. During the summer of 1839 he set out for Paris by way of the Baltic, London and Boulogne.

His ambition was to gain access to the Opéra by ingratiating himself with Meyerbeer, whom he came to know at Boulogne. But the latter's help, though not slight, brought no result, so that at Paris he was soon in much distress and turned to all sorts of petty tasks, like making piano-arrangements and writing feuilletons. He finished Rienzi, however, and also Die fliegende Holländer (the latter in rivalry with a version by Dietsch on the same text, practically pirated from Wagner), besides the Faust-Ouverture. The two operas were at length accepted and given at Dresden, leading to his being made court-director there in 1842 in place of Morlacchi.

The Dresden period was marked by some definite achievements. He energetically produced many operas of the highest class (by Mozart, Gluck, Beethoven, Weber, etc.), directed fine symphony- and choral concerts (being for a time leader of the Liedertafel) and not only added Tannhäuser and Lohengrin to his own list, but made extensive studies and sketches for still larger works, besides writing several extended essays. But he was beset by much hostile criticism and not a little jealousy. Tannhäuser was by many assailed as unintelligible or pernicious, so strongly that Lohengrin was not put in rehearsal. He gained nothing by drafting an ambitious plan for a great 'National Theater' (1848) and was presently entangled in the political agitations of the time, so that in 1849 he had to flee in disguise, first to Liszt at Weimar, then to Paris and finally to Zurich.

The period of his exile (till 1864) was chiefly filled with study, writing and composition, though he gave some performances in Zurich (including Tannhäuser), in 1855 served as conductor for the London Philharmonic and after 1860 led concerts in Paris, Brussels, Vienna, Prague and Russia. In 1861 occurred the production of Tannhäuser at Paris that led to riotous opposition. He was in sore financial difficulty most of the time, being carried through by the charity of a few friends, notably Liszt. Friction with his wife led to their separation in 1861. But from 1850 his list of literary works was rapidly and powerfully increased, including the poems for all his later operas except Parsifal. His plan of a tetralogy on the Nibelungen Ring became fully matured and the music for two works and part of a third completed, besides Tristan and sketches for Die Meistersinger. Though he was supported by the enthusiasm of a small circle of admirers and at times had hopes of somehow gaining favorable attention, he was often close to despair. In 1863 he published the Ring poems, supposing that the music would never be completed or given.

In 1861, however, his banishment from Germany was revoked and in 1864 Ludwig II of Bavaria offered him the place of royal director at Munich and ample support for his dramatic projects. [At the same time the current of popular interest, which had been outrageously bitter and hostile for twenty years, began to turn in his favor. Though various local conditions led to his remaining at Munich only till the end of 1865 (removing then to Tribschen, near Lucerne), the King continued his loyal patron. With his aid, supplemented by subscriptions from Wagner Societies throughout Europe and America and the proceeds of some concerts, his gigantic scheme of a special opera-house for his works was in 1872-76 realized at Bayreuth. There in 1876 the entire Ring tetralogy (completed in 1874) was at last given with a force of singers and instrumentalists recruited from all the chief opera-houses in Germany, so that the performances challenged the attention of the world. Then began the reaction which led ultimately to his full acknowledgment as one of the greatest creators in the history of musical art. His last work, Parsifal, was brought out in 1882, making a deep impression, and from that time forward the Bayreuth festivals (held at irregular intervals) became the goal of countless musical pilgrimages. Meanwhile, early in 1883, Wagner died at Venice, whither he had gone in hopes of regaining the vigor which his eager and tempestuous life had exhausted. His work at Bayreuth was continued by his second wife, Cosima Liszt (b. 1837), who in 1857-69 had been the wife of Hans von Bülow and to whom Wagner was married in 1870. She has remained the dominant force in the administration of the Bayreuth enterprise.

Wagner's final theory of the opera was reached progressively, though rapidly. At the outset he was influenced positively by Weber and the romanticists generally and negatively by all who sought more or less to cling to the habits of the concert-opera. He brought to his life-work an intense interest in the drama as such and a consuming passion for orchestral expression. His salient innovations naturally lay in reasserting the purely dramatic nature of the opera as an art-form and in reconstructing its technical procedure with the orchestra as the central agency of expression. He early began to discard the division of the action into set numbers devised with reference to mere vocal display. Instead of magnifying the craving of soloists—and of the public—for a chain of charming or exciting effects, he sought to work outward from the plot and the text for dramatic unity and force by means of varied and plastic dispositions of parts. More and more he tended to entrust the main exposition of the essential meaning of the play to the orchestra, using the voices both to give intellectual and concrete definiteness and to add their value to the total body of tonal resources. All this led to profound changes in details. The set patterns of vocal and instrumental form were replaced by a structure that at first seemed relatively formless, but which was really laid out on prodigiously enlarged and liberated lines. In it moved a multitude of themes, often of startling originality and sometimes acquiring singular suggestiveness with reference to the persons or other elements of the plot (this culminating in his studied use of the 'leitmotif'). At every point he tended to stretch or modify established habits of handling melody, harmony and rhythm so as to extract from them the maximum of dramatic suggestion. He not only poured in an unprecedented amount of tonal material of all kinds, but proceeded to mould and fashion it with extraordinary polyphonic freedom. It was this imperial handling of the fabric of his art that ultimately set him in the same high rank as Bach and Beethoven.

His characteristic instinct led him to subjects of heroic magnitude, usually of tragic import, though in Die Meistersinger he also demonstrated his command of the comic as well. His usual preference was for topics drawn from distant time or purely mythological imagination, without the sharp outlines of mere realism, and where fancy was not fettered by petty fact. To this end he explored Teutonic literature and seized upon certain grandiose figures and histories that were related to the national thought much as the Homeric legends were to Greek culture. These he rewrought in the form of rugged poems of his own, executed with daring novelty of literary method, and then illumined with a dazzling play of shifting light, besides a singular freshness of scenic and theatric artifice, so as to erect out of it all a complex union of imaginative conception, poetic and musical embodiment and elaborate stage-presentation that he did not hesitate to call 'the artwork of the future.' His greatness was found to lie, not in the audacity of his ideas, but in his transcendent powers of execution and in his final conquest of both popular and critical approval. His work not only revolutionized the course of the opera, but reverberated through the entire range of musical art.

A summary of his works is as follows:

Operas or Music-Dramas—Die Hochzeit (3 numbers only, 1833, published in 1912), Die Feen (written in 1833, first given in 1888 at Munich), Das Liebesverbot, 1836 (Magdeburg, as Die Novize von Palermo), Rienzi, die letzte der Tribunen, 1842 (Dresden), Der fliegende Holländer, 1843 (Dresden), Tannhäuser und der Sängerkrieg auf Wartburg, 1845 (Dresden), Lohengrin, 1850 (Weimar), Tristan und Isolde, 1865 (Munich), Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg, 1868 (Munich), Der Ring des Nibelungen, including a 'Vorabend' and three dramas, viz: Das Rheingold, 1869 (Munich), Die Walküre, 1870 (Munich), Siegfried, 1876 (Bayreuth), and Götterdämmerung, 1876 (Bayreuth) [the first rendering of the tetralogy as a whole being at Bayreuth on Aug. 13-17, 1876], Parsifal, 1882 (Bayreuth).

For orchestra—symphony in C (1832); overtures in B-flat (1830), D min. (1832), C (1832), for Raupach's König Enzo (1832), for Apel's Columbus (1835), Rule, Britannia (1837), Polonia (c. 1836), and Eine Faust-overtüre (1844, rewritten 1855); Trauermusik for wind, on themes from Weber's Euryanthe (1844); Huldigungsmarsch (written in 1864 for band, orchestration completed by Raff); Siegfried-Idyll (1870); Kaisermarsch (1871); Grosser Festmarsch (1876, for the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia). Also a fragment of a symphony in E (written 1834).

For piano—sonatas in D min., B-flat and A (written 1829-31); Polonaise in D for 4 hands and Fantasie in F-sharp min. (both 1831); album-pieces in E-flat (1853, for Mathilde Wesendonk), in C (1861, for Countess Metternich), in A-flat (1861, for Countess Pourtales) and in E-flat (1875, for Frau Betty Schott); waltz, Züricher Völli (1853).

For chorus—Neujahrskantate, for mixed voices, 1834 (with new text by Cornelius, 1873); Volkshymne, for mixed voices, 1837 (for accession of Nicholas I); La Descente de la Courtille, for mixed voices (written 1840); Weihgruss, for men's voices, 1843; Das Liebesmahl der Apostel, for men's voices, 1843; Gruss seiner Treuen an Friedrich August den Geliebten, for men's voices, 1843; An Webers Grabe, for men's voices a cappella, 1844.

For solo voice—Glockentöne and 7 songs for Goethe's Faust (written 1832); Der Tannenbaum (1838); Les Deux Grenadiers (1839); 3 French Romances (1840); Tout n'est qu'images fugitives (1840); 5 German Gedichte (1857-8); Kraftliedchen (1871). Also several pieces written for insertion in Marschner's Vampyr (1833), Gleich's Berggeist (1835?), Blum's Mariet Maz und Michel (1837) and Bellini's Norma (1841). Arrangements—piano-scores of Beethoven's 9th Symphony (1830), Donizetti's Favorita and Elisir d'Amore (both 1840), Halévy's Reine de Chypre and Guitarrero (both 1841) and Gluck's Iphigénie en Aulide [new text and new ending for the overture] (1846); editions of Palestrina's Stabat Mater (1848) and Mozart's Don Giovanni (1850).

Literary works—the texts of the 13 operas named above; also texts of the comic Männerlist grosser als Frauenlist (1837), Die hohe Braut (1836-42, used by Kittl as Bianca und Giuseppe, 1848), Siegfried's Tod (1848, later incorporated in Götterdämmerung), and the comedy in old style Eine Kapitulation (1871); also the dramatic sketches Die Bergwerke zu Falun (1841), Die Sarazenen (1841), Friedrich der Rothbar (1846-8), Jesus von Nazareth (1848), Wieland der Schmied (1856) and Die Sieger (1856). Numerous philosophical and critical treatises and essays, of which the more important are Die Kunst u. d. Revolution, 1849, Das Kunstwerk d. Zukunft, 1850, Kunst u. Khina, 1850, Oper u. Drama, 3 parts, 1851, Eine Mittheilung an meine Freunde, 1851, Das Judenthum in d. Musik, 1852, Zukunftsmusik, 1864, Ueber d. Dirigieren, 1869, Beethoven, 1870, Religion u. Kunst, 1880, etc.

A complete edition of his music is being issued by Breitkopf & Härtel in 18 vols., edited by Balling (from 1914). His literary writings were published by himself as Gesammelte Schriften u. Dichtungen, 9 vols. 1871-73 (2d ed. 10 vols. 1882-83, with later reprints), and edited, with additions, by Wolzogen and Sternfeld as a 5th ed. 12 vols. 1911 (Eng. trans. by W. A. Ellis, 8 vols. 1892-1900, but not including the poems). Note also Tappert's Wagner-Lexikon, 1877, Glasenapp and Stein's Wagner-Lexikon, 1883, and Glasenapp's Wagner-Enzyklopädie, 2 vols. 1891.

Among the many memoirs are to be named his own Mein Leben [to 1864 only], 1870 and 2 vols. 1911, and works by Glasenapp, 2 vols. 1876-77 (extended to 6 vols. 1912), Wolzogen, 1883, Tappert, 1883, Pohl, 1883, Hueffer, 1893 (2d ed. 1912), Jullien, 1886, Torchi, 1890, Finek, 2 vols. 1893 (5th ed. 1898), Chamberlain, 1894 (4th ed. 2 vols. 1911), Lidgely, 1899 (2d ed. 1904), Ellis, 6 vols. 1902-08 (in part from Glasenapp), Henderson, 1901, Kienzl, 1904 (7th ed. 1908), Newman, 1904 and 1914, Mrs. Burrell 1905 (early life only), Adler, 1905, (2d ed. 1923) Bürkner, 1906 (7th ed. 1919), Koch, 3 vols. 1907-18, Schjelderup, 1907, Lichtenberger, 1909, E. Schnitz, 1909, Hadden, 1910, Kapp, 1910 (10th ed. 1913), Pfohl, 1911, Batka, 1912, Runciman, 1913, and Huckel, 1914, besides a vast number of critical and polemic writings. See Oesterlein, Katalog einer Wagner-Bibliothek, 4 vols. 1882-95 (over 10,000 titles), and other bibliographies by Kastner, 1878 and 1896, Silège, 1902, Pabst, 1905, Frankenstein, 1912, and in the Wagner-Jahrbuch, from 1906. See also the Bayreuther Blätter, edited by Wolzogen, from 1878.

In 1887 a Wagner Museum was opened at Vienna and in 1897 removed to Eisenach. See works by Oesterlein, 1884, '92, Wolzogen, 1888 (in Neue Zeitschrift) and Kloss, 1904. G.

Waisel, Matthias. 16th C.

Wakefield, Augusta Mary (n. Kendal, 1853). English concert-contralto and since 1885 the promoter of a system of competitive choir-festivals at many places. G.

Walcker, Eberhard Friedrich (Cannstatt, 1794-1872, Ludwigsburg). Noted Würtemberger organ-maker, trained by his father, from 1820 building up an independent business at Ludwigsburg, which passed to his five sons, including two now in charge. They have supplied more than 1500 instruments, many of great importance, in Germany, Austria and Russia (including the famous Music Hall organ in Boston, Mass., in use in 1863-84). G.

Waldersee, Paul, Graf von (Potsdam, 1831-1906, n. Schweinfurt). Prussian army-officer, from 1871 editor for Breitkopf & Härtel in Leipzig of the complete editions of Beethoven and Mozart, with a noted Sammlung musikal. Vorträge, 5 vols. 1879-84 (60 essays by various authors, including 3 by the editor on works by Mozart, Schumann and Palestrina), as well as other articles in periodicals. G.

Waldner, Franz (n. Meran, 1843-1917, Innsbruck). Tyrolese surgeon and local historian, author of monographs on music at the court of Innsbruck (1897-1904, in Monatshefte für Musikgesch.), on Isaac, Tritonius and Tyrolese luthiers and violin-makers (1903-11, in Zeitschr. d. Ferdinandeum).

Waldstein, Ferdinand Ernst Gabriel, Graf von (Dux, 1762-1823, Vienna). Cultivated Bohemian amateur, from 1787 one of Beethoven's devoted friends and patrons. To him Beethoven dedicated the sonata in C (op. 53, 1804), besides using Waldstein's text for the Ritter-Ballett (1791) and a theme of his for 4-hand variations in C (1794). G.

Waldstein, Wilhelm von. Composer of the opera Tonietta, 1904 (Linz).

Waldeufel, Emil (Strasburg, 1837-1915, Paris). Alsatian dance-composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1860 active in Paris, in 1865 becoming musician to the Empress Eugénie and director at the court-balls, besides making tours to London, Berlin, Vienna, etc. Wrote over 260 dances, mostly for orchestra, but also arranged for piano. G.

Waley, Simon (London, 1827-1875, do.). Gifted English (Jewish) pianist, pupil of Moscheles, W. S. Bennett, G. A. Osborne, Horsley and Molique, from 1848 well known in London as player and composer (in the style of Mendelssohn). Wrote a concerto, 2 piano-trios, piano-pieces, Psalms 117-118, part-songs and songs. He was also active as a stock-broker. G.

Walker, Edyth (Hopewell, N. Y. 1870). Talented American operatic contralto (also mezzo-soprano), trained at the Dresden Conservatory, appearing in 1895 at the Gewandhaus (concert) and in Vienna (opera), till 1903 engaged at Vienna and as guest elsewhere, in 1903-06 at the Metropolitan, New York, from 1906 at both Berlin and Hamburg and in 1912-17 at Munich. Since 1900 she has also sung repeatedly in London. A.

Walker, Ernest (Bombay, 1870). Able English (East Indian) composer and writer, educated at Oxford (Mus.D. 1898), in music self-taught, since 1900 music-director at Balliol College, Oxford, and in 1899-1902 editor of the Musical Gazette. Has written an overture, an Intermezzo for strings, a piano-quintet, a quintet for horn and strings, a piano-quartet, a quartet-fantasia, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for viola, pieces for violin, for viola and for 'cello, an organ Prelude and Fugue, a Stabat Mater, the choral works Hymn to Dionysus and Ode to a Nightingale, part-songs and songs. Author of a short life of Beethoven (1905) and a History of Music in England, 1907. G.

Walker, Joseph Cooper (Dublin, 1760-1810, in France). Irish antiquarian, author of Historical Memoirs of the Irish Bards, 1786, and a history of the opera (1805).

Walker, Joseph W., & Sons. Firm of organ-makers in London, founded in 1740 by George England and from 1820 conducted by Joseph W. Walker (d. 1870), who had been an apprentice earlier, and continued by his son James John Walker (1846-1922). They have built many noted instruments for England and the British Colonies. G.

Wallace, Grace, née Stein (Edinburgh, 1815-1878), wife of Sir James Maxwell Wallace. Translator of letters by Mendelssohn (1862-63), Mozart (1865), Beethoven (1866) and other musicians (1867), and of Polko's Mendelssohn (1865) and Nohl's Mozart (1877). G.

Wallace, William (Greenock, 1860). Eminent Scottish composer, educated as a surgeon (M.D. 1888) and specialist in ophthalmology, in music almost wholly self-taught, from about 1890 increasingly prominent in London both as gifted and original in the use of large forms and as one of the chief promoters of the new interest in British composition. From 1899 he was Bantock's aide as conductor at New Brighton and also joined in editing the New Quarterly Musical Review. From 1905 he was secretary of the Society of British Composers and also of the Royal Philharmonic Society. His works have been given place at various representative festivals of recent British music. Since 1912 he has also been interested in the subject of musical copyright. During the World War he served as ophthalmologist. His wife, née Otilie Helen McLaren, is an accomplished sculptor. Has written the symphonies The Creation, 1899, and Koheleth (choral), the symphonic poems The Passing of Beatrice, 1892, Amboss oder Hammer, 1896, Sister Helen, 1899, Greeting to the New Century, 1901, Sir William Wallace, 1905 (for the Wallace Sexcentenary), and François Villon, 1909, the orchestral suites The Lady from the Sea, 1892, Pelléas and Mélisande, 1900, and Moidart, the overture In Praise of Scottish Poesie, 1894, a prelude to Æschylus' Eumenides (1893), the scenas Lord of Darkness, 1890, The Outlaw and The Rhapsody of Mary Magdalena, 1896, the burlesque cantata The Massacre of the MacPherson, 1899, a piano-trio, various vocal quartets and trios, the song-cycles Freebooter Songs, 1899, Jacobite Songs, 1900, and Lords of the Sea, 1901, and many other songs (often to original texts). Author of the mystery-play The Divine Surrender, 1895, The Threshold of Music, 1908, and The Musical Sense, 1914, articles in periodicals and translations of the texts of Berlioz' Damnation de Faust, Missa's Muguette, Strauss' Feuersnot and Leroux' Chemineau, as well as of songs by Sibelius, Weingartner, etc. G. A.

Wallace, William Vincent (Waterford, 1813-1865, in the Pyrenees). Noted Irish violinist and composer, even as a boy playing in a theater-orchestra in Dublin and later as soloist. In 1835 he migrated to New South Wales as a pioneer settler and later wandered in the East Indies, South America, Mexico and the United States, occasionally giving concerts with striking success, returning to London in 1845, but later making further trips to North and South America and at one time living for a period in Germany. He lost all his savings through the failure of a piano-factory in New York and in 1850 had a narrow escape in a steamboat-explosion. Wrote the operas Mariana, 1845, Matilda of Hungary, 1847, The Maid of Zurich, Lurline, 1860, The Amber Witch, 1861, Love's Triumph, 1862, The Desert Flower, 1863, and Estrella (given by his wife to W. K. Bassford to complete), 3 piano-nocturnes and other salon-music. Memoirs by Pougin, 1866, and Flood, 1912. G.

Wallaschek, Richard (Brünn, 1860-1917, Vienna). Eminent Moravian musicologist, educated at Vienna, Heidelberg and Tübingen Universities (Ph.D. and Jur.D.), from 1886 docent in rhetoric at Freiburg University, in 1890-95 engaged in research-work at the British Museum in London, and from 1896 lecturer on musicology at Vienna University, besides in 1896-1909 serving as critic for Die Zeit, in 1900-02 teaching æsthetics at the Conservatory and becoming prominent in learned societies. Author of Æsthetik d. Tonkunst, 1886, Primitive Music, 1893 (enlarged as Anfänge d. Tonkunst, 1903), Psychologie u. Pathologie d. Vorstellung, 1905, Gesch. d. Wiener Hofoper, 4 parts, (1907-09), and a long list of valuable monographs in periodicals on the origin and primitive development of music, on problems in musical æsthetics, etc. Memoir by Lach, 1917 (in Zeitsch. für Ästhetik). G.

Wallek-Walewski, Boleslav (Lemberg, 1885). Galician composer of the opera Dola, 1919, fine choral works, church-music, pieces for orchestra and piano, etc. He is opera-conductor in Cracow.

Wallenstein, Martin (Frankfort, 1843-1896, do.). Able Hessian pianist, pupil of Dreyschock, Hauptmann and Rietz, from about 1865 favorably known through many tours. Wrote the comic opera Das Testament, 1870, an overture, a piano-concerto, studies and pieces.

Wallerstein, Anton (Dresden, 1813-1892, Geneva). Saxon violinist and dance-composer, from 1829 playing in the Dresden court-orchestra and in 1832-57 in that at Hanover, then living at Dresden. Wrote about 300 dances (some of which produced in London and Paris in 1853-55), violin-variations and songs. G.

Wallis, John (1616-1693). 17th C.

Walliser, Christoph Thomas (1568-1648). 17th C. G.

Wallner, Bertha Antonia (Munich, 1876). Bavarian musicologist, trained at the Munich Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1910), author of monographs on Virdung (1911, Kirchenmusik. Jahrbuch), the musicalia in the Wittelsbach Exhibition at the Munich Library (1912, I. M. G. Zeitschr.), and Musikal. Denkmäler d. Steinätzkunst d. XVI. u. XVII. Jahrh. 1912, besides articles on the local music-history of Munich.

Wallnöfer, Adolf (Vienna, 1854). Austrian operatic tenor and vocal composer, pupil of Waldmüller, Krenn, Dessoff and Rokitansky, from about 1875 appearing in concert in Vienna (as baritone), from 1880 at the Olmütz Opera, from 1882 engaged with Neumann's traveling-troupe and following him to Bremen and Prague, in 1895-96 theater-manager at Stettin, then for a season each at the Metropolitan, New York, and in Russia, settling in Nuremberg and later returning to Munich. Has written the opera Eddystone, 1889, the choral works Die Grenzen der Menschheit, Gersprenz, Der Blumen Rache and Hymne an die Erde, various choruses, many notable ballads and songs (Wallnöfer-Album, 3 vols.) and piano-pieces. Author of Resonanztonlehre, 1911.

Walmisley, Thomas Attwood (London, 1814-1856, Hastings). Able English organist, pupil of Attwood, from 1830 at Croydon (London suburb) and from 1833 at Trinity and St. John's Colleges in Cambridge, besides assisting at other colleges and pursuing mathematical studies. In 1836 he succeeded Clarke-Whitfield as university professor and in 1848 became Mus.D. Wrote 2 Installation Odes, services, over 20 anthems (edited as Cathedral Music, 1857, by his father) and songs, and edited a chant-collection (1845). His father, Thomas Forbes Walmisley (1783-1866), in 1814-54 was organist at St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London, and a well-known glee-composer. G.

Walsh, John (? -1736). Enterprising music-publisher in London, beginning business about 1695 and being prominent in Handel's time, for whom he issued many works. He was followed by his son John (d. 1766) and he in turn by William Randall. Walsh was one of the first to use the process of punched soft-metal plates (from about 1730). G.

Walter, Anton (Haimhausen, 1845-1896, Reichenhall). Bavarian priest, from about 1880 professor at the Landshut Gymnasium, author of a life of Franz Witt (1889) and many articles in periodicals on Catholic church-music. From 1879 he was active in connection with the Cäcilienverein. Theol. D. of Freiburg Univ. in 1890.

Walter, August (Stuttgart, 1821-1896, Basel). Württemberger composer, from 1846 music-director at Basel, writing a symphony, an overture, an octet for strings and wood-wind, 3 string-quartets, a Fantasie und Capriccio for clarinet, men's choruses and songs.

Walter, Bruno (Berlin, 1876), name originally Schlesinger. Brilliant Prussian conductor, trained at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin), from about 1895 gaining experience at Cologne, Hamburg, Breslau, Presburg, Riga and Berlin (Royal Opera), in 1901-13 conductor at the Hofoper at Vienna and in 1914-22 court-director at Munich. Has written 2 symphonies, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, the choral work Das Siegesfest and songs. Sketch by Komorn-Rebhan, 1914.

Walter, Friedrich Wilhelm (Mannheim, 1870). Badenese historian and critic, educated at Bonn and Heidelberg Universities (Ph.D. 1892), settling in Mannheim as critic for the General-anzeiger, writer for periodicals and director of the City Library. Author of monographs on music in Mannheim (1897-99) and chapters on music-history in Hans Krämer's Das 19. Jahrh. in Wort u. Bild, 3 vols. 1898.

Walter, George A. (New York, 1875). German-American concert-tenor, pupil of M. Vidal, Scheide mantel, Zur Mühlen and W. Berger, since about 1900 noted in Berlin as an interpreter of Bach's works and as lieder-singer. He has been steadily engaged at all the principal Bach festivals in Germany.

Walter, George William (New York, 1851-1911, Washington). American organist, pupil of Paine and S. P. Warren, in 1869 settling in Washington, where he was held in high regard (Mus.D. of Columbian Univ. 1892). He gathered an exceptional library. A.

Walter, Gustav (Bilin, 1834-1910, Vienna). Noted Bohemian operatic tenor, trained at the Prague Conservatory, appearing first at Brünn and in 1856-87 chief lyric tenor at the Vienna Opera, as well as a favorite song-singer. G.

Walter, Ignaz (Radowitz, 1759-1822, Ratisbon). Able Bohemian operatic tenor and composer, pupil of Starzer, from 1779 at the Vienna Opera, from 1783 at Prague, from 1789 at Mayence and after 1793 with the Grossmann troupe at Hanover and Bremen, succeeding to the leadership in 1796 and touring widely with it. Wrote many singspiele for this company, including Der ausgeprügelte Teufel, Die böse Frau, Doctor Faust [the first stage-work based on Goethe's poem], etc., several masses and motets, a coronation-cantata for Leopold II (1791), Schillers Totenfeier, 1806, and other cantatas, a quartet for harp, flute, violin and 'cello, etc.

Walter, Karl (n. Montabaur, 1862). Hessian church-musician, trained at the Montabaur Seminary and the Ratisbon Music School, in 1882-86 employed as school-teacher, from 1888 organist at Biebrich, from 1893 teacher at the Montabaur Seminary and since 1903 at the Seminary at Limburg-on-Lahn. Has written motets, organ-pieces and a prize triple fugue, besides able articles for many periodicals and an important Glockenkunde, 1913.

Waltershausen, Hermann Wolfgang, Freiherr von (Göttingen, 1882). Hanoverian composer, pupil of M. J. Erb and Thuille, since 1900 settled at Munich, where in 1917 he opened a Seminary for Progressive Music-Students, himself lecturing on aesthetics, the opera, etc., and since 1920 has taught at the Conservatory. Has written the operas Else Klapperzehen, 1909 (comedy), Oberst Chabert, 1912, Richardis, 1915, and Die Rauensteiner Hochzeit, 1919 (original text), and many songs. Author of Musikal. Stillehre (brochures on various famous operas, etc.) and a life of Strauss (1921).

Walther, Johann (1496-1570). 16th C. G.

Walther, Johann Gottfried (Erfurt, 1684-1748, Weimar). Eminent Thuringian organist, pupil of Adlung, Kretschmar and J. Bernhard Bach, from 1702 at the Thomaskirche in Erfurt, from 1707 town-organist at Weimar and teacher in the ducal family, and from 1720 court-musician there. After J. S. Bach he was counted the finest player of his day (called by Mattheson 'a second Pachelbel'), especially noted for his chorale-elaborations. He was related to Bach (their mothers both being Lammerhirts) and in 1708-17 they were closely associated at Weimar. His organ-works have been edited for the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst by Seiffert, including fugues, toccatas, chorale-variations, preludes, etc., and he also wrote an unaccompanied Clavierconcert (1741) and collected 5 vols. of chorale-elaborations by various composers. Author of the pioneer dictionary of both biographies and terms (1732). See essay by Gehrman in the Vierteljahrsschr. für Musik-Wissenschaft, 1891. G.

Walther, Johann Jakob (1650-?). 17th C. G.

Walthew, Richard Henry (London, 1822). English composer, pupil of the Guildhall School (London) and the Royal College, in 1900-04 music-director at the Passmore Edwards Settlement (Bloomsbury), since 1905 in charge of opera-classes at the Guildhall School, since 1907 professor at Queen's College and since 1909 also conductor of the South Place Orchestra (Finsbury). Has written the choral works The Pied Piper of Hamelin, 1893, and Ode to a Nightingale, the operettas The Gardeners and The Enchanted Island, 3 Night-Scenes for orchestra, orchestral variations, a piano-concerto (1894), a

Konzertstück for violin and orchestra, a piano-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a violin-sonata, suites for clarinet (or viola), part-songs and songs. Author of The Development of Chamber Music, 1909. G.

Wälzel, Camillo (Magdeburg, 1829-1895, Vienna). From about 1860 noted as the author of many texts for operettas (often with Genée) that had great importance in the success of that form in Germany. He used the pen-name 'F. Zell.'

Wambach, Émile Xavier (Arlon, 1854). Belgian violinist and composer, trained at the Antwerp Conservatory, where in 1912 he followed Blockx as director, having previously been inspector of music-schools throughout the country (from 1902). Has written the choral works Nathan's Parable, Moses at the Nile, Yolande, Flanders, Spring, other cantatas and choruses, a mass, a Te Deum and other church-music, songs, the symphonic poem On the Banks of the Scheldt, orchestral fantasias, etc.

Wangemann, Otto (n. Demmin, 1848-1914, Berlin). Pomeranian organist and vocal teacher, pupil of Flügel and Kiel, from 1878 organist and teacher at the Demmin Gymnasium, from 1886 organist at the Luisenkirche in Charlottenburg and teacher at the Gymnasium, and from 1905 in similar posts at the 1st Realschule in Berlin. Author of Grundriss d. Musikgeschichte, 1878, Gesch. d. Orgel, 1879 (3d ed. 1887), Gesch. d. Oratoriums, 1880 (3d ed. 1882), and Leitfaden für d. Singunterricht an Gymnasien. In 1879 he was editor of Der Organist and from 1880 of Tonkunst (following Hahn). Also wrote a choral Weihnachtsmusik, school-songs and piano-pieces.

Wanhal [Vanhall], Johann Baptist (Neu-Nechanitz, 1739-1813, Vienna), of Dutch descent. Bohemian violinist and prolific composer, pupil of Dittersdorf, with study in Italy, from about 1770 working in Vienna. Though without special significance, his works had a great vogue for a time, anticipating the stronger impress of the classical style under Haydn and Mozart. Wrote about 100 symphonies, 100 string-quartets, many trios, duos and violin-sonatas, numerous piano-sonatas, sonatinas, fantasias, variations, dances, etc., 25 masses, 2 Requiems, a Stabat Mater and much other sacred music, 2 operas, etc. G.

Wannenmacher [Vannius] (?) (?-1551). 16th C. G.

Wanski, Johann Nepomuk (?1800-?). Polish violinist, pupil of Baillot, from about 1825 widely known through tours in southern Europe and from 1839, in broken health, settled in Aix (Provence). Wrote a violin-concertino, fugues, caprices, variations, fantasias and études, besides methods for violin and for viola. G.

Wanzura, Ernst, Baron (Waneberg, ?1750-1802, Petrograd). Austrian army-officer who removed to Russia and in 1786-97 was director of the Imperial Theater at Petrograd and from 1787 also in charge of the court-music and violinist at the Opera. Wrote the opera Archideyich, 1787.

Ward, Frank Edwin (Wysox, Pa. 1872). Gifted American organist and composer, pupil of Spanuth, J. P. Lawrence, S. A. Pearce, Macfarlane and MacDowell (Mosenthal Fellow at Columbia, 1902-04), in 1902-13 organist at Columbia University, in 1900-05 also at Rye, N. Y., from 1902 at Temple Israel and since 1906 at Holy Trinity, besides since 1909 teaching theory at the University. Has written the symphony Shakespearean Moods, an Ocean Rhapsody for orchestra, the orchestral scherzo Peter Pan, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, a violin-rhapsody, 2 organ-sonatas and many pieces, a Rhapsodie Bohème for two pianos, many piano-pieces, a mass, the cantatas The Saviour of the World and The Divine Birth, 3 services, about 30 anthems, part-songs and many songs. A.

Ward, John. 17th C. G.

Ward, John Charles (London, 1835). English organist and choral conductor, trained as choirboy at the Temple Church, from 1852 organist at various London churches (from 1890 at St. Mary the Virgin, Primrose Hill) and from 1855 active in the Leslie Choir, in 1856-85 serving as organist and assistant-conductor. Wrote the choral works The Wood, A Psalm of Life and The Swedish Singers, services, anthems, organ-music, etc. He was an expert on the concertina and wrote some music for it.

Ware, Harriet (Waupun, Wis. 1877). American pianist and composer, pupil of Wm. Mason, Mme. La Grange, Stojowski and Kaun, from 1906 living in New York (now at Plainfield, N. J.). In 1919-20 and '22 she made tours as pianist. In 1913 she married H. M. Krumbhaar. Has written a piano-concerto, the cantata Sir Oluf, 1911 (for women's voices), the tone-poem Undine, 1915 (also given as a short opera), The Cross for voice and orchestra, and many other effective solos and songs or song-cycles, besides piano-pieces. A.

Ware, Helen (Woodbury, N. J. 1887). American violinist, pupil of Frederic Hahn, H. A. Clarke, Sevcik and Hubay, in 1912 appearing at Pest and elsewhere in Europe, with two American tours. Has written many transcriptions of Hungarian songs for the violin and songs, besides a brochure on The Poetry and Power of Hungarian and Slav Music and magazine-articles on the same subject. A.

Wareing, Herbert Walter (Birmingham, 1857-1918, Malvern). English organist, pupil of Heap and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1880 active as organist, from 1890 director of the choir-school of Worcester Cathedral and from 1892 piano-teacher at Malvern College, as well as organist at Christ Church there (from 1911). Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1886. He wrote the cantatas The Wreck of the Hesperus, The Angel-Reapers, The Nativity, The Good Shepherd and New Year's Eve, several operettas for children, services, anthems, part-songs, songs and pieces for organ, piano, violin and 'cello.

Warnecke, Johann Heinrich Friedrich (Bodenteich, 1856). Excellent Hanoverian double-bassist, pupil of Bontemps and Walther, from 1874 engaged in various orchestras, in 1889 settling in Hamburg and from 1893 playing in the Philharmonic and teaching at the Conservatory. Author of Das Studium d. Kontrabass-Spiels, 2 parts, 3d ed. 1901, and Ad Infinitum, 1909 (a study of the history and possibilities of his instrument).

Warner, H. Waldo (Northampton, 1876). English violist in the London Quartet and composer of 2 orchestral suites, 5 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, sonatas for violin and for viola, songs and the operettas The Royal Vagrants and Cupid's Market.

Warnery, Edmond (Elbeuf, 1876). Able Swiss-French operatic baritone-tenor, trained at the Paris Conservatory, appearing (as baritone) in 1898 (première of Lacombe's Maréchal Chaudron) and in 1899-1907 engaged at the Opéra-Comique (using the stage-name 'Edwy'), then retiring for further voice-culture, but soon reappearing as tenor. Since 1910 he has sung with the Chicago Opera Company. He took part at the premières of Massenet's Cendrillon (1899) and Jongleur de Notre-Dame (1902), Erlanger's Juif Polonais (1900), Leroux' Reine Fiammette (1903), etc., and has had much success in Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande. A.

Warnke, Heinrich (n. Heide, 1871). Noted Holsteiner 'cellist, pupil of the Hamburg and Leipzig Conservatories, from 1890 appearing as soloist at Baden, Hamburg and Frankfurt, from 1898 in the Kaim Orchestra at Munich and also the Weingartner Trio (with Rettich as violinist), and since 1905 in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and also in 1905-07 in its Quartet. A.

Warnots, Henri (Brussels, 1832-1893, n. do.). Belgian operatic tenor, pupil of his father and the Brussels Conservatory, from 1856 appearing at Liège, the Opéra-Comique (Paris), Strasburg and Brussels (from 1867), then becoming teacher at the Brussels Conservatory and conductor of the Société de Musique, but in 1870 establishing his own school in the suburbs. His daughter Elly [Elizabeth] (b. 1857) was from 1878 a favorite stage- and concert-soprano at Brussels, Florence, Paris (Opéra-Comique) and London. G.

Warot, Charles (Dunkirk, 1804-1836, Brussels). Belgian violinist at the Brussels opera, writing 3 masses, a Requiem, other church-music and 5 operas, including L'Aveugle de Clarens, 1829. Two brothers were also competent musicians, the one at Rennes, the other at Brussels.

Warot, Victor Alexandre Joseph (Verviers, 1834-1906, Paris), nephew of the foregoing. Able Belgian operatic tenor, from 1858 engaged at the Opéra-Comique and the Opéra in Paris and in 1865-74 at La Monnaie, Brussels, then teaching in Paris. He sang at the premières of Massé's Mule de Pedro (1863) and Boulanger's Docteur Magnus (1864).

Warren, George William (Albany, N. Y. 1828-1902, New York). American organist, self-taught, from 1846 at St. Peter's in Albany, from 1858 at St. Paul's there, from 1860 at Holy Trinity in Brooklyn and from 1870 at St. Thomas's, New York, writing considerable church-music and editing a hymnal (1888). A.

Warren, Joseph (London, 1804-1881, Bexley). English organist, from 1834 at St. Mary's (R. C.) Chapel (Chelsea), writing several masses and editing Hilton's Ayres, Boyce's Cathedral Music, Beethoven's Mount of Olives and a Biographical Dict. of Musicians, 1845. G.

Warren, Richard Henry (Albany, N. Y. 1859), son of George W. above. Gifted American organist and conductor, pupil of his father, from 1880 at All Souls' in New York, in 1886-1905 at St. Bartholomew's and from 1907 at the Ascension, besides in 1886-95 founding and directing the Church Choral Society and in 1905 some orchestral summer-concerts. Parker's Hora Novissima (1893) was written for his chorus and first given by it. Has written the opera Phyllis, 1900, the operettas Igala, 1880, All on a Summer's Day, 1882, Magnolia, 1886, and The Rightful Heir, 1899, the cantata Ticonderoga, 1894, some orchestral pieces, a string-quartet, services, anthems and songs. A.

Warren, Samuel Prowse (Montreal, 1841-1915, New York). Eminent American (Canadian) organist, pupil of Haupt, Gustav Schumann and Wieprecht, in 1855-61 and '64-66 playing in Montreal, from 1866 at All Souls' in New York, in 1868-94 at Grace (except 1874-76, at Trinity) and from 1895 at the 1st Presbyterian Church, East Orange, N. J. In 1880-88 he conducted the New York Vocal Union. He gave hundreds of recitals in New York alone, besides many elsewhere, and through these and his numerous pupils exerted a wide and permanent influence. Wrote much church-music, including organ-fugues, preludes, etc., remarkable organ-transcriptions of orchestral works, piano-pieces and songs. A.

Warren, Thomas. In 1761-94 the secretary of the Noblemen's and Gentlemen's Catch Club in London and in 1763-94 the editor of the remarkable collection Catches, Canons and Glee's, in annual numbers (over 650 pieces in all). He probably died in 1794. G.

Wartel, Pierre François (Versailles, 1806-1882, Paris). French tenor and noted vocal teacher, trained at Choron's Institution and the Paris Conservatory, in 1831-46 taking minor parts at the Opéra and making some tours in Germany, then settling in Paris as a foremost teacher (Nilsson and Trebelli among his pupils). From as early as 1842 in Vienna and later in Paris he was active in introducing the songs of Schubert. G.

Wasielewski, Joseph Wilhelm von (n. Danzig, 1822-1896, Sondershausen). Excellent Polish-Prussian violinist, conductor and writer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1845 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra, at the Opera and for the Euterpe concerts, besides acting as critic for the Signale and other papers, in 1850-52 concertmaster of the Düsseldorf orchestra (under Schumann), then conductor at Bonn of the new Gesangverein, the Concordia and the Beethoven-Verein, from 1855 engaged in literary work at Dresden, in 1869-84 town-director at Bonn and finally in retirement at Sondershausen. His ability as a writer brought him several honors. Author of a biography of Schumann (1858, 4th ed. 1906, supplemented by Schumanniana, 1884), Die Violine u. ihre Meister, 1869 (6th ed. 1919), Die Violine im 17. Jahrh. u. d. Anfänge Instrumentalkomposition, 1874, Gesch. d. Instrumentalmusik im 16. Jahrh. 1878, a life of Beethoven (1888, 2 vols.), Das Violoncell u. seine Geschichte, 1889 (2d ed. 1911, edited by his son), a life of Reinecke (1892), Aus siebzig Jahren, 1896 (reminiscences), essays in Waldersee's Sammlung on the musical princes in Europe [to 1800] (1879) and on Goethe's relations to music (1880) and articles in various periodicals. Wrote also the violin-pieces Herbstblumen (set of 9), a Nocturne, etc., and patriotic songs. G.

Wassermann, Heinrich Joseph (n. Fulda, 1791-1838, n. Basel). Hessian violinist and conductor, pupil of Spohr, employed as player at Hechingen, Zurich and Donaueschingen and later orchestral conductor at Geneva and Basel. Wrote a string-quartet, a quartet for flute and strings, quartet-variations, a Divertissement for violin and orchestra, variations for bassoon and strings, various dances and guitar-pieces.

Watson, Henry (Burnley, 1846-1911, Salford). English organist and choral conductor, for many years at the Congregational Chapel at Withington (Manchester), and conductor of choral societies in Manchester, including from 1885 the Vocal Union (founded by him and Henry Wilson in 1867). Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1887. He collected a library of about 30,000 volumes, which he gave to the city in 1899. Wrote the opera Fair Rosine, 1882, music for Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra, a Shakespearean Cantata, the cantata The Deliverance of Israel, Psalm 103, part-songs and songs. Memoir in Musical Times, 1909.

Watson, Henry C. (London, 1818-1875, New York.) English critic and editor, settled in New York from 1841, where in 1843 he started the Musical Chronicle (later the American Musical Times), from 1855 was the first editor of Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper and in 1863 founded the American Art Journal. He was prominent also as promoter of various musical enterprises, including the Philharmonic Society. A.

Watson, Thomas. 16th C. G.

Watson, William Michael (Newcastle, 1840-1889, n. London). English vocal composer and writer (pen-name, 'Jules Favre'), in 1883 founding the West End School of Music in London. Wrote the cantata Aladdin, 1885, part-songs, effective songs and piano-pieces.

Watts, John. A London publisher (from about 1725) who in 1727-39 issued most of the ballad-operas of the time, including The Beggar's Opera in 1727, and also The Musical Miscellany, 6 vols. 1729-31. In 1725-26 the young Benjamin Franklin was a journeyman in his shop. The business was continued by J. & R. Tonson. G.

Wead, Charles Kasson (Malone, N. Y. 1848). American physicist and patent-examiner in Washington, author of Contributions to the History of Musical Scales, 1900 (U. S. Nat. Museum Report) and various articles on acoustics. A.

Weaver, John (Shrewsbury, 1673-1760, do.). English dancing-master in London, author of the earliest English books on dancing (1706) and of further books in 1712, '21 and '28. He also produced pantomimes at Drury Lane in 1702-33. G.

Webb, Daniel (Taunton, 1735-1815, Bath). English author of Observations on the Correspondence between Poetry and Music, 1769.

Webb, George James (n. Salisbury, 1803-1887, Orange, N. J.). English organist and vocal teacher, from 1830 active in Boston (U. S.) as organist and associate of Lowell Mason in promoting musical education, besides conducting concerts of the Musical Fund Society. In 1870 he moved to Orange and continued teaching in New York. A.

Webbe, Samuel (London, 1740-1816, do.). Excellent English glee-composer, from 1763 noted for a long list of catches, canons and glees (27 prizes from the Catch Club), from 1784 secretary of the Catch Club and from 1787 also librarian of the Glee Club. From 1776 he further served as organist for the Portuguese and Sardinian Embassies. Published 9 vols. of catches, glees, etc. (later reprinted with 3 more vols.), various collections of masses, motets, anthems and tunes, a harpsichord-concerto, a Divertissement for wind-instruments, etc. G.

Webbe, Samuel (London, 1770-1843, do.), son of the foregoing. English organist and glee-composer, pupil of his father and Clementi, from about 1798 organist at the Unitarian Chapel in Liverpool and, after a sojourn in London in about 1817-25, at St. Nicholas' and St. Patrick's (R. C.). Wrote many fine glees, madrigals, masses, harpsichord-sonatas, organ-pieces, etc., and edited the collection Convito Armonico, 4 vols. (glees, catches and canons), besides a textbook in harmony. G.

Webber, Amherst (Cannes, 1867). English-French composer, pupil of Nicodé and the Paris Conservatory, from about 1890 accompanist and coach at Covent Garden and the Metropolitan, New York. Has written the short opera Fiorella, 1905, a symphony (1904), a Scherzo Sinfonico for organ, part-songs, duets and graceful songs. G.

Weber Piano Company. A noted piano-making firm in New York, established in 1852 by Albert Weber (1828-1879) and continued by his son. In 1903 it was merged with the Æolian Company. A.

Weber, Bernhard Anselm (Mannheim, 1766-1821, Berlin). Badenese pianist and conductor, pupil of Vogler, Einberger and Holzbauer, from about 1785 touring as an expert on Röllig's xänorphica, from 1787 conductor for the Grossmann troupe at Hanover, in 1790-92 associated with Vogler at Stockholm and from 1792 conductor at the Königstädter Theater in Berlin and continuing later as royal director after it was united with the Italian Opera (about 1805). From 1793 he was a partisan of Gluck, introducing some of his works at Berlin and trying to imitate his style. Wrote various singspiele and other stage-works, choruses, part-songs and songs.

Weber, Carl Maria Friedrich Ernest, Freiherr von (Eutin, [Dec. 18] 1786-1826 [June 5], London), son of Franz Anton below and stepbrother of Edmond. Distinguished North German pianist, conductor and composer, often called the founder of the romantic movement in German music. He came of a musical family, among whose ramifications was the Mannheim circle in which Mozart sought his wife (see Fridolin below), and his father for many years traveled all over Germany and Austria with his wife and children as a theatrical and musical troupe. In this gipsy-like environment the boy acquired the elements of music, drawing and painting, with instruction at intervals from Heuschkel at Hildburghausen, Michael Haydn at Salzburg, Valesi and Kalcher at Munich and Vogler at Vienna. He also gained much knowledge of the world and a valuable sense of the German popular spirit and life. Before 1800 he appeared as a player and undertook composition for the stage. With his father he was for a time much engrossed over Senefelder's application of lithography to music-printing. Through Vogler he studied a wide range of the older music. At Vienna he came to know many musicians, including Haydn, Hummel and Gänsbacher.

In 1804-06, on Vogler's recommendation, he was opera-director at Breslau, gaining experience in conducting and also perfecting himself as a concert-pianist. Near the end of this period he was much injured by drinking acid through mistake, permanently affecting his voice. In 1806-07 he lived under the patronage of Duke Eugene of Württemberg at his castle in Silesia. Thence he went to Stuttgart as private secretary to the Duke's brother Ludwig and music-master for his children. This position had many social advantages and brought him in contact with some good musicians (especially Danzi). But his patron was prodigal and dissipated and much out of favor with the King. At length in 1810 the latter seized a pretext to imprison Weber on a charge of fraud and, though this was disproved, to banish him. For the next two or three years he was largely occupied in concert-tours, with considerable stays at Munich and elsewhere, bringing out his opera Silvana at Frankfort and Berlin.

Early in 1813 he was suddenly made conductor at the National Opera in Prague, with opportunity for and incentive to a thorough reorganization. Gathering a notable company of singers and players, he speedily demonstrated his extraordinary capacity as director by producing many works with great perfection, dramatic as well as musical. But the Prague public and musicians were not as responsive and companionable as he wished, so that he used his vacations for visits to other cities. Especially at Berlin he thus fell in with the rising tide of German exultation over the decline of Napoleon and under this stimulus he wrote many patriotic choruses and the cantata Kampf und Sieg (after Waterloo), which have remained truly national songs. In 1816 he resigned at Prague, though without definite prospects.

Late in 1816 he was named director of the German Opera at Dresden, then for the first time distinguished in court-patronage from the established Italian Opera under Morlacchi. Though beset by considerable jealousy and some other unfavorable conditions, his superb gifts as organizer and leader brought speedy success and in 1817 his appointment was made permanent and he was also entrusted with some of the music at the Royal Chapel. In 1817, also, he was happily married to Caroline Brandt, one of the singers in his Prague company. From this time forward his activity was manifold and strenuous. Composition went on steadily in several lines, culminating in 1821 in the production of Der Freischütz (at Berlin), which at once made him the idol of all Germany. At intervals he gave brilliant concerts, often with his wife. That his importance was becoming recognized is shown by efforts to draw him to Berlin in 1817 and to Kassel in 1821. In 1823 his next large opera, Euryanthe, had only a qualified success at Vienna, owing to its dramatic structure, but he soon began plans for Oberon. By this time, however, he was more and more interrupted by the consumptive tendency that finally ended his career. He was able to complete Oberon in 1826 and to conduct with distinction its first performances in London. But the strain broke his strength and a few weeks later he died there, not yet forty years old.

Weber's purely technical equipment as composer was irregular, owing to his spasmodic education and a certain irresponsibility in his early character. But whatever lacks there were he was able to offset by his shining genius in two or three directions and the ardent skill with which he applied it after his twenty-fifth year. His fascination over things dramatic was largely derived from his youthful experiences, but it betokened high original power to use this so as virtually to create a new type of opera, thoroughly German in essence and spirit and full of romantic imagination and color. Though he himself lived to exemplify his ideals by but a few works and by but one that was entirely successful, he started a movement that affected the whole 19th century. He thus served as a vital link between Gluck and Mozart behind him and not only Marschner, Spohr and Schumann, but his great successor Wagner in making German opera substantially distinct from both the traditional Italian opera and the developing forms of French opera.

As a pianist he was brilliantly gifted without being a finished master, and his piano-works, though rich on many sides, lack the elements of permanent greatness. But as an orchestral writer he shines out in fair glory even beside his older contemporary Beethoven. He had a sure sense of instrumental color, remarkable ability in balancing and marshaling resources, especially in his overtures and accompaniments, and real prescience as to the part that the orchestra was to play in the musical drama of the future. Like Beethoven, he came just at the time when the orchestra was ready for full liberation into the free and glorious depiction of sentiment and mood, such as the 18th century had not known how to achieve.

While as a dramatist he was the plain forerunner of Wagner, as one sympathetic with literature and versed in the art of intellectual criticism he somewhat prefigured Schumann. With him began the mingling of general culture with musical art that later became more frequent and fruitful.

The summary of his works includes the following:

Vocal and Dramatic Works

Operas—Die Macht der Liebe und des Weins (1799, not given and score destroyed), Das Waldmädchen, 1800 (only fragments extant), Peter Schmöll und seine Nachbarn 1803 (Augsburg), Rübezahl (1804-05, not completed), Silvana, 1810 (Frankfort), Abu Hassan, short singspiel, 1811 (Munich), Der Freischütz, 1821 (Berlin), Die drei Pintos (1821, sketches only, completed by Mahler and given at Leipzig, 1888), Euryanthe, 1823 (Vienna), Oberon, 1826 (London). Incidental music for Schiller's Turandot (1809), Müllner's König Yngurd (1817), Gehe's Heinrich IV (1818), Rublack's Lieb' um Liebe (1818), Houwald's Der Leuchthurm (1820), Wolff's Preciosa (1820) and a Festspiel by Robert (1822). Also single or a few numbers for about 20 other operas or plays.

Cantatas—Der erste Ton, 1808 (declamation with orchestra and final chorus), In seiner Ordnung schafft der Herr, 1812, Kampf und Sieg, 1815, L'Accoglianza, 1817 (for wedding of Princess Maria), Natur und Liebe, 1818 (for King Friedrich), Jubel-Cantata, 1818 (do.), Du bekränzend unsre Laren, 1821 (for Duchess Amalia), Wo nehm' ich Blumen her, 1823 (for Princess Therese).

Masses—in E-flat and in G—each with an added Offertoire.

About 20 part-songs for men's voices (1812-25); about 15 others for various voices, including 7 canons (1802-16).

Over 80 songs (some for two voices), many with guitar-accompaniment (mostly 1808-20). Also arrangements of 10 Scottish songs with accompaniment for flute, violin, 'cello and piano (1825).

Instrumental Works

For orchestra—2 symphonies in C (1807); Jubel-Ouvertüre (1818); revised versions of overtures to Peter Schmöll (1807) and Rübezahl (1811, as Beherrscher der Geister) [and overtures to Turandot and Preciosa, included in incidental music above]; Deutscher in D (1815); Tedesco in D (1816, used with Preciosa); Waltz in E-flat (1812) and March in C (1826), both for wind; Marcia Vivace in D for 10 trumpets (1822, used for Euryanthe).

For various instruments with orchestra—piano-concertos in C (1810) and E-flat (1812); Konzertstück for piano, in F min. (1821); clarinet-concertos in F min. and E-flat (both 1811); bassoon-concerto in F (1811); horn-concertino in E min. (1815); Andante and Rondo Ungarese in C min. (1809) and Variations in C (1806), for viola (the former also for bassoon); Potpourri in D (1808) and Variations in D min. (1810), for 'cello; Romanza Siciliana in G min. (1805), for flute; Adagio and Rondo (1811), for harmonichord.

Chamber-music—quintet in B-flat for clarinet and strings (1815); violin-sonatas in F, G, D min., E-flat, A and C (1810); violin-variations on a Norwegian air (1808); Duo Concertant for clarinet and piano (1816); clarinet-variations (1811); Divertimento for piano and guitar (1816).

For piano—sonatas in C (1812), A-flat (1816), D min. (1816) and E min. (1822); 8 sets of variations (1800-17); 2 Rondos Brillantes (1819) [the second is the noted Aufforderung zum Tanz, which has been orchestrated by Berlioz and Weingartner]; Momento Capriccioso and Grande Polonaise (both 1808); 18 Waltzes (1812); Polacca Brillante (1819). Also 6 Fughetti, 12 Allemandes and 6 Écossaises (all early). 20 pieces for four hands.

The best edition of his critical and other writings is by G. Kaiser, 1908. His letters have been edited by his grandson, 1886, Rudorff, 1899, and Kaiser, 1911. A thematic catalogue of his works was made by Jähns in 1871. Memoirs by Barbedette, 1862, M. M. von Weber (his son), 3 vols. 1864-68 (new edition by Pechel, 1912), Jähns, 1873, Benedict, 1881 (2d ed. 1913), Reissmann, 1883, Nohl, 1883, Skalla, 1895, Gehrmann, 1899, Hækker, 1903 (on Weber, Schubert and Mendelssohn), Servières, 1907, Von der Pfordten, 1919, and O. Schmid, 1922. G.

Weber, Edmund von (Hildesheim, 1766-1828, Würzburg), stepbrother of the foregoing. Hanoverian conductor, pupil of Haydn, employed at theaters in Kassel, Bern, Lübeck, Danzig, Königsberg, Cologne, etc.

Weber, Ernst Heinrich (Wittenberg, 1795-1878, Leipzig). Saxon physiologist and anatomist, from 1818 at Leipzig University, author of De Aure et Auditu, 1820, Die Wellenlehre, 1825 (with his brother), and essays on acoustics in journals.

Weber, Franz (Cologne, 1805-1876, do.). Rhenish organist, pupil of Bernhard Klein, from 1838 organist at Cologne Cathedral and from 1842 also leader of the Männergesangverein, gaining the title of professor in 1875. Wrote Psalm 57 and many men's choruses, besides editing song-books.

Weber, Franz Anton (n. Freiburg, 1734-1812, Mannheim), father of Carl and Edmund above. Badenese army-officer, violinist, violist, etc., in 1778 theater-conductor at Lübeck, in 1779-83 court-director at Eutin and from 1787 wandering from place to place with his wife and older children as a traveling concert-troupe until Carl began to gain attention and employment. G.

Weber, Fridolin (n. Freiburg, 1733-?), brother of the foregoing. Badenese violinist, from about 1755 employed in various capacities in connection with the court-music at Mannheim. Of his four daughters, all singers, Aloysia (1750-1839) was Mozart's early lady-love and

Constanze (1763–1842) in 1782–91 his wife and from 1809 that of Baron von Nissen. G.

Weber, Friedrich August (Heilbronn, 1753–1806, do.). Württemberg physician and amateur musician, writing oratorios, operettas, cantatas, symphonies, chamber-pieces, etc., as well as helping on the Musikal. Realzeitung (Speyer, 1788–90) and the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung (Leipzig, 1799–1803).

Weber, Friedrich Dionys (Welchau, 1766–1842, Prague). Able Bohemian teacher and composer, pupil of Vogler, from about 1790 settled in Prague, where in 1811 he founded the Prague Conservatory, becoming its first director. Wrote several small operas, many cantatas, masses, military marches, sextets and quartets for brass-wind, violin-variations, piano-dances, etc., besides an account of the Conservatory (1817) and 2 text-books (1828, '30–41).

Weber, Georg. 16th C.

Weber, Georg Viktor (Ober-Erlenbach, 1838). Hessian priest and noted church-musician, from 1866 choirmaster at Mayence Cathedral, becoming known as an organ-expert and for a cappella renderings of old ecclesiastical music. Author of a manual of Plain-song (1878, 2d ed. 1897), an Orgelbuch zum Mainzer Gesangbuch, 1880 (3d ed. 1896), Ueber Sprachgesang, 1883, Ueber Orgeldispositionen, 1890, Die Verbesserung d. Medicæ, 1901, and articles for the Gregorius-Blatt and the Cäcilien-Kalender, besides masses, motets, Psalms, etc. In 1884 he was awarded a gold medal by the Grand Duke of Hesse and in 1904 was made a canon of the Cathedral.

Weber, Gottfried (n. Mannheim, 1779–1839, Kreuznach). Hessian jurist (from 1802 in law-practice at Mannheim, Mayence and Darmstadt, and from 1832 state's attorney for Hesse), excellent pianist, conductor, theorist and editor. In 1809 he founded the musical society Museum at Mannheim, which he conducted, and at Mayence was substitute-conductor at the Opera. At Mannheim he established a music-school, while at Mayence he started the journal Cäcilia in 1824 and remained its editor. From 1810 he was extremely intimate with Carl Maria von Weber. They, with Meyerbeer, Von Dusch (Gottfried's brother-in-law and a fine 'cellist), Danzi and two or three others, formed a secret society, the Harmonischer Verein, for 'the elevation of criticism by musicians themselves,' in which the members bore fanciful names (Gottfried was 'Giusto' and Carl 'Melos')—all this an interesting precursor of Schumann's 'Davidsbündler' more than twenty years later. Author of the important Versuch einer geordneten Theorie d. Tonsetzkunst, 3 vols. 1817–21 (3d ed. 1830–32), Allgem. Musiklehre, 1822, Die Generalbasslehre zum Selbstunterricht, 1833, discussions of the acoustics of various instruments and many articles in the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung and his own Cäcilia. Wrote also several masses, a Requiem, a Te Deum, a piano-sonata, part-songs, songs, etc. He was the first to express doubt as to the authenticity of Mozart's Requiem (in 1826). G.

Weber, Gustav (n. Lyss, 1845–1887, Zurich). Gifted Swiss pianist, organist and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by V. Lachner and Tausig, in 1866–69 conductor at Aarau and Zurich, from 1872 organist at the Peterskirche in Zurich, conductor of the Harmonie and teacher at the Conservatory. For several years he also edited the Schweizerische Musikzeitung. Wrote the symphonic poem Zur Iliade (given by Liszt at the Beethoven Centenary at Weimar in 1870), a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a piano-sonata and many pieces (including Prinz Carneval, for children), many choruses, etc. Memoirs by A. Schneider, 1888, and Steiner, 1910 (in Allgem. Musikzeitung, Neujahrsblatt).

Weber, Josef Mirosław (Prague, 1854–1906, Munich). Excellent Bohemian violinist and composer, pupil of his father, Blazek and the Prague Conservatory, from 1873 in the Sondershausen orchestra, from 1875 concertmaster of the Darmstadt orchestra and leader of a Quartet, from 1883 Rebiček's successor as concertmaster of the court-orchestra at Wiesbaden and assistant-conductor at the Opera, and from 1893 concertmaster at the Munich Opera. Wrote the operas Der selige Herr Vetter, 1894, and Die neue Mamzell, 1896, music for Fels' Olaf (1884) and Schulte's Prinz Bibus, the ballet Die Rheinmüze, 1884, 2 orchestral suites, a violin-concerto, a septet for strings and wind, a string-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a 4-hand piano-version of Hausegger's Dionysische Fantasie, etc. The septet, quintet and quartet in D won prizes in 1896, '98 and '91 at Vienna, Prague and Petrograd respectively.

Weber, Karl Heinrich (n. Chemnitz, 1834). Saxon teacher, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1854 active at Minsk, from 1858 at Riga, from 1867 music-inspector at St. Mary's Convent in Moscow and for a time also teacher at the Conservatory, from 1877 head of the branch of the Imperial Musical Society at Saratov, from 1881 teacher at the Alexander Institute in Tambov and from 1899 head of the Imperial Society there. Author of a survey of Russian musical culture (1885) and two manuals on piano-study.

Weber, Ludwig (Nuremberg, 1891). Gifted Bavarian composer of the short opera Midas, the choral work Hymnen an die Nacht, a symphony, 2 string-quartets, organ- and piano-pieces, women's choruses and songs. He was mostly self-taught, but had suggestions from Courvoisier and Abendroth.

Weber, Wilhelm (Bruchsal, 1859–1918, Augsburg). Able Badenese teacher and choral conductor, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory, from 1884 teacher at the Augsburg Music School, becoming its director in 1905, and also from 1892 conductor of the Oratorienverein there, which he made noted for its many first performances in Germany of large works by foreign composers and its attention to Chrysander's new editions of Handel's works. Author of works on Beethoven's Missa Solemnis (1897, 2d ed. 1903) and on Chrysander's versions of Handel's Israel in Egypt (1898), Messiah (1900) and Saul (1902), besides choruses, songs and piano-pieces. He was Officier in the French Académie.

Weber-Bell, Susanne (Lucerne, 1857). Swiss vocal teacher, pupil of Viardot and Lamperti, in 1902 the inventor of an apparatus for demonstrating the Helmholtzian theory of partial-tones in vocal sounds, as well as the mechanical side of breathing and vocalization.

Webern, Anton von (Vienna, 1883). Austrian composer, pupil of Schönberg and Vienna University (Ph.D.), writing a passacaglia for orchestra and shorter pieces, various works for string-quartet, for violin and for 'cello, an a cappella chorus and many songs (some with orchestra or ensemble). From about 1905 he was opera-conductor in Vienna, Prague and German cities, but now teaches in connection with Schönberg's Verein für Privataufführungen in Vienna.

Wecker, Georg Kaspar (1632-1695). 17th C. G.

Weckerlin, Jean Baptiste Théodore (Geweiler, 1821-1910, do.). Able Alsatian composer, librarian and writer, trained at the Paris Conservatory, where from 1869 he was assistant in the library and in 1876-1909 Félicien David's successor as librarian, besides in 1850-55 joining Seghers in the leadership of the Société Ste.-Cécile and from 1863 serving as librarian for the Société des Compositeurs. Wrote the short operas or operettas L'Organiste dans l'Embarras, 1853, Die dreifach Hochzeit im Besenthal, 1863, D'r verhäx't' Herbst, 1879, and Après Fontenoy, 1877, the large choral works Le Jugement Dernier, La Naissance du Christ, L'Aurore, Paix, Charité, Grandeur, 1866, Les Poèmes de la Mer, 1860 (ode-symphonie), L'Inde, 1873, and La Fête d'Alexandre, 1873, many a cappella choruses and songs, besides the orchestral Symphonie de la Forêt and a suite. Author of an Histoire de l'Instrumentation, 1875 (medal from the Académie), a catalogue of the Conservatory library (1885) and a long list of curious and valuable collections of historic folk-songs and the like, including Échos du Temps Passé, 1853-55, Souvenirs du Temps Passé, 1864, Musiciana, 3 vols. 1877-99, Chansons Populaires du Pays de France, 2 vols. 1903, etc. A catalogue of his own library appeared in 1910. G (Weckerlin).

Weckmann, Matthias (1621-1674). 17th C. G.

Wedekind, Erika (Hanover, 1872). Gifted Hanoverian operatic soprano, trained at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1894 a leading singer at the Dresden Opera, with many appearances elsewhere, and now at the Komische Oper in Berlin. In 1898 she married Councilor Oschwald of Basel.

Weelkes, Thomas. 16th C. G.

Wegeler, Franz Gerhard (Bonn, 1765-1848, Coblenz). Rhenish physician at Bonn and Coblenz, author of Biographische Notizen über

Beethoven, 1838, with supplement, 1845 (reprint by Kalischer, 1908), which is valuable because he knew Beethoven as a youth and married Eleanor von Breuning.

Wegelius, Martin (Helsingfors, 1846-1906, do.). Eminent Finnish teacher, composer and writer, pupil of Bibl, E. F. Richter and Paul, as a student at Helsingfors University conductor of the academic choral society in 1869-70, from 1878 chorusmaster at the Helsingfors Opera and from 1882 director of the new Conservatory, which he made nationally significant. Wrote the overture Daniel Hjort, a Rondo quasi Fantasia for piano and orchestra, 2 cantatas, 2 ballades with orchestra, piano-pieces and songs. Author of able text-books in composition (from 1887) and in singing (1897) and an outline of music-history (1891-93). Memoir by Flodin, 1916.

Wehle [Wehli], Karl (Prague, 1825-1883, Paris). Brilliant Bohemian pianist, pupil of Moscheles and Th. Kullak, from about 1850 settled in Paris, but with many extended tours, including visits to Asia, Africa, Australia and America (1870). Wrote 2 piano-sonatas, a suite, and much fine salon-music. G.

Wehrle, Hugo (Donauesschingen, 1847). Badenese violinist, pupil of the Leipzig and Paris Conservatories, as a boy playing in J. W. Kalliwoda's Quartet, from 1863 on concert-tours, from 1865 in the Weimar orchestra, in 1868-98 Edmund Singer's assistant as concertmaster of the court-orchestra at Stuttgart, as well as in 1868-80 a member of his Quartet. A nervous disorder forced his retirement from concert-playing. Since 1898 he has lived at Freiburg. Has written various violin-pieces, men's choruses and songs, besides collections of violin-music.

Wehrli, Werner (Aarau, 1892). Swiss composer, trained at the Zurich and Frankfurt Conservatories and at Basel and Berlin Universities, writing the opera Das heisse Eisen, 1918, the symphonic poem Chilbizite, 2 string-quartets (the first taking the Mozart prize in 1914), a trio for violin, viola and flute, another for piano, violin and horn, a sonata and variations for violin, a flute-suite, etc. He teaches at the Aarau Seminary and directs the Cecilienverein.

Weidig, Adolf (Hamburg, 1867). Gifted North German violinist and composer, trained at the Hamburg and Munich Conservatories, in 1888 winning the Mozart Scholarship at Frankfurt. In 1892 he removed to Chicago, where till 1896 he played in the Thomas Orchestra and till 1901 also in the Spiering Quartet (viola), besides from 1893 teaching at the American Conservatory and in 1898 becoming one of its directors. At various times he has conducted his own works both in America and in many German cities. Has written a symphony, the tone-poem Semiramis, 3 overtures, 3 Episoden for orchestra, a symphonic suite, an orchestral Capriccio, a suite and a serenade for strings, a string-quintet, 4 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 2 violin-suites, various violin-pieces, many a cappella choruses, the song-cycle The Baccaneer and about 25 songs. A.

Weidt, Heinrich (Coburg, 1828-1901, Gratz). Saxon theater-conductor at Zurich, Aix, Hamburg, Kassel, Pest, Temesvar, etc., writing the opera Adelma, 1873, many operettas, men's choruses and popular songs.

Weidt, Karl (Bern, 1857). Swiss choral conductor, from 1889 leader of the men's chorus at Klagenfurt and since 1897 of the Liederkrantz at Heidelberg, writing the notable men's choral works Im Mondenschein, Aus der Bergwelt, O Geist der Töne, Die schönste Frau vom Rhein and Nun tanzen sie unter der Linde, etc.

Weidt, Lucy (Troppau, 1880), daughter of Heinrich above. Eminent Silesian operatic soprano, pupil of her father and Rosa Papier, making her début in 1904 at Vienna and at once permanently engaged there, but with many guest-appearances elsewhere (as at the Wagner festivals in 1908-10 at Munich, in 1910-11 at the Metropolitan, New York, in 1913 in Buenos Aires, in 1914 at the Italian première of Parsifal at Milan, etc.). She sings all of the Wagnerian works and a wide range of other works. In 1909 she married Baron von Urmenyi.

Weigl, Bruno (Brünn, 1881). Moravian composer and writer, pupil of Wickenhauser, Kitzler and Mojsisovics, living at Brünn. Has written the comic opera Mandragola, 1912, Psalm 144 (men's voices and organ), an orchestral serenade (1909), the song-cycle Fasching, various organ-pieces, piano-pieces and men's choruses. Author of a Gesch. d. Walzers, 1910, a handbook of 'cello-music (1911) and an ultra-modern Harmonielehre, 1921.

Weigl, Joseph (Eisenstadt, 1766-1846, Vienna). Popular Austrian conductor and composer, pupil of Albrechtsberger and Salieri, producing a small opera when but sixteen that won the interest of Gluck and also the Emperor Joseph II and later gaining favor with Haydn and Mozart. Salieri used him from 1790 as deputy-conductor at the Opera and in 1792 he was made director and composer, and in 1825, when Salieri died, became second court-director, turning then to sacred music. Wrote over 30 operas, including the long-favorite Der Schweitzerfamilie, 1809, and Das Waisenhaus, 1818, 17 ballets, 2 oratorios, nearly 20 cantatas, many masses and other church-music, scenas and arias, etc. He was twice invited to compose for La Scala in Milan and was offered permanent posts at both Stuttgart and Dresden. His brother Thaddäus (1776-1844) was also a prolific stage-composer at Vienna in 1799-1805, in 1801-26 was engaged in music-publishing and was also archivist for the court-theater and custodian of the music-division of the Imperial Library. G.

Weigl, Karl (Vienna, 1881). Gifted Austrian composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1903), in 1904-06 chorus-master at the Opera there. Has written 2 symphonies, a Sinfonische Fantasie, 2 string-sextets, 3 string-quartets (one taking a Musikfreunde prize), the cantata Weltfriede, 1922, a cappella choruses, about 100 songs and piano-pieces.

Weigmann, Friedrich (n. Nuremberg, 1869). Bavarian conductor, pupil of Thuille, Giehl and Rheinberger, from 1894 theater-director at Bremen, Bern, Riga and Ulm, from about 1905 at the Nuremberg Opera, then at Gratz and since 1911 at the Hanover Opera. Has written the opera Der Klarinettenmacher, 1913, music for Faust and other plays, choruses, songs and some orchestral works.

Weil, Heinrich (Frankfort, 1818-1909, Paris). Hessian philologist, trained at Bonn, Berlin, Leipzig and Paris Universities (Dr. ès Lettres, 1845), from 1849 at Besançon and from 1876 at Paris. Author of several essays on ancient music, including Études de Littérature et de Rhythmique Grecques, 1902.

Weil, Hermann (Karlsruhe, 1877). Eminent Badenese operatic baritone, pupil of the Karlsruhe Conservatory and Adolf Dippel, from 1901 engaged at Freiburg (Baden) and since then at the Stuttgart Opera, with many guest-appearances elsewhere throughout Europe and in 1911-17 at the Metropolitan, New York. In 1909-12 he was regularly employed at Bayreuth, besides being in great request for festivals and concerts. His voice has so wide a range that he takes either bass or baritone parts. He has received numerous honors and decorations. A.

Weinberger, Karl Friedrich (Wallerstein, 1853-1908, Würzburg). Bavarian church-musician, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from about 1875 school-teacher at Wallerstein, from 1881 at the Teachers' Seminary in Würzburg and from 1886 choir-master at the cathedral there. Wrote 2 masses, an organ-sonata and fugue, piano-pieces, a cappella choruses, etc. besides a text-book in harmony.

Weinberger, Karl Rudolf (Vienna, 1861). Popular Austrian composer of almost 20 operettas (1888-1914), including Der Adjutant, 1889, Adam und Eva, 1899, Die romantische Frau, 1911, and Die Nachtprinzessin, 1914.

Weiner, Leo (Pest, 1885). Hungarian composer, pupil of the Pest Akademie, with further study abroad, for a time chorus-master at the Pest Komische Oper and since 1913 theory-teacher at the Akademie. Has written music for Vorösmarty's Gongor & Tünde (1915), an orchestral Scherzo, Serenade and Humoreske (Fasching), 2 string-quartets, a string-trio, a violin-sonata, a Ballade for clarinet, a Passacaglia for piano, etc. His quartet in F# min. took the Coolidge prize (Pittsfield, Mass.) in 1921.

Weingartner, Paul Felix, Edler von Münzberg (Zara, 1863). Distinguished Dalmatian pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of W. A. Remy, the Leipzig Conservatory (Mozart prize) and Liszt, from 1884 entering on a remarkably brilliant career as conductor. In 1884 he was at Königsberg, from 1885 at Danzig, from 1887 at Hamburg, from 1889 court-director at Mannheim, from 1891 in charge of the Royal Opera and the Royal Orchestra at Berlin, after 1898 continuing with the latter while also in 1898–1903 directing the Kaim Orchestra at Munich and founding the Weingartner Trio (with Retlich as violinist and Warnke as 'cellist), in 1908–10 Mahler's successor at the Vienna Opera and from 1908 also leading the symphony-concerts of the opera-orchestra. In 1912–14 he was first conductor at the Hamburg Opera, then becoming court-conductor at Darmstadt and director of the Conservatory, and in 1919–20 was director of the Volksoper at Vienna. He has not only toured with his own orchestras through most of Europe, but repeatedly appeared as guest-conductor, including visits to America in 1905–06 and '12–13. Meanwhile his list of skillful and impressive compositions was steadily growing, evincing musicianship of the highest order, and he was also demonstrating power as poet, critic and writer. He has been four times married, in 1891 to Marie Juillerat, in 1903 to Baroness Feodora von Dreifus, in 1911 to Lucille Marcel and in 1922 to the actress Kalisch. His works include the following:

Operas (all to original texts)—Sakuntala, 1884, Malawika, 1886, Genesis, 1892, the trilogy Orestes (Agamemnon, Das Totenopfer, Die Erinyen), 1914, Kain und Abel, 1914, Die Dame Kobold, 1916, Meister Andrea, 1920, Terokajm, 1920.

Incidental music for Sophocles' Antigone (1895), Voss' Frühlingsmärchenspiel (1908, on themes by Liszt) and Weiser's version of Faust (1908, revised 1917). Also editions of Weber's Oberon, Méhul's Joseph and Wagner's Holländer.

For orchestra—symphonies in G, E-flat, E and one other; symphonic poems König Lear and Die Gefilde der Seligen; Lustige Ouvertüre and Aus erster Zeit; Serenade for strings; violin-concerto in G. Also arrangement of Weber's Aufforderung zum Tanz. Chamber-music—piano-sextet in E min.; quintets for strings in C and for clarinet, piano and strings in G min.; string-quartets in D min., F min. and F; violin-sonatas in D and F-sharp min.

About 35 piano-pieces.

Vocal choruses and solos—Traumnacht and Sturmhymnus for 8-part chorus and orchestra; the ballad Die Wallfahrt nach Keulaar and over 10 songs with orchestra; about 125 songs with piano; some men's choruses.

In 1899 he became one of the editors of the standard edition of Berlioz and in 1907 of that of Haydn. His literary works include Die Lehre von d. Wiedergeburt u. d. musikal. Drama, 1895, Ueber d. Dirigieren, 1895 (4th ed. 1913), Bayreuth 1876–96, 1896 (2d ed. 1904), Die Symphonie nach Beethoven, 1897 (3d ed., rewritten, 1909), Ratschläge für Aufführungen d. Sinfonien Beethovens, 1906, Musikal. Walpurgisnacht, 1907 (satirical comedy), Golgotha, 1908 (drama), Akkorde, 1912 (collected essays), Erlebnisse eines Kapellmeisters in Berlin, 1912 (polemic), and Lebenserinnerungen (in Neuer Wiener Journal from 1919). Sketches by Krause, 1904, Riesenfeld, 1906, Hutschenruijter, 1906, Raabe, 1908 (in Musik), Stefan, 1908, Lusztig, 1908, Taubmann, 1909 (in Monographien moderner Musiker), and Günther, 1918, G.

Weinlig, Christian Ehregott (Dresden, 1743–1813, do.). Saxon organist, pupil of Homilius, in 1767–73 at the Reformed Church in Leipzig, then at Thorn, from 1780 at the Frauenkirche in Dresden and accompanist at the Opera, and from 1785 Homilius' successor as cantor at the Kreuzschule. Wrote a Passion, other oratorios and cantatas, an operetta, flute-sonatas, piano-pieces, etc.

Weinlig, Christian Theodor (Dresden, 1780–1842, Leipzig), nephew of the above. Saxon church-musician, pupil of his uncle and Mattei, in 1814–17 his uncle's successor as cantor of the Kreuzschule in Dresden and from 1823 Schicht's successor as cantor of the Thomasschule in Leipzig. Among his many pupils was Wagner, who dedicated to him his piano-sonata in B-flat (1832) and to his widow the Liebesmahl der Apostel (1843). Wrote a Deutsches Magnificat, many vocalises and an able Anleitung zur Fuge, 1845 (2d ed. 1852). See Kurz, Gesch. d. Familie Weinlig, 1912. G.

Weinmann, Karl (Vohenstrauß, 1873). Bavarian priest and eminent church-musician, trained at the Ratisbon Music School and by P. J. Wagner (Ph.D. from Freiburg [Switzerland] Univ. 1905), from 1906 choirmaster at the so-called Kollegiatkirche in Ratisbon and teacher at the Music School, where in 1910 he succeeded Haberl as director, besides from 1909 serving as librarian of the Bishop's (Proske's) Library. Author of lives of Paminger (1907) and Proske (1908), and Das Konzil von Trient u. d. Kirchenmusik, 1919, and editor of the collection Kirchenmusik, to which he contributed a Gesch. d. Kirchenmusik, 1906 (2d ed. 1913), from 1908 of the Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch, from 1911 of Musica Sacra and from 1909 of a long series of service-books based on the Editio Vaticana. He has also published a monograph on Tintoris (1917).

Weinwurm, Rudolf (n. Waidhofen-an-der-Thaya, 1835–1911, Vienna). Austrian choral conductor, trained as a boy in the Imperial Chapel in Vienna, in 1858–66 leader of a Gesangsverein at the University (beginning while a law-student), from 1864 of the Vienna Singakademie and from 1866 of the Männergesangsverein (following Herbeck), besides teaching at the Teachers' Seminary and in 1880 becoming music-director at the University. Wrote a Deutsches Requiem for men's voices a cappella and one for women's voices with organ, a mass, etc., and text-books in harmony and singing.

Weinzierl, Max, Ritter von (Bergstadl, 1841–1898, n. Vienna). Austrian composer of operettas, from about 1870 conductor at the Komische Oper and the Ringtheater in Vienna and from 1882 trainer for the Männergesangsverein. Wrote the oratorio Hiob, 1870, the operettas Don Quixote, 1879 (with L. Roth), Fioretta, 1886, Page Fritz, 1889, and 3 others, various choral works, both a cappella and with orchestra.

Weis, Karel (Prague, 1862). Bohemian composer of the operas Viola, 1892, Der polnische Jude, 1901, Die Dorfmusikanten, 1904, and Der Sturm auf die Mühle, 1914, an operetta, a vaudeville, a symphony and an orchestral funeral-march.

Weis-Ostborn, Rudolf von (Gratz, 1876). Styrian conductor, pupil of the Gratz Music School and University, from 1902 city-director there and choirmaster at Knittelfeld and since 1913 conductor of the Laibach Philharmonic. Has written 3 masses, choruses, works for orchestra and for piano, besides a church song-book.

Weismann, Julius (Freiburg, 1879). Able Badenese composer, pupil of Bussmeyer, Rheinberger, Dimmler, Herzogenberg and Thuille. Has written a symphony, the symphonic poem Ueber einem Grabe (with chorus), 3 orchestral Fantasies, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, 3 violin-sonatas (one solo), a 'cello-sonata, variations for violin and for oboe, variations, passacaglia, etc., for one or two pianos, the choral works Macht hoch die Thür, Fingerhütchen (fairy-ballad), Schnitterlied and Hymnus an den Mond, men's choruses and many songs. Sketch by Thomas-San Galli in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1907.

Weiss, Franz (1778-1830, Vienna). Noted Silesian violist, from 1792 playing under Schuppanzigh in the Lichnowsky Quartet at Vienna and in 1808-16 in the Rasumovsky Quartet. Wrote symphonies, overtures, symphonies concertantes for flute, bassoon, trombone and orchestra, violin-variations with orchestra, a string-quartet, 6 string-quartets, piano-duos, flute-duos, piano-sonatas, etc. G.

Weiss, Johann (St. Ruprecht, 1850-1919, do.). Styrian priest and able church-musician, pupil of the Ratisbon Music School, from 1881 teacher of hymnology at the Gratz Theological Seminary, in 1884-91 choirmaster at the Cathedral and afterwards professor at the University and member of the episcopal consistory, besides from 1902 assisting in editing the Gregorian Rundschau. He was noted as organist and organ-expert. Author of a monograph on musical instruments in the old Testament (1895).

Weiss, Willoughby Hunter (Liverpool, 1820-1867, London). English operatic and concert-bass, pupil of G. T. Smart and Balfe, from 1842 well known as a member of various operatic troupes and at many festivals. His wife, née Ansell (1826-1880), was a competent singer. G.

Weisse, Christian Felix (Annaberg, 1726-1804, Leipzig). Saxon poet and writer for children, supplying texts for many of J. A. Hiller's singspiele and songs (collections published in 1767-71 as Komische Opern, etc.).

Weissensee, Friedrich (?1560-1622). 17th C.

Weissheimer, Wendelin (Osthofen, 1838-1910, Nuremberg). Alsatian composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1866 theater-conductor at Würzburg, later at Mayence and then teacher at Strasburg. He was a strong admirer of Wagner. Wrote the operas Theodor Körner, 1872, and Meister Martin und seine Gesellen, 1879, the choral works Das Grab im Busento, König Sifrid and Deutsche Kaiser- hymne, etc., besides his reminiscences of Wagner, Liszt and others, with correspondence (1898).

Weissleder, Paul. From 1919 one of the conductors of the Leipzig Opera, having previously been at Mayence, writing the opera Das Freimannskind, 1919.

Weissmann, Adolf (Rosenberg, 1873). Silesian critic and writer, from 1900 writing for the Berlin Tageblatt, from 1904 for Der Roland and from 1910 for the Montagszeitung and Die Musik. Author of lives of Bizet (1907), Chopin (1912, 3d ed. 1919) and Puccini (1922), Berlin als Musikstadt [from 1740], 1911, Der Virtuose, 1918, Die Primadonna, 1919, a study of the erotic in music (1920) and Die Musik in d. Weltkrise, 1922.

Weist-Hill. See Hill.

Weitzmann, Karl Friedrich (Berlin, 1808-1880, do.). Able Prussian violinist, theorist and writer, trained by Henning, Klein, Spohr and Hauptmann, from 1832 chorusmaster at the Riga Opera and associated with Dorn in the Liedertafel, from 1834 chorusmaster at Reval, in 1836-46 concertmaster in the court-band at Petrograd and choirmaster at the Annenkirche, then studying in libraries at Paris and London, and from 1848 well known as teacher and writer in Berlin. He was intimate with Liszt. Wrote the operas Räuberliebe, 1834, Walpurgisnacht, 1835, and Lorbeer und Bettelstab, 1836, numerous ingenious piano-works (Rätsel in canon for 4 hands, contrapuntal studies, preludes and modulations, Valses Nobles, etc.), choruses and songs. Author of monographs on Greek music (1855), on the augmented triad (1853) and the diminished seventh-chord (1854), Gesch. d. Septimenakkords, 1854, Harmoniesystem, 1860, Die neue Harmonielehre im Streit mit d. alten, 1861, Der letzte d. Virtuosen [Tausig], 1868, and Gesch. d. Klavierspiels u. d. Klavierliteratur, 1863 (at first as part of the Lebert-Stark Method, in 1879 separately and with a Gesch. d. Klaviers, and in 1899 as Gesch. d. Klaviermusik and with vol. i of a Gesch. d. Klaviers by O. Fleischer), besides many articles in periodicals. His system was elucidated in Bowman's Manual of Musical Theory, 1877. G.

Welcker von Gontershausen, Heinrich (Gontershausen, 1811-1873, Darmstadt). Hessian piano-maker, in court-employ at Darmstadt, author of a series of works on the structure and history of the piano (1853-70), with one that includes notes on organ-making (1876). G.

Weld, Arthur Cyril Gordon (n. Boston, 1862-1914, n. West Point, N. Y.). American composer, trained at the Dresden and Munich Conservatories, from 1887 active in Boston, from about 1890 in Milwaukee and later in New York, having various connections with theatrical music under the Savage Company. Wrote several light operas, music for plays, the orchestral suite Italia, 1887, a Romanza for small orchestra, two movements of a septet, a string-quartet (1885), the choral works Benedictus Dominus Israel and Ode in Time of Peace, 1890, and many songs. A.

Weldon, Georgina, née Thomas [or Treherne] (n. London, 1837–1914, Brighton). Gifted English singer (amateur), in 1870–84 appearing in many concerts in London and on the Continent, with some success also in opera. She was long the intimate friend of Gounod, whom she assisted in directing his Choir in London in 1870–75 and whose autobiography she translated (1875). Author of Pronunciation in Singing, 1872, and Musical Reform, 1875. She maintained an orphanage with special emphasis on musical instruction. G.

Weldon, John (Chichester, 1676–1736, London). English organist, pupil of Wilton and Purcell, from 1694 organist at New College, Oxford, from 1702 in the Chapel Royal, in 1708 following Blow as organist and in 1715 becoming second composer, besides playing at St. Bride's (Fleet Street) and from 1726 at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. Wrote a prize-setting of Congreve's masque The Judgment of Paris (1700), nearly 40 anthems and many songs. G.

Wellesz, Egon (Vienna, 1885). Austrian musicologist and composer in ultra-modern style, pupil of Frühling, Schönberg, B. Walter and Adler (Ph.D. 1908), in 1911–15 teaching music-history at the New Conservatory in Vienna and from 1913 also lecturing at the University. Author of a great variety of historical studies (since 1910), largely on topics relating to Vienna, Byzantine and Oriental music and the early opera, including Der Beginn d. musikal. Barock u. d. Anfänge d. Oper in Wien, 1922, Aufgaben u. Probleme d. oriental. Kirchenmusik, 1923, and a life of Schönberg (1921). Has also written the opera Die Prinzessin Gynara, 1921, the ballets Diana, Persisches und Achylles auf Skyros, the orchestral Vorfrühling and a suite, the choral work Gebete der Mädchen zur Maria, 4 string-quartets, 2 piano-suites and various pieces and many songs. His style tends to the ultra-modern.

Wellmann, Friedrich Konrad (Waren, 1870). Mecklenburger philologist, since 1900 at the Alte Gymnasium in Bremen, author of studies in the music-history of Bremen (1911, '14).

Wels, Charles (Prague, 1825–1906, New York). Bohemian pianist and organist, pupil of Tomaschek, in 1847–49 in court-employment at Warsaw, then removing to New York, where in 1852–59 and 1896–1901 he was organist at St. Stephen's, besides other engagements at St. Cecilia's, the Disciples' and All Saints'. Wrote an orchestral suite, an overture, a piano-concerto, 5 masses, many piano-fantasias, transcriptions, etc., part-songs and songs. A.

Welsh, Thomas (Wells, 1780–1848, Brighton). English singer (bass) and vocal teacher, pupil of J. B. Cramer and Baumgarten, from 1792 appearing in both concert and opera and from 1802 member of the Chapel Royal, later becoming noted as teacher. Wrote some stage-pieces (1810–11), piano-sonatas (1819), glees, etc., and a Vocal Instructor, 1825. In 1827 he married his pupil Mary Anne Wilson (1802–1867), who from 1821 was a favorite stage-soprano G (both Welsh and Wilson).

Welte, Michael (n. Villingen, 1807–1880, Freiburg). Badenese instrument-maker, from 1832 at Vöhrenbach and from 1872 at Freiburg. From 1849 he was famous as a maker of orchestrions, winning numerous prizes at expositions. His three sons became partners in the business and in 1865 Emil (b. 1841) established a New York branch, where he applied paper-rolls in improved form to orchestrions. This foreshadowed the later ingenuity of Edwin Welte (b. 1875), Michael's grandson, in developing the Welte-Mignon mechanism (from 1904) for recording and reproducing piano-music with extraordinary accuracy and delicacy. A.

Welti, Heinrich (Wettingen, 1859). Able Swiss writer, educated in philology and literature at Munich University (Ph.D. 1882), with later studies in music, from 1890 diligently engaged at Berlin in musical criticism for many journals and also writing a life of Gluck (1888), sketches of musicians for the Allgem. Deutsche Biographie, etc. In 1889 he married the soprano Emilie Herzog. They now live at Aarburg (Switzerland).

Wendel, Ernst (Breslau, 1876). Silesian violinist and conductor, pupil of Wirth, Succo, Joachim and Bargiel, in 1896–98 playing under Thomas in Chicago, from 1898 conductor of the Musikverein at Königsberg and since 1909 of the Philharmonic in Bremen (following Panzner), becoming general director in 1922. Has written the choral work Das deutsche Lied, men's choruses a cappella and songs.

Wendland, Waldemar (Liegnitz, 1873). Silesian composer, mostly self-taught, with some study with Humperdinck at Frankfurt, where for a time he was trainer at the Opera. Has written the operas Das kluge Felleisen, 1909, Das vergessene Ich, 1911, Der Schneider von Malta, 1912, Peter Sukoff, 1921, and Der Narr, 2 pantomimes and songs. He lives at Berlin.

Wendling, Johann Baptist (1720–1797, Munich). Alsatian flutist, from 1754 a leading player in the electoral orchestra at Mannheim and going with it in 1778 to Munich. Wrote concertos, quartets and trios for flute and strings, as well as flute-duos.

Wendling, Karl (Frankenthal, 1857–1918, Leipzig). Rhenish pianist and specialist on the Jankó keyboard, from 1884 teaching the latter at the Leipzig Conservatory. He was court-pianist at Waldeck and gained the title of royal professor in 1909. Editor of a progressive edition of standard études.

Wenzel, Ernst Ferdinand (n. Löbau, 1808–1880, Bad Kösen). Fine Saxon piano-teacher, trained at Leipzig University and under Wieck. He was intimate with both Schumann and Mendelssohn, contributing for years to the former's Neue Zeitschrift and from 1843 being a valued member of the latter's faculty in the new Conservatory.

Wenzel, Leopold (Naples, 1847). Italian violinist and theater-conductor, from 1860 touring in the Orient, from 1866 in Marseilles, from about 1875 in Paris and in 1889-1914 conductor at the Empire and the Gaiety in London. Has written about 25 effective operettas and ballets and many songs.

Wenzel von Samter (?1525-1572). 16th C.

Werckmeister, Andreas (1645-1706). 17th C. G.

Werlé, Heinrich (Bensheim, 1887). Hessian organist, pupil of the Frankfort Conservatory, since 1911 leader of the Mayence Sängerbund and organist at Gustavsburg, and also active in the improvement of school-music, publishing various song-books and essays on method (from 1912).

Wermann, Friedrich Oskar (n. Trebsen, 1840-1906, n. Dresden). Eminent Saxon organist, conductor and composer, trained under J. Otto, Krägen, Wieck and Merkel and at the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1862 organist at Wesserling (Alsace) and Neuchâtel, from 1868 teacher at the Dresden Seminary and from 1876 Otto's successor as cantor of the Kreuzschule and choirmaster at the three leading Protestant churches, besides for some years leading the Lehrergesangsverein. In 1883 he was made royal professor and in 1905 Hofrat. Wrote a Christmas oratorio, cantatas for Good Friday and the Reformation'sfest, the choral ballad Die Mette von Marienburg, 2 a cappella masses, 7 Psalms (one with organ), many motets, part-songs and songs, the symphonic poem König Witichis, the Christmas-tale Die Wunderglocke (for orchestra), several overtures, a Largo Religioso for violin, 'cello, horn and organ, a sonata for 'cello and organ, 4 organ-sonatas, 5 concert-pieces, preludes and fugues and many other organ-works, piano-études, etc.

Werbmer, Paul (Dirschau, 1881). Prussian composer, pupil of Riemann, writing the opera Von göttlicher Liebe (original text), 5 symphonies, an overture (1920), piano-variations and songs, besides an unpublished Formenlehre (on the basis of Riemann). He is on the staff of the Riemann Conservatory at Danzig.

Werner, Arno (Weissenfels, 1865). Saxon organist and historian, pupil of Grässner and the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, since 1890 organist at the Stadtkirche in Bitterfeld and from 1894 also teacher at the Realschule and leader of the Choir Society, gaining the title of royal professor in 1908. Author of monographs on the brothers Scheidt (1900), on the Cantoreien in Saxony (1902), on the Cantorei at Bitterfeld (1903) and on the town- and court-music at Weissenfels (1911) and at Zeitz (1922), besides catalogues of the musical collections in the provinces of Saxony, Anhalt and Thuringia (1906-08) and articles in periodicals. In 1903 he wrote music for a festspiel by Thon.

Werner, Gregorius Joseph (1695-1766, Eisenstadt). Austrian conductor and composer, from 1728 director for Prince Esterházy and so Haydn's predecessor. Wrote 11 oratorios, about 40 masses, 3 Requiems, manifold other pieces of church-music, organ-pieces, many trio-sonatas, fugues, etc. including a Musikalische Calendar (pieces for each of the 12 months [1748]), etc.

Werner, Johann Gottlob (Grossenhain, 1777-1822, Merseburg). Able Saxon organist and teacher, from 1798 at Frohburg, from 1808 cantor at Hohenstein (at first as substitute for Tag) and from 1819 cathedral-organist at Merseburg. Author of a notable Orgelschule, 2 parts, 1805, '23, Musikal. ABC (for piano-pupils), 1806, a harmony text-book (1818-19), 2 Choral-bücher (1814, '15), and various organ-pieces.

Werner, Josef (Würzburg, 1837). Bavarian 'cellist, trained at the Würzburg Conservatory, from about 1860 playing in the Munich court-orchestra and teaching at the Conservatory. Has written a quartet for 'cellos, 'cello-duos, many solo-pieces and a method.

Werner, Theodor Georg Wilhelm (Hanover, 1874). Hanoverian concert-singer, composer and historical student, pupil of Gudehus, Albert Fuchs, Draeske and Noren, with later study at Berlin and Munich Universities (Ph.D. 1917). Has written 2 symphonies (one for small orchestra), flute-variations with small orchestra, 2 string-quartets and other chamber-works, choruses and many songs, besides a monograph on Adam Reiner (1917) and periodical-articles. In 1920 he became a teacher at the Technische Hochschule and critic for the Kurier.

Werra, Ernst von (Leuk, 1854-1913, Beuron). Able Swiss church-musician, trained at Ratisbon, Freiburg and Stuttgart, in 1883-85 organist at the German Church in Rome and head of the Scuola Gregoriana, from 1886 choirmaster at the convent at Mehrerau (Lake Constance), from 1890 organist at Constance Cathedral and from 1907 director of the music-school at Beuron (Hohenzollern). He was active in the Cäcilien-Verein and from 1890 archiepiscopal organ-inspector. Besides various articles on organ-music he edited valuable collections of organ-works (1887, '93), the clavier-works of J. K. F. Fischer (1901), his Journal de Printemps and Schmicorer's Zodiacus (1902), etc.

Werrekoren [Verecoren], Hermann Matthias. 16th C. G.

Werrenrath, Reinald (Brooklyn, 1883). Gifted American concert-baritone, pupil of Dufft, Mees, Stephens and Maurel, from 1907 a favorite throughout the United States. Since 1919 he has also sung at the Metropolitan, New York. Has written some men's choruses and edited Scandinavian songs. In 1912-16 he led a choral society in New York. A.

Wert, Jacob van [Giaches de] (1536-1596). 16th C. G.

Wesley, Charles (Bristol, 1757-1834, London), son of Charles Wesley the poet and brother of the following. English organist in London, especially at St. George's (Hanover Square) and also in ordinary to the King. Wrote organ-concertos, string-quartets, anthems and songs. G.

Wesley, Samuel (Bristol, 1766-1837, London), brother and pupil of the foregoing. Famous English organist, precociously developed, at eight writing an oratorio and at thirteen giving concerts with his brother. As a youth he was deputy-organist at the Abbey Church in Bath, but in 1787 had an accident in London that injured his head and induced fits of despondency and eccentricity so as to prevent his steady employment except in 1824-30, when he was engaged at Camden Chapel (London). But before 1800 he had begun to study the works of Bach, in which he became an ardent specialist. In 1808-09 he wrote a series of letters about Bach to Benj. Jacob (published in 1875) and in 1810 and '13 issued editions of the Wohltemperiertes Clavier and the organ-trios, besides promoting an English translation of Forkel's life (1820). In 1811 he was both conductor and organ-soloist at the Birmingham Festival. Though heard only at irregular intervals, he was counted the best English player of his day. In 1837, a month before his death, he played at a recital with Mendelssohn. His numerous works included 4 masses, many Latin motets, Anglican services, canticles and anthems, about 600 tunes, 2 oratorios (incomplete), Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, many glees, duets and songs, 4 symphonies (and 1 not finished), 3 overtures, a string-quintet, a quintet-fugue, 2 string-quartets, a sonata for violin solo, other chamber-music, 11 organ-concertos, 3 organ-duets, many fugues, preludes, etc., 11 piano-sonatas, a fugue, 7 sets of variations and many other piano-pieces. See works on the Wesley Family by Clarke, 1822, Dove, 1832, Winter, 1874, Stevenson, 1876, etc. G.

Wesley, Samuel Sebastian (London, 1810-1876, Gloucester), son of the preceding. Eminent English organist, from 1826 at St. James' (Hampstead Road), London (and later at two others as well), from 1832 at Hereford Cathedral (also conducting the Three Choirs Festival there in 1834), from 1835 at Exeter Cathedral, fully establishing his place as the foremost player in England, from 1842 at the Leeds Parish Church (with some lectures in Liverpool), from 1849 at Winchester Cathedral and College (from 1850 with some teaching at the Royal Academy, London), and from 1865 at Gloucester Cathedral and once in three years conductor of the Three Choirs Festival there. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1839. His choral works have many points of supreme excellence. Wrote a noted service in E and 3 others, about 35 anthems (including The Wilderness), Psalms 100 and 137 (solo voice), 2 odes, chants, tunes, glees, songs, several organ-pieces and a few for piano. Author of a pamphlet on the reform of church-music (1849). G.

Wessel, Christian Rudolph (Bremen, 1797-1885, Eastbourne). North German music-publisher in London, in 1825 with Stodart, from 1839 with Stapleton (till 1845) and retiring in 1860, being then succeeded by Ashdown and Parry, of whom the former still continues. For many years he was the main agent in introducing into England the works of Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Heller, etc. G.

Wessely, Hans (Vienna, 1862). Able Austrian violinist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1883 engaged in many tours and since 1889 professor at the Royal Academy, London, besides leading an excellent Quartet. Author of teaching-manuals and an edition of Kreutzer's études. G.

Wessely, Johann (Frauenberg, 1762-1814, Ballenstedt). Bohemian violinist, from 1797 playing at Altona and from 1800 in the court-band at Ballenstedt. Wrote many facile string-quartets, trios, horn-variations, etc., and 2 comic operas.

Wessely, Karl Bernhard (Berlin, 1768-1826, Potsdam). Prussian director, pupil of J. A. P. Schulz, from 1788 conductor at the National-Theater in Berlin (Königstadt), in 1796-1802 musician to Prince Heinrich at Rheinsberg and then a government-clerk at Berlin and Potsdam. At the latter he started a choral society in 1814. Wrote several operas and other stage-pieces, cantatas, songs and a few string-quartets.

West, John Ebenezer (London, 1863). Gifted English organist, pupil of the Royal Academy, from 1884 at St. Mary's (Berkeley Square) and from 1891 at South Hackney Parish Church (East London). Has written the cantatas The Healing of the Canaanite's Daughter, 1882, and Seed-time and Harvest, 1892, Psalm 130, 2 evening-services, a Te Deum, anthems, part-songs, songs, music for King Robert of Sicily, an orchestral march, an organ-sonata, a fugue and many other pieces.

Westbrook, William Joseph (London, 1831-1894, n. do.). English organist, from 1848 at Bethnal Green and from 1851 at St. Bartholomew's (Sydenham), besides assisting at the Crystal Palace and in 1865-78 conducting the South Norwood Musical Society. From 1862 he was active in editing The Musical Standard (with Hammond and Crowdy). Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1878. Wrote the short oratorio Jesus, 1877, Psalm 23, 1875, services, anthems, part-songs, songs, many organ-sonatas, pieces and transcriptions, besides textbooks, and translations of violin-methods by Alard, Dancla and De Bériot. G.

Westlake, Frederick (Romsey, 1840-1898, London). English pianist, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, and from 1862 professor there. Wrote several masses, hymns, part-songs, a duo concertante for piano and 'cello, fugues for organ and for piano, etc. G.

Westmeyer, Wilhelm (n. Osnabrück, 1832-1880, Bonn). Hanoverian composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Lobe, writing the operas Amanda, 1856, and Der Wald bei Hermannstadt, 1859, symphonies, a Kaiser-Ouverture (given annually on the birthday of Emperor Franz Josef), an octet for wind and strings, etc.

Westmorland, John Fane, Earl of (London, 1784-1859, Apsalorpe House), until 1841 known as Lord Burghersh. English general and diplomat, in 1814-30 British Resident at Florence and in 1841-51 Ambassador at Berlin. Musically he was a pupil of Hague, Portugal and Mayseder. In 1822 he was the chief agent in the founding of the Royal Academy in London, becoming its president, and from 1832 was also active in the management of the Antient Concerts. Wrote 7 operas (1821-45), 3 symphonies, string-quartets, a mass, a Requiem, 7 cantatas for solo voice (1831), madrigals, glees, songs, etc. G.

Westphal, Rudolf Georg Hermann (Oberkirchen, 1826-1892, Stadthagen). North German scholar in Greek literature, from about 1850 teaching at Tübingen, Breslau, Jena, Livland and Moscow and after 1880 living in Leipzig and Schaumburg-Lippe. He specialized in Greek rhythmic and metrics, which he treated with much acumen. But he also sought to establish the theory that Greek music included polyphony, a view that he finally abandoned, but which was adopted in Sokolovsky's revision of vol. i of Ambros' Geschichte (1887). Author of Metrik d. griech. Dramatiker u. Lyriker, 3 vols. 1854-65 (with Rossbach, 3d ed. 1885-89), Die Fragmente u. Lehrsätze d. griech. Rhythmiker, 1861, System d. antiken Rhythmik, 1865, Gesch. d. alten u. mittelalterlichen Musik, 1865 (incomplete), Scriptores Metrici Graeci, 1866 (vol. i only), Theorie d. neuhochdeutschen Metrik, 1870 (2d ed. 1877), Die Elemente d. musikal. Rhythmik seit Bach, 1880, Die Musik d. griech. Altertums, 1883, Aristoxenos von Tarent, 2 vols. 1883-93, Allgem. Metrik d. indogermanischen u. semitischen Völker, 1893, and Die Melik u. Rhythmik d. griech. Altertums, 3 vols. 1893.

Westrop, Henry (Lavenham, 1812-1879, London). Gifted English organist, violinist and conductor, playing the piano in concert when but ten, from 1834 organist at St. Edmund's (Lombard Street), London, violinist at the Italian Opera and in the Philharmonic and also conductor of the Choral Harmonists' Society, as well as Costa's assistant in the Sacred Harmonic Society. Wrote a symphony, a string-quintet, 2 piano-quintets, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, sonatas for viola and for flute, 2 operas, the baritone-scena Winter, an orchestral waltz, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Wetz, Richard (Gleiwitz, 1875). Able Silesian choral conductor and composer, pupil of A. Apel, R. Hofmann and Thuille, with study at Munich University, since 1906 settled at Erfurt as conductor of the Musikverein and Singakademie, later of other choral societies and in 1911-21 teacher at the Conservatory. He has also led the Gotha Musikverein for two seasons and the Riedelverein at Leipzig in 1913-14. Since 1916 he has taught at the Weimar Conservatory, from 1918 leading the Engelbrecht Madrigalchor. Has written the operas Das ewige Feuer, 1907, and Judith, the choral works Traumsommer-nacht, Gesang des Lebens, Nicht geboren ist das Beste and Hyperion, a cappella men's choruses, about 100 fine songs, 2 symphonies, a string-quartet, a sonata for violin solo, etc., besides a life of Bruckner (1922). Sketches by Armin, Schellenberg and Querner.

Wetzel, Justus Hermann (Kyritz, 1879). Silesian aesthetician, in 1907 teaching at the Riemann Conservatory at Stettin and since 1910 living in Berlin. Author of Zur psychologischen Begründung d. Rhythmus, 1909 (in Riemann Festschrift), an Elementartheorie d. Musik, 1911, and many articles in periodicals. Has also written chamber-music, piano-pieces, choruses and about 300 songs.

Wetzler, Hermann Hans (Frankfort, 1870). Hessian conductor, trained at the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfort), in 1892 removing to New York, where in 1897-1901 he was organist at Trinity Church and in 1902-05 conducted series of symphony-concerts (including in 1904 four directed by Strauss), then, returning to Europe, from 1905 director of the Hamburg Opera, in 1908 giving concerts in Petrograd, in 1908-09 at the City Theater in Elberfeld, from 1909 in Riga, from 1913 in Halle, from 1915 in Lübeck and since 1919 at Cologne. Has written the symphonic poem Engelskonzert, an overture, Easter music for wind-instruments and organ, variations for oboe, clarinet, violas and 'cello, piano-pieces, etc. A.

Weweler, August (Recke, 1868). Westphalian choral conductor and composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1898 teacher at Detmold and since 1908 leader of the Oratorienverein there. Has written the operas Dornröschen, 1903, and Der grobe Märker, 1908, the oratorio Die Sintflut, 1914, a ballet, several declamations with chorus and piano, part-songs and piano-pieces. Author of the polemic booklet Ave Musical, 1913.

Weymann, Pavel Platonovitch (Petrograd, 1857). Russian critic and writer, pupil of Van Ark and Haller, from 1888 contributing to various papers in Petrograd, for a time editing a musical journal and assisting on the Russian edition of the Riemann Lexikon. Author of works on Glinka (1886, '92), Nápravnik (1889) and Cui (1897).

Weyse, Christoph Ernst Friedrich (Altona, 1774-1842, Copenhagen). North German organist and composer, pupil of his grandfather and (at Copenhagen) of J. A. P. Schulz, Tiemroth and Zinck, from 1794 organist at the Reformert Kirke in Copenhagen and from 1805 at the Frue Kirke. He joined Kunzen and Kuhlau in promoting opera in Danish and in spreading interest in the romantic school. Wrote 7 operas (1809-36), about 30 cantatas, a Te Deum, a Miserere, 4 symphonies, organ-fugues, piano-sonatas, études, etc., and songs, besides editing 100 Danish folk-songs (published by his pupil Berggreen). Memoir by Berggreen, 1876. G.

Wheeldon, Herbert Arthur (Derby, 1864). English organist, pupil of Crow, Turpin and Pearce, in 1882-85 assisting at Ripon Cathedral, then at Hendon, Eastbourne and Ipswich and from 1894 in London (mostly at St. Saviour's, Upper Chelsea). In 1907 he removed to Toronto as organist at the Metropolitan Church and from 1908 as examiner for the University, retiring from the former in 1913 and from the latter in 1915. In 1911-13 he gave about 500 daily recitals. Has written 2 services and many organ-pieces. A.

Whelpley, Benjamin Lincoln (Eastport, Me. 1864). American organist and pianist, pupil of Lang, Homer and Delaborde, from 1886 appearing as pianist in Boston and serving as organist at the South Congregational and Arlington Street Churches and for the Cecilia Society. Has written an orchestral Intermezzo, preludes for violin, 'cello and organ, piano-pieces, anthems, choruses and songs. A.

White, Carolina [Carolyn] (Boston, 1886). Gifted American operatic soprano, pupil of Weldon Hunt and Paolo Longone, assistant-conductor at San Carlo, Naples (whom she married in 1910), from 1908 appearing at Naples and throughout Italy, in 1910-14 with the Chicago Opera Company and since 1915 in concert or light opera. She sang at the American premières of Wolf-Ferrari's Segreto di Susanna (1911) and Gioielli della Madonna (1912). A.

White, Felix (London, 1884). Able English composer, mostly self-taught, writing the overture Shylock, 1907, the symphonic poem Astarte Syriaca, 1911, 2 orchestral suites and an arrangement of Beethoven's Diabelli variations, several other orchestral pieces (including Meditation and Bumpkins' Dance, both 1920), a Dirge for viola and orchestra, 3 piano-trios, the poem The Nymph's Complaint for oboe, violin and piano, 1921, a Reverie for string-quartet (1917), an Arietta for string-trio, a 'cello-sonata (1909), a Poem and Serenata Ironica for violin, 1918, '20, the piano-suites Robinson Crusoe and Dickens, choruses and about 300 songs (many with orchestra).

White, John (West Springfield, Mass. 1855-1902, Bad Nauheim). American organist, pupil of Buck, Haupt and Rheinberger, in 1880-83 at St. Francis Xavier's in New York and in 1887-96 at the Ascension, then removing to Munich. He gave many recitals in America and Germany and was an effective teacher. Wrote the oratorio Alpha and Omega, a mass, a Requiem, a Te Deum and other church-music, besides editing organ-pieces. A.

White, Maude Valérie (Dieppe, 1855). English-French composer, pupil of Rockstro, O. May, R. Fuchs and the Royal Academy, London (Mendelssohn Scholar in 1879), from 1881 traveling widely throughout Europe and in Asia Minor and South America. Has written a mass (1888), an opera, various piano-pieces (including Pictures from Abroad), numerous beautiful songs, etc. G.

White, Robert (?1540-1574). 16th C. G.

Whitehill, Clarence Eugene (Marengo, Ia. 1871). Eminent American operatic bass, pupil of L. A. Phelps, Sbriglia, Giraudet and Stockhausen, from about 1890 for a time singing in church and concert in Chicago, in 1899 making his stage-début at Brussels and in 1900 appearing at the Opéra-Comique in Paris and with the Savage Company at the Metropolitan, New York, in 1903-08 engaged at Cologne, and since 1909 mostly at the Metropolitan, but in 1911-15 with the Chicago Opera Company. He has sung five seasons at Covent Garden, three at Bayreuth and two at Munich. A.

Whitehouse, William Edward (London, 1859). Eminent English 'cellist, pupil of Pettit and the Royal Academy, London (many prizes), where since 1882 he has been professor, besides teaching at the Royal College, King's College and Trinity College. He is equally distinguished as soloist, ensemble-player and teacher. In 1889 he formed the London Trio (with Simonetti and Amina Goodwin), which till 1904 had remarkable success, and has also played in the Jacoby, Ludwig and Bath Quartets and the String Club. Has written various 'cello-pieces. G.

Whithorne [Whitern], Emerson (Cleveland, 1884). American editor and composer, pupil of J. Hartmann, J. H. Rogers, Leschetizky, R. Fuchs and Schnabel, in 1907-14 teaching in London and writing for various periodicals and since 1915 editor for the Art Publication Society in St. Louis. In 1907-09 he was husband of the pianist Ethel Leginska. Has written the symphonic poems Ranga and The City of Ys, a Japanese Suite and other orchestral pieces, 3 string-quartets (including Greek Impressions, 1914, and Quartettino Orientale, 1916), a violin-sonata, suite and 3 Elizabethan Melodies, a piano-sonata, variations and fugue, etc., and about 40 songs. A.

Whiting, Arthur Battelle (Cambridge, Mass. 1861). Gifted American pianist, pupil of Sherwood, Chadwick, J. C. D. Parker and the Munich Conservatory, from 1885 living in Boston and from 1895 in New York. Since 1907 he has given many chamber-concerts with an educational purpose at Harvard, Yale and Princeton Universities. Since 1911 he has also done much to reproduce the older concerted music, playing the harpsichord with Constance Edson as violinist, Barrère as flutist and Kéfer as gambist. Has written an overture (1885), a suite for strings and horns, 2 piano-concertos, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, many piano-pieces (including a Fantasy with orchestra, a Suite Moderne, etc.), transcriptions from Bach and Handel, organ-pieces, church-music, piano-exercises and pedal-studies. A.

Whiting, George Elbridge (Holliston, Mass. 1842-1924, Cambridge). Eminent American organist, developing precociously without much instruction, so that in 1858-62 he followed Dudley Buck at the North Church in Hartford, Conn., and then was active in Boston churches. He now studied with G. W. Morgan and later with Best, Haupt and Radecke. In 1864-67 he was at St. Joseph's in Albany, N. Y., then five years at King's Chapel, Boston, and for one year recitalist at Music Hall, in 1876-78 and again in 1883-1910 at the Immaculate Conception, besides in 1875-97 teaching at the New England Conservatory (except in 1879-82, when he was associated with Thomas at the College of Music in Cincinnati). Has written the short opera Lenore, 1893, the cantatas Tale of the Viking, Dream-Pictures, March of the Monks of Bangor, Midnight and Henry of Navarre, with Free Lances for men's voices and military band, 2 masses with orchestra and 3 on plain-song themes, a Te Deum, 2 sets of vespers and other Catholic music, services and anthems for the Episcopal service, a symphony, an orchestral suite, an Allegro Brilliant, the overture The Princess, a piano-concerto, 2 suites for 'cello (one with orchestra), an organ-sonata, 4 concert-études and many pieces, with transcriptions and new organ-accompaniments, piano-pieces, choruses, part-songs and songs, besides 2 organ-methods (1870-71). G. A.

Whitmer, Thomas Carl (Altoona, Pa. 1873). Gifted American organist and composer, pupil of Jarvis, Gilchrist and S. P. Warren, from 1899 music-director at Stephens College (Columbia, Mo.), from 1909 at the Pennsylvania College for Women in Pittsburgh and in 1916-19 at the Pittsburgh Musical Institute. Since 1916 he has been organist at the Sixth Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh. Has written a series of 6 music-dramas or 'mysteries' (The Creation, The Covenant, The Nativity, The Temptation, Mary Magdalene and The Passion, with original text and an explanatory essay), an orchestral Syrian Ballet, 1918, a Poem of Youth for piano and orchestra, 1918, the violin-sonata Athenian, 3 Character-Moods and a Meditation for piano and strings, many organ-pieces, the choral works Elegiac Rhapsody and Psalm 84, music for the Pittsburgh Centennial Pageant (1916), men's choruses and many songs. Author of Considerations on Music, The Way of My Mind, 1918, magazine-articles and many poetic texts. A.

Whitney, Myron William (Ashby, Mass. 1836-1910, Sandwich, Mass.). Eminent American concert-bass, pupil of E. H. Frost, Vannuccini and Randegger, from 1858 gaining fine renown in concert and oratorio, not only in America, but in England (until 1876). He made two tours with the Thomas Orchestra, sang at the Cincinnati Festivals in 1873-80, from 1879 was prominent in the Boston Ideal Opera Company and in 1886-87 was with the American Opera Company. He retired in 1900. A.

Whitney, Samuel Brenton (Woodstock, Vt. 1842-1914, Brattleboro, Vt.). Eminent American organist, pupil of Wels and Paine, in 1871-1908 at the Church of the Advent in Boston, where he built up a choral service of rare quality. In 1876 he was a promoter of the Massachusetts Diocesan Choir Guild, remaining its choir-master for many years. Besides teaching at the New England Conservatory and Boston University, he gave many recitals and often conducted choral festivals. Wrote a piano-trio, organ- and piano-pieces, many church-services, anthems and tunes, etc. A.

Whittaker, William Gillies (Newcastle, 1876). English conductor and composer, pupil of Fred-eric Austin and G. J. Huntley (Mus.D. of Durham Univ.), settled in Newcastle as orchestral and choral conductor. Has written a prelude and choruses for Æschylus' Choephori (1920), the choral work A Lyke-Wake Dirge, the variations Among the Northumbrian Hills for piano-quintet, 3 Mood Pictures for piano, 2 sets of North Country Folk Tunes for voice and many choral arrangements of similar melodies.

Wichern, Karoline (n. Hamburg, 1836-1906, do.). North German soprano and choral leader, pupil of Haffner, K. G. P. Grädener and Weitzmann, from 1858 appearing in oratorio and concert, in 1861-81 and after 1896 choir-master at Rauhes Haus (the headquarters of the Innere Mission, founded at Horn, near Hamburg, by her father) and in 1881-96 teaching at Manchester (England). Published many collections of songs and piano-pieces for school-use.

Wichmann, Hermann (Berlin, 1824-1905, Rome). Prussian composer, pupil of the Berlin Akademie and of Taubert, Mendelssohn and Spohr, writing some symphonies, a string-quintet, 7 string-quartets, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for piano, Psalms and songs, besides Gesammelte Aufsätze, 2 vols. 1884-87.

Wichtl, Georg (Trostberg, 1805-1877, Bunzlau). Bavarian violinist, in 1826-70 in the orchestra of the Prince of Hohenzollern-Hechingen at Löwenberg (Silesia), after 1852 as second conductor. Wrote the opera Almaida, a melodrama, an oratorio, a mass, symphonies, overtures, violin-concertos, a string-quartet, etc.

Wickenhauser, Richard (Brünn, 1867). Moravian choral conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1895 leader of the German Academic Chorus at Brünn, from 1902 Degner's successor as artistic director of the Styrian Musikverein at Gratz and in 1907-11 director of the Singakademie in Vienna. Has written a suite for strings, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, organ chorale-preludes, the choral work Sang fahrender Schüler, men's choruses and songs.

Wickham, Florence Pauline (Beaver, Pa. 1882). Noted American operatic contralto, pupil of Alice Groff, Emmerich and Frau Mal-linger, making her début in 1902 at Wiesbaden and Munich, in 1904-05 touring America with the Savage Company (singing Kundry in Parsifal), then at the Theater des Westens, Berlin, from 1906 at the Schwerin Opera and in 1909-12 at the Metropolitan, New York. Her repertoire includes all the Wagnerian works. In 1911 she married Eberhard L. Lueder of New York. A.

Widmann, Benedikt (n. Donaueschingen, 1820-1910, Frankfurt). Badenese rector at Eichstätt, author of many elementary text-books in theory (from 1862), a history of the Männerchor (1884) and a sketch of Zwyssig (1905).

Widmann, Erasmus (1572-1634). 17th C.

Widmann, Joseph Viktor (Nennowitz, 1842-1912, Bern). Noted Moravian poet and dramatist (nearly all his life in Switzerland), author of the text for Goetz' Der Widerspenstigen Zähmung and for other operas, besides Johannes Brahms in Erinnerungen, 1898 (2d ed. 1900).

Widor, Charles Marie (Lyons, 1845). Distinguished French organist and composer, pupil of his father, Lemmens and Fétis, gifted in improvising from childhood, at fifteen his father's successor at St.-François in Lyons, with many recitals there and elsewhere, and in 1870 Lefebure-Wély's successor at St.-Sulpice in Paris, quickly gaining international renown. In 1890 he followed Franck as professor of organ-playing at the Conservatory and in 1896 following Dubois as professor of composition. He was also for years conductor of the oratorio-society, Concordia and critic for L'Estafette (using the pen-names 'Tibicen' and 'Aulètes'). The vigor and originality of his genius as player, composer and teacher have been widely recognized. Among his formal honors were an early election to the Légion d'Honneur and in 1910 membership in the Académie (succeeding Lenepveu), where in 1913 he became secretary. His works include Dramatic works—operas, Maitre Ambros, 1896, Les Pêcheurs de St.-Jean, 1905, and Nerlo (not given); ballet, La Korrigane, 1880; pantomime, Jeanne d'Arc, 1890; incidental music for Dorchain's Conte d'Avril (1885) and Coppée's Les Jacobites (1885).

Other vocal music—mass for 2 choirs and 2 organs; Psalms 83 (with string-quintet) and 112 (2 choirs, 2 organs and orchestra); canticles and motets, Tu es Petrus, Sacerdos et Pontifex, Surrexit a mortuis, Tantum ergo and Regina Celi; O Salutaris and Chant Séculaire for solo voice; some a cappella choruses; duets and many songs.

For orchestra—symphonies in F, A and F min. (the last with organ); Symphonie Antique (with closing chorus); Sinfonia Sacra (with organ); Sérénade; Ouverture Espagnole; Nuit de Sabbat or Walpurgisnacht (symphonic caprice); Fragments Symphoniques from Pêcheurs de St.-Jean; suites arranged from Korrigane, Maitre Ambros and Conte d'Avril; piano-concertos in F min. and C min.; 'cello-concerto in E min.; Fantaisie for piano and orchestra; Chorale et Variations for harp and orchestra.

Chamber-music—2 piano-quintets in D; string-quartet in A min.; piano-trio in B-flat; Soirs d'Alsace for piano-trio; 2 violin-sonatas; suite after La Sulamite, 3 Valses and Cavatina, all for violin; 'cello-sonata; suite and 3 pieces for 'cello.

For organ—symphonies (or sonatas) in C, D, E, F, F, G, A and B, Romane and Gotique.

For piano—suites, Polonaise, Écossaise and in B min.; Airs de Ballet; Scènes de Bal; 9 Valses; Prélude, Andante et Finale; Caprice; Impromptu; La Prière; Dans les Bois; Romance; 18 other pieces.

Author of La Musique Grecque et les Chants de l'Église Latine, 1895 (in Revue des Deux Mondes), and Technique de l'Orchestre Moderne [extension of Berlioz' Instrumentation], 1904 (2d ed. 1906), editor of the collection L'Orgue Moderne and (with Schweitzer) of a great edition of Bach's organ-works in 8 vols. Sketches by Imbert, 1894 (in Portraits et Études), Reynaud, 1900, and Rupp, 1912. G. A.

Wieck, Friedrich (n. Torgau, 1785–1873, n. Dresden). Eminent Saxon piano-teacher, educated for the church and at first employed as private tutor and then as piano-maker and music-dealer. His musical training was mostly under the Logier system, followed by independent study, and from about 1815 he gradually became noted at Leipzig as a superior teacher, first of the piano, later of singing also, among his famous pupils being his daughters Clara (later Mme. Schumann [q.v.]) and Marie, Schumann, Von Bülow, Spindler, Seiss, Merkel, etc. In 1840 he moved to Dresden. In 1843 Mendelssohn sought to add him to the faculty of the new Leipzig Conservatory, but in vain. He was twice married, his first wife later marrying A. A. Bargiel. Author of Klavier u. Gesang, 1853, (3d ed. 1878), and Musikal. Bauernsprüche, 2d ed. 1878, some further pamphlets, 2 books of piano-studies, etc. His son Alwin (1821–1885) was at first a violinist, pupil of David, and in 1849–59 playing in the orchestra of the Italian Opera at Petrograd, but after 1860 taught piano at Dresden, publishing handbooks to his father's method. His daughter Marie (1832–1916) from 1843 gained a fine reputation as pianist in Germany, Scandinavia and England, finally settling in Dresden as teacher, where in 1914 she received the title of royal professor. Besides editing her father's works, she wrote Aus d. Kreise Wieck-Schumann, 1912 (2d ed. 1914). On the Wieck family see works by Meichsner, 1875, Kohut, 1887, and Joss, 1900, '02. G.

Wiedemann, Ernst Johann (Hohengiersdorf, 1797–1873, Potsdam). Silesian organist, pupil of Schnabel and Berner, in 1818–52 at the Catholic Church in Potsdam, singing-teacher at the Cadet School and from 1832 and '40 leader of two choral societies. Wrote masses, a Te Deum, motets, etc.

Wiederkehr, Jacob Christian Michael (Strasbourg, 1739–1823, Paris). Alsatian instrumentalist, from 1783 'cellist at the Concerts Spirituels in Paris and at the Loge Olympique, from 1790 bassoonist at the Lyrique and from 1797 trombonist at the Opéra, besides in 1795–1802 teaching at the new Conservatory. Wrote 12 wind-concertantes, string-quintets and quartets, quintets for piano and wind, piano-trios, violin-sonatas, etc.

Wiedermann, Karl Friedrich (n. Löwenberg, 1856–1918, Berlin). Able Silesian organist, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, the Akademie and Cebrian, from 1888 organist at the Nikolaikirche and for the Singakademie, as well as singing-teacher at the Leibnitz Gymnasium. Wrote an overture, a string-quartet, organ-pieces, Psalms, motets and songs, besides editing Erk and Greef's Liederkrantz, the Monatsschrift für Schul-gesang (from 1906) and school singing-books.

Wiegand, Josef Anton Heinrich (in the Odenwald, 1842–1899, Frankfurt). Noted Hessian operatic bass, from 1870 appearing in Zurich and Cologne, in 1873–77 at Frankfurt, from 1878 at Leipzig, from 1882 at Vienna and from 1884 at Hamburg. In 1877 he toured in America with the Pappenheim-Adams German Troupe, in 1881–82 sang in the Ring cycle at Berlin and London and in 1886 was at Bayreuth.

Wiehmayr, Johann Theodor (Marienfeld, 1870). Westphalian pianist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Martin Krause, making his début in 1890 at Leipzig and on a long tour in Scandinavia, in 1902-06 teaching at the Leipzig Conservatory and since 1908 at the Stuttgart Conservatory, gaining the title of royal professor in 1909. Has written an organ prelude (canon) and fugue, the quartet-canon Die Bäume blüh'n and varied études for piano, besides Musikal. Rhythmik u. Metrik, 1917, and new editions of studies by Czerny and Tausig.

Wiel, Taddeo (Oderzo, 1849-1920, Venice). Learned Italian music-historian, pupil of Tonassi and Maggi, from about 1870 teaching in schools in Venice and becoming assistant-librarian at S. Marco, besides being inspector at the Liceo Marcello and head of the Venice section of the Italian Musicological Society. Author of I Codici Contariniani [in the S. Marco library], I Teatri Musicali Veneziani [1701-1800], 1897, a monograph on Cavalli (1912, in Musical Antiquary) and some operas, piano-pieces and songs.

Wielhorski, Matvei Yurievitch (1787-1863, Petrograd), and Michail (1788-1856, Moscow), brothers and Volhynian noblemen. Important Russian patrons of music, the elder being a fine 'cellist (pupil of B. Romberg), from 1859 the first president of the Imperial Musical Society at Petrograd, founder of the Philharmonic Society and donor of his library to the Conservatory, while the younger was equally prominent at Moscow.

Wiemann, Robert (Frankenhausen, 1870). Able Saxon conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1891 employed at Pforzheim, from 1894 at Bremerhaven, from 1899 at Osnabrück (town-director from 1907) and since 1910 city-director at Stettin (Musikverein, choir of the Jacobikirche, etc.). Has written the tone-poems Erdenwallen, Bergwanderung, Kassandra and Am Meere (with final chorus), the choral works Die Okeaniden and Friethof und Ingeborg, 1913, 3 string-quartets, a violin-sonata, variations for two pianos, etc.

Wieniawski, Henri (Lublin, 1835-1880, Moscow), brother of the following. Distinguished Polish violinist, brought up in Paris, where he studied at the Conservatory (1st prize when but eleven). At thirteen he gave concerts in Petrograd and Moscow and in 1850 (with his brother) began a long series of tours over the whole of Europe. In 1860 he was made soloist to the Czar at Petrograd and in 1862-67 taught at the Conservatory there. In 1872 he went with Rubinstein to America, touring later as far as California. In 1874-77 he was Vieuxtemps' successor at the Brussels Conservatory and then, in spite of failing health, undertook further tours. He stands out as one of the strongest players in the later 19th century, a perfect master of technique, a sympathetic interpreter in many styles, a superb ensemble-player and endowed with an extraordinary warm and ardent temperament that captivated audiences. He was also highly gifted as composer. Wrote 2 violin-concertos, 2 polonaises, 2 Mazourkas Caractéristiques, a fantasia on themes from Faust, Scherzo-Tarentelle and Souvenir de Moscou, all for violin and orchestra, Caprice Fantastique, Souvenir de Posen, Adagio Élégiacque, Capriccio-Valse, Romance et Rondo, Le Carnaval Russe, 2 mazurkas, theme and variations, a gigue and Fantaisie Orientale, all for violin and piano, and several Études-Caprices for violin solo (or with second), besides 2 works for violin and piano with his brother. G.

Wieniawski, Joseph (Lublin, 1837-1912, Brussels), brother of the above. Eminent Polish pianist, trained at the Paris Conservatory and by Liszt and Marx, beginning to tour with his brother when but thirteen. From 1857 he lived at Paris, but made extensive tours with universal success. In 1866 he went to Moscow to teach at the Conservatory, but in 1869 started his own school. In 1875-76 he was director of the Musical Society at Warsaw and then became professor at the Brussels Conservatory. Wrote an orchestral Suite Romantique, the overture Guillaume le Taciturne, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a Duo Polonais for violin and piano (with his brother), a 'cello-sonata, 2 piano-sonatas, a Fantaisie et Fugue, polonaises, waltzes, mazurkas and many other piano-pieces, besides concert- and other études. Memoir by Delcroix, 1908.

Wieprecht, Wilhelm Friedrich (Aschersleben, 1802-1872, Berlin). Noted Saxon military musician, from 1824 in Berlin, becoming director-general of the Prussian bands and effecting their reorganization with striking success. He invented the bass-tuba in 1835 (with Moritz), the bathyphon in 1839 (with Skorra) and an improved double-bassoon, besides introducing the 'piangendo' effect on piston-instruments. He contested the priority of Sax's invention of the saxhorn, but unsuccessfully. See Grove's Dictionary, v. 537.

Wiese, Christian Ludwig Gustav, Freiherr von (Ansbach, 1732-1800, Dresden). Bavarian acoustician, author of many discussions of problems in tuning, temperament, etc. (from 1790).

Wietrowetz, Gabriele (Laibach, 1866). Noted Austrian violinist, pupil of Joachim at the Berlin Hochschule (Mendelssohn prize in 1883), from 1885 rapidly gaining applause throughout Europe by repeated and extended tours and since 1901 teacher at the Berlin Hochschule. She is leader of her own Quartet (all women). G.

Wihan, Hans (n. Braunau, 1855-1920, Prague). Eminent Bohemian 'cellist, trained at the Prague Conservatory, in 1873-74 teacher at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, then employed by Baron Dervies at Nice, from 1876 concertmaster in Bilse's orchestra at Berlin, from 1880 soloist in the court-orchestra at Munich and also in the court-quartet (often heard at Wagner's villa at Bayreuth), and from 1888 professor at the Prague Conservatory. In 1891 he organized his pupils Hoffmann, Suk, Nedbal and Berger into the Bohemian Quartet, which promptly became one of the most famous ensembles in the world, and from 1897 became 'cellist in it as well as director, retiring in 1914. G (Bohemian Quartet).

Wihtol, Joseph Ivanovitch (Wolmar, 1863). Russian (Livonian) composer, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory and from 1896 professor there, besides acting as critic from 1897 for the Zeitung. In 1918-19 he directed the Lettish Opera at Riga and in 1919 founded the new Conservatory there. Has written a symphony, the overtures Dramatique and Spriditis, the symphonic picture La Fête Ligho, a fantasia on Lettish folk-songs for violin and orchestra, a string-quartet, 5 piano-sonatas, many pieces for violin, for viola, for 'cello or for piano, the choral works The Bard of Beverin and Das Lied, many songs and arrangements of about 100 Lettish folk-songs.

Wiklund, Adolf (in Vermland, 1879). Able Swedish pianist and composer, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory and elsewhere as holder of the Jenny Lind scholarship (including study with Kwast). Has written an overture, a concerto and Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, a string-quartet, 2 violin-sonatas, choruses, piano-pieces and songs. He is leader of the Musikverein in Stockholm.

Wikmanson, Johan (Stockholm, 1753-1800, do.). Swedish organist and theorist, from 1781 at the Storkyrka and the Dutch Reformed Church in Stockholm and from 1796 director of the Royal Academy there. He was intimate with Vogler and J. M. Kraus. Wrote 3 string-quartets (dedicated to Haydn), 2 'cello-pieces, the sonata Hönshuset, 3 sonatinas for zither, music for the play Eremiten (1798), etc.

Wilbye, John. 16th C. G.

Wild, Franz (Niederhollabrunn, 1792-1860, n. Vienna). Noted Austrian operatic tenor (later baritone), trained as choirboy at Klosterneuburg and in the court-chapel at Vienna, in 1810-11 soloist in the Esterházy establishment, then in the leading Vienna theaters, from 1816, after a German tour, at Darmstadt, in 1826-29 at Kassel and then permanently at Vienna, retiring in 1845, but continuing in high honor as concert-singer. In 1815 he sang at Beethoven's last appearance as concert-player. G.

Wild, Harrison Major (Hoboken, N. J. 1861). Gifted American organist and choral conductor, pupil of Creswold, E. Liebling, Eddy, Gleason and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1876 at the Church of the Ascension in Chicago, from 1881 at Unity Church and since 1895 at Grace Church, besides from 1898 directing the Apollo Club and since 1902 the Mendelssohn Club, as well as a similar society in Rockford. He is also known as an able organ-recitalist. A.

Wilder, Jérôme Albert Victor van (n. Ghent, 1835-1892, Paris). Belgian poet and critic, in 1871-84 on the staff of the Ménestrel in Paris, translator of many song-texts, successful adapter of operas by Paisiello, Mozart, Weber and Wagner, and author of lives of Mozart (1880, 4th ed. 1889) and Beethoven (1883). G.

Wilhar, Franz S. (Senoschetsche, 1852). Croatian organist and composer, pupil of Th. Else and the Prague Conservatory, in 1872-73 town-director at Weissenkirchen, from 1873 cathedral-organist at Temesvár, in 1882-91 director of the music-school at Karlowitz (Croatia) and then living at Agram. Has written 3 Croatian operas, an operetta, orchestral and choral works, masses, piano-pieces and songs. Next to Zaytz he is counted the leading Croatian composer.

Wilhelm, Karl Friedrich (Schmalkalden, 1815-1873, do.). Hessian choral conductor, in 1839-64 leader of the Crefeld Liedertafel, in 1854 writing the national song Die Wacht am Rhein (text by Schneckenberger). Memoirs by Gollmick, 1848, and Buchner, 1874. G.

Wilhelmj, August Emil Daniel Ferdinand (Usingen, 1845-1908, London). Distinguished Hessian violinist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and under Raff, appearing as a boy of eight at Wiesbaden, in 1862 at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig and after 1865 on prolonged tours that finally extended round the world (to America in 1878). In 1876 he was concertmaster at the initial Wagnerian performances at Bayreuth. From about 1870 he lived at Biebrich-on-Rhine, where (with his accompanist Rud. Niemann) he started a violin-school, in 1886 removed to Blasewitz (near Dresden) and from 1894 was professor at the Guildhall School in London. His playing was marked by great nobility, breadth and intellectual grasp, combined with flawless technique. In his later years he was much interested in the details of violin-making. In 1866 he married the Baroness Liphardt and in 1895 the pianist Mariella Mausch. Wrote 2 Konzertstücke, an Alla Polacca and variations (after Paganini), all for violin and orchestra, a string-quartet, quartet-variations (after Schubert), a cadenza for Beethoven's violin-concerto, many violin-solos and transcriptions, a Hochzeits-Kantate, etc., besides (with J. Brown) a violin-school (1903). His son Adolf (b. 1872) is also a fine violinist, since 1898 teaching at the Belfast Conservatory. Memoir by Frassinetti, 1913. G.

Wilhem [Bocquillon], Guillaume Louis (Paris, 1781-1842, do.). Noted French school-musician, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1803 teaching at the military school at St. Cyr and from 1810 at the Lycée Napoléon in Paris. From 1815 he became deeply engaged in promoting musical instruction in the public schools, especially by class-methods, and from 1819 was put in charge of part of the Paris schools and in 1835 of all of them. In 1833 he began holding mass-performances of school-children and later added adult choruses, thus laying the foundation for the extensive and influential national association known as the Orphéon, of which from 1852 Gounod was chief director. For this he prepared a large collection of a cappella choruses. Author of several manuals of popular teaching (1821-36). Memoirs by Isouard, 1842, Niboyet, 1843, and Lafage, 1844. G.

Wilke, Christian Friedrich Gottlieb (Spandau, 1769–1848, Treuenbrietzen). Prussian organist and organ-expert, from 1791 at Spandau and from 1809 at Neu-Ruppin, author of a history of modern organ-making (1846) and many smaller manuals and articles.

Wilke, Franz (Kallies, 1861). Pomeranian conductor and theorist, pupil of Draheim, Ferd. Hiller, Rudnik and G. Riemenschneider, from about 1882 town-director in Haynau (Silesia), from 1887 in like position at Kottbus and in 1910–19 conductor of the Philharmonic at Greiz. At Haynau he started an orchestral school and at Kottbus a school for advanced students (from 1892). Has written some orchestral pieces and a text-book in harmony.

Willert, Adrian (?–1562). 16th C. G.

Wille, Georg (Greiz, 1869). Able Thuringian 'cellist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1889 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra (in 1891 following A. Schröder as soloist) and since 1899 in the opera-orchestra at Dresden, besides teaching at the Conservatory and playing in the Petri Quartet. He gained the title of royal professor in 1908.

Willeke, Willem (b. 1878). Dutch 'cellist, from 1896 active at Riga, Düsseldorf, London and Vienna, and in 1907–17 Schröder's successor in the Kneisel Quartet, then continuing as teacher in New York. A.

Willent [-Bordogni], Jean Baptiste Joseph (Douai, 1809–1852, Paris). French bassoonist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1830 playing in opera-orchestras in London and Paris. In 1834 he married Louise Bordogni, daughter of the noted singing-teacher, and for some years toured with her, about 1840 becoming teacher at the Brussels Conservatory and from 1848 at the Paris Conservatory. Wrote 4 fantasias for bassoon and orchestra, a concertante for clarinet and bassoon, a duo for oboe and bassoon and a bassoon-method, besides 2 operas (1844–45).

Williams, Alberto (Buenos Aires, 1862). Argentine composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1899 conductor of symphony-concerts in Buenos Aires and in 1903 founder and since director of the Conservatory there (with 25 branches elsewhere). Has written 3 symphonies, 2 overtures, 3 orchestral suites and a march, a piano-trio, 3 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, etc., besides text-books in theory and several books of poems. A.

Williams, Anna (London, 1845). Gifted English soprano, pupil of H. C. Deacon, J. B. Welch and Dom. Scapati, from 1874 taking a high place as an oratorio-singer in England, being in special request at the larger festivals (including the premières of Stanford's Three Holy Children (1885) and Eden (1891) and of Parry's Judith (1888). She retired in 1897 and till 1904 taught at the Royal College in London. In 1910 she married R. J. Fennessy. G.

Williams, Charles Francis Abdy (Dawlish, 1855–1923, Milford). Eminent English church-musician and historical student, trained at Trinity College, Cambridge, and Leipzig Conservatory, while at Cambridge playing violin and viola in the University Musical Society. After spending 1878–81 in New Zealand for his health, with some musical work, in 1881–82 he was organist at Dover College, in 1885–91 organist at St. Mary's (West Brompton) and in 1895–1901 music-director at the Greek Theatre at Bradfield College (giving great attention to producing Greek plays with appropriate choruses and instruments). In 1904 he introduced the Solesmes method of Gregorian music at the priests' seminary in Capri. Mus.B. of Oxford and Cambridge Univs. in 1889 and '91. Author of An Historical Account of Musical Degrees at Oxford and Cambridge, 1893, lives of Bach (1900) and Handel (1901), popular histories of the organ (1903), notation (1903) and organ-music (1905), The Rhythm of Modern Music, 1909, and many articles on Greek and Gregorian music. Has also written a string-quartet, a 'cello-sonata, choruses for Antigone, Agamemnon and Alceste, and some church-services. G.

Williams, Charles Lee (Winchester, 1853). English organist, pupil of G. B. Arnold and from 1870 his assistant at Winchester Cathedral, in 1872–75 at St. Columba's College (Ireland), from 1876 at Llandaff Cathedral and in 1882–97 at Gloucester Cathedral, resigning because of ill-health. At Gloucester he conducted five of the Three Choirs' Festivals and (with H. G. Chance) prepared a continuation (to 1894) of their Annals (begun by Lysons in 1811 and augmented by Amott in 1865). Has written the cantatas Bethany, Gethsemane, A Dedication, A Harvest-Song and A Festival Hymn, besides services and anthems. G.

Williams, David Christmas (Llanwrtyd, 1871). Welsh choral conductor, pupil of Joseph Parry, director of the Musical Society and the North Glamorgan Orchestral Society at Merthyr Tydfil. Has written the prize-cantata The Sands of Lavan, 1893, the choral works The Battle of the Severn and Psalms of Praise, men's choruses and songs, besides an overture and an orchestral suite.

Williams, Harry Evan (Mineral Ridge, O. 1867–1918, Akron, O.). Eminent American tenor, pupil of Louise von Feilitzsch, Francon and Ben Davies, M. D. Mehan and James Sauvage, beginning public appearances in 1891 and becoming noted from 1896 not only at all important festivals, but in perhaps 1000 song-recitals (after 1900 exclusively in English). A.

Williams, John Gerrard (London, 1888). Self-taught English composer of 3 orchestral Miniatures, a potpourri on verses by Isabel Scott-Brenner and other pieces, 2 string-quartets, piano-pieces, choruses, songs and music for children.

Williams, Ralph Vaughan (Down Ampney, 1872). Eminent English composer, trained at the Royal College (London), the Berlin Akademie and by Bruch, with later study with Ravel.

His only official positions have been as organist of the South Lambeth Church in 1896-99 and as extension-lecturer for Oxford University. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1901 and of Oxford in 1919. His style is original and bold, with a keen sense for musical beauty. His works include

For orchestra—A London Symphony, 1917; impressions, The Solent, Harnham Down and Boldrewood, 1907, and In the Fen Country, 1909; 3 Norfolk Rhapsodies, 1906-07; Bucolic Suite, 1902; Heroic Elegy, 1901; (for small orchestra) Serenade, 1901, and Fantasia on theme by Tallis. Also suite from the Wasps music (see below).

Chamber-music—2 piano-quintets (one with clarinet and horn); 2 pieces for string-quintet; 2 string-quartets; 3 Studies in English Folk-Song for violin.

Choral music—cantata, Willow-Wood, 1909; Toward the Unknown Region, 1907; A Sea Symphony; The Garden of Proserpine; 5 Mystical Songs; incidental music for Aristophanes' Wasps and Ben Jonson's Pan's Anniversary.

Other vocal music—3 Nocturnes for baritone and orchestra; song-cycles, The House of Life, Songs of Travel, On Wenlock Edge, etc.; many other solo-songs, part-songs and madrigals.

Arrangements of 15 folk-songs from the Eastern Counties and of Purcell's Welcome Songs; The English Hymnal (edited), 1906. G.

Willing, Christopher Edwin (London, 1830-1904, do.). English organist, pupil as choirboy of Turle, whom from 1845 he assisted at Westminster Abbey, besides playing at a church in Blackheath and in 1847-58 also at Her Majesty's (again after 1868). In 1848-79 he was organist at the Foundling Hospital and in 1857-60 also at St. Paul's (Covent Garden) and in 1860-68 at All Saints' (Margaret Street). For many years he was conductor of the Choral Union at St. Albans. G.

Willing, Johann Ludwig (n. Meiningen, 1755-1805, Nordhausen). Saxon organist, for many years at the Hauptkirche in Nordhausen, publishing concertos for violin and for 'cello, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, violin-duos, etc.

Willis, Henry (London, 1821-1901, do.). Famous English organ-maker, from 1835 working for John Gray and from 1842 for D. E. Evans but from 1845 rapidly developing his own business, gaining notice in 1847 by rebuilding the organ in Gloucester Cathedral and in 1851 by one shown at the Exhibition in the Crystal Palace (later set up in Winchester Cathedral). He later supplied instruments for many other cathedrals, for St. George's Hall in Liverpool (1855), for the Alexandra Palace (1862 and 1875), for the Royal Albert Hall, etc. He won numerous medals and other honors. Throughout his life he also played at various London churches. G.

Willman, Per Anders Johan (Stockholm, 1834). Swedish operatic bass, pupil of Duprez, from 1854 for about thirty years a leading singer at Stockholm, from 1877 head of the operatic training-school there, from 1881 intendant and in 1883-88 director of the Royal Theater.

Willmann, Johann Ignaz (Vienna, ?-1821, do.). Austrian violinist, from about 1765 at Montjoie (n. Aix), in 1767-74 in the electoral orchestra at Bonn and later musician to Count Palffy at Vienna. From 1788 his sons Max (1768-1812) and Karl were also in the Bonn orchestra, besides his daughters Marie, who was a good pianist, pupil of Mozart, and Magdalena (d. 1801), an excellent singer, from 1795 engaged at the Vienna Opera. The latter was one of Beethoven's early flames.

Willmers, Heinrich Rudolf (Berlin, 1821-1878, Vienna). Noted Prussian pianist, pupil of Hummel and Frdr. Schneider, in 1838-53 engaged in extensive tours, then settled at Vienna, but in 1864-66 teaching at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin. His execution was remarkable and he was famous for his chains of trills. Wrote a piano-quartet, 2 violin-sonatas, a large number of brilliant piano-pieces, including a Sonata Héroïque, Allegro Symphonique, Sérénade Érotique (for left hand), concert-études, fantasias, etc.

Wilm, Nicolai von (Riga, 1834-1911, Wiesbaden). Famous German-Russian pianist and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1857-58 theater-conductor at Riga, then removing to Petrograd, where in 1860-75 he taught at the Nikolai Institute. After a sojourn at Dresden, from 1878 he lived at Wiesbaden. Wrote nearly 250 works, including a string-sextet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, 2 violin-suites, a sonata for violin and harp, 8 4-hand piano-suites, 4 Walzer-Suiten and other 4-hand pieces, variations, a prelude and a sarabande for 2 pianos, 5 suites for piano solo and many other pieces, a Konzertstück for harp and orchestra, motets, men's choruses and songs, besides a book of poems (1880). G.

Wilms, Jan Willem (n. Sondershausen, 1772-1847, Amsterdam). Saxon pianist, from 1791 teaching in Amsterdam, and from 1824 organist at the Baptist Church there, taking various prizes for compositions. Wrote 3 symphonies, concertos for piano, for flute and for clarinet, string-quartets, piano-trios, violin- and flute-sonatas, etc.

Wilsing, Daniel Friedrich Eduard (n. Dortmund, 1809-1893, Berlin). Westphalian organist, in 1829-34 at the Hauptkirche in Wesel and then in Berlin, writing the oratorio Jesus Christus, 1889 (given at Bonn by his pupil, Arnold Mendelssohn), a De Profundis a 16 (gold medal at Berlin and strongly commended by Schumann), a wind-trio, piano-sonatas, part-songs and songs.

Wilson, Christopher (Melbourne, 1874-1919, London). Talented English composer and theatrical conductor, trained at the Royal Academy, London (many prizes and Mendelssohn Scholar, 1895), with further study under Wüllner, Herzogenberg and Widor, from about 1900 constantly associated with the best productions in London of Shakespearian and other plays. Wrote incidental music for Richard II, Taming of the Shrew, Much Ado, Merchant of Venice, Measure for Measure, Kismet, The Pied Piper, Greek plays and many others, 2 suites for strings, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 2 violin-sonatas, music for 2 pageants, some duets and many fine songs. In 1918-19 he published five articles in The Stage on music for Shakespeare. Memoir in Musical Times, 1919.

Wilson, John (1595-1674). 17th C. G.

Wilson, Matilda Ellen [Hilda] (Monmouth, 1860). Gifted English contralto, pupil of the Royal Academy (London), where she was Westmorland Scholar, and winner of the Parepa-Rosa prize. After first appearances when but fifteen, from 1880 she was for over twenty years a favorite at all the large festivals and many concerts. In 1904 she married Ashley R. Hart of Clifton. G.

Wilson, Mortimer (Chariton, Ia. 1876.) American teacher and composer, pupil of Jacobsohn, Gleason, Middelschulte, Nedbal, Sitt and Reger, in 1901-07 teaching at Lincoln, Neb., from 1911 at the Atlanta (Ga.) Conservatory, as well as conducting the Philharmonic Orchestra there, in 1916-18 at Brenau College (Gainesville, Ga.) and in 1917-18 at the Malkin Music School in New York. Has written 5 symphonies, the suite A Country Wedding, the prize-overture New Orleans, 1920, the piano-trio From My Youth, 3 violin-sonatas, a Suite Petite, Suwannee Sketches and other violin-pieces, an organ-sonata and other pieces, the piano-suites In Georgia, Rustica, By the Wayside and In Imagery, with many characteristic pieces (some for 4 hands), and songs (many for children). Author of The Rhetoric of Music, Orchestral Training and magazine-articles. A.

Wilt, Marie, née Liebenhaler (Vienna, 1833-1891, do.). Eminent Austrian operatic soprano, pupil of Gänsbacher and Wolf, from about 1860 becoming known in concerts at Vienna and from 1865 on the opera-stage. Her superb voice and brilliant execution led to her being conspicuous not only in Austria and Hungary, but in Italy, Germany and England for about fifteen years. Her dramatic ability was not extraordinary, though her répertoire was extensive, but she was highly successful in oratorio and concert. She was the wife of the civil engineer Franz Wilt. G.

Wiltberger, August (Sobernheim, 1850), brother of the following. Rhenish teacher at seminaries in Colmar (1873-76), Saargemünd, Münstermaifeld and Brühl (since 1884), as well as from 1887 active in the council of the Cäcilien-Verein. Has written the oratorios St. Cäcilia (revised 1897) and St. Bonifatius, 1896, the cantata Barbarossas Erwachen, the choral works Kaisergruss and Festgesang zum Priester-Jubiläum, over 30 masses and much other church-music, organ-pieces and a method, a violin-sonata, a text-book in harmony (1906, 3d ed. 1912), etc.

Wiltberger, Heinrich (Sobernheim, 1841-1916, Colmar), brother of the above. Rhenish teacher in various institutions in Alsace, where he was one of the founders of a branch of the Cäcilien-

Verein, promoter of the Alsace-Lorraine Sängerbund and famous for his men's choruses. Wrote a Requiem, some 12 masses, motets, hymns, pieces for string-orchestra and a manual of singing for schools (1907).

Winderstein, Hans Wilhelm Gustav (Lüneburg, 1856). Able Hanoverian violinist and conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1878 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra there, from 1880 concertmaster for Baron von Derweis at Nice, from 1884 teacher at the Winterthur Conservatory, from 1887 at Nuremberg, at first conducting a concert-orchestra and from 1890 the new Philharmonic there and in Fürth, from 1893 the first director of the Kaim concerts at Munich, and from 1896 head of his own orchestra at Leipzig, which continued prominent till the World War and which in 1919 he vainly sought to reestablish. In 1898-99 he followed Klengel as leader of the Leipzig Singakademie. In 1910 he was made royal professor and in 1917 Hofrat. Has written an orchestral suite and other pieces, with some violin-works.

Winding, August Henrik (in Laaland, 1835-1899, Copenhagen). Important Danish pianist and composer, pupil of Reinecke, Gade, Ree, Holm, Schellenberg and Dreyschock, from 1867 teaching at the Copenhagen Conservatory, becoming director in 1891. Wrote a symphony, 2 overtures, a piano-concerto, a violin-concerto, a concert-allegro for piano and orchestra, a string-sextet, a piano-quartet, 2 violin-sonatas, Fantasiestücke for clarinet, cadenzas for all of Mozart's piano-concertos and for those by Beethoven in C min. and G, a Pfingsthyrne for soli and chorus, numerous characteristic piano-pieces and some songs.

Windesperger, Lothar (Ampfing, 1885). Bavarian composer, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, writing a symphony, an overture, the symphonic fantasia Lumen Amoris, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for 'cello (both with organ), a sonata for violin solo, 2 for 'cello solo, an Ode for viola solo, a small 'cello-suite, a 'cello-sonata, a piano-sonata and several fantasias, organ-pieces and songs.

Wingham, Thomas (London, 1846-1893, do.). Able English pianist and church-musician, trained at Wyld's Academy and the Royal Academy, where from 1871 he was professor. He began service as organist at ten, from 1864 was at All Saints' (Paddington) and from 1882 choirmaster at the Brompton Oratory, gaining great distinction for his elevation of the music. Wrote 2 masses (1876-77), a Te Deum (1884), motets and much other church-music, 4 symphonies (1869-83, no. 3 with final chorus), 6 overtures (1872-80, no. 3 with chorus), an orchestral Serenade and Elegy (for W. S. Bennett), a Capriccio for piano and orchestra, a septet for piano, strings and wind, 2 string-quartets, some piano-pieces, songs and the uncompleted opera Nala and Damayanti. G.

Winkelman, Hermann (Brunswick, 1849-1912, Vienna). Eminent North German operatic tenor, pupil of Koch at Hanover, making his début in 1875 at Sondershausen and at once taking a foremost position, especially as a Wagnerian interpreter. After becoming known throughout Europe, in 1883-1906 he was regularly engaged at the Vienna Opera, with guest-appearances elsewhere (in America in 1884). He sang at the premières of Rubinstein's Nero (1879) and Wagner's Parsifal (1882), besides local premières at Vienna and London. He was also a superb concert-singer. G.

Winkler, Alexander Adolfovitch (Kharkov, 1865). Gifted Russian pianist and composer, pupil of the Kharkov Music School and of Duvernoy, Leschetizky and Navrátil, from 1890 teaching at the Kharkov Music School and since 1896 at the Petrograd Conservatory. Has written the overture En Bretagne, orchestral variations on Russian and Finnish folk-songs, a string-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a viola-sonata (also for violin), 2-piano variations on a theme by Bach, various piano-pieces and songs, besides 4-hand transcriptions from Glinka and Glazunov.

Winter, Peter von (Mannheim, 1754-1825, Munich). Distinguished Badenese conductor and composer, pupil of Vogler, but largely self-taught, as a boy playing violin in the court-orchestra at Mannheim and from 1776 directing the opera (in 1777 coming to know Mozart). In 1778 he went with the court-establishment to Munich, in 1794 becoming assistant-director and in 1798 chief, but with many leaves of absence to visit Vienna and Italy. He was a prolific composer both for the stage and for the church, excelling in instrumentation and choral writing. His works include Operas and other stage-works—Armida, 1778, Cora ed Alonzo, 1779, Leonardo e Blandine, 1779, Helena und Paris, 1780, Der Reisende, 1781, Bellerophon, 1782, Das Hirtendmädchen, 1784, Scherz, List und Rache, 1790, Jery und Bätely, 1790, Calone in Utica, 1791 (Venice), Antigone, 1791 (Naples), I Fratelli Rivali, 1792, Il Sacrificio di Creta, 1792 (both Venice), Psyche, 1793, Der Sturm, 1793, Armida und Rinaldo, 1793, Das Labyrinth, 1794 (sequel to Mozart's Zauberflöte), Arianna, 1795 (all Vienna), Ogus, 1795 (Prague), Die Sommerbelustigungen, 1795 (Berlin), Die Thomasnacht, 1795 (Bayreuth), I due Vedovi, 1796, Das unterbrochene Opferfest, 1796 (his most famous work), Elisa, 1797, Babylons Pyramiden, 1797 (all Vienna), Marie von Montalban, 1800, Tamara, 1802 (Paris), Calypso, 1803, Il Ratto di Proserpina, 1804, Zaira, 1805 (all London), Der Frauenbund, 1805, Castor et Pollux, 1806 (Paris), Colmal, 1809, Die beiden Blinden, 1810, Belisa, 1812, Die Pantoffeln, 1816 (Hamburg), Maometto II, 1817, I Due Valdomiri, 1817, Etelinda, 1818 (all Milan), Der Sänger und der Schneider, 1820.

Choral works—3 oratorios; 17 sacred and several secular cantatas; over 25 masses, 2 Requiems and a large amount of church-music; etc.

For orchestra—9 symphonies (including Die Schlacht, with chorus, 1814); various overtures; several concertos for wind-instruments.

Chamber-music—octet for strings and wind; 2 septets; sextet for strings and horns; 3 string-quintets; 6 string-quartets; etc.

Vollständige Singschule, 3 parts.

[Thematic catalogue of chamber-music in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, xv-xvi.]

See essay by Frensdorf, 1908, on his operas. G.

Winter-Hjelm, Otto (Christiania, 1837). Norwegian organist and conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Kullak and Wüerst, from 1864 teaching in Christiania, where from 1874 he was organist at Trinity Church, for a time conductor of the Philharmonic and later of his own orchestral and church-concerts. Wrote 2 symphonies, choruses, piano-pieces, songs, methods for organ and piano, etc.

Winterberger, Alexander (Weimar, 1834-1914, Leipzig). Saxon pianist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Liszt, from 1861 teaching in Vienna, in 1869-72 at the Petrograd Conservatory and then in Leipzig, where in 1903-07 he wrote for the Neueste Nachrichten. Wrote many characteristic and original piano-pieces, songs and duets. Memoir by O. Foerster, 1905 (with list of works).

Winterfeld, Karl Georg August Vivigens von (Berlin, 1784-1852, do.). Eminent Prussian lawyer and music-historian, from 1811 in official positions at Berlin, from 1816 at Breslau, where he was also in charge of the music-section of the University library, and from 1832 again at Berlin, retiring on pension in 1847. His valuable collections went to the Berlin Library. Author of monographs on Palestrina (1832) and Giov. Gabrieli (1834, 2 vols.), on the works of Fasch (1839) and Luther (1840), the monumental treatise Der evangel. Kirchengesang u. sein Verhältniss zur Kunst d. Tonsatzes, 3 vols. 1843-47, Ueber Herstellung d. Gemeinde- u. Chorgesangs in d. evangel. Kirche, 1848, Zur Gesch. heiliger Tonkunst, 2 parts, 1850-52, Musikleben u. Musikempfinden im 16. u. 17. Jahrh. 1851, and Allegorisch-poetische Festopern zu Hofe zu Wien in d. letzten Hälfte d. 17. Jahrh. 1852. Correspondence with E. Krüger edited by Prüfer, 1898. G.

Winternitz, Arnold (Linz, 1874). Austrian conductor and composer, from 1898 engaged in operatic directing in Linz, Gratz, Vienna, Hamburg and Chicago and now settled in Hamburg. Has written the comic opera Meister Grobian, 1918, the dance-play Galante Pantomime, 1920, the melodramas Die Nachtigall and Der Fluch der Kröte, song-cycles and piano-pieces.

Wintzer, Richard (n. Halle, 1866). Saxon painter, in music pupil of Bargiel, since 1890 active at Berlin, writing the operas Die Willis, Marienkind, 1905, and Salas y Gomez, the choral work Auf hohen Bergen, excellent songs and piano-pieces (many for children).

Wipperf. See Harriers-Wipperf.

Wirth, Emanuel (Luditz, 1842). Able Bohemian violinist and violist, trained at the Prague Conservatory, from 1861 concertmaster in the Kurorchester at Baden-Baden, from 1864 teacher at the Rotterdam Conservatory and also concertmaster at the Opera and for the Maatschappij concerts, and from 1877 teacher at the Berlin Hochschule, violist in the Joachim Quartet (following Rappoldi) and also head of a Trio (with Barth as pianist and R. Hausmann as cellist). He retired in 1910. G. (under Joachim Quartet).

Wirth, Friedrich Moritz (n. Chemnitz, 1849–1917, Leipzig). Saxon student of philosophy and political economy, educated at Leipzig University and long active in Berlin as writer on various subjects. He had peculiar critical notions and was a sharp opponent of Wagnerism. Author of Drohender Untergang Bayreuths, 1887, Wagner-Museum u. Zukunft d. Wagnertums, 1894, Der Ring d. Nibelungen als Wolandrama, 1912, Parsifal in neuem Lichte, 1914, etc., besides lectures on Der Ring d. Nibelungen, d. Weltgedicht d. Kapitalismus (from 1888).

Wirth, Hermann Felix (Utrecht, 1885). Dutch student of literary history, educated at Basel University (Ph.D. 1910), from 1909 lecturer at Berlin University on the Dutch language and literature, besides starting historical concerts of Dutch music, and since 1918 professor of musicology at the Brussels Conservatory. Author of Der Untergang d. niederl. Volksliedes, 1911, and Nationaal-nederlandsche Musiekpolitiek, 1912, and editor of several important collections of early Dutch music.

Wise, Michael (?1648–1687). 17th C. G.

Wiske, C. Mortimer (Bennington, Vt. 1853). American choral conductor, in 1882 and '84 assistant to Theo. Thomas in training choruses in New York and for Wagner festivals, then for some years director of the New York Chorus Society, and since 1902 in charge of annual festivals in Paterson and Newark (N. J.). A.

Wit, Paul de (Maestricht, 1852). Dutch 'cellist and instrument-collector, besides being expert on the viola da gamba. In 1880 (with O. Laffert) he founded the Zeitschrift für Instrumentenbau at Leipzig. In 1886 he opened there a collection of instruments which in 1890 went to the Berlin Hochschule, and then formed a second collection which in turn became in 1906 the nucleus of the Heyer Museum at Cologne (catalogue published in 1904). Author of Geigenzettel alter Meister vom 16. bis Mitte d. 19. Jahrh. 1902 (2d part, 1910), and Weltadressbuch d. gesamten Musikinstrumenten-Industrie, 1903 (8th ed. 1912).

Witek, Anton (Saaz, 1872). Excellent Bohemian violinist, pupil of his father and the Prague Conservatory, appearing first when but eight and from 1889 gaining high reputation as soloist. From 1894 he was concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic and in 1910–18 of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. From about 1895 he was much associated in tours with the Danish pianist Vita (Friese) Gerhardt (b. 1868), whom he married in 1909, and in 1903 formed the Philharmonic Trio with her and Joseph Malkin, which was revived in Boston in 1914, when Malkin joined the orchestra there. In 1910–16 he taught at the Von Ende music-school in New York and later at the Malkin school. A.

Witherspoon, Herbert (Buffalo, N. Y. 1873). Eminent American operatic bass, pupil of Stoeckel, Hor. Parker, MacDowell, Dubulle, Faure, Bouhy, H. J. Wood, Capoul and Lamperti, from 1895 becoming known in concert and from 1898 in opera. His early career was mainly as a favorite concert-singer, but in 1908–16 he was engaged at the Metropolitan, New York. He has made five tours in England. He sang at the première of Parker's Mona (1912). In 1899 he married Greta Hughes in Paris and in 1916 the soprano Florence Hinkle. He now teaches in his own school in New York. A.

Witkowski, Georges Martin (in Algeria, 1867). French composer, from 1887 in military service, then pupil of d'Indy (though he had already composed in large forms). About 1900 he settled in Lyons, where in 1902 he founded a Schola Cantorum (chorus) and in 1905 an orchestra, uniting them in the production of large works. Has written 2 symphonies (1898, 1911), the symphonic poems Harold, 1894, and Marche d'Arthur, prelude to the unfinished opera Myrdhinn, various other orchestral pieces, a piano-quintet (1898), a string-quartet (1903), a violin-sonata (1907), the choral work Poème de la Maison, 1917, and the short opera Le Maître à Chanter, 1891.

Witt, Christian Friedrich (?1660–1716). 17th C.

Witt, Franz Xaver (Walderbach, 1834–1888, n. Landshut). Bavarian priest and influential church-musician, pupil of Proske and Schrems, in 1856–67 teaching at the Ratisbon Theological Seminary and there starting the Fliegende Blätter für kath. Kirchenmusik und Musica Sacra (both 1866) and also the Allgem. Deutscher Cäcilienverein (1867), which before long had many branches throughout Europe. He sought by every means to reawaken interest in the older a cappella style. Wrote many masses, 2 Requiems, motets, litanies, hymns, etc. Author of Der Zustand d. kath. Kirchenmusik, 1865, Ueber d. Dirigieren d. kath. Kirchenmusik and Das bayer. Kultusministerium, 1886. Memoir by Karl Walter, 1889 (2d ed. 1906), with list of works.

Witt, Friedrich (Haltenbergstetten, 1770–1837, Würzburg). Able Bavarian violinist and conductor, pupil of A. Rosetti, from about 1790 playing in the court-orchestra at Wallerstein and from 1802 court-director at Würzburg (after 1815 as city-director, the grand duchy having been terminated). Wrote 2 operas (1804–06), 2 oratorios, masses, cantatas, 9 symphonies, pieces for wind-band, a septet, a quintet, a flute-concerto, etc.

Witt, Theodor de (Wesel, 1823–1855, Rome). Rhenish church-musician, enabled by Liszt to study with Dehn, in 1846 sent to Italy on a governmental stipend to investigate music of the a cappella school. He edited vols. i–iii of the Breitkopf & Hartel edition of Palestrina, but was cut off by consumption. Also wrote Psalms, motets, etc.

Witte, Georg Heinrich (Utrecht, 1843). Dutch conductor and composer, pupil of the Hague and Leipzig Conservatories, from 1865 teaching at Leipzig and in Alsace, and in 1871–1911 conductor of the Musikverein in Essen, gaining the title of royal professor in 1905. Has written the choral work An die Sonne, a 'cello-concerto, an Elegie for violin and orchestra, a piano-quartet (prize at Florence), a 'cello-sonata and other pieces, excellent piano-works (some for 4 hands) and songs, besides a history of the Essen Musikverein (1913).

Wittgenstein, Friedrich Ernst, Count (Schloss Sannerz, 1837). Hessian nobleman, pupil of Jul. Rietz, writing the operas Die Welfenbraut, 1879, and Antonius und Kleopatra, 1883, Szenen aus der Frithjofsage (with orchestra) and other songs.

Wittich, Marie (Giessen, 1868). Gifted Hessian operatic soprano, pupil of Frau Otto-Ubriz, in 1889-1914 a leading singer at the Dresden Opera, there marrying Dr. Karl Faul.

Witting, Karl (Jülich, 1823-1907, Dresden). Able Rhenish teacher, pupil of Reichel, from 1847 in Paris and then in Germany, from 1861 settled at Dresden. Wrote a piano-quartet, a 'cello-sonata, a violin-method and some pieces, besides choral works and operas. He edited a collection of violin-duos and a musical dictionary (1887), and was author of a Gesch. d. Violinspiels, 1900, and analyses for the Konzertführer.

Woelfl [Wölfl], Joseph (Salzburg, 1772-1812). Famous Austrian pianist and composer, pupil of Leop. Mozart and Mich. Haydn, in 1792-94 active at Warsaw, then at Vienna, from 1801 at Paris and from 1805 at London. At Vienna he was a rival of Beethoven, but on friendly terms. From 1798 he became known throughout Austria and Germany by means of pianistic tours. Both as player and as composer he won high regard, since his musicianship was excellent. He was by some considered Beethoven's superior in improvisation. Wrote 9 operas, operettas and ballets (1795-1807), 2 symphonies, 7 piano-concertos (including Le Calme, 1806, Militaire and The Cuckoo), a violin-concerto, an overture, some orchestral dances, 15 string-quartets, about 20 piano- and other trios, about 30 violin-sonatas, 11 flute-sonatas, 4 'cello-sonatas, 4 sonatas or duos for harp and piano, about 65 piano-sonatas (5 for 4 hands), including Le Diable à Quatre and the famous Non plus ultra (op. 41), 2 Divertissements and many variations and lesser pieces. G.

Wohlgemuth, Gustav (Leipzig, 1863). Eminent Saxon choral conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1891 leader of the new Männerchor there (which he founded), from 1898 of the Singakademie and also of other societies, besides in 1902-12 leading festivals of the Sängerbund at Gratz, Breslau and Nuremberg. Since 1907 he has edited the Deutsche Sängerbundeszeitung. Has written over 100 men's choruses (some with orchestra).

Woikowski-Biedau, Victor Hugo von (n. Schweidnitz, 1866). Silesian composer and civil official, in music pupil of B. Wolff and Wilh. Berger, from about 1890 settled in Berlin, where he gained the title of royal professor. Has written the operas Helga, 1904, Der lange Kerk, 1906, and Das Nothemd, 1913, 3 melodramas, 4 ballades for baritone and orchestra, numerous songs, the orchestral prelude Jeanne d'Arc, 1907, etc.

Woldemar, Michel (Orléans, 1750-1816, Clermont-Ferrand). Talented French violinist, pupil of Lolli and resembling him in character and style. He lived a wandering life, mostly in connection with a theatrical troupe. He made a variant of the violin (the violon-alto) by adding a fifth string of low pitch, so as to secure viola-compass. Wrote a concerto for this instrument, 3 violin-concertos, violin-duos, and many rather eccentric sonatas and pieces, besides methods for violin, viola and clarinet. He was also interested in musical stenography. G.

Wolf, Bodo (Frankfort, 1888). Hessian composer, pupil of Jul. Wolf (his uncle), Reichenberger, Klose and Mottl (also Ph.D. of Munich Univ. in 1911), since 1920 director at Saarbrücken. Has written the symphonic poem Totenfahrt, an epilogue to Shakespeare's Othello, an overture, a serenade for small orchestra, a string-quartet, piano-pieces, part-songs and songs. Author of a monograph on H. V. Beck (1911). He lives in Frankfurt.

Wolf, Ernst Wilhelm (Grossheringen, 1735-1792, Weimar). Thuringian violinist, from 1761 concertmaster at Weimar and from 1768 court-director there. Wrote about 20 stage-works, several church-cantatas and other sacred music, 15 symphonies, 17 ensemble-suites, 18 piano-concertos, 17 string-quartets, sonatas for violin and for piano, etc., besides some text-books.

Wolf, Ferdinand (Vienna, 1796-1866, do.). Austrian historian of literature, long librarian of the Vienna Library, author of the valuable treatise Ueber d. Laus, Sequenzen u. Leiche, 1841, which is a standard authority on medieval song.

Wolf, Hugo (Windischgratz, 1860-1903, Vienna). Distinguished Styrian composer, for a time pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, but mostly self-taught, in 1881-82 assistant and chorusmaster at the Salzburg Opera (under Muck) and in 1884-87 critic for the Salonblatt in Vienna. Except for these small positions he held no official posts. From 1897 he was mentally deranged. The recognition of his extraordinary genius advanced slowly from about 1888, when the Vienna Wagner-Verein gave a program with some of his works coupled with Beethoven's. It is only in 1888 that he began writing, often with marvelous rapidity, the finer of his monumental series of over 275 songs. At times he was filled with ambitions for success on the opera-stage. But his fame rests chiefly on his unique inspiration as a song-writer, bringing him into the great circle of Schubert, Schumann, Franz and Brahms. With all of these he presents points of analogy, as well as with Wagner (whom he admired intensely), but his genius for identification with the poet, for perfect characterization and for masterly workmanship was completely his own. His works include

Songs—12 Lieder aus der Jugendzeit, 1877-78; 31 Lieder nach verschiedenen Dichtern, 1877-97; 53

Gedichte von Mörike, 1888; 20 Gedichte von Eichendorff, 1886-88; 51 Gedichte von Goethe, 1888-89; Spanisches Liederbuch (44 poems), 1889-90; Italienisches Liederbuch (46 poems, versions by Heyse), 1897-96. Of these he orchestrated 20, and others have been added by Reger. Also about 20 other songs.

Choral works—Christnacht, 1886-89; Elfenlied, 1881-91; Dem Vaterland, 1890; 6 sacred choruses a cappella, 1881; Frühlingschor from Manuel Venegas, 1897; 6 choruses for Kleist's Prinz vom Homburg; Die Stunden verrauschen (fragment). Also arrangement of the song Der Feuerreiter, 1892.

Operas—Der Corregidor, 1896, Manuel Venegas (fragment). Incidental music for Ibsen's Das Fest auf Solhaug, 1891.

For orchestra—symphony in B-flat (3 movements) and sketches for one in G min.; symphonic poem, Penthesilea, 1883; Italienische Serenade, 1893-94 (1 movement, for small orchestra); violin-concerto in D min.

String-quartet in D min. (1879-80) and a movement for one in D.

Piano-sonatas in G and G min.

His literary writings were edited by Batka and Werner in 1911. Memoirs by Decsey, 4 vols. 1903-06, Haberlandt, 1903 (2d ed. 1911), P. Müller, 1904, E. Schmitz, 1906, Newman, 1907, Morold, 1912 (2d ed. 1920), and Schur, 1922, besides many essays and critiques. Wolf-Ver-eine were started in Berlin in 1896 (by Paul Müller) and Vienna in 1897 (by Michael Haberlandt). The latter, after caring for the publication or distribution of the composer's manuscripts, etc., was dissolved in 1906. G.

Wolf, Johannes (Berlin, 1869). Eminent Prussian musicologist, trained at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1892) and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1892 teacher and choral leader, then engaged in private research, from 1902 lecturer at Berlin University and since 1908 professor (emeritus from 1922), besides lecturing on music-history at the Institut für Kirchenmusik. Author of a valuable Gesch. d. Mensuralnotation [1250-1460], 3 parts, 1905, Deutsche Lieder d. 15. Jahrh. 1910 (in the Lilienron Festschrift), Handbuch d. Notationskunde, 1913, and many important articles, besides editing works by J. R. Ahle, Rhaw, Isaac, Obrecht, etc., for the great collections. In 1899-1904 he assisted Fleischer in editing the I. M. G. Sammelbde.

Wolf, Ludwig (Frankfort, 1804-1859, Vienna). Hessian pianist and violinist, pupil of Seyfried, writing 3 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 4 string-trios, etc. See Neue Zeitschrift, 1859.

Wolf, William (Breslau, 1838-1913, Berlin). Silesian piano-teacher and lecturer on music-history, pupil of the Stern Conservatory and the Kullak Academy (Berlin), from 1881 lecturing at the Humboldt Academy and the Breslauer Conservatory. Author of a Musik-Aesthetik, 2 vols. 1896, 1906, and Gesammelte musikästhetische Aufsätze, 1894, besides a memorial of O. Eichberg (1898).

Wolf-Ferrari, Ermanno (Venice, 1876), named from his father, the noted German painter August Wolf and his Italian mother, Emilia Ferrari. Eminent Italian composer, pupil of Rheinberger, but largely self-taught, in 1902-09 director of the Liceo Marcello in Venice and then settling in Munich. Most of his works show a notable delicacy and refinement of conception and execution, combined with fine melodic invention and power of characterization. Has written the operas Cenerentola, 1900, Le Donne Curiose, 1903, I Quattro Rusteghi, 1906, Il Segreto di Susanna, 1909, I Gioielli della Madonna, 1911 (his one excursion into the 'veristico' field), and L'Amore Medico, 1913, the Biblical cantatas La Sulamite, 1899, and Talitha Cumi, the oratorio La Vita Nuova, 1903, a Kammersymphonie, a piano-quintet, 2 piano-trios, a violin-sonata, 3 piano-impromptus and other pieces. All his dramatic works have been brought out in Germany because of difficulties with the Italian house that controls publication in Italy. When he came to America in 1912 he had never heard any of his works in Italian. See sketch by Teibler in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1906. G. A.

Wolff, Auguste Désiré Bernard (Paris, 1821-1887, do.). Noted French piano-maker, also trained as pianist at the Paris Conservatory and in 1842-47 instructor there. In 1850 he became connected with Pleyel et Cie., in 1852 a partner and in 1855 Pleyel's successor as head of the firm. With the help of the acoustician Lissajous, he developed a large number of improvements and special devices. He became president of the Société des Compositeurs and also established the Pleyel-Wolff prize, annually awarded for a piano-work with or without orchestra. G.

Wolff, Édouard (Warsaw, 1816-1880, Paris). Fine Polish pianist, pupil of Zawadzki, Elsner and Würfel, from 1835 active in Paris. He was intimate with Chopin, with whom he had many points of resemblance. Wrote in all about 350 works for piano, including a concerto, 38 duos with violin (with De Bériot or Vieuxtemps), a very large number of études, etc.

Wolff, Heinrich (Frankfort, 1813-1898, Leipzig). Noted Hessian violinist, pupil of Fémy, Schnyder von Wartensee, Mayseder and Seyfried, from 1830 touring with much success throughout Europe and in 1838-78 concert-master at the Frankfort Opera. Wrote symphonies, overtures, 6 quintets, 9 quartets, 4 violin-concertos, 2 sonatas, variations, etc.

Wolff, Leonard (Halberstadt, 1848). Saxon violinist and conductor, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory and (on the Mozart Scholarship) of Vieuxtemps, L. Kiel and Joachim, from 1875 music-director at Marburg University, in 1880-83 conductor of the Cäcilienverein and a men's chorus at Wiesbaden, and from 1884 at Bonn, till 1898 as city-director and also till 1913 director and professor at the University. Ph.D. of Leipzig Univ. in 1890, with a thesis on the use of the motif.

Wolff, Max. Hessian composer of the operas Das heisse Eisen, 1909, Der Heilige, 1913, and Frau Berthes Vespergang, 1921.

Wolffheim, Werner Joachim (Berlin, 1877). Prussian lawyer and musicologist, educated at Munich, Berlin and Leipzig Universities (Jur.

D.), in 1898-1906 in law-practice at Berlin, from 1910 contributing valuable articles to periodicals, including essays on the court-music at Celle (1910, in the Liliencron Festschrift), on Hans Bach and various Bachiana (1910-12, in the Bach-Jahrbuch), etc. From 1912 he joined Springer and Schneider in editing the continuations of Eitner's Quellen-Lexikon, prepared the clavier-concertos for the standard edition of Haydn and for a time assisted Kretzschmar in the revision of Spitta's life of Bach. In 1913 he organized a section for musical aesthetics at the Aesthetics Congress in Berlin. He has gathered a notable library.

Wolfrum, Philipp (n. Bayreuth, 1854-1919, Samaden). Eminent Bavarian conductor and music-historian, trained at the Munich Conservatory, from 1878 teacher at the Bamberg Seminary and from 1884 organist and music-director at Heidelberg University and from 1898 full professor, besides conducting the Bach-Verein and the Evangel. Kirchenchorgesangverein for Baden, Hesse and Württemberg. In 1891 he was made Ph.D. by Leipzig Univ. and in 1910 Theol. D. by Heidelberg Univ. In 1909, '11 and '13 he led festivals at Heidelberg. In 1903 he designed a noted concert-hall at Heidelberg with movable platforms, etc. Wrote the choral works Das grosse Halleluja, a Weihnachtsmysterium, 1899, Festmusik and An der Kaiser, many choruses and songs, the overture Kriegerische Marschrhythmen, 1914, a piano-quintet, the string-quartet Im Frühling, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, 3 organ-sonatas, 3 Tondichtungen, many preludes, etc., and edited Choralbücher. Author of a life of Bach (1906, 2d ed. 1910), studies in Luther's relations to music (1917-18), treatises on Protestant church-music (1891, '94-95, 1914) and Die Heidelberger Konzertreform, 1915. Memoir by K. Hasse, 1919 (in Zeitschr. für Musikwissensch.). His brother Karl (b. 1857), from 1895 teacher at the Altdorf Seminary, has written 3 fine organ-sonatas, preludes, choruses, etc.

Wolfsohn, Carl (Alzei, 1834-1907, in New Jersey). Able Hessian pianist, pupil of Aloys Schmitt and V. Lachner, from 1848 touring in Germany and from 1852 in London. In 1854 he moved to Philadelphia, where he had success with chamber-recitals and also complete series of piano-works by Beethoven, Schumann and Chopin, and in 1873 undertook similar educational work in Chicago, besides conducting the Beethoven Society there. A.

Wolkenstein, Oswald von (1377-1445). 15th C. G.

Wollanck, Friedrich (Berlin, 1782-1831, do.). Prussian lawyer and amateur composer, writing an opera (1811) and other stage-works, a cantata, 2 masses and other church-music, part-songs, songs, 2 overtures, clarinet-concertos, sextets, quintets, quartets, a trio, piano-sonatas, etc.

Wolle, John Frederick (Bethlehem, Pa. 1863). Eminent American organist and choral conductor, pupil of D. D. Wood and Rheinberger, in 1881-84 playing at Trinity Church in Bethlehem and in 1885-1905 at the Moravian Church, as well as from 1887 at the Packer Memorial Church at Lehigh University (South Bethlehem). In 1905-11 he was professor at the University of California (Berkeley), in 1907-09 organist at the First Congregational Church and conductor of symphony and choral concerts. In 1911 he resumed activity at Bethlehem, becoming organist at the Salem Lutheran Church and conductor of several choral societies in outside places. His great achievement is the gradual evolution of the Bethlehem Bach Choir, based on various undertakings from about 1882 and fully organized in 1900 for the giving of annual festivals (intermitted in 1905-11). Especially since 1912, these have drawn auditors from great distances. The B min. Mass has been sung each year, the oratorios each several times, over 40 of the cantatas, etc. The orchestra is chiefly taken from the Philadelphia Orchestra. The choir has also appeared in New York and Philadelphia. See Walters, The Bethlehem Bach Choir, 1918. A.

Wollenhaupt, Hermann Adolf (n. Leipzig, 1827-1863, New York). Noted Saxon pianist and teacher, pupil of Knorr and Hauptmann, from 1845 active in New York, but with a European tour in 1855. Wrote about 100 effective salon-pieces and transcriptions. G, A.

Wollgandt, Edgar (Wiesbaden, 1880). Gifted Hessian violinist, pupil of the Wiesbaden Conservatory and of H. Heermann, from 1900 in the court-orchestra at Hanover and since 1903 concertmaster of the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig. He has often served also at Bayreuth and in 1914 declined an offer to succeed Petri at Dresden. He married the daughter of Nikisch.

Wollick, Nicolas. 16th C.

Wolstenholme, William (Blackburn, 1865). Eminent English organist (blind), pupil of Done, from 1888 playing in Blackburn, in 1902-04 at the Weigh House Chapel in London and since then at All Saints' (Norfolk Square). Since 1885 he has been noted as recitalist in England and elsewhere (in America from 1908). Has written about 60 organ-works, including 2 sonatas, a Grand Chœur on the 4th Gregorian tone, fantasias, preludes, a Festival Toccata, etc., a suite for strings, a wind-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a piano-sonata and many pieces, the cantata Lord Ulkin's Daughter, part-songs and songs. G.

Woltz, Johann. 17th C.

Wolzogen [und Neuhaus], Ernst, Freiherr von (Breslau, 1855), brother of the next. Silesian novelist and critic, in 1901-02 conspicuous at Berlin as the founder of the 'Ueberbrettel,' a peculiar enterprise for producing small plays, pantomimes, etc., with or without music, mostly of an ultra-modern character. In this he was joined by O. J. Bierbaum and F. Wedekind, with Oskar Strauss as musical manager. For a few months the effort made a sensation. Author of the comic novel Der Kraftmayr, 1897 [about Liszt], and the collected essays Ansichten u. Aussichten, 1908, etc. His wife, née Elsa Laura Seemann von Mangern, specializes in songs with lute-accompaniment and has published 5 books of such songs. In 1910-11 she and her husband toured in America.

Wolzogen [und Neuhaus], Hans Paul, Freiherr von (Potsdam, 1848), son of the next and brother of the foregoing. Industrious Prussian writer, educated in philology at Berlin University, from 1871 engaged in literary studies at Potsdam and since 1877 at Bayreuth as editor of the Bayreuther Blätter and central manager of the Wagner-Verein. Among his very numerous publications (mostly dealing with Wagner) are biographies or reminiscences (1883, '84, '90, 1905), guides to the Ring cycle (1876), Tristan (1880) and Parsifal (1882), studies of his poetry (1876, '77), his dramatic ideal (1876, '81, '85, 1906), his heroic characters (1886), etc., besides editions of some of his literary works. Author also of Kunst u. Kirche, 1913, and a monograph on C. T. E. Hoffmann (1922). He also wrote texts for Sommer's Schloss der Herzen (1899), d'Albert's Flauto Solo (1905) and Hoffmann's Undine (1922), and translated Schuré's Drame Musicale (1877). G.

Wolzogen [und Neuhaus], Karl August Alfred, Freiherr von (Frankfurt, 1823-1883, San Remo). Hessian theater-manager, from 1868 at the court-theater at Schwerin, writing Ueber Theater u. Musik, 1860, on the mounting of Mozart's Don Giovanni (1860), a life of Mme. Schröder-Devrient (1863) and new versions of Don Giovanni and Der Schauspielersdirektor.

Wood, Charles (Armagh, 1866). Irish composer, pupil of T. O. Marks and the Royal College (London), with further study at Cambridge (Mus.D. 1894), in 1888-94 leading the University Musical Society (under Stanford) and in 1889-97 acting as bandmaster for the University Volunteers. Has written the choral works Ode to the West Wind, 1889, Ode on Music, 1894, Ode on Time, 1898, Dirge for Two Veterans, 1901, Song of the Tempest, 1902, and Ballad of Dundee, 1904, orchestral variations on Patrick Sarsfield (1907), music for Euripides' Ion and Iphigenia in Tauris, a piano-concerto, a prize wind-quintet, a string-quartet, church-music, part-songs and songs. G.

Wood, Daniel Joseph (n. Rochester, 1849-1919, Exeter). Able English organist, trained as a choirboy at Rochester Cathedral, where he early became deputy to John Hopkins, in 1869 going to Boston, in 1875 to Chichester Cathedral and in 1876 to Exeter Cathedral, where he remained till his death and where he also conducted notable choral societies. In 1896 he was made Mus.D. by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Wood, David Duffield (n. Pittsburgh, 1838-1910, Philadelphia). Gifted American organist (blind), educated at the Philadelphia School for the Blind, where from 1853 he began teaching and from 1887 was director, producing many large choral works. From 1864 he was organist at St. Stephen's, continuing over 45 years, and also played for about 25 years at evening services in the Baptist Temple. Temple University made him Mus.D. Wrote anthems and other church-music. A.

Wood, Henry Joseph (London, 1870). Distinguished English conductor, a practical organist from his tenth year and giving recitals at London Exhibitions in 1883 and '85, then pupil of the Royal Academy (many prizes). In 1889 he began conducting with a theatrical troupe and soon undertook opera. His first important post was in the Promenade Concerts in the new Queen's Hall (from 1895) and the Saturday Afternoon series there (from 1897), which demonstrated his power so fully that from 1897 he led festivals at Nottingham, from 1900 at Wolverhampton, from 1902 at Sheffield and from 1908 at Norwich. From time to time he also appeared as guest on the Continent and in America (1904). In 1918 he was offered the conductorship of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (following Muck), but declined. Knighted in 1911. In 1898 he married the gifted Russian singer Olga Narishkin (d. 1909). Sketch by Rosa Newmarch, 1904. G, A.

Woodman, Raymond Huntington (Brooklyn, 1861). Gifted American organist, pupil of his father, Buck and Franck, in 1879-80 at Norwich, Conn., and then at the First Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn, besides teaching at the Packer Institute, the Metropolitan College of Music in New York and the Am. Inst. of Applied Music. He is a fellow of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences and head of its music-section. In 1894-97 he edited a church-music department in the New York Evangelist. Has written an Ode to Music, an organ-suite and many pieces, many anthems, part-songs, songs and piano-pieces. A.

Woods, Francis Cunningham (London, 1862). English organist, pupil of the Nat. Training School (London), from 1883 organist at Brasenose College, Oxford, and in 1886-95 at Exeter College there, besides lecturing at the University in 1890-95 and acting as private organist for the Duke of Marlborough at Blenheim in 1891-94. Since 1896 he has been organist and music-master at the Highgate Grammar School, London, and in 1897-1901 conductor of the Finsbury Choral Association. Has written the choral works King Harold, Greyport Legend, Old May-Day and The Lords of Labor, music for The Tempest, a suite for small orchestra, part-songs and songs.

Wooldridge, H. Ellis (Winchester, 1845-1917, London). Able English historian, from 1895 professor of fine arts at Oxford University. Author of The English Metrical Psalter, 1890 (also in Grove's Dict. under 'Psalter'), a revised and enlarged edition of Chappell's Music of the Olden Time (1893, 2 vols.), vols. i-ii of the Oxford History of Music, 1901-05 (on 'The Polyphonic Period'), and articles in the Musical Antiquary in the same field, and editor of examples of English harmony prior to 1500 (1896), of three volumes of Purcell's church-music and (with R. Bridges) of the Yattendon Hymnal, 1899.

Wollett, Henri Édouard (Havre, 1864). English-French teacher and composer, pupil of Pugno and Massenet, from about 1885 active at Havre in promoting free popular instruction in music and allied undertakings. Has written the poème lyrique La Rose de Sharon, an orchestral Petite Suite, a wind-quintet, sonatas for violin (2), for 'cello and for flute, many piano-pieces and songs, besides a pantomime. Author of a Traité de Prosodie, 1903, and a Histoire de la Musique, 2 vols. 1909-12 (prize from the Académie).

Wörl, Georg (n. Eger, 1863-1915, Sondershausen). Bohemian 'cellist, pupil of Baudisch and F. Grützmacher (the elder), from 1881 in the Strauss Orchestra at Vienna, in 1883-86 in the Tonhalle Orchestra at Zurich, in 1888-91 in the Kurorchestra at Karlsbad and after 1892 in the court-orchestra at Sondershausen, becoming concertmaster and having the title of chamber-musician, besides teaching in the Conservatory. Editor of various 'cello-works.

Wormser, André Alphonse Toussaint (Paris, 1851). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1875), writing the operas Adèle Ponthieu, 1877, and Rivoli, 1896, the fantasy Le Dragon Vert, 1895, the ballet L'Étoile, 1897, the pantomimes L'Enfant Prodigue, 1890, and L'Idéal, 1896, the symphonic poems Lupercal and Diane et Endymion, an orchestral Suite Tsigane, Intermezzo and Gavotte, a Gigue for violin and orchestra, a piano-pieces, men's choruses and songs. G.

Worobkiewicz, Isidor (Czernowitz, 1836-1903, do.). Austrian priest (of the Greek Church) and church-musician, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, from about 1860 professor at the Theological Seminary at Czernowitz, establishing an Academia Orthodoxa for the reform of church-music, including polyphonic singing. Author or editor of many text-books, collections of liturgical pieces, Rumanian and Ruthenian folk-songs for school-use, etc. (from 1868). Wrote some stage-pieces, Rumanian songs and dances for piano.

Wöss, Josef Venantius von (Cattaro, 1863). Dalmatian composer, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, in 1886-89 teaching at a military school in Moravia, in 1892-93 at the choir-school of the Votivkirche in Vienna and then leader of the Hietzinger Musikverein and critic for Musica Divina. Has written the operas Lenzlüge, 1905, and Flaviennes Abenteuer, 1910, 2 masses, a Te Deum, motets and other church-music, men's choruses, many songs, a symphony, the overture Sakuntala, an orchestral serenade, a piano-sextet, etc., besides making piano-scores of Mahler's 3d, 4th, 8th and 9th Symphonies and of his Das klagende Lied and Lied von der Erde, and a manual of modulation (1917-21).

Wotquenne, Alfred (n. Charleroi, 1867). Eminent Belgian musicologist, trained at the Brussels Conservatory and since 1894 librarian, secretary and inspector there. Author of catalogues of the Conservatory library (from 1894, 4 vols. out of 8 up to 1914), of the works of Galuppi (1899, 2d ed. 1902), of those of Gluck (1904), of those of K. P. E. Bach (1905), of those of Luigi Rossi (1909), of the dramatic poetry of Zeno, Metastasio and Goldoni (1905) and of about 18,000 Italian cantate da camera of the 18th century (on cards, unpublished). He has extended the collections by Gevaert of old French music and begun a fresh collection of his own (4 vols. out of 20), besides one of Italian chansons. G.

Wotton, William Bale (Torquay, 1832-?). Able English bassoonist, early trained in military bands and later at the Royal Academy (London), from about 1850 continuing in army service, though sought after by leading orchestras, but from 1870 playing at the Crystal Palace, in the Philharmonic and other orchestras and teaching at the Royal College. He retired in 1904. G.

Wouters, François Adolphe (Brussels, 1849). Belgian organist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, from 1868 at the Église du Finistère and choirmaster at St.-Nicolas, since 1871 professor of piano at the Conservatory. Has written 6 masses (from 1872), a Te Deum, an Ave Maria, other church-music, an overture, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces, études and transcriptions, men's choruses, etc.

Woycke, Eugen Adalbert (Danzig, 1843). Prussian pianist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, since about 1870 settled in Edinburgh, where in 1871 he married the violinist Emily Hamilton. Has written the piano-sonatas Dramatique, Romantique, Poétique, Capricieuse and Héroïque, many characteristic pieces, a violin-concerto, 2 violin-sonatas and various pieces.

Woyrsch, Felix von (Troppau, 1860). Eminent Austrian (Silesian) organist, conductor and composer, pupil of Chevallier, but mostly self-taught, since 1894 active at Altona, where he conducts the Singakademie and the Kirchenchor, as well as the city symphony-concerts and popular concerts, besides from 1895 being organist at the Friedenskirche and since 1903 at the Johanniskirche. In 1901 he was made royal professor and in 1917 member of the Akademie. Has written the operas Der Pfarrer von Meudon, 1886, Der Weibekrieg, 1890, and Wikingfahrt, 1896, music for Sakuntala, the choral works Die Geburt Jesu, a Passion, Deutscher Heerbann, Der Vandalen Auszug, Sapphische Ode an Aphrodite, Totentanz and Da lachte schön Sigrid, the ballads with orchestra Wollt' er nur fragen and Edvard, numerous choruses and part-songs, arrangements of German folk-songs, 2 symphonies, the overture Hamlet, a prologue to the Divina Commedia, a Skaldische Rhapsodie, 3 Phantasien from Böcklin, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, many effective piano-pieces and songs.

*Portrait by Herbert Lambert. Reproduced by permission from
"Modern British Composers" (F. and B. Goodwin Ltd.)*

DR. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS

Wrangel, Vassily Georgievitch (Petrograd, 1862-1901, do.). Russian nobleman, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, writing a symphony (1894), an orchestral suite, music for Tchapiiev's Falsche Demetrius (1896) and for 2 ballets, songs, etc. In 1898-99 he edited the Nowellist.

Wrانيتzky, Anton (Neureisch, 1761-1819, Vienna), brother of the next. Moravian violinist, pupil of his brother, Albrechtsberger, Mozart and Haydn, from 1808 conductor for Prince Lobkowitz and prominent as teacher in Vienna. Wrote a violin-concerto, 6 quintets, 15 quartets, violin-duos, sonatas and a method, besides 2 masses (1796-97).

Wrانيتzky, Paul (Neureisch, 1756-1808, Vienna), brother of the above. Talented Moravian violinist, pupil of J. Kraus, from 1785 conductor at the Vienna court-theater. Wrote several operas and stage-pieces (beginning with Oberon, 1790), over 25 symphonies, 12 quintets, 45 quartets, many trios, piano-sonatas, etc. From 1793 he was secretary of the Tonkünstler-Societät. He was intimate with Haydn and for a time his friendly rival in concerted composition. G.

Wrightson, Herbert James (Sunderland, 1869). English pianist and organist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, since 1897 settled in Chicago, where he has been connected with the Sherwood Music School and has acted as critic. Has written an organ-concerto, 4 organ-sonatas, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces, anthems, choruses and songs. A.

Wüster, Richard Ferdinand (Berlin, 1824-1881, do.). Eminent Prussian teacher and composer, studying variously in Berlin, Leipzig (David and Mendelssohn), Brussels, etc., from 1846 settled in Berlin, where he taught many years at the Kullak Academy, edited the Neue Musikzeitung in 1874-75 and was critic for the Fremdenblatt and other papers. He became royal professor in 1874 and member of the Academie in 1877. Wrote the operas Der Rotmantel, 1848, Der Stern von Turan, 1864, Vineta, 1864, and 4 others, the cantata Der Wasserneck, some other choral works, 3 symphonies, the fantasy Ein Märchen, orchestral variations, a Russische Suite, Serenade, Intermezzo, etc., for small orchestra, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, many violin- and piano-pieces, songs, duets and terzets. G.

Wüllner, Franz (Münster, 1832-1902, Braunschweig). Distinguished Westphalian conductor and composer, trained by C. Arnold, Schindler, Ferd. Kessler, Grell, Dehn and Rungenhagen, with travel-study elsewhere, from 1854 teaching at the Munich Conservatory, in 1858-64 town-director at Aix, from 1864 in court-employ at Munich, at first in the court-chapel, from 1869 as Von Bülow's successor at the Opera and the Academie concerts and from 1870 as court-director, besides from 1867 teaching choral classes at the Conservatory. In 1875 he was made royal professor. From 1877 he was court-director at Dresden (following Rietz) and also director of the Conservatory, but from 1882 retired from the former post in favor of Schuch (his colleague from the start), and in 1884 removed to Cologne as head of the Conservatory and conductor of the Gürzenich concerts, later also as town-director. He was in charge of the Lower Rhine Festivals in 1882, '86, '90 and 1901, besides assisting in 1864. In 1869-70 he directed the premières at Munich of Wagner's Rheingold and Walküre, and in 1883-84 was conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic. Wrote 2 masses, a Stabat Mater, a Te Deum, a Salve Regina, a Salvum fac regem, Psalms 1, 98 and 127, many a cappella motets, Die Flucht der heiligen Familie, the cantata Heinrich der Finkler, the choral works Lied und Leben, Tränen, Deutscher Siegesgesang, Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, many other choruses, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, 'cello-variations on a Schubert theme, 2 piano-sonatas, 3 sets of variations and songs. He also prepared recitatives for Weber's Oberon. See Klauwell, Studien u. Erinnerungen, 1906. G.

Wüllner, Ludwig (Münster, 1858), son of the above. Eminent Westphalian lieder-singer, educated in Germanic literature at Munich, Berlin and Strasburg Universities (Ph.D. 1882?), in 1884-87 teaching philology at the Münster Akademie, becoming somewhat known as a singer. He then studied at the Cologne Conservatory, but in 1889-95 turned aside to appear as actor at the court-theater in Meiningen. Finally, in 1895, he undertook song-recitals in Berlin with extreme success, gradually extending his tours throughout Europe and to America (1908-10). His special gifts are intellectual and dramatic rather than vocal, making him most notable as an interpreter. Much of his success was also due to his accompanist, Coenraad van Bos. Sketches by Pfohl (n. d.) and Rapsilber, 1907. G.

Wunderlich, Johann Georg (Bayreuth, 1755-1819, Paris). Noted Bavarian flutist, pupil of his father and Rault, from 1779 active in Paris, where from 1782 he played in the court-orchestra and at the Opéra and from 1795 taught at the new Conservatory. Wrote various flute-sonatas, duos, fantasias, divertissements, études and a method.

Wundt, Wilhelm Max (Neckerau, 1832-1920, n. Leipzig). Distinguished physiological psychologist, from 1875 professor at Leipzig University, author, among many other works, of Grundzüge d. physiolog. Psychologie, 1874 (6th ed. 1908) and Grundriss d. Psychologie, 1896 (8th ed. 1907), containing much of importance for the musical theorist.

Würfel, Wilhelm (Planian, 1791-1852, Vienna). Bavarian pianist and conductor, touring from about 1810, from 1815 teacher at the Warsaw Conservatory and from 1826 assistant-conductor at the Kärnthnertheater in Vienna. Wrote the operas Rübezahl, 1824, and

Der Rotmantel, 1832, a piano-concerto, variations and pieces.

Wurm, Mary J. A. (Southampton, 1860). Gifted English pianist, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory and by many teachers elsewhere (Raff, Mme. Schumann, Stanford, Reinecke, etc.), in 1884 gaining the Mendelssohn Scholarship. Making her début in London in 1882, she soon became a favorite there and on the Continent, where for some years she lived at Hanover, in 1911 moving to Berlin. Has written the opera Die Mitschuldigen, 1921, an overture, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, a prelude and fugue for two pianos, many pieces for piano solo and the choral work Mag auch heiss das Scheiden brennen, besides technical manuals. G.

Würzbach, Konstantin (Laibach, 1818-1893, Berchtesgaden). Austrian nobleman, author of a great Austrian biographical lexicon (1855-91, 60 vols.), Volkslieder d. Polen u. Ruthenen, 2d ed. 1852, a Schiller-Buch, 1859, Jos. u. Mich. Haydn, 1862, and a Mozart-Buch, 1869.

Wustmann, Rudolf (1872-1916, n. Dresden). Saxon student of literature and history, author of many essays on music-history and criticism and of a Musikgeschichte Leipzigs, 3 vols. 1903-, Bachs Kantatentexte, 1913, and a monograph on Walther von der Vogelweide (1912).

Wydzga, J. T. Polish composer of the opera Pan Tadeusz, 1907.

Wylde, Henry (Bushey, 1822-1890, London). English conductor and teacher, pupil of Moscheles and Potter, from 1844 organist at St. Ann's (Aldersgate Street), for a time teacher at the Royal Academy, in 1852 one of the promoters of the New Philharmonic Society and in 1858-72 its conductor, in 1861 the founder of the London Academy of Music and then its principal, for it building St. George's Hall in 1867, and from 1863 Gresham Professor (following Edward Taylor). Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1851. Wrote the cantata Praise and Prayer, a piano-concerto, piano-sonatas and pieces. Author of Music in its Art Mysteries, 1867, Occult Principles of Music, 1881, Music as an Educator, 1882, Evolution of the Beautiful in Sound, 1887, and text-books in harmony and counterpoint. G.

Wyzewa [Wyzewski], Théodore de (Kaluszin, 1862-1917, Paris). Polish historical student and writer, in 1884-88 (with Édouard Dujardin) editing the Revue Wagnérienne at Paris and pursuing research in the life of Mozart. Author of La Jeunesse de Mozart, 1903-04 (in the Revue des Deux Mondes), a monumental life of Mozart (1911, 2 vols.) and Beethoven et Wagner, 1898. He has shed much new light on the whole of Mozart's early life.

Yon, Pietro Alessandro (Settimo Vittone, 1886). Eminent Italian organist, pupil of Fumagalli, the Turin Conservatory and the Accademia S. Cecilia (Rome), taking many honors and in 1905-07 assisting his teacher Renzi at St. Peter's and also at the Royal Chapel. In 1907 he removed to New York as organist at St. Francis Xavier's and from 1915 also teacher at the Mount St. Vincent Academy, soon becoming known through repeated and extensive tours as an accomplished recitalist. Has written over 15 masses, motets with and without organ, 2 organ-sonatas (no. 2, Cromatico), a toccata, 2 concert-études, 10 divertimenti and the pieces Natale in Sicilia, Pastorale Sorrentina, Elegia and Gesù Bambino, the double canon Echo, an oboe-concerto, piano-pieces and songs. A.

York, Francis Lodowick (Ontonagon, Mich. 1861). American organist and teacher, pupil of Cady, Batchelder and Guilman, from 1892 teaching at the University School of Music at Ann Arbor (Mich.), from 1896 at the State Normal School in Ypsilanti and since 1902 director of the Detroit Conservatory, besides being organist at the Central Methodist Church there, with many recitals elsewhere. Has written church-music, organ-pieces, transcriptions, choruses, piano-pieces, songs and the comic opera The Inca. Author of Harmony Simplified, 5th ed. 1900, Counterpoint Simplified, 1907, and many articles. In 1905 he prepared for the French government a report on organ-work in American music-schools. A.

Yost, Michel (Paris, 1754-1786, do.). Noted French clarinetist, pupil of Beer, from 1777 active at the Concerts Spirituels and elsewhere, writing 14 clarinet-concertos, 30 quartets for clarinet and strings, variations for clarinet, viola and bass, many duos, etc.

Young, John Matthew Wilson (Durham, 1822-1897, n. London). English organist, pupil and assistant of Henshaw at Durham Cathedral, in 1850-95 organist at Lincoln Cathedral. Wrote 2 services, canticles and several anthems.

Young, William. 17th C. G.

Yradier, Sebastian (?-1865, Vittoria). Popular Spanish composer of about 35 songs. G.

Yriarte, Tomas de (Teneriffe, Canary Isles, 1750-1791, n. Cadiz). Spanish archivist and poet, author of the noted poem La Musica, 1779, which surveys many points in theory, church-music, the opera and chamber-music, with appended annotations. Also wrote instrumental music and songs. G.

Ysaÿe, Eugène (Liège, 1858), brother of the next. Distinguished Belgian violinist and conductor, pupil of his father and the Liège, Brussels and Paris Conservatories, with assistance from Vieuxtemps, first appearing in 1879 at Cologne and Aix, in 1880-81 concertmaster for the Bilse orchestra in Berlin, then touring in Norway and settling at Paris. In 1886-98 he was professor at the Brussels Conservatory, from 1894 also managing and conducting the Société des Concerts Ysaÿe with notable success, giving sonata-recitals with Pugno, organizing a fine Quartet (with Marchot, Van Hout and Jacob) and from 1889, when he first visited England, becoming recognized as a virtuoso and interpreter of the first order. His first visit to America in 1894 and to Berlin in 1899 were equally triumphant. After retiring at Brussels he was invited to succeed Seidl as conductor of the New York Philharmonic, but declined so as to continue tours as soloist, ensemble-player and conductor. In 1918 he achieved such success as guest-conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and of the May Festival there that he was made permanent conductor, succeeding Kunwald, but in 1922 resigned. As both player and conductor he has great individuality, sometimes deviating much from tradition, but the dignity, breadth and intensity of his conceptions command respect. Has written 6 violin-concertos, 2 string-trios, variations on a theme by Paganini, 3 mazurkas and other pieces. G, A.

Ysaÿe, Théophile (Verviers, 1865-1918, Nice), brother of the above. Able Belgian pianist, pupil of the Liège Conservatory and of Franck, from about 1890 head of the Académie de Musique in Brussels, besides joining his brother in recitals and assisting him as conductor of the Concerts Ysaÿe. Wrote a symphony, the symphonic sketches Le Cygne, Les Abeilles and La Forêt et l'Oiseau, an orchestral fantasia on a Walloon melody, a piano-concerto, a piano-quintet, piano-pieces and a Requiem. G.

Yuferov, Sergei Vladimirovitch (Odessa, 1865). Russian composer of the operas Mirra (published 1892), Iolanda, 1893, and Antony and Cleopatra, a cantata, an orchestral Suite Algérienne, a piano-trio, 3 Romances for piano and strings, 2 piano-suites and various pieces.

Yussupov, Nikolai Borisovitch (Petrograd, 1827-1891, Baden-Baden). Russian nobleman and fine violinist, pupil of Vieuxtemps, for years maintaining a private orchestra at Petrograd. Wrote the descriptive symphony Gonzalvo de Córdoba (with violin-obbligato) and a violin-concerto, besides Luthomonographie Historique et Raisonnée, 1856 (on violin-making), and Histoire de la Musique en Russie, 1862 (on church-music).

Zabalza y Olaso, Dámaso (n. Pamplona, 1833-1894, Madrid). Spanish pianist, pupil of Sagabeta, Vidaola and Mariano Garcia, from 1858 active at Madrid, later becoming professor at the Conservatory. Wrote a great amount of piano-music, including effective études.

Zabel, Albert Heinrich (Berlin, 1835-1910, Petrograd). Eminent Prussian harpist, trained at the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, from 1845 touring with Gungl's orchestra in Germany, Russia, England and America (1848), in 1848-51 soloist at the Berlin Opera and from 1854 at the Petrograd Opera, besides from 1862 teaching at the Conservatory. Wrote a harp-concerto, many effective pieces and a method, besides a pamphlet on the harp in orchestral music (1899).

Zacconi, Ludovico (1555-1627). 16th C. G.

Zach, Johann (Čelakowitz, 1699-1773, Bruchsal). Gifted Bohemian composer, in 1745-56 court-director at Mayence, writing symphonies, concertos for clavier and for flute, string-quartets, violin-sonatas, about 10 masses, a Stabat Mater, etc. Memoir by Schindhelm.

Zach, Max Wilhelm (Lemberg, 1864-1921, St. Louis). Galician violinist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1886 member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in 1887-97 also conductor of popular summer-concerts there and from 1900 member of the Adamowski Quartet. In 1907 he became conductor of the new St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. A.

Zachariis, Cæsar de. 16th C.

Zachau, Peter. 17th C.

Zachau, Friedrich Wilhelm (1663-1712). 17th C. G.

Zádor, Eugen (Bátaszék, 1894). Hungarian composer, trained by Heuberger and Reger and at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1921), writing a Romantische Sinfonie, the symphonic poem Bánk-Bán, the overture Hannele, piano-pieces, about 50 songs and an opera. Author of a thesis on the evolution of the symphonic poem.

Zahm, John Augustine (New Lexington, O. 1851-1921, Munich). American physicist, from 1874 professor at Notre Dame University (Ind.), author of the able popular manual Sound and Music, 1892. A.

Zahn, Johannes (Espenbach, 1817-1895, Neudettelsau). Bavarian theologian (Theol. D. of Erlangen Univ. in 1893) and church-musician, from 1847 prefect at the Altdorf Seminary (n. Nuremberg) and in 1854-88 its director, besides from 1875 editing Siona. His valuable library went to the Munich Library. Author of Die Melodien d. deutschen evangel. Kirchenlieder, 6 vols. 1888-93, and editor of about 30 collections of practical church-music (hymn-tunes, solos, choir-pieces, preludes, etc.) for Protestant churches (including a hymnal for American Lutheran Sunday-schools, 1894).

Zajic, Florian (Unhoscht, 1853). Gifted Bohemian violinist, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, from about 1875 in the theater-orchestra at Augsburg, then concertmaster at Mannheim, Strassburg (from 1881) and Hamburg (from 1889), and since 1891 Sauret's successor as teacher at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin. He has given series of sonata-recitals with the 'cellist H. Grünfeld. Has written études and a cadenza for the Brahms concerto.

Zajíček-Blankenau, Julius (Vienna, 1877). Austrian composer of the operas Helmbrecht, 1906, and Ferdinand und Louise, 1914.

Zamara, Alfred Maria Viktor (Vienna, 1863). Austrian composer of 8 popular operettas, mostly at Vienna (1883-1908).

Zamara, Antonio (Milan, 1829-1901, n. Vienna). Eminent Italian harpist, pupil of Sechter, in 1842-92 soloist at the Kärnthner-Theater in Vienna and for years also teacher at the Conservatory (the Schuëckers and Kastner among his pupils). Wrote many solos and transcriptions, with a Harfenschule.

Zamminer, Friedrich (Darmstadt, ?1818-1856, Giessen). Hessian physicist, from 1843 professor at Giessen University, author of Die Musik u. d. musikal. Instrumente in ihrer Beziehung zu d. Gesetzen d. Akustik, 2 vols. 1855.

Zamrzla, Rudolf (Prague, 1869). Bohemian conductor at the Bohemian Opera in Prague, editor of Dalibor and composer of the opera Eine Hochzeitsnacht, 1913, choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Zanardini, Angelo (Venice, 1820-1893, Milan). Italian librettist of many operas by Ponchielli, Massenet (Hérodiade), Mancinelli, Catalani (Dejanice), Domeniceti, etc., and translator into Italian of many foreign librettos (including Wagner's works). Also wrote the opera Amleto, 1854.

Zandonai, Riccardo (n. Trent, 1883). Eminent Italian composer, pupil of Gianferrari and the Liceo Rossini at Pesaro. Has written the operas Il Grillo del Focolare, 1908, Conchita, 1911, Melenis, 1912, Francesca da Rimini, 1914, La Via della Finestra, 1919, and Giuletta e Romeo, 1922, a Requiem (1916), O Padre Nostro, Ave Maria, Alla Patria and other choral works, the symphonic poem Il Ritorno di Ulisse, the orchestral sketch Primavera in Val di Sole, a Serenata Medievale for strings, horns, harp and 'cello obbligato, many songs, etc. In 1917 he married the soprano Tarquinia Tarquini.

Zanella, Amilcare (n. Piacenza, 1873). Eminent Italian pianist and conductor, pupil of Andreotti and the Parma Conservatory, from 1892 touring in South America as pianist or opera-conductor, from 1901 leading his own orchestra in various Italian cities, in 1903-04 director of the Parma Conservatory and since then Mascagni's successor as director of the Liceo Rossini at Pesaro. At Pesaro he has made a success of popular concerts by a student-orchestra. He has often served as guest-conductor throughout Italy and in Trieste, including many important centenaries. Has written the opera Aura, 1910, and 4 others not given, a symphony, the symphonic poems Fede and Vita, an orchestral suite and other pieces, a Fantasia e Fugato (on 4 subjects) for piano and orchestra, a nonet for strings and wood-wind, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a piano-sonata and pieces, a choral Inno-Marcia, etc.

Zang, Johann Heinrich (n. Gotha, 1733-1811, Mainstockheim). Saxon organist and clavierist, pupil of J. S. Bach, from 1750 employed in various places near Coburg and Bamberg and after about 1755 teacher at the Schweinfurt Gymnasium and director at the ducal court near by. Best known as author of a manual of organ-making (1804), but also wrote church-cantatas, organ-trios, clavier-sonatas, etc.

Zange, Nikolaus. 16th C.

Zani de Ferranti, Marco Aurelio (Bologna, 1800-1878, Pisa). Noted Italian guitarist, appearing at Paris in 1820 and, after being in secretarial work at Petrograd, from 1824 concertizing in Hamburg, Paris and London, from 1827 settled in Brussels as teacher (after 1846 at the Conservatory) and in 1855 returning to Italy.

Zarate, Eleodoro Ortiz de (Valparaiso, 1865). Chilian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory (prize in 1886 for the opera Giovanna la Pazza) and writing the first Chilian opera, La Fioraia de Lugano, 1895.

Zaremba, Nikolai Ivanovitch (n. Vitebsk, 1821-1879, Petrograd). Able Russian teacher, pupil of Marx, from 1859 teaching in the school of the Imperial Musical Society at Petrograd and from 1862 continuing in the new Conservatory, where in 1867-1871 he followed A. Rubinstein as director. In 1871-78 he lived outside of Russia. Among his pupils were Tchaikovsky, Laroche, Altani and Soloviev. Wrote the oratorio St. John the Baptist.

Zaremba, Sigismund Vladislavovitch (Shitomir, 1861), son of the next. Polish-Russian teacher, pupil of his father, Sattel and Alois, in 1896-1901 director of the branch of the Imperial Musical Society at Voronezh and conductor of symphony-concerts there, then moving to Petrograd. Has written orchestral dances, a suite for strings, a string-quartet, many piano-pieces and songs.

Zaremba, Vladislav Ivanovitch (in Podolia, 1833). Polish-Russian teacher, pupil of the brothers Kozinski, from 1862 settled at Kiev, writing for piano and voice and editing collections of Polish and Little-Russian folk-music.

Zaremski, Jules de (Shitomir, 1854-1885, do.). Polish-Russian pianist, pupil of Dachs and Liszt, from 1879 Brassin's successor as teacher at the Brussels Conservatory, writing a Suite Polonais, many Polish dances, 2 serenades (Burlesque and Espagnole), a Ballade, 3 concert-études, etc.

Zarlino, Gioseffo (1517-1590). 16th C. G.

Zarzycki, Alexander (Lemberg, 1834-1895, Warsaw). Eminent Galician pianist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1861 touring throughout central Europe with brilliant success, in 1870-75 conductor of the Musical Society at Warsaw and from 1879 head of the Conservatory there (following De Kontski). Wrote an orchestral Suite Polonais, a piano-concerto, a Polonaise for piano and orchestra, a Mazourka, Cracovienne and Romance for violin and orchestra, many effective piano-pieces, etc. G.

Zay, William Henri (Findlay, O. 1869). American voice-specialist, pupil of the Cleveland Conservatory and in 1890-95 teaching there, then studying further at the Royal Academy in London and settling there, but in 1917 returning to New York. Author of The Practical Psychology of Voice and of Life, 1918, besides song-cycles and some works with orchestra. A.

Zaytz, Giovanni von (Fiume, 1832-1914, Agram). Important Croatian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory, from 1862-70 living in Vienna and then conductor at the theater in Agram and teacher at the Conservatory, later becoming its director. Wrote 15 operas (from 1849), including 13 pioneer Croatian works (from Zarucnica Mesinske, 1861, to Primorka, 1901, and Vater Unser, 1911), the Croatian operetta Aphrodite, 1888, nearly 20 German operettas, the oratorio The First Sin, 1907, and other choral works, many masses, songs and piano-pieces.

Zeck, Frederick (Philadelphia, 1858). American pianist, conductor and composer, trained by Heckmanns and Schumacher and at the Kullak Academy in Berlin, where he taught in 1880-82. Since 1882 he has taught advanced piano-pupils in San Francisco and in 1882-83 and 1902 also conducted symphony-concerts there. Has written the operas La Paloma and Wa-Kin-Yon (Indian legend), 6 symphonies, the symphonic poems The Eve of St. Agnes, 1898, Lamia, 1902, The Raven, 1902, and The Wreck of the Hesperus, 1909, 4 piano-concertos, a violin-concerto, a 'cello-concerto, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 3 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, a flute-sonata and 2 clarinet-sonatas. A.

Zeckwer, Camille (Philadelphia, 1875), son of the next. Gifted American pianist and composer, trained at the Philadelphia Musical Academy and under Dvofák, Ph. Scharwenka and Zajic, from about 1900 teaching at the Philadelphia Academy and since 1915 one of its directors. Has written the opera Jane and Janetta, the cantata The New Day (prize at Cleveland, 1914), the symphonic poem, Sohrab and Rustum, 1915, a piano-concerto (1899), a Swedish Fantasy for violin and orchestra, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a Sérénade Mélancolique for piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, a violin-suite, choruses, songs and piano-pieces. A.

Zeckwer, Richard (Stendal, 1850). Saxon pianist and teacher, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, since 1869 active in Philadelphia, where in 1876–1917 he was the efficient director of the Philadelphia Musical Academy, besides from 1870 serving as organist at St. Vincent de Paul's and in 1877–80 at the Roman Catholic Cathedral. He has also lectured on acoustics and in 1902 published a short monograph on investigations of legato-touch. Has written 2 overtures, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, 4 piano-sonatas, many songs and piano-pieces. A.

Zehler, Carl (n. Merseburg, 1840–1919, Halle). Saxon organist and conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1864 settling at Halle, where from 1870 he was organist at the Ulrichskirche (following Franz) and in 1880–1915 at the Marienkirche, besides in 1876–1911 teaching at the Francke Realschule, in 1887–1907 directing the symphony-concerts of the City Guard Association and in 1887–1904 leading the student-society Fridericiana. Wrote Psalms 23 and 100, about 30 organ-pieces and a study of W. F. Bach's activity in Halle (1910, in Jahrb. d. neuen Bachgesellschaft).

Zeisler, Fannie, née Bloomfield (Bielitz, 1863). Distinguished Galician pianist, brought up in Chicago, pupil of Ziehn, Wolfsohn, and Leschetizky, appearing in Chicago when but a child and from 1883 making a notable impression at Vienna and then throughout the United States. Besides being constantly engaged in America, in 1893–95, 1902–03, '11–12 and '14 she made triumphant tours in Europe. To great emotional intensity and incisive individuality she unites conspicuous intellectual breadth and grasp, so that she is equally successful with all branches of piano-literature. In 1885 she married the Chicago lawyer Sigmund Zeisler. G (Bloomfield), A.

Zelenka, Johann Dismas (Lannowicz, 1679–1745, Dresden). Bohemian composer, from 1710 double-bassist in the court-band at Dresden (in 1716–19 visiting Venice and Vienna with the Elector), from about 1720 Heinichen's assistant as court-director and in 1729 his successor (though without full title), besides being from 1735 court-composer. Wrote 20 masses, 3 Requiems, 2 Te Deums, Psalms, motets, much other church-music, 3 oratorios, cantatas, songs, a Latin melodrama and an orchestral suite. G.

Zelenski, Ladislas (in Galicia, 1837–1921, Cracow). Able teacher and composer, pupil of Mirecki, Krejčí and Damcke, long professor at the Warsaw Conservatory and then living in Cracow. Wrote the operas Konrad Wallenrod, 1885, Goplana, 1896, Janek, 1900, Stara Bárn, 1907, and Balandina, 1910, an operetta, music for Rapacki's Wut Stwoosz, a symphony, 2 overtures, 2 sets of Polish dances for orchestra, Trauerklänge, a 'cello-romance with orchestra, a piano-concerto, 2 string-quartets, quartet-variations, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, organ-preludes, a piano-sonata and many pieces, 2 cantatas, masses, motets, choruses and songs. Author of text-books in harmony and counterpoint.

Zellbell, Ferdinand (Stockholm, ?1719–1780, do.). Swedish organist and conductor, pupil of his father, Romanus and Telemann, from 1750 court-director at Stockholm and his father's successor as organist at the Storkyrka. Wrote the opera Il Giudizio d'Aminta, the ballet Sveas Kögtd, 1774, a coronation-cantata for Adolf Friedrich in 1750, an overture for strings, etc.

Zelle, Friedrich (Berlin, 1845). Prussian teacher and writer, pupil of Th. Kullak, Flodoard Geyer and H. Bellermann, in 1875–92 head-teacher at the Humboldt Gymnasium in Berlin and leader of the academic chorus and since 1893 director of the 10th Realschule. Author of many studies in early German music, including sketches of the opera-writers J. W. Franck (1889), Joh. Theile and Strungk (1891) and Förtsch (1893), Die Singweisen d. ältesten evangel. Lieder, 1899–1900, Das erste evangel. Choralbuch, 1903, and Das älteste lutherische Hausgesangbuch, 1903, and editions of various examples, including Keiser's Jodelet (1892), ballets from his operas (1890), and Passions by Sebastiani and Theile (1904).

Zeller, Karl (n. Vienna, 1842–1898, do.). Austrian civil official in Vienna, from about 1875 gaining extraordinary success with operettas, especially Der Vogelhändler, 1891, and Der Obersteiger, 1894.

Zellner, Julius (Vienna, 1832–1900, Mürz-zuschlag). Austrian teacher and composer, from about 1855 active in Vienna, writing 2 symphonies, the suite Melusine, a Sinfonietta, a Hochzeitsmarsch, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, quartet-variations, a piano-quartet, 3 piano-trios, 2 violin-sonatas, 2 'cello-sonatas, 3 piano-suites and many pieces, the choral works Im Hochgebirge and Die Wasserfee, etc.

Zellner, Leopold Alexander (Agram, 1823–1894, Vienna). Croatian teacher, pupil of his father, from 1849 active in Vienna, where in 1855–68 he was founder and editor of the Blätter für Theater, Musik u. bildende Kunst, in 1859–66 gave series of historical concerts and from 1868 followed Sechter as professor at the Conservatory and general secretary of the Musikfreunde. He was a harmonium-expert, writing a method and transcriptions. Author of lectures on acoustics (1892, 2 vols) and on organ-making (1893) and editor of violin-sonatas by Nardini and Vivaldi.

Zelter, Karl Friedrich (n. Berlin, 1758–1832, do.). Eminent Prussian conductor, teacher and composer, pupil of Kirnberger and Fasch (also trained in his father's trade as mason), began composing in 1786, was concertmaster in Reilstab's concerts in 1787 and in 1791 joined the new society that later became the famous Singakademie, often assisting Fasch as conductor and in 1800 succeeding him. His genius for educational leadership was shown in his becoming an associate in the Academie from 1806 and professor from 1809, in his starting a school for orchestral practice in 1807 and also the Liedertafel in 1809 (the forerunner of the great Sängerbund, now of national and international scope) and, finally, in the founding in 1819 of the Institut für Kirchenmusik, of which he continued the director. Besides his intimacy with Fasch, he had peculiarly close relations with Goethe, became the head of the strongly conservative Berlin circle and from about 1817 was Mendelssohn's teacher and friend. He is to be counted as one of the promoters of the rapid growth of interest in the song and especially in choruses for men's voices. Wrote cantatas for Easter and Ascension, a cantata for the funeral of Frederick the Great (1786) and others, church-music, choruses, many songs, a viola-concerto, piano-pieces, etc. Author of an autobiography (edited by Rintel, 1861) and a life of Fasch (1801). His extensive correspondence with Goethe has been variously edited (by Riemer, 1833-34, by Geiger, 1906, and by Hecker, 1913). On his relation to the Liedertafel, see works by Bornemann, 1851, Sieber, 1862, and Kuhlo, 1909. G.

Zemánek, Wilhelm (Prague, 1875-1922, do.). Eminent Bohemian conductor, educated first as a physician, in music pupil of Schalk and Ferd. Löwe, in 1900-02 theater-conductor at Elberfeld and Riga, from 1903 prominent as director of the Philharmonie in Prague and also from 1919 engaged in other concert-enterprises. In the summer of 1904 he took his orchestra on a tour to Petrograd and in 1905 and '09 to Warsaw. In 1908 he had charge of the concerts at the Jubilee Exposition.

Zemlinsky, Alexander von (Vienna, 1872). Eminent Polish-Austrian conductor and composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1900 conductor at the Karl-Theater there, from 1906 at the Volksoper, in 1908-09 at the Hofoper, from 1909 at the Mannheim Opera and since 1912 at the German Opera in Prague and from 1920 head of the new German Musical Academy. Has written the operas Sarema, 1897 (Luitpold prize), Es war einmal, 1900, and Kleider machen Leute, 1910, the choral works Frühlings Begräbnis and Psalm 23, 2 symphonies (the 1st taking the Beethoven prize of the Musikfreunde in 1897), an orchestral suite, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-suite, piano-pieces and songs. He is brother-in-law of Schönberg.

Zenatello, Giovanni (Verona, 1879). Gifted Italian operatic tenor, trained at the Verona Music School and by Moretti, appearing from 1901 in Italy, from 1905 at Covent Garden, London, in 1907-09 at the Manhattan, New York, and in 1909-14 with the Boston Opera Company, besides engagements with the Chicago Opera Company and tours in South America, Spain and Russia. In 1913 he married the contralto Maria Gay.

Zenger, Max (Munich, 1837-1911, do.). Able Bavarian conductor and composer, pupil of Stark and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1860 conductor at Ratisbon, from 1869 director at the Munich Opera, in 1872-75 court-director at Karlsruhe and in 1878-85 conductor of the Oratorienverein at Munich and also of the Academic Gesangverein and the choral classes at the Conservatory. Ph.D. of Munich Univ. in 1897. Wrote the operas Die Foscari, 1863, Ruy Blas, 1868, Wieland der Schmied, 1880 (revised 1894), and Eros und Psyche, 1901, the notable oratorio Kain, 1867, 2 ballets, 2 Gretchen scenes from Faust, 1881, the choral idyl Das Mädchen vom Walde, the cantata Die Heinzelmännchen, an Allgriechisches Liederspiel for soprano and chorus, Die deutsche Flotte for men's chorus, the melodrama Die Kraniche von Ibykus, a symphony, a Tragische Ouvertüre, an Adagio Concertante for cello and orchestra, a piano-trio, a cello-sonata, and many lesser works.

Zeno, Apostolo (Venice, 1668-1750, do.). Famous Italian poet, in 1718-29 in court-employment at Vienna, but otherwise associated with Venice. He was the most prolific writer of librettos before Metastasio (over 70 for operas and 17 for oratorios). Among them were the following (with date of earliest musical setting):

Operas—Gl'Innanni Felici, 1696, Eumene, 1697, Narciso, 1697, I Rivali Generosi, 1697, Odoardo, 1698, Faramondo, 1699, Lucio Vero, 1700, Griselda, 1701, Venceslao, 1703, Pirro, 1704, Amleto, 1705, Antico, 1705, Artaserse, 1705, Stafira, 1705, L'Amor Generoso, 1707, Teuzzone, 1707, Asiarto, 1708, Engelberta, 1708, La Scavvita, 1708, Sesostri, 1709, Costantino, 1711, Merope, 1711, Alessandro Severo, 1717, Ifigenia in Aulide, 1718, Don Chisciotte, 1719, Sirita, 1719, Lucio Papirio, 1720, Alessandro in Sidone, 1721, Ormisda, 1721, Temistocle, 1721, Nitocri, 1722, Flavio Anicio Olibrio, 1723, Scipione nelle Spagna, 1724, Meride e Selinunte, 1726, Ornaspade, 1727, Mitridate, 1728, Gianguir, 1729, Andromeda, 1730, Euristeo, 1732, Cajo Fabricio, 1734, Elisa, Regina di Tiro, 1736.

A large number of these were prepared in collaboration with Pietro Pariati. His dramatic works were collected by Gozzi in 1744 (reprinted also in 1785-86). Memoir by Fehr, 1912, and see catalogues by Wotquenne, 1901, '05, and Sonneck, Opera-Librettos, 1914.

Zentay, Mary [Marie Zimmer] (Pest, 1897). Brilliant Hungarian violinist, pupil of Sabathiel and J. Hubay, first appearing in 1910 at Pest and from 1913 also in Germany, England and America (1915).

Zepler, Bogumil (Breslau, 1858-1918, Krummhübel). Silesian composer of light stage-works, originally trained as both architect and physician, in music pupil of Urban, from 1891 gaining notice by a parody on Mascagni (Cavalleria Berolina) and pieces for Wolzogen's 'Ueberbrettel,' but then writing 4 better comedies (1892-1911) and the short Nacht, 1901, several operettas and some songs. From 1906 he edited Musik für Alle in Berlin.

Zerlett, Johann Baptist (Geislingen, 1859). Württemberger choral conductor, trained at the Cologne Conservatory, from about 1880 engaged at Saarbrücken and Darmstadt, from 1887 at Wiesbaden (with a sojourn from 1900 at Hanover as leader of the Männergesangverein) and since 1917 in charge of choral classes at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin. Has written 2 operas, orchestral works, piano-concertos, melodramas, choral works, etc.

Zerrahn, Carl (Malchow, 1826–1909, Milton, Mass.). Noted Mecklenburger conductor, coming to America as flutist in the Germania Orchestra in 1848, in 1854–95 gaining great renown as conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society in Boston, as well as many orchestral enterprises, especially the symphony-concerts of the Harvard Musical Association in 1865–82. In 1866–97 he also conducted the Worcester Festivals and at different times led other choral organizations in the vicinity of Boston. Up to his retirement in 1898 he was for many years professor at the New England Conservatory. G, A.

Zeugheer, Jacob (Zurich, 1805–1865, Liverpool). Able Swiss violinist and conductor, pupil of Wassermann, Fränzl and Gratz, in 1824–30 head of the 'Gebrüder Hermann' (a quartet consisting of Zeugheer, Wex, Baader and Lidel), which, starting from Munich, toured through southern Germany, Switzerland, along the Rhine to the Low Countries and to Paris and Great Britain. Settling then in England, he was in 1831–38 conductor of the Gentlemen's Concerts in Manchester and from 1843 of the Liverpool Philharmonic. Wrote 2 symphonies, 2 overtures, 2 sets of entr'actes, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, etc., besides an opera (text by his pupil Chorley). G.

Zeuner, Karl Traugott (Dresden, 1775–1841, Paris). Saxon pianist, pupil of Türk and Clementi, from 1803 active at Paris, Vienna and Petrograd (one of Glinka's teachers), finally settling in Dresden. Wrote 2 piano-concertos, 3 string-quartets, variations on a Russian theme for piano-trio and many popular piano-pieces.

Zeuner, Martin. 17th C.

Ziani, Marc' Antonio (1653–1715). 17th C.

Ziani, Pietro Andrea (?1630–1711). 17th C.

Zich, Otakar (Král Mestec, 1879). Bohemian æsthetician, professor at Brünn University, and also composer of the operas Maléřský Nápad, 1910, and Vina, 1922, choral ballads and song-cycles with orchestra. Author of Der Tanz, 1908, Ästhetik d. musikal. Wahrnehmung, 1919, and Böhmische Volkslieder mit verändertem Takt, 1919.

Zichy, Géza [Count Vasonyi-Keö] (Szűrá, 1849). Hungarian nobleman and lawyer, who, though losing his right arm by accident when a boy, as pupil of Mayrberger, Volkmann and Liszt became an amazing piano-virtuoso with the left hand, from 1880 often appearing in charitable concerts (sometimes with Liszt). For years he was president of the National Academy at Pest and since 1892 of its successor the National Conservatory. In 1890–94 he was also intendant of the Opera. Has written the operas Alár, 1896, Meister Roland, 1899, and the trilogy Rákóczy (1905), Nemo (1909) and Rodosto (1912), not yet produced, the ballet Gemma, 1903, a melodrama (1889?), the cantata Dolores, 1889, part-songs, songs, and piano-pieces and études for the left hand. Author of Aus meinem Leben, 2 vols. 1911–20.

Ziegfeld, Florenz (Jever, 1841–1923, Chicago). North German educator, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1863 migrating to America and in 1867 establishing the Chicago Musical College, of which he remained active president for almost 50 years. In 1903 he was made a member of the Légion d'Honneur for his interest in French music. A.

Ziegler, Benno (Munich, 1891). Bavarian librarian, trained at Munich University (Ph.D. 1916), from 1920 employed in the Munich Library and at present in that of Würzburg University. Has written several masses, motets and other church-music, songs, stage-music (1922) and some chamber-pieces.

Ziehn, Bernhard (Erfurt, 1845–1912, Chicago). Eminent Thuringian theorist, at first trained as school-teacher (mathematics), from 1865 at Mühlhausen, in 1868 removing to teach in a school in Chicago. From 1871, however, he devoted himself to extensive and original investigations of the technique both of piano-playing and of composition, resulting in the treatises System d. Uebungen für Klavierspieler, 1881, Lehrgang für d. ersten Klavierunterricht, 1881, a manual of embellishments (1883), the monumental Harmonie- u. Modulationslehre, 1888 (2d ed. 1909), Five- and Six-Part Harmonies, 1911, Canonical Studies, 1912, and many articles on the old church modes and other subjects. He also taught many distinguished pupils (Mme. Zeisler, Middelschulte, Kaun, etc.). A.

Ziehrer, Karl Michael (Vienna, 1843). Austrian dance-musician, originally a bandmaster, from 1863 head of a traveling orchestra and from about 1870 the last of the Viennese 'dance-kings,' writing some 600 dances and over 20 operettas (including Ein tolles Mädel, 1907, and Das dumme Herz, 1914).

Zientarski, Romuald Grigorievitch (n. Plock, 1831–1874, Warsaw). Polish theorist and composer, pupil of Elsner, from 1852 teaching Gregorian music at the Roman Catholic Academy in Warsaw and from 1865 professor at the Conservatory. Wrote over 600 works, including 4 oratorios, 3 symphonies, organ-pieces, etc., besides a treatise on composition (3 vols.).

Zilcher, Hermann (Frankfort, 1881). Hessian pianist, pupil of his father and the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfort), gaining the Mozart prize in 1901 and making many concert-tours from Berlin (including Scandinavia, Spain and America), from 1905 teaching at the Hoch Conservatory, from 1908 at the Munich Conservatory and since 1920 head of the Würzburg Conservatory. Has written the 'dream-play' Fitzbutze, 1903, the comic Doktor Eisenbart, 1922, incidental music to As You Like It and Winter's Tale, the choral works Rheinart and Die Liebesmesse, 1913, many striking lieder-cycles (Dehmel, Hölderlin, Kriegslieder, Hey-Spekter Fabeln, Deutsches Volksliederspiel, Aus dem Hohelied Salomonis, etc.), and many other songs, 2 symphonies, an orchestral suite, a Sinfonietta, a piano-concerto, 2 violin-concertos (one for two violins), a suite for two violins and orchestra, a Konzertstück for 'cello and Klage for violin (both with orchestra), Nacht und Morgen for two pianos and orchestra, 2 piano-quintets, a violin-sonata, various pieces for violin or for piano, etc. Sketches by Altmann, 1907 (in Monographien moderner Musiker), and Oppenheim, 1921.

Zillmann, Eduard (Dresden, 1834–1909, do.). Saxon teacher and composer, pupil of his father, in 1870 founder of a music-school in Dresden-Neustadt, writing an opera, a Christmas oratorio, a symphony, chamber-music, church- and choral works, violin- and piano-pieces, songs, etc.

Ziloti. See Siloti.

Zimbalist, Efrem (Rostov-on-the-Don, 1889). Remarkable Russian violinist, pupil of his father and Auer, creating a sensation in 1907 at Berlin and in many other European cities and from 1911 establishing himself in America as a favorite everywhere. His maturity of execution and conception are phenomenal. In 1914 he married the soprano Alma Gluck. Has written Slavic Dances for violin and orchestra, a Suite in the Old Style for violin and piano and some songs. G. A.

Zimmer, Friedrich (Gardelegen, 1855). Saxon theologian and educator, now emeritus professor at Berlin, author of Sang u. Klang, 1878, Die deutsch-evangel. Gesangvereine d. Gegenwart, 1885, Der Verfall d. Kantoren- u. Organistenamtes, 1885, Sammlung von Kirchenoratorien u. Kantaten, 1888, and other musical books.

Zimmerman, Pierre Joseph Guillaume (Paris, 1785–1853, do.). Noted French piano-teacher, trained at the Paris Conservatory and in 1811–48 professor there (Alkan, Marmontel, Prudent, Ravina, Lacombe, Lefebvre, A. Thomas, etc., among his pupils). From 1848 he was member of the Légion d'Honneur. Wrote the operas L'Enlèvement, 1830, and Nausicaa (not given), 2 piano-concertos, Les Délices de Paris (contre-dances with variations), rondos, fantasias and études, many songs and a notable Encyclopédie du Pianiste (including a treatise on harmony and counterpoint). Memoir by Labat, 1865. G.

Zimmermann, Agnes (Cologne, 1847). Excellent Rhenish pianist, brought up in England, trained at the Royal Academy (London), twice winning the King's Scholarship, making her début in 1863 in London and in 1864 at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig, becoming recognized, especially in England, as a finished interpreter of the classical school. Has written a piano-trio, 3 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, a piano-suite and other pieces, besides editing the sonatas of Mozart and Beethoven and the piano-works of Schumann. G.

Zimmermann, Anton (Presburg, 1741–1781, do.). Hungarian organist, from about 1765 at the Presburg Cathedral and also in service to Prince Batthyány, writing the singspiel Andromeda and Perseus, 1781, a piano-concerto, string-quartets, violin-duos and sonatas, etc.

Zimmermann, Balduin. Saxon composer of the operas Das Wintermärchen, 1900, Maja, 1902, and Sakuntala, 1905.

Zimmermann, Louis (Groningen, 1873). Dutch violinist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Ysaÿe, from about 1895 concertmaster in turn at Hamburg, Darmstadt, Amsterdam and London, settling at Amsterdam as concertmaster of the Concertgebouw-Orkest. Has written a violin-concerto and a string-quartet.

Zingarelli, Nicola Antonio (Naples, 1752–1837, n. do.). Eminent Italian composer, pupil of Feneroli and Speranza at the Conservatorio di Loreto at Naples, becoming a good violinist and writing his first stage-work in 1768. After teaching in or near Naples, in 1781 and '85 successful works at Naples and Milan opened the way for a long series of operas at various places, of which the chief was Giulietta e Romeo in 1796. His official positions were as maestro at Milan Cathedral from 1792, at the Santa Casa in Loreto from 1794 and at St. Peter's in Rome in 1804–11, losing the last because he declined to take part in the birthday celebration for Napoleon's child, the so-called 'King of Rome.' After a brief imprisonment, from 1813 he was director of the consolidated Naples Conservatory and from 1816 also maestro at the Cathedral. As composer he was noted for clarity and suavity, especially in his innumerable sacred works, but his dramatic gifts were also sufficient to make him one of the most popular composers of the day. He was also an excellent teacher (Bellini, Mercadante, Lauro Rossi, etc., among his pupils). With him the so-called Neapolitan school of opera came to an end. His operas number over 30 (mostly 1781–1803 and at Milan). Wrote also about a dozen secular cantatas, several oratorios, about 540 church-works specially written for Loreto (including a vast number of masses, canticles, motets, hymns, etc.), also organ-sonatas, a string-quartet, etc. Memoir by Liberatore, 1837. G.

Zingel, Rudolf Ewald (Liegnitz, 1876). Silesian organist and conductor, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, from 1899 organist at the Marienkirche in Frankfurt-an-der-Oder and director of the Singakademie and Philharmonic, and since 1907 music-director at Greifswald University and organist at the Nikolaikirche, besides conducting the academic chorus Guilelmia. Has written the operas Margot, 1902, and Persepolis, 1909, the operetta Liebeszauber, the cantata Der wilde Jäger, 6 church-cantatas, the symphonic poem Freudvoll und leidvoll, the overture Der zerbrochene Krug, organ- and piano-pieces, choruses and songs.

Zinkeisen, Konrad Ludwig Dietrich (Hanover, 1779–1838, Brunswick). Hanoverian violinist, pupil of his father, Rode and Forkel, from 1801 oboist in a military band at Lüneburg, from 1803 concertmaster under Forkel at the Academic Concerts in Göttingen, and from 1819 court-musician at Brunswick. Wrote 4 overtures, 6 violin-concertos, a Duo Concertante for violin and viola, 3 string-quartets, flute-variations with quartet, concertos for oboe, clarinet, basset-horn and bassoon, ensemble-pieces for oboe, for clarinet and for horns, etc.

Zöhrer, Josef (Vienna, 1842). Austrian pianist and teacher, pupil of Pinkhert, Jul. Epstein and Sechter, from about 1865 theater-conductor at various places and since 1882 director of the Music School at Laibach and conductor of the symphony- and oratorio-concerts of the Philharmonic Society there. Has written orchestral, chamber- and choral music, as well as excellent piano-pieces in the Schumann-Jensen style.

Zoeller, Karl (Berlin, 1840–1889, London). Prussian violinist, pupil of the Berlin Akademie, from about 1860 leader of a traveling opera-troupe in Germany, but from 1873 settled in London, where from 1879 he was bandmaster in the Hussars. He was an expert on the viola d'amore and his researches regarding it led to his becoming a member of learned societies in London, Rome and Florence. Author of a notable method, containing a historical essay. Also wrote 4 overtures, a violin-concerto, a quintet for piano and wind, a string-quartet, church-music, some stage-pieces, songs, etc. G.

Zoellner, Joseph (Brooklyn, 1862). American violinist, pupil of Lorenzen, Th. Jacoby and Petri, from 1882 directing his own schools in Brooklyn and Stockton, Cal. (from 1903), from 1907 teacher at Etterbeek (near Brussels) and in 1910–12 playing in the Orchestre Durand, and then returning to New York. While in Belgium he formed a Quartet with his two sons and daughter (he himself taking the viola), with which he has toured throughout the United States. A.

Zois, Hans [Freiherr von Zois-Edelstein] (Gratz, 1861). Styrian composer of the operas Dankos Glück, 1897, Frau Marzine, 1910, Cleopatra, 1911, etc., 4 operettas, a ballet, effective songs and piano-pieces.

Zoilo, Annibale. 16th C.

Zöllner, Heinrich (Leipzig, 1854), son of the following. Eminent Saxon choral conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1878 music-director at Dorpat University, in 1885–90 conductor of the Männergesangsverein at Cologne and several other choral societies, besides teaching at the Conservatory and in 1890 taking a picked chorus of men on a notable tour in Italy. In 1890–98 he went to New York to direct the Leiderkranz, but was then called back to Leipzig to succeed Kretzschmar as director at the University and of the academic chorus Paulus, from 1902 following Reinecke as teacher at the Conservatory and from 1903 being also critic for the Tageblatt. Resigning in 1906, he taught for a year at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin and since 1908 has been conductor at the Flemish Opera in Antwerp. Has written the operas Frithjof, 1884, Die lustigen Chinesinnen, 1886, Faust, 1887, Matteo

Falcone, 1894, Im Jahre 1870, 1895 (including Bei Sedan and Der Ueberfall), Das hölzerne Schwert, 1897 (comic), Die versunkene Glocke, 1899, Der Schützenkönig, 1903, and Zigeuner, 1912 [all but one to original texts], a long line of able choral works, mostly for men's voices, some with military band, the cantata Die neue Welt, 1892 (prize at Cleveland), 3 symphonies, the overture Unter dem Sternenbanner, a Wald-fantasie, Sommerfahrt and Serenade for strings (the latter with flute) and a string-quartet. Author of the poem Beethoven in Bonn, 1898. In 1905 he gained the title of royal professor. Sketch by Segnitz, 1907 (in Monographien moderner Musiker).

Zöllner, Karl Friedrich (Mittelhausen, 1800–1860, Leipzig). Noted Thuringian choral conductor, pupil of Schicht at the Thomasschule in Leipzig, from 1820 teaching at the Freischule there and soon beginning to organize men's clubs for singing and to write choruses. In 1833 he founded the Zöllner-Verein, which became the type for many societies elsewhere (30 such united in a festival at Leipzig in 1859 and all were associated later as the Zöllner-Bund). Wrote many famous part-songs and choruses, motets and songs.

Zöllner, Karl Heinrich (Oels, 1792–1836, n. Hamburg). Able Silesian organist, from about 1812 living a wandering life as virtuoso and from 1833 settled at Hamburg. Wrote masses, motets, Psalms, organ-pieces, sonatas for violin and for piano, an opera, a melodrama, etc.

Zöllner, Richard (Metz, 1896), son of Heinrich above. Gifted Rhenish composer, pupil of Rau and Gräber, writing orchestral variations and 2 Musiken, a Kammersinfonie, a Liebesode for small orchestra, a quintet for clarinet and strings, a string-quartet, 2 Religiöse Sätze for quartet, etc.

Zolotariev, Vassily Andreievitch (Taganrog, 1879). Russian composer, pupil of Krasnokutsky, Liadov, Balakirev and Rimsky-Korsakov, from 1900 teaching at the Moscow Conservatory. Has written a symphony, the overtures Fête Villageoise and Fantasie, an orchestral Rhapsodie Hébraïque, a string-quintet, 4 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-suite, a piano-sonata and various songs.

Zopff, Hermann (Glogau, 1826–1883, Leipzig). Silesian editor, studying from 1850 at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin and for some years active there in starting musical clubs and institutions, but in 1864 moving to Leipzig to assist Brendel as editor of the Neue Zeitschrift and in 1868 to succeed him. Wrote the operas Makabäus and Mohammed, the choral works Bruthymne, Deutscher Triumphgesang, Anbetung Gottes and Asträa, the overture or symphonic poem Wilhelm Tell, a Deutsche Festouvertüre, 3 Idyllen for small orchestra, a Gesangsstück for 'cello and orchestra, 3 chorale-preludes for organ, men's choruses and songs. Author of Ratschläge für angehende Dirigenten, 1861, and Grundzüge einer Theorie d. Oper, 1868 (vol. i only), besides manuals of singing. As editor he successfully maintained the progressive and constructive policy of the Zeitschrift. G.

Zschiesche, August (Berlin, 1800–1876, do.). Prussian operatic bass, trained in a theater-chorus in Berlin (first as soprano, then as tenor and finally as bass), from 1820 employed on minor parts at Pest and Temesvar, in 1826 returning to Berlin and in 1829–61 a favorite at the Opera, besides from 1833 singing with the Singakademie.

Zschocher, Johann (Leipzig, 1821–1897, do.). Saxon pianist, pupil of Knorr, Kullak, Henselt and Liszt, from 1846 founder and director of his own Musik-Institut in Leipzig, which still flourishes under Th. Raillard.

Zuber, Gregor. 17th C.

Zuelli, Guglielmo (Reggio Emilia, 1859). Italian teacher and composer, pupil of the Bologna Liceo, from 1894 director of the Palermo Conservatory and since 1911 of the Parma Conservatory. Has written the opera La Fata del Nord, 1884 (Sonzogno prize), the opera-ballet Il Profeta di Korassan, 1886, the choral work Inno alla Notte, 2 symphonies, the symphonic poem Un Saluto al Mare, the symphonic favolietta Bertoldo, 1918, the symphony-overture Il Canto del Coaro Romagnuolo, 1913, a string-quartet, organ-fugues, cantatas, motets and songs.

Zulauf, Ernst (Kassel, 1878). Hessian conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1902), for a time touring as pianist, from 1901 coach at the Frankfurt Opera and since 1903 second conductor at the Kassel Opera. Has written music for Zobelitz's Lied von Meth.

Zumpe, Hermann (Taubenheim, 1850–1903, Munich). Eminent Saxon conductor, educated as a school-teacher, in music pupil of Tottmann, in 1873–76 employed at Bayreuth on the completion of the scores of the Ring cycle, then successively theater-conductor at Salzburg, Würzburg, Magdeburg, Frankfurt and Hamburg, from 1886 variously occupied as teacher or coach, from 1891 court-director at Stuttgart and from 1893 also Faiszt's successor as head of the Kirchenmusik-Verein, from 1895 court-director at Munich, from 1897 court-director at Schwerin and from 1900 again at Munich (with plenary authority as Generaldirektor). Wrote the operas Anahra, 1881, Die verwunschene Prinzessin (not given), Sawriti, 1907 (completed by Rössler), and Das Gespenst von Herodin, 1910, the operettas Farinelli, 1886, Karin, 1888, and Polnische Wirtschaft, 1889, the overture Wallensteins Tod and various songs. Anonymous memoir, 1905. G.

Zumsteeg, Johann Rudolf (n. Mosbach, 1760–1802, Stuttgart). Noted Badenese 'cellist and composer, pupil of Poli (and school-friend of Schiller), from about 1785 in the court-band at Stuttgart and from 1793 Poli's successor as court-director. Wrote the operas Lotchen am Hofe, 1779, Das tatarische Gesetz, 1780, Schuss von Gänsewitz, 1781, Armida, 1785, Tamira, 1788, Ippolito ed Aricia, 1782, Elbondokani, Die Geisterinsel, Zalaor, and Das Pfauenfest (the last four published posthumously), incidental music for Lanassa (1784), Hamlet, Macbeth and Schiller's Räuber, about 20 church-cantatas, 2 'cello-concertos, 'cello-sonatas and duos, and, most important of all, numerous songs and ballads (the latter including Schiller's Maria Stuart and Ritter Toggenburg, Bürger's Lenore, Goethe's Colma, Des Pfarrers Tochter, etc.) which place him as the forerunner of Reichardt, Zelter, Schubert and Loewe. Memoirs or studies by Landshoff, 1902, and Sandberger, 1906 (in Münchener Allgem. Zeitung). G.

Zundel, John (n. Stuttgart, 1815–1882, Cannstatt). Württemberger organist, pupil of Molique (violin) and Rinck, from 1840 in Petrograd, removing in 1847 to New York, where he became prominent as teacher and player, in 1850–55, '58–65 and '67–78 at Plymouth Church (Brooklyn). A.

Zur Mühlen, Raimund von (in Livonia, 1854). Excellent German-Russian lieder-singer and highly valued teacher, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule and of Stockhausen and Bussine, besides further study with Mme. Schumann, from 1882 eminently successful in London, where he was one of the first to give programs made up wholly of songs. G.

Zur Nieden, Albrecht (Emmerich, 1819–1873, Duisburg). Rhenish choral conductor, originally a student in theology, in music pupil of Fr. Schneider, from about 1840 teacher at Bonn and from 1850 director at Duisburg. Wrote the choral works Die Sage von der Martinswand, Der blinde König, Das Grab im Busento, Königin Esther, Die schöne Magelone, etc.

Zuschneid, Karl (Oberglöga, 1854). Silesian choral conductor, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory, from 1879 teaching and leading choral societies at Göttingen, from 1889 at Minden and from 1897 at Erfurt, becoming in 1907–17 director of the Hochschule für Musik in Mannheim. In 1914 he gained the title of royal professor. Has written the choral works Hermann der Befreier, Lenzfahrt, Sängergebet, Deutschlands Erwachen, Die Zollern und das Reich (cantata), Unter den Sternen, Psalm 49, motets, choruses, songs, a Konzertstück for violin and orchestra, etc., besides text-books in piano-playing.

Zuth, Josef (n. Karlsbad, 1879). Bohemian guitarist and specialist in lute-music, studying at Karlsbad, Leitmeritz and later (after work as government-employé) at Vienna, where in 1919 he took a Ph.D. at the University. Since 1918 he has taught at the Urania High School, from 1921 editing the Zeitschrift für Gitarristik and from 1922 writing for the Tageszeitung. Author of a thesis on Molitor (1919) and a series of historical studies upon the guitar and its music as illustrative of the lute-family.

Zvonar, Joseph Leopold (n. Prague, 1824–1865, do.). Bohemian teacher, trained at the Prague Organ School, where he also taught and served as director, from 1859 head of the Sophienakademie, and from 1863 choirmaster at the Trinitatiskirche. Wrote an opera, the choral work Der Ritt zum Elfenstein, a Requiem, a piano-sonata and pieces, choruses and songs, besides the first Bohemian text-book in harmony (1861).

Zwart, James (n. Haarlem, 1892). Dutch 'cellist and composer, pupil of the Hague Conservatory, in 1913-14 teacher at the Saarbrücken Music School, then at the Musica Institute at The Hague and since 1918 director of De Toonkunst Institute there. Has written the ballet Die wilden Schwäne, a 'cello-concerto, a piano-septet, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, sonatas for viola, for 'cello and for piano, etc.

Zweers, Bernard (Amsterdam, 1854). Dutch theorist and composer, pupil of the Amsterdam Conservatory and of Jadassohn, since 1895 professor at the Amsterdam Conservatory. Has written 3 symphonies, incidental music for Gijlsbrecht van Amstel, a coronation-cantata, St. Nicolasfeest (children's cantata), the choral works Kosmos (Psalm 104) and Ons Hollandsch, masses, choruses and songs.

Zwintscher, Bruno (Ziegenhain, 1838-1905 n. Dresden). Saxon piano-teacher, trained by Julius Otto and at the Leipzig Conservatory, where in 1875-96 he was a favorite teacher, then removing to Dresden. Published Studien supplemental to those of Plaidy and a Schule d. Ornamentik.

Zwyssig, Alberich (Bauen, 1808-1854, Mehrenau). Swiss priest and church-musician, choirmaster from 1826 in various convents of the Cistercians, writing church-music and a cappella sacred and secular choruses, including the famous Schweizer Psalm, 1841, which has become a sort of national hymn. Sketch by Widmann, 1905.

APPENDIX B

CONDENSED LIST OF PERSONS BEFORE 1700

For convenience of reference, the more than 1000 names prior to the 18th century are here brought together, arranged roughly in the general periods to which they belong and with brief notes as to their origin and chief location as workers. Unless otherwise specified, all after 1400 have more or less importance as composers. About nine-tenths of the number belong to the 16th and 17th centuries, to the time, that is, when music as a productive art first attained importance. As a rule, names are assigned by centuries according to the date at which official activity began, even though this activity extends into a later century.

BEFORE 1400

Hucbald (?840-930). French monk at St. Amand (n. Tournai). G.
Notker Balbulus (830-912). Monk at St. Gall (Switzerland). G.
Odo (d. 942). French monk at Tours, Baume, Aurillac and Cluny (from 927). G.
Alfarabi (?900-950). Arab theorist at Damascus.
Aron (d. 1052). Abbot at Cologne.
Aribo Scholasticus (d. 1078). Monk at Freising (Bavaria).
Berno Augiensis (d. 1048). Abbot at Reichenau (Baden).
Guido d'Arezzo (?995-1050?). French (?) monk at Pomposa (n. Ferrara), Arezzo and Avellano (from 1029); famous teacher. G.
Hermannus Contractus (1013-54). Swabian monk at Reichenau (Baden).
Cotton, John (about 1100). English (?) monk. G.
Petrinus Magnus (12th C.). French choirmaster at Notre-Dame, Paris.
Adam de la Halle (?1240-87). French Trouvère. G. (Hale).
Casella, Pietro (13th C.). Italian friend of Dante; first known madrigalist.
Elias Salomonis (13th C.). French monk at St. Astère; first to give rules for improvised counterpoint.
Franco of Cologne (about 1200). Prior at Cologne. G.
Franco of Paris (13th C.). French choirmaster at Notre Dame, Paris. G. [The two Francos are somewhat confused.]
Frauenlob [Heinrich von Meissen] (d. 1318). The last Minnesinger.
Garlandia, Johannes de (13th C.). English teacher, mostly at Paris. There may have been another of the same name later. G.
Marchettus of Padua (13-14th C.). Important theorist in northern Italy. G.
Odington, Walter (d. after 1330). English monk at Evesham. G.
Pachymeres, Georgios (1242-1310?). Byzantine writer.
Thibaut IV (1201-53). King of Navarre; famous Trouvère.
Abd-el-Kadir ben Isa (14th C.). Arab theorist.
Bryennios, Manuel (14th C.). The last Byzantine writer on music.
Faber, Nikolaus (14th C.). German priest at Halberstadt, where he built the first German organ.
Gherardello (14th C.). Early Florentine madrigalist.
Giovanni da Cascia (14th C.). Reputed founder of the Ars Nova at Florence.
Handlo, Robert de (14th C.). English writer. G.
Hugo von Reulingen (1285-1359). Swabian priest and writer.

Landino, Francesco (?1325-97). Florentine organist and madrigalist.

Machault, Guillaume (1300-72). French Trouvère and imitator of the Florentine Ars Nova.

Muris, Johannes de (14th C.). French mathematician at Oxford. G.

Paulus de Florentia (14th C.). Florentine madrigalist.

Piero di Firenze (14th C.). Florentine madrigalist.

Tunsted, Simon (14th C.). English monk at Oxford. G.

Vitry, Philippe de (?1290-1361). French bishop, composer and theorist.

FIFTEENTH CENTURY

Abyndon, Henry (d. 1497). English church-musician, from 1447 at Wells Cathedral, in 1463 first Mus-B. at Cambridge and in 1465-83 master at the Chapel Royal. G.

Adam von Fulda. German composer and theorist, about 1490 active in Bavaria (Würzburg?). G. (Fulda).

Egidius de Murano. Author of a tractate on mensural music.

Agricola [Ackermann], Alexander (1446-1506). Able German singer and composer, long in choirs at Milan and Mantua and from 1491 chaplain at the Burgundian court. G.

Banister, Gilbert. English church-musician, from 1483 master at the Chapel Royal. G.

Barbireau, Jacques (d. 1491). Belgian church-musician, from 1448 choirmaster at Antwerp Cathedral. G.

Bassiron [Basiron], Philippe. Belgian church-musician. G.

Behaim, Michel (1416-74). Württemberger Meistersinger and soldier in German, Danish and Hungarian service. See monograph by Kühn, 1907.

Beldemandis, Prosdocius de (b. ?1375). Italian professor of philosophy at Padua; writer on mensural music (noting a 17-tone enharmonic scale).

Benet, Johannes. English church-composer who used features from the Florentine Ars Nova.

Bernhard der Deutsche (d. 1459). German organist at St. Mark's in Venice from 1445; said to have introduced the pedal-keyboard.

Binchois, Gilles (?1400-60). Eminent Belgian singer and composer at the Burgundian court, writing both sacred and secular works. G.

Brasart, Johannes. Belgian singer in the Papal Chapel about 1430. G.

Burtius, Nicolaus (1450-1518). Italian author of a work (1487) containing early examples of mensural music.

Busnois, Antoine (d. 1492). Belgian singer at the Burgundian court in 1467-81 and then choirmaster at Bruges. G.

Caron, Philippe. Belgian composer, probably pupil of Dufay. G.

Caserta, Philippus de. Neapolitan writer on mensural music.

Cesaris, Johannes. Belgian contemporary of Dufay. G.

Ciconia, Johannes. Belgian composer and theorist, about 1400 canon at Padua.

Compère, Loyset (d. 1518). Noted Belgian singer and composer at St. Quentin Cathedral, becoming canon and chancellor; pupil of Okeghem. G.

Davy [Davys], Richard. English singer and organist at Magdalen College, Oxford, about 1490. G.

Després, Josquin (?1450-1521). The most gifted Belgian composer at the opening of the 16th century, pupil of Okeghem; from 1474 singer at Milan, from 1484 in the Papal Chapel, from 1495 choirmaster at Cambrai, in 1499-1503 at Modena, Paris and Ferrara in turn and finally prebendary at Condé. Complete edition of works begun in 1921 by Smijers. G (Josquin).

Domarto, Petrus de. Italian composer, probably in the Papal Chapel.

Donatus de Florentia. Italian composer after the style of the Ars Nova.

Dufay, Guillaume (?1400-74). The last of the strong Belgian composers before Okeghem and Després, following Dunstable and Binchois; in 1428-37 singer in the Papal Chapel, in 1442-49 employed by Felix V of Savoy (antipope) besides in 1436-37 becoming canon at both Cambrai and Mons. See monographs by Haberl, 1885, and J. Stainer, 1898. G.

Dunstable, John (?1370-1453). Able English composer, details of life unknown; one of the first to use the accompanied melody and detached phrase-form of the Florentines. See article by Cecie Stainer, 1900 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), and notices in H. Riemann's Musikgesch. 1907, and Lederer's Heimat u. Ursprung d. mehrstimmigen Tonkunst, 1906. G.

Duran, Domingo Marcos. Spanish writer on plain-song (1492-98).

Éloy d'Amerval. French choir-master at Ste.-Croix in Orleans about 1480.

Estéban, Fernando. Spanish writer (1410), sacristan at S. Clemente in Seville.

Fauques, Vincent. Belgian composer, probably of Dufay's school.

Finck, Heinrich (1445-1527). German musician, educated in Poland and from 1492 in court-service there, from 1510 at Stuttgart and later at Salzburg. G.

Gafori, Franchino (1451-1522). Able Italian theorist, from 1484 choir-master at Milan Cathedral and also from 1498 lecturer at Pavia (works 1480-1518). See monograph by E. Prätorius, 1905, and article by Cesari, 1922 (in Rivista Musicale). G.

Gaspar van Werbeke (b. 1440?). Belgian church-musician, from 1472 at the Milanese court, from 1481 in the Papal Chapel and from 1489 at Oudenarde (his birthplace).

Hamboys [Hamboys], John. English writer on mensural music. G.

Heyne van Ghizeghem. Belgian church-musician, from 1453 at Cambrai Cathedral and from 1468 at the Burgundian court; one of the earliest to use instruments for accompaniment. G.

Hofhaimer, Paulus von (1459-1537). Eminent Austrian organist and composer, in 1480-1519 at the Innsbruck court and from 1528 at Salzburg Cathedral. G.

Hothby, Johannes (d. 1487). English theorist (Carmelite monk), in 1435 lecturer at Oxford and in 1467-86 at S. Martino at Lucca. See monograph by A. W. Schmidt, 1897. G.

Isaac, Heinrich (?1450-1517). Belgian by descent, though perhaps born in Prague, early employed at Ferrara, in 1477-93 at the Florentine court and in 1497-1515 imperial composer at Innsbruck; the most gifted of the German circle. See monographs by Waldner, 1895, (in Ferdinandum), Thürings (in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, iii. 2) and Rietsch, 1917 (in Peters Jahrbuch). G.

Jacotin [Jacques Godebrye] (?1445-1529). Belgian composer, from 1479 choir-master at Antwerp Cathedral. G.

Japart, Jean. Belgian contemporary of Després, probably in court-service at Ferrara. G.

Josquin. See Després.

Lapicida, Erasmus. Biography unknown, except that in 1519 he was in Vienna, dying there in the Schottenkloster (nearly 100 years old). G.

La Rue, Pierre de (d. 1518). Eminent Belgian composer, in 1477-1502 (or later) at the Burgundian court, then at Brussels under Charles V and Margaret of Austria. Follow-student with Després and almost as famous. G.

Obrecht, Jacob (?1430-1505). Eminent Dutch church-composer, from 1456 choir-master at Utrecht, in 1483-85 at Cambrai, in 1489-92 and 1498-1500 at St. Donat's in Bruges, in 1492-98 and 1501-04 at Antwerp, dying at Ferrara; see note under Okeghem. Complete edition of works by Johannes Wolf, 1908-20. G.

Okeghem, Jean de [Joannes] (?1430-95). Eminent Dutch composer, trained at Antwerp and by Dufay, from 1453 in service at the French court, becoming royal choir-master in 1465, with travels in Spain and Flanders. With Obrecht, the first strong exponent of elaborate contrapuntal imitation. See monographs by Burbure, 1856, Thoinan, 1864, Brenet, 1893, and De Marcy, 1895. G.

Orto, Marbriano de. Belgian singer in the Papal Chapel in 1484-94 and at the Burgundian court in 1505-16. G.

Paumann, Conrad (?1410-73). Noted Bavarian organist (blind), in 1446-67 at St. Sebald's in Nuremberg and then court-organist at Munich. G.

Power, Lionel. English contemporary of Dunstable. G.

Prioris, Johannes. Belgian church-musician, from about 1490 organist at St. Peter's in Rome and from 1507 royal choir-master at Paris. G.

Ramis de Pareja, Bartolomeo (?1440-95?). Spanish theorist, from about 1470 active at Salamanca, in 1480-82 at Bologna and later at Rome; the first to urge the modern values for major and minor thirds (c. 1480).

Regis, Johannes. Belgian church-musician, from 1463 choir-trainer at Antwerp Cathedral and later Dufay's secretary and canon at Soignies. G.

Scotto family. Venetian music-printers; see 16th C. G.

Spataro, Giovanni (?1458-1541). Italian theorist, from 1512 choir-master at S. Petronio in Bologna.

Stolzer, Thomas (1450-1526?). Bohemian church-musician, for a time royal choir-master in Hungary. G.

Tincoris, Johannes (?1446-1511). Able Belgian theorist, in 1475-87 royal choir-master at Naples, founding a music-school and issuing the first dictionary of terms (1474). See monograph by Pannain, 1913. G.

Tromboncino, Bartolomeo. Italian secular composer, in 1487-95 and 1501-13 at the Mantuan court. G.

Vacqueras, Beltrame. In 1483-1507 singer in the Papal Chapel.

Wolkenstein, Oswald von (1377-1445). A late poet-musician like the Minnesinger. See monograph by Villari, 1901. G.

SIXTEENTH CENTURY

(a) BELGIAN OR DUTCH

Adriansen, Emanuel. Lute-works, 1584, '92.

Arcadell, Jacob (1514-57?). In the Papal Chapel in 1540-49, going to Paris with the Duke of Guise about 1555; works from 1539, especially madrigals. G.

Baston, Josquin. Motets and chansons, 1542-49.

Baulduin, Noël (d. 1529). In 1513-18 choir-master at Antwerp; works from 1519. G.

Bellère, Jean (d. 1595). Antwerp printer, from 1572 partner of the younger Phalèse, followed by his son Balthasar.

Berchem, Jachet de. From 1555 court-organist at Ferrara; works 1544-61 (others signed 'Jachet' may be J. de Buus, J. de Mantua, etc.). See Monatshefte, 1889, and Haberl's Jahrbuch, 1891. G.

Berg, Johann von [Johannes Montanus] (d. 1563). From 1550 or before printer at Nuremberg with Neuber, succeeded by Gerlach. G.

Brumel, Anton. In 1505 called from Lyons to the Ferrara court; works from 1503. G.

Buus, Jachet de. From 1541 second organist at St. Mark's in Venice and in 1551-64 court-organist at Vienna; works from 1543 (see under Berchem); one of the earliest instrumental writers. G (Jachet).

Clément, Jacques [Clemens non Papa] (1500-57?). Perhaps choir-master at Antwerp; one of the most fertile and melodious composers of his time; works from 1539. G.

Codicus, Adrian Petit (?1500-63?). After a restless career in Italy and Germany, in the royal chapel at Copenhagen; Psalms and text-book, 1552.

Courtots, Jean. About 1540 choir-master at Cambrai; works from 1532. G.

Crecquillon, Thomas (d. 1557). About 1544 choir-master to Charles V at Brussels, later prebendary at Louvain, Namur, Termonde and Béthune; able works from 1543. G.

Dankers [Dankerts], Ghiselein. Dutch singer in the Papal Chapel in 1538-65; works from 1540. About 1550 he (with Escobedo) was umpire in the famous dispute between Vicentino and Lusitano. G.

Delâtre, Olivier and Claude Petit-Jan. Works 1539-55 and 1546-74 respectively. The latter was choir-master at Liège about 1555.

Faigment, Noël. About 1570 at Antwerp; works 1567-95. G

Fruytiers, Jan. About 1560 at Antwerp; metrical settings from Ecclesiasticus, 1565. G.

Gallus, Johannes [Jean le Cocq, Johannes de Ferrara, Mestre Jan]. In 1534-43 choirmaster at Ferrara; works from 1541. (Not the same as the next.) G.

Gero, Jhan. Choirmaster at Orvieto; noted for secular works from 1541. G.

Ghiselin, Jean. At Ferrara in 1491-1535; works from 1501. (Probably the same as Jean Verbonnet.) G.

Gogavinus, Anton Hermann. Dutch physician in Venice, in 1552 issuing the first Greek works on music (in Latin translation).

Gombert, Nicolas. In Charles V's chapel at Brussels from 1520 (choirmaster in 1530-34) and in 1537 going with 20 singers to Madrid, besides being prebendary at Tournai in 1532-52; many fine works from 1532. G.

Gossuin, Anton (?1540-94). From 1562 at Munich, becoming organist at the Peterskirche in 1577, and in the court-chapel in 1569-79, but from 1581 choirmaster at Liège; works from 1581. See monograph by Hirzel, 1909.

Guyot, Jean (1512-88). From 1546 precentor at Liège, from 1563 imperial choirmaster at Vienna, later returning to Liège; works from 1546. See monograph by C. Lyon, 1876.

Hellinck, Johannes Lupus. Biography uncertain; perhaps two named Lupus, the one dying at Bruges in 1541, the other till 1562 choirmaster at Cambrai; fine works from 1530. G.

Hollander, Christian Janszoon (d. 1570). In 1549-57 choirmaster at Oudenarde, then at Munich, from 1564 choirmaster at Heidelberg and from 1568 at Innsbruck. G.

Kerle, Jacobus de (1532-91). From 1555 choirmaster at Orvieto, then in courtly posts at Augsburg, Rome, Ypres, Cambrai, Cologne and Prague, most influential while choirmaster and organist at Augsburg in 1562-75; works 1558-75. See monograph by Ursprung, 1913. G.

La Hèle [Helle], George de (d. 1589). From 1578 choirmaster at Tournai and from 1580 at Madrid; works from 1576. G.

Lassus, Orlandus [Orlando di Lasso] (1530-94). Highly trained under noble patrons in Italy, in 1553-55 serving as choirmaster at the Lateran in Rome, then at Antwerp and after 1556 at the Munich court, in 1559 becoming choirmaster; over 2000 rich and original works in 1555-89, linking him with Palestrina as one of the chief composers of the age (complete edition by Haberl and Sandberger begun in 1894). See memoirs by Delmotte, 1836, Mathieu, 1838, Kist, 1841, Bäumer, 1878, Declève, 1894, Sandberger, 1894, Mantovani, 1895, Closson, 1919, and Van den Borren, 1920. His sons Ferdinand (d. 1609) and Rudolf (d. 1625), with his grandson Ferdinand (d. 1636), followed him at Munich. G.

Le Jeune, Claudin (1528-1602). One of the earliest to set Psalms for Huguenot use (from 1564), besides descriptive chansons. G.

Le Maître, Matheus (d. 1557). In 1554-67 court-choirmaster at Dresden; works from 1563. See monograph by Kade, 1862. G.

Luythom, Charles (d. 1620). From 1576 court-organist at Prague; notable use of chromatics and free modulation. See essays by Koczirz, 1908 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), and Smijers, 1917. G.

Macque, Jean de. From 1576 at Rome and from 1582 at Naples (in about 1592-1613 court-choirmaster), where another Macque (his father?) was court-organist from 1540; works from 1576 (mostly madrigals). G.

Michael, Rogier (?1550-1618). From 1575 at the Dresden court (choirmaster from 1587); works from 1593. G.

Monte, Filippo de (1521-1603). From 1568 court-choirmaster at Vienna and Prague; many fine works from 1557. See monographs by Doorslaer, 1895, 1921, and Bergmans, 1921. G.

Naich, Hubert. From about 1535 at Rome; madrigals from 1537. G.

Pevenage, Andreas (1543-91). Choirmaster at Courtrai and from 1577 at Antwerp; works from 1574. G.

Phalèse, Pierre (?1510-73). Founder of a noted printing business at Louvain about 1545, where his son Pierre (d. 1629) succeeded, moving to Antwerp in 1581 (with Bellère) and there followed by his daughters (till 1673-74). G.

Pipelare, Matthäus. Works from 1505.

Quercu, Simon de. In court-service at Milan and from 1515 with the Sforza princes at Vienna; works 1509-18.

Regnart, Jacob (1540-1600). Early in the Imperial chapel at Vienna and Prague, being second choirmaster in 1579-82 and from 1595, in the interval being choirmaster at Innsbruck; many works, largely secular, from 1574. See essays by A. Wassermann, 1919, and Grete Reichmann, 1921. G.

Reuer, Adam. In 1507-17 at the Weimar court; works from 1512.

Richafort, Jean. In 1543-47 choirmaster at St. Gilles in Bruges; works from 1519. G.

Rore, Cipriano de [name perhaps Van Roor] (1516-65). Born at Antwerp or Mechlin, pupil of Willaert at Venice, in 1550-58 court-director at Ferrara, in 1561-63 at Parma, then Willaert's successor at St. Mark's, but in 1564 at Parma again; very notable and influential works from 1542. G.

Sale, François. From 1589 at Hall (Tyrol) and from 1593 in the imperial chapel at Prague; works from 1589.

Sweelinck, Jan Pieterszoon (1562-1621). Famous Dutch organist, from about 1577 at the Oude Kerk in Amsterdam; important as player, composer and teacher; the first to write freely for the pedals and in fugue-form; complete edition of works by Seiffert, 1895-1903. See monographs by Tiedemann, 1869-76, and Seiffert, 1891, 1901. G.

Tollins, Jan (?1550-1603). Dutch musician at Assisi, Rome and Padua, from 1601 court-choirmaster at Copenhagen; works from 1590.

Turnhout, Ghard de (?1520-80). From 1545 at Antwerp Cathedral (choirmaster in 1536-72), then going to Madrid as court-choirmaster; works from 1568. His son Jean was at the Brussels court from 1586 (second choirmaster in 1611 and first in 1618); works from 1589.

Utendal, Alexander (d. 1581). In the archducal chapel at Innsbruck; works from 1570. See essay by Lechthaler, 1919. G.

Vael, Jacob (d. 1567). Long at the Vienna court (choirmaster from 1564); works from 1553. G.

Vento, Ivo de (?1540-75). In 1504-68 and from 1570 organist at Munich. See essay by K. Huber, 1917. G.

Verbonnet. See Ghiselin.

Verdelot, Philippe. Probably from about 1525 in Venice, Rome and Florence; works from 1526; perhaps the first to write true madrigals. G.

Verdonck, Cornelius (1563-1625). In 1584-99 in the royal chapel at Madrid; works from 1585. G.

Waelrant, Hubert (?1517-95). In 1547-58 head of a music-school at Antwerp (see under Solmization) and also engaged in music-publishing; works from 1553. G.

Werrecoren [Vercoren], Hermann Matthias. In 1538-55 choirmaster at Milan Cathedral; motets and chansons from 1544 (one descriptive of the Battle of Pavia). G.

Wert, Jacob van [Giaches or Jachet de] (1536-96). Long at the Mantua court (choirmaster from 1565); many able madrigals and motets from 1558. G.

Willaert, Adrian (?1480-1562). From 1516 at Rome, Ferrara and in Hungary and from 1527 choirmaster at St. Mark's in Venice, establishing a notable line of successors; many fine works from 1536 (some for double choir). See monographs by Gregoir, 1869, and Eitner, 1887 (in Monatshefte). G.

(b) FRENCH, SPANISH OR PORTUGUESE

Arbeau, Toinot [Jean Tabourot] (1519-95?). Author at Langres of a book on dances and dance-tunes (1588-96). G.

Atignaint, Pierre (d. 1552?). Important Parisian printer in 1527-49, using types by Haultin. G.

Bail, Jean Antoine de (Venice, 1532-89). Court-official at Paris, about 1570 forming a literary and musical club and (like Ronsard) seeking to revive the ancient quantitative verse (Vers mesurés), musically illustrated by Mauduit (1586) and Le Jeune (1603).

Ballard. Noted Parisian printing-firm, founded in 1552 by Robert Ballard (with Le Roy) and long holding a royal monopoly, dissolved in 1776. They used till 1750 types by Le Bé. G.

Barré, Antonio. From 1555 printer at Rome and in 1564-88 at Milan. His relative Leonardo sang in the Papal Chapel in 1537-55. Both were good madrigalists. G.

Belin, Guillaume. From 1546 in the royal chapel at Paris (choirmaster from 1565); works from 1539.

Belin, Julien (b. 1530?). Noted lutenist at Paris; book in 1556.

Bermudo, Juan (b. 1510?). Spanish Minorite at Écija, author of a large work on composition and instruments (1549-55). G.

Bihon, Jean de. Works in 1534-44. G.

Bourgeois, Loys. In 1541-57 at Geneva, then at Paris, editing or setting tunes for Marot and Beza's metrical Psalms in 1542-61, besides a book on singing (1550). See Douen's monograph on Marot and the Huguenot Psalter, 1878-79. G.

Briard, Etienne. An Avignon engraver and type-maker who about 1530 introduced rounded note-heads and other modern shapes in place of the old ligatures (cf. Grandjon). G.

Cabezon, Antonio de (1510-66). Able Spanish organist (blind), long musician to Philip II at Madrid; works edited in 1578 by his son Hernando (d. 1602), who succeeded him. G.

Cadeac, Pierre. In 1556 choirmaster at Auch; works from 1543. G.

Carpentras [Eleazar Genet] (?1475-1532?). In the Papal Chapel in 1508-18; works from 1514 (collection in 1532 the first example of Briard's new notes). G.

Castro, Jean de. In 1571 at Antwerp, in 1582-84 assistant-choirmaster at Vienna, then at Cleves and Cologne; works from 1569. G.

Caurroy, François Eustache du (1549-1609). In the royal chapel at Paris from 1569, becoming choirmaster and in 1598 designated 'surintendant'; works include a Requiem used for all kings till the 18th century. G.

Certon, Pierre (d. 1572). From 1532 in the royal chapel at Paris (choirmaster from 1542); fine works from 1540. G.

Clavijo del Castillo, Bernardo (d. 1626) [Spanish]. About 1588 court-organist at Naples, in 1594-1602 professor at Salamanca, then assistant-choirmaster at Madrid; motets in 1588.

Colin, Pierre Gilbert. In 1532-36 in the royal chapel at Paris, later choirmaster at Autun; works in 1541-67.

Cotes, Ambrosio de (d. 1603) [Spanish]. Court-composer at Granada, from 1596 at Valencia and from 1600 at Seville.

Divitis, Antonius [Antoine le Riche]. From 1505 in the royal chapel at Brussels, later in that at Paris; works from 1514. G.

Duchemin, Nicolas. Parisian printer in 1549-71, using types by Le Bé.

Dutertre, Etienne. Chansons, 1543-55.

Encina, Juan del (1469-1537). Spanish poet-musician, the founder of Spanish drama, one of the earliest to write Christmas and Passion plays and author of about 70 part-songs in the Cançionero Musical (c. 1500). See monograph by Mitjana, 1895.

Escobedo, Bartolomeo (d. 1563). Spanish singer in the Papal Chapel in 1536-54; works from about 1540 (See under Dankers.)

Févin, Antoine de. Fine works from 1514. Perhaps a Spaniard. Robert de Févin, choirmaster to the Duke of Savoy about 1500, may have been his brother. G.

Flecha, Matheo (1520-1604). Catalanian Franciscan, choirmaster for Charles V at Prague, returning to Spain in 1589; works from 1554.

Franc, Guillaume le (d. 1570). From 1541 at Geneva and from 1545 choirmaster at Lausanne, where he edited a Psalter (1565). G.

Fuencilla, Miguel de. Noted Spanish lutenist (blind) for the Marquis of Tarifa; able fantasias and arrangements, 1554.

Gallus, Johannes [Jean le Cocq]. Court-director at Ferrara in 1534-43; works from 1534. G.

Gaucquier [Dunoyer], Alard du. In 1564-76 in the imperial chapel at Vienna and about 1589 choirmaster to the Archduke Matthias; works from 1574.

Gervaise, Claude. Violinist in the royal chapel at Paris; chansons and dances from 1550.

Gôes, Damião de (1500-72). Portuguese diplomatic agent at many places; works from 1545.

Gortier, Simon. Printer at Lyons, issuing five collections in 1558-60.

Goudimel, Claude (?1505-72). Huguenot composer at Metz, Besançon and Lyons (killed in the St. Bartholomew massacre); works from 1549, including Psalm-settings. Long supposed to have lived in Italy and to have taught Palestrina (see Gaudio Mell). G.

Grandjon, Robert. Type-maker and printer at Lyons, perhaps Briard's predecessor in improved characters, but most active in 1559-82. G.

Guerrero, Francisco (1528-99) [Spanish]. From 1550 singer at Seville Cathedral, in 1554 choirmaster at Malaga and from 1555 at Seville; many superior works from 1555. See monograph by Mitjana, 1922. G.

Haultin, Pierre (d. 1580). Parisian type-maker, the inventor (1525) of music-type in which notes and staves were produced together, first used by Attaignant.

Hesdin, Pierre. From about 1522 in the royal chapel at Paris and in 1547-59 in the Papal Chapel; works, 1529-55.

Infantas, Fernando de las. Spanish priest; works from 1570. In 1577 he objected successfully to the edition of service-books as then projected under Gregory XIII.

Jambe de Fer, Philibert (d. 1572). Author of one of the first text-books in singing, flute- and violin-playing, etc. (1556) and of a Huguenot Psalter (1561). He fell in the St. Bartholomew massacre.

Jannequin, Clément. Life unknown (possibly the same as some other Clement). Founder of a new descriptive style in chanson-writing; about 200 secular works from 1529, besides settings from Proverbs and the Psalms (1558-59). G.

Layolle, François. In service to Cardinal Farnese at Florence and music-teacher to Benvenuto Cellini; works, 1532-60. Probably from Lyons. G.

Le Bé [Le Bec], Guillaume. Parisian type-maker, from 1540 using forms like those of Haultin, in 1555 also reverting for a time to the two-impression style. His characters were used by Ballard for full two centuries.

Le Heurteur, Guillaume. Canon at Tours; works, 1530-43. G.

Le Roy, Adrien (d. 1599?). Brother-in-law of Ballard and from 1552 his partner; also from 1551 composer and editor of chansons, lute-pieces and a lute-method (1557). G.

L'Héritier, Jean. About 1520 choirmaster in Rome; refined works, 1519-55. G.

Lobo, Alonso (b. 1555?) [Spanish]. From 1593 choirmaster at Toledo and in 1604-10 second choirmaster at Seville; works, 1598-1602.

Lobo [Lopez], Duarte (1540-1643) [Portuguese]. From about 1580 at the chapel of the Hospital S. José in Lisbon and from 1594 choirmaster at the Cathedral and also rector at the Seminario; works from 1602.

Lustiano, Vicente. Portuguese theorist, in 1551 winning a noted dispute with Vicentino at Rome (see under Dankers); text-book, 1553.

Maillard, Jean. Works from 1557. G.

Manchicourt, Pierre de. From 1539 choirmaster at Tournai and from about 1555 canon at Arras; works from 1539. G.

Mauduit, Jacques (1557-1627). Noted Parisian lutenist, associated with Ronsard and Baif, writing a Requiem for the former and chansons by the latter. In 1581 he took a prize at Evreux. G.

Milan, Luis. Able Spanish lutenist at the Valencia court; works 1535-61.

Modernus, Jacobus. Choirmaster at Lyons and in 1532-67 also important printer.

Morales, Cristobal [Cristoforo] (?1500-53). Eminent Spanish composer, in 1526-30 choirmaster at Avila, in 1535-40 in the Papal Chapel, in 1544-45 probably choirmaster at Toledo and from 1551 at Malaga; works from 1539. See monograph by Mitjana, 1920. G.

Mouton, Jean (?1475-1522). Pupil of Despres and teacher of Willaert, long in the royal chapel at Paris, finally canon at Théroutanne and St. Quentin; many fine works from 1508. G.

Narbaez, Luis de. Spanish lutenist; fantasias and arrangements, 1538.

Ortiz, Diego [Spanish]. About 1553 viceregal choirmaster at Naples to the Duke of Alva; works, 1547-65 and a treatise on instrumental music (1553). G.

Peñalosa, Francisco (?1470-1535?) [Spanish]. Long royal choirmaster at Madrid and from 1516 in the Papal Chapel.

Perez, Juan Ginez (1548-1612) [Spanish]. Choirmaster at Orihuela, in 1581-95 at Valencia and then again probably at Orihuela. G.

Phinot, Dominicus. Probably of Lyons; works from 1547. G.

Piéton, Loyset. Works, 1531-45.

Ronsard, Pierre de (1524-85). Poet-musician in Paris, like Balf eager for a fresh development of French song. From about 1552 his verses were extensively set by many composers. See monograph by Tiersot, 1993 (in J. M. G. Sammelbde.).

Salinas, Francisco (1513-90). Spanish theorist (blind), for a time viceregal organist at Naples, later professor at Salamanca; important treatise (1577) after Zarlino.

Sermisy, Claude de (?1490-1562). All his life in the royal chapel at Paris, from 1532 second and from 1547 first choirmaster (in 1515 visiting Italy and in 1520 England); many works from 1529, especially chansons. G.

Titelouze, Jean (1563-1633). From 1585 organist at Rouen (after 1588 at the Cathedral) and canon from 1610; the founder of French organ-playing; works from 1623 (complete edition by Guilmant). See monograph by Von Werra, 1910 (in Kirchenmusik. Jahrbuch).

Victoria [Vittoria], Tomas Luis de (?1540-1613?). Eminent Spanish composer, educated at Rome, becoming in 1573 choirmaster at the German College and in 1575 at S. Apollinare, but in 1589-1602 Rogier's assistant at Madrid; many noble works from 1576 (complete edition by Pedrell, 1902-13). See memoir by Collet, 1913. G.

Vila, Pedro Alberto (1517-82) and his nephew Luis Ferrán. Spanish church-musicians, the one choirmaster at Barcelona Cathedral, followed by the other.

Wollick, Nicolas. Teacher at Metz; text-books, 1501, '09.

(c) ITALIAN

Afrano. Canon at Ferrara about 1525; often called the inventor of the bassoon (from the notice of his 'pagotum' by Albanesi in 1539). G.

Agostini, Lodovico (1534-90). Ducal chaplain and choirmaster at Ferrara; works from 1567. G.

Alcarotti, Giovanni Francesco. Organist at Como; madrigals in 1567-69.

Alessandro Romano. See Merlo.

Amati, Andrea (?1530-1611). First of a line of famous viol- and violin-makers at Cremona, perhaps pupil of Da Salò, associated with his brother Niccolò and followed by his sons Antonio (1555-1638) and Geronimo (1556-1630). See 17th C. G.

Anerio, Felice (1560-1614) and Giovanni Francesco (?1567-1620?), brothers. The former in 1575-79 singer in the Papal Chapel and in 1594-1601 Paestrina's successor as composer there; works from 1585. The latter also early in the Papal Chapel and finally maestro at S. Maria di Monti; works from 1599, some important in the early history of the oratorio. G.

Annimuccia, Giovanni (?1500-71) and Paolo (d. 1563) brothers. The former Paestrina's successor as maestro at St. Peter's in 1555-71 and a collaborator with Neri in introducing the laudi spirituali in 1563-70; works from 1547. The latter maestro at the Lateran in 1550-62; works from c. 1560. G.

Annibale, Il Padovano (1527-75). From 1552 second organist at St. Mark's, Venice, and from 1566 at the grand-ducal court at Gratz (Styria); works from 1556. G.

Antegnati, Costanzo (1557-1620?). Most noted of a family of organ-makers in Brescia, long organist at Milan Cathedral; works from 1571. G.

Aron, Pietro (?1490-1545). Florentine monk and theorist, from 1536 at Bergamo, Padua and Venice; works from 1516. Memoir by Catelani, 1851. G.

Artusi, Giovanni Maria (?1545-1613). From 1562 canon at Bologna; a strongly conservative theorist (treatises from 1581). See Vogel in Verteljahrschr. iii, and Gaspari's Atti e Memorie, 1876. G.

Asola, Giovanni Matteo (?1560-1609). From 1578 maestro at Treviso and from 1581 at Vicenza; many works from 1584. One of the first to use the figured bass. G.

Baccusi, Ippolito (d. 1609). From 1572 maestro at S. Eufemia, Verona, from 1584 at Mantua and from 1592 at Verona Cathedral; works from 1570. A pioneer in using instruments in unison with the voices. G.

Baldi, Ludovico (d. 1604). From 1578 maestro at the Frari in Venice, in 1585-91 at S. Antonio, Padua, and then again at Venice; works from 1570. G.

Ballarazini. Piedmontese violist, from about 1560 in court-service at Paris, introducing Italian dances and collaborating on the Ballet de la Roynie (1582). G.

Bardi, Giovanni, Conte del Vernio (1534-1612). Cultivated art-patron at Florence, at whose house gathered the 'dilettanti' engaged in applying 'monodies' to dramatic purposes. The circle included Caccini, Corsi, Galilei, Peri, Rinuccini, Strozzi and others. G.

Bassani, Giovanni. In 1585-1615 variously employed at St. Mark's, Venice; notable instrumental works from 1585.

Bellanda, Ludovico. An early experimenter with the monodic style, probably at Venice; works (mostly secular) from 1593.

Bellasio, Paolo. Madrigalist at Rome in 1578-92 and member of the Verona Accademia.

Bell' Haver [Bell' Avere], Vincenzo (?1530-88?). Venetian madrigalist, in 1586-88 second organist at St. Mark's; works from before 1575. G.

Belli, Girolamo (b. 1552). Court-singer at Mantua and after 1582 at Rome; madrigals and other works, 1583-1617. G.

Belli, Giulio (b. 1560?). From 1582 maestro at various places, including the Frari, Venice, S. Antonio, Padua, etc.; many works (mostly secular) in 1584-1621. G.

Bertoldo, Sper' in Dio (?1530-90?). Organist at Padua Cathedral; madrigals and organ-pieces, 1561-91.

Bona, Valerio (b. 1560?). Maestro at Vercelli, Mondovì, Milan, etc.; works from 1591 and books on theory, 1595-96.

Bottrigari, Ercole (1531-1612). Wealthy and cultivated Bolognese writer on theoretical questions in 1593-1609.

Caccini, Giulio (?1546-1618). Roman singer and composer, from 1564 in Florence and a leader in the circle of Bardi and Corsi. In 1605 he visited Paris with his daughter. A pioneer in artistic solo-writing, not only in his Euridice, 1600, but in Nuove Musiche, 1601, etc. See Rivista Musicale, 1896, A. Ehrlich's memoir (1908) and various histories. G.

Caimo, Joseffo. In 1580-88 organist at Milan Cathedral; secular works from 1564.

Canali, Floriano. In 1581-1603 organist at Brescia; works from 1575. G.

Caroso, Fabritio. Author of a valuable treatise on dancing, with dance-tunes (1581). G.

Cavaccio, Giovanni (1556-1626). From 1581 maestro at S. Maria Maggiore, Bergamo; works from 1583. G. (both Caraccio and Cavaccio!).

Cavalieri, Emilio de' (?1550-1602). Roman noble, long in court-service at Florence and associated with Bardi and his circle. One of the first to use the figured bass and composer of the Rappresentazione di Anima e di Corpo, 1600 (Rome), 'the first oratorio'. See works by Gandolfi, 1893, Aleleona, 1905 (in Nuova Musica), Guidiccioni-Nicastro, 1911, etc. G.

Cavazzoni, Girolamo. Organist at Urbino (?), important as the first to publish organ-canzone (1543).

Cerone, Pietro (1566-1613?). Bergamese singer, from 1592 in Spanish court-service at Madrid and from 1608 at Naples; treatises, 1609-13. G.

Cerreto, Scipione (1551-1632?). Neapolitan theorist; books from 1601.

Colombani, Orazio. Church-musician at Vercelli, Milan, Venice, Padua (S. Antonio) and Urbino; works from 1579. G.

Contino, Giovanni (d. 1565?). Maestro at Brescia and the Mantuan court; works, 1560-61. Teacher of Marenzio and predecessor of Jachet de Wert.

Conversi, Girolamo. Madrigals and canzone from 1572. G.

Corsi, Jacopo (?1560-1604). Florentine noble, with Bardi interested in the new monodic style. Peri's Dafne and Euridice (1597, 1600) were given at his house. G.

Cortecchia, Francesco Bernardo di (d. 1571). From 1531 organist at S. Lorenzo, Florence, and from 1539 court-director; works from 1544. G.

Cortellini, Camillo. Bolognese violinist and church-musician; works, 1583-1626. G.

Crivelli, Arcangelo (1546-1617). Bergamese singer, from 1578 in the Papal Choir; works from 1582.

Croce, Giovanni dalla (?1557-1609). A lifelong member of the choir at St. Mark's, Venice; many and varied works from 1588. G.

Dentice, Scipione (1560-1633). Neapolitan madrigalist; works from 1591.

Diruta, Girolamo (b. 1560?). Noted organist, from 1597 at Chioggia and from 1609 at Gubbio; author of Il Transibano, 1593-1609, the earliest treatise on organ-playing. G.

Donati, Baldassare (d. 1603). All his life in the choir of St. Mark's, Venice, being in 1562-65 head of the 'cappella piccola' and after 1590 choirmaster; fine madrigals from 1548, motets from 1599, etc. G.

Doni, Antonio Francesco (1519-74). Florentine friar; author of a Dialogus Musices, 1534, and a useful catalogue of his library (1550-51).

Dorati, Nicola (?1513-93). From 1557 town-director at Lucca; madrigals from 1549.

Dragoni, Giovanni Andrea (?1540-98). From 1576 maestro at the Lateran, Rome; madrigals from 1571 and motets, 1600.

Dueto, Antonio. Maestro at Genoa; works, 1583-94. Efreum, Muzio (b. 1555?). From about 1590 in service of Prince Gesualdo of Venosa at Naples, then at Mantua, Florence and Naples again; works from 1574 and edition of Gesualdo's madrigals in 1626, besides collaborating with Monteverdi and others on Maddalena, 1617.

Ferrabosco, Domenico Maria (1513-74). Bolognese church-musician, from about 1535 at S. Petronio there; from 1546 at St. Peter's or the Papal Chapel in Rome. His son Alfonso (1543-88) early went to England, being attached to the court in 1562-78, as were his sons (see 17th C.). The father's madrigals date from 1542 and the son's from 1583. G.

Ferretti, Giovanni. Venetian composer, from 1575 maestro at Ancona; many canzone from 1573.

Festa, Costanzo (?1490-1545). From 1517 in the Papal Choir; one of the earlier writers of ingenious motets and madrigals in the best 16th-century manner; works from 1519. His Te Deum has been regularly sung at the election of a new Pope. G.

Fogliano, Giacomo (1473-1548) and Ludovico (d. 1539). Modenese musicians, probably brothers, the former long organist at S. Francesco, Modena (works from 1507), the latter from 1513 singer at St. Peter's, Rome, in 1529 issuing a treatise following Odington and Ramis in emphasizing tone-relations by thirds as well as fifths.

Francesco da Milano. Milanese lutenist, in court-service at Mantua from about 1510 and at Florence from about 1530; works from 1536.

Gabrieli, Andrea (?1510-86). Noted Venetian organist, pupil of Willaert, from 1536 in the choir of St. Mark's, from 1566 second organist and teacher of his nephew (see below), Hasler and Sweelinck; works from 1554. G.

Gabriel, Giovanni (1557-1612), nephew of the above. In 1575-79 apparently at Munich and from 1586 Merulo's successor as first organist at St. Mark's, Venice, where he developed polychoric writing on a grand scale, as well as the union of voices with instruments; works from 1587. G.

Gabussi, Giulio Cesare. From about 1580 maestro in Rome and in 1582-1611 at Milan Cathedral; works from 1580. G.

Galilei, Vincenzo (?1533-91), father of the noted astronomer. Prominent member of Bardi's circle at Florence and said to have been the first to make a dramatic monody (story of Ugolino); author of Il Fronimo, 1568-69 (on lute-music). G.

Ganassi, Silvestro. Author of works on playing the direct flute (1535) and the viol and bass-viol (1542-43).

Gardano, Antonio. An important Venetian music-printer from 1537, succeeded in 1571 by his sons Angelo and Alessandro, the firm using his name till 1650. G.

Gasparo da Sald (?1542-1609). Famous maker of viols and some violins at Brescia. The family name was Bertalotti. See works by Livi, 1891, Hill, 1896, and Benenzi, 1906. G (Sald).

Giastaldi, Giovanni Giacomo (?1556-1622). In 1582-1609 maestro at S. Barbara, Mantua; many works from 1581. G.

Gaudio Meli. Said to have started a school in Rome where Palestrina studied, later to have been court-director in Portugal and from 1580 to have lived in Rome again. Often confused with Goudimel.

Gesualdo, Carlo (?1560-1614), Prince of Venosa. Prominent Neapolitan noble, pupil of Nenna; many madrigals from 1594. See works by Arienzo, 1892, and Keiner, 1914. G (Venosa).

Ghibellini, Eliseo. Church-musician at Naples, Messina and Ancona; works from 1546.

Giovannelli, Ruggiero (?1560-1625). Able Roman church-musician, from 1585 maestro at S. Luigi and in 1594-99 at St. Peter's, then entering the Papal Chapel; works from 1585. G.

Graziani, Tommaso. From 1587 maestro at various churches, mostly in Milan; works from 1587.

Guami, Joseph (?1540-1611) and Francesco (?1544-1601), brothers. The elder was court-organist at Munich in 1568-79, second organist at St. Mark's, Venice, in 1588-91 and then at S. Martino, Lucca. The younger was also active at the same places. Works from 1565 and '69 respectively.

Guidetti, Giovanni (1530-92). Pupil of Palestrina and his helper in editing service-books in 1582-88. G.

Ingegneri, Marco Antonio (?1545-92). From 1576 maestro at Cremona; important works from 1573. Teacher of Monteverdi. G.

Jachet de Mantua. Noted musician in various posts at Mantua; works from 1532. Often confused with Berchem. G.

Leoni, Leone. Maestro at Vicenza Cathedral; works from 1588. G.

Luzzaschi, Luzzasco (d. 1607). Court-organist at Ferrara; works from 1576. See Kinkeldey in I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1908. G.

Malvezzi, Cristofano (1547-97). From 1571 court-director at Florence; works from 1577, including interesting Intermedi for the marriage of Grand-duke Ferdinand (1589). Teacher of Peri. G.

Marenzio, Luca (?1550-99). For a short time court-director in Poland, but mainly associated with noble patrons in Rome; fine madrigals from 1580. G.

Maschera, Florentio. Organist at Brescia, one of the pioneers in purely instrumental canzone; works from 1584.

Massaini, Tiburtio. Maestro from 1587 at Salò, Prague, Salzburg, Cremona, Piacenza and Lodi in turn; works from 1569.

Merlo, Alessandro [also called Romano]. Roman singer and violist; works from 1554. G (Alessandro).

Merulo [Merlotti], Claudio (1533-1604). From 1557 second and from '66 first organist at St. Mark's, Venice, after 1586 court-organist at Parma; important works from 1561, including early examples of independent organ-writing. G.

Monteverdi, Claudio (1567-1643). Famous Cremonese violist and composer, pupil of Ingegneri, but largely self-directed, especially in secular works from 1583. From 1590 he was in court-service at Mantua and from 1613 maestro at St. Mark's, Venice. From 1607 the foremost exponent of the new organic development, not only unfolding the possibilities of the monodic vocal style, but laying foundations for the later orchestral style. His epochmaking influence belongs wholly to the 17th century. G.

Mortaro, Antonio. A Franciscan, mostly associated with Brescia; works from 1590.

Nanino, Giovanni Maria (?1545-1607) and Giovanni Bernardino (?1550-1623?), brothers. Eminent Roman composers, the elder a pupil of Palestrina and in 1571 his successor at S. Maria Maggiore, in 1575-77 at S. Luigi and then in the Papal Chapel, becoming maestro in 1604, and the younger maestro at several churches. The former started a school to promulgate the Palestrina style (numerous strong pupils). Works from about 1570 and '88 respectively. G.

Nenna, Pomponio. Neapolitan madrigalist; works from 1582. G.

Neri, Filippo (1515-95). Florentine priest, from about 1533 in Rome, where from 1551 he conducted special services in the oratory of S. Girolamo and of S. Maria in Vallicella in which laudi spirituali came soon to be much used, the place giving the name to the new Brotherhood of the Oratory or Oratorians (1575) and later to the sacred drama or 'oratorio'. See memoirs by Capecelatro, 1884, Bazet, 1902, Bacci, 1903, and Gallucci, 1907, and works on the oratorio. G (Oratorio).

Nola, Giovanni Domenico da. Long maestro at S. Annunziata in Naples; works from 1541. G.

Orologio, Alessandro, probably two persons of the same name. One was in court-service at Prague, the other at Dresden, both becoming assistant-directors. Works under this name from 1586. G.

Palestrina, Giovanni Pierluigi da (1525-94). The most distinguished Italian composer in the a cappella style, from perhaps 1537 a choirboy in Rome, in 1544-51 organist at Palestrina, then trainer at the Cappella Giulia in St. Peter's, in 1555 in the Papal Chapel for a short time and then maestro at the Lateran and from 1561 at S. Maria Maggiore, returning in 1571 to St. Peter's. Extensive sacred and secular works from 1554 that still arouse high admiration. Memoirs by Baini, 1828, Winterfeld, 1832, Baumker, 1877, Haberl, 1892-94, P. Wagner, 1890-92, Gallotti and Nasoni, G. Félix, Cametti, all 1895, Brenet, 1905, Casimiri, 1918, Z. K. Pyne, 1922, etc. G.

Pallavicino, Benedetto. Cremonese singer, from 1582 in court-service at Mantua, becoming director in 1596; works from 1579 (some for 12 or 16 voices). G.

Peri, Jacopo (1561-1633). In high favor at the Florentine court and active in the Bardi circle; many works from 1597 (Dafne) in the new monodic style, including a setting of Euridice, 1600, that were the beginning of the opera. See Corazzini, 1895 (in Atti of the Florence Academy), Solerti's Origini e Albori, 1903-05, Sonneck, 1913 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), etc. G.

Petrucchi, Ottaviano dei (1466-1539). Famous music-printer at Venice in 1501-11 and at Fossombrone (his birthplace) in 1513-23, bringing the new process of typography to successful commercial application and issuing many invaluable collections, both sacred and secular. See monographs by A. Schmid, 1845, Vernarecci, 1882, and Weckerlin, 1885. G.

Piccini, Alessandro. Bolognese lutenist at the courts of Modena and Ferrara, said to have invented the large bass-lute or theorbo in 1594.

Pinello de Gerardis, Giovanni Battista (1544-87). Genoese composer, from 1571 maestro at Vicenza, then in court-service at Prague and in 1580-86 Scandelli's successor at Dresden; works from 1571. G.

Porta, Costanzo (1530-1601). Famous Cremonese composer in the best a cappella style, pupil of Willaert, from 1552 maestro at Osimo, from 1565 at S. Antonio, Padua, in 1567-75 at Ravenna, then at Loreto and from 1595 again at Padua; works from 1555. At Ravenna he taught several fine pupils. G.

Primavera, Giovanni Leonardo. From 1573 court-director at Milan; works from 1565.

Riccio, Antonio Teodoro (1540-1603?). From 1567 maestro at Brescia (his birthplace) and from 1574 in service to Duke Georg Friedrich at Ansbach or Königsberg; works from 1567. G.

Rinuccini, Ottavio (1562-1621). Florentine poet and librettist for the plays set of the Bardi circle. See works by Meda, 1894, Raccamadoro-Romelli, 1900, Civita, 1900, and reprint of texts in Solerti's Albori, 1905. G (under Opera).

Ripa, Alberto de (d. 1551). Famous Mantuan lutenist, from 1529 in court-service at Paris; works published in 1553-58.

Rodio, Rocco. Calabrian madrigalist (from 1570) and author of a treatise on counterpoint (1600?).

Roselli, Francesco. In 1548-50 maestro at St. Peter's, Rome, and cantor in the Cappella Giulia; works from 1562.

Rosetti, Stefano. From 1565 active at Florence and in 1579-80 court-organist at Munich; works from 1560.

Rossi, Salomone. Jewish composer, in 1587-1628 in court-service at Mantua; works from 1589. G.

Rota, Andrea (1553-97). From 1583 maestro at S. Petronio, Bologna; works from 1579. G.

Ruffo, Vincenzo. From 1554 maestro at Verona, from 1563 at Milan, from 1574 at Pistoia and after 1580 again at Milan; works from 1542. See monographs by Torri, 1896 (in Rivista Musicale) and Chiappelli, 1899. G.

Sabino, Ippolito. South Italian composer of works in 1570-90 (at Venice).

Salò, See Gasparo.

Scalotta, Orazio (d. 1630). Cremonese church-musician at Salò, Cremona, Bergamo and Padua (S. Antonio), with works from 1590 and a small theoretical handbook (1598, many editions).

Scandello, Antonio (1517-80). Brescian trumpeter, from 1553 in the court-band at Dresden and after 1568 director; works from 1566. See monographs by Fürstenau, 1864, and Kade, 1914 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.). G.

Scotto family. Noted music-printers at Venice from 1480, including especially Girolamo (at work in 1539-73). See histories by Riemann, 1896, and Molitor, 1904 (both on music-printing).

Spontone, Bartolommeo. Maestro at Verona Cathedral; works from 1558 (mostly madrigals). G.

Stabile, Annibale. Pupil of Palestrina, from 1575 maestro at the Lateran, from 1576 at S. Apollinare and from 1592 at S. Maria Maggiore; works from 1572.

Stivori, Francesco. Pupil of Merulo, from 1575 organist at Montagnana and after 1602 organist to the Archduke Ferdinand of Austria; works from 1579.

Striggio, Alessandro (1535-87). Able lutenist and organist at the Florentine court and from 1574 at that of Mantua; works from 1560, including early intermedii (from 1566). G.

Strozzi, Pietro. One of Bardi's circle at Florence, joining Striggio, Caccini and Merulo in music for a court marriage in 1579 and setting Rinuccini's Mascardata in 1595.

Suriano (Sorianio), Francesco (1549-1620). Important Roman composer, pupil of Zoilo, G. M. Nanini and Palestrina, in 1580-87 and '88-95 maestro at S. Luigi, in 1587-88, '95-99 and from 1600 at S. Maria Maggiore and in 1599-1600 at the Lateran; works from 1581. He was engaged with Palestrina in the Edizio Medicea. G (Sorianio).

Tiburino da Tivoli, Giuliano. Works from 1539 and a collection in 1549. Said to have been a noted player on the large viol.

Torelli, Gasparo. Composer at Lucca of secular pieces from 1593, including a pastorale in madrigal-form (1600).

Trasuntino, Vito. Venetian harpsichord-maker, apparently one of a family of such makers, at work through the century. G.

Trombetti, Ascanio. Musician at the Bolognese court; works from 1573. G.

Turini, Gregorio (1560-1600?). Brescian singer and hornist in court-service at Prague; works from 1589.

Vanneo, Stefano (b. 1493). Augustinian monk at Ascoli, author of an able theoretical treatise (1553).

Vecchi, Orazio (1550-1605). Erratic Modenese priest who wrote the comedy Amfiparnasso, 1594 (in madrigal-form), besides other works (from 1566). See studies by Catelani, 1858, and Renier, 1884. G.

Vecchi, Orfeo (1540-1604?). From before 1590 maestro at S. Maria della Scala, Milan; works from 1590 (mostly sacred). See study by Haberl, 1907 (in Kirchenmusik. Jahrbuch).

Venturi, Stefano. Venetian madrigalist in 1592-98. G.

Viadana, Ludovico [Grossi] da (1564-1645). Pupil of Porta, in 1594-1609 and also later maestro at Mantua; many works from 1590. Often called the inventor of the basso continuo, really the first to use the term and to apply the principle on a broad scale and for the organ. See works by Parazzi, 1877, Haberl, 1889-97, and M. Schneider, 1918. G.

Vicentino, Nicola (1511-72). Vicenzan musician, pupil of Willaert, long in court-service at Ferrara (many years with Cardinal d'Este at Rome); noted for his effort to restore the use of the Greek modes, for his contest with Lusitano (1551) and for the design of an enharmonic organ (about 1561); theoretic work in 1555. His able followers in the use of chromatic harmony were De Rore and Gesualdo. G.

Vinci, Pietro (b. 1540). Sicilian maestro at S. Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, in 1571-81; works from 1563.

Viola, Alfonso della (d. 1567?). Court-musician at Ferrara; works from 1539.

Zacconi, Ludovico (1555-1627). Augustinian monk at Venice, from 1585 singer at the court of Graz and in 1591-95 at that of Munich; author of a highly important treatise on counterpoint and on concerted composition (1592-1622). See studies by Chrysander, 1891 (in Viertelehrschr.), Vatielli, 1905-12, and Kretzschmar, 1910 (Peters Jahrbuch). G.

Zachariis, Cesare de. Cremonese musician, from about 1585 in court-service at Munich; works from 1590.

Zarlino, Gioseffo (1517-90). Eminent theorist at Venice (born at Chioggia), pupil of Willaert, from 1565 maestro at St. Mark's; author of important treatises from 1558, including a large unpublished work that is lost. Besides being an authority on counterpoint, he was the first to foreshadow equal temperament and harmonic dualism. See works by Ravagnan, 1819, Caffi, 1836, Bellemo, 1884, and Riemann, 1898-1921 (Gesch. d. Musiktheorie). G.

Zoilo, Annibale. In 1563-70 maestro at S. Luigi in Rome and then singer in the Papal Chapel; works from 1563.

(d) GERMAN, AUSTRIAN, ETC.

Agricola, Martin (1486-1556). Important Silesian composer and writer, from 1527 cantor at the Altstadt-Schule in Magdeburg; works from 1552 and treatises from 1528 (including an invaluable account of instruments). See Engelke's Gesch. d. Musik im Dom zu Magdeburg, 1914. G.

Aichinger, Gregor (1564-1628). Bavarian priest and organist, from 1584 in service of Baron Fugger at Augsburg; works from 1590. Memoir and many works in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, x. 1. G.

Ammerbach, Elias Nikolaus (?1530-97). Saxon organist, from 1560 at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig; works from 1571. See Wustmann, 1910 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.).

Ammon, Blasius (d. 1590). Tyrolean singer, in service of Archduke Ferdinand and from 1590 at Vienna; works from 1582. Monograph by F. C. Huigens, 1914. G.

Apiarius, Mathias (d. 1553). South German or Swiss printer, in 1534-37 with Schöffer at Strasburg and then at Bern, where his son followed him (till 1581). Monograph by Thürings, 1892.

Appenzeller, Benedictus. Swiss-Belgian pupil of Despré's composer of a lament over his teacher's death (1542), and other works from 1535. See, however, Barclay Squire in I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1913.

Arnold von Bruck (?1480-1545). Probably an Austrian, from 1534 court-director at Vienna; scattered works from 1538. G (Bruck).

Bacfar, Valentin (1507-78) [name properly Greff]. Bohemian lutenist, from about 1530 in service of the king of Hungary, of Cardinal de Tournon at Paris and Rome, from 1549 of the Polish court (at Vilna) and in 1566-68 at Vienna; works from 1552. See monographs by Opienski, 1906-14.

Berg, Adam. Printer and bookseller at Munich in 1567-99, issuing a monumental collection in 1573-98. G.

Blahoslav, Johannes (d. 1571). Bishop of the Bohemian Brethren, author of the first Bohemian musical text-book (1558) and a song-book (1561).

Brant, Jobst vom. Bavarian official in Thuringia; works from 1556.

Burgke, Joachim a (?1541-1610) [name properly Möller]. Saxon church-composer at Magdeburg; works from 1568. See Jordan's Gesch. d. Musik d. Stadt Mühlhausen, 1905.

Calvisius, Sethus (1556-1615). Thuringian mathematician, from 1582 cantor at Schulpforta and from 1594 at the Thomasschule, Leipzig; works from 1594 and text-books from 1592. Memoirs by Rost, 1805, Benndorf, 1894 (in Vierteljahrschr.), and in Wustmann's Musikgesch. Leipzig, 1909. G.

Cleve, Johannes de (1529-82). Rhenish singer, in 1564-76 in service of Archduke Karl at Gratz and then at Augsburg; good church-music from 1559.

Cochleus, Johannes (1479-1552) [name properly Dobnek]. Bavarian priest at Nuremberg, Worms, Mayence, Frankfurt and Breslau; author of a small text-book (1507, at first anonymously, several later editions). Teacher of Glarean. Monograph by Spohn, 1898.

Daser, Ludwig (?1525-89). In 1552-59 court-director at Munich (preceding Lassus) and from 1572 at the Stuttgart court; masses and motets, 1578. See Sandberger's Gesch. d. bayr. Hofkapelle, 1894.

Dedekind, Emericus (d. 1619) and Henning (d. 1628), brothers. Thuringians, the former cantor at the Johanniskirche, Lüneburg, in 1585-92, the latter cantor at Langensalza in 1588-1614; works of both from 1585. G.

Deiss, Michael. Probably in court-service at Vienna; works from 1568. G.

Demantius, Christoph (1567-1643). In 1597-1604 cantor at Zittau and then at Freiberg (Saxony); works from 1592. One of the early composers of Passions. Memoirs by Kade, 1890 (in Vierteljahrschr.), and Moissl, 1906. G.

Dietrich, Sixtus (?1490-1548). Bavarian schoolmaster at Constance from 1518; works from 1535. G.

Dreszler, Gallus (b. 1533). In 1563-77 cantor at Magdeburg and then at Zerbst; church-music and text-books from 1561.

Ducis, Benedictus (?1480-1544) [name properly Herzog]. South German organist, in 1514-16 at Antwerp, then (till 1518) court-organist in London and finally in Vienna and Ulm; works probably from 1515 (including elegies on Despré in 1531 and on Erasmus in 1536). G.

Dulfigprucar. See Tieffenbrucker.

Dulichius, Philippus (1562-1631). Saxon cantor at Stettin from 1587; fine works from 1588. G.

Eccard, Johannes (1552-1611). Thuringian pupil of Lassus, in 1578-80 employed by the Fuggers at Augsburg and then court-director at Königsberg; important works from 1574. See Winterfeld's Gesch. heiliger Tonkunst, 1850-52, and Meyer-Reinach's Gesch. d. Königsberger Hofkapelle, 1904 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.). G.

Egenolf, Christian (1502-55). Early music-printer at Frankfurt, active from 1532.

Elers, Franz (?1500-90). From 1530 cantor at the Johanneum in Hamburg and later also cathedral-choir-master; Gesangbuch, 1588 (the first music-book published in Hamburg).

Faber, Heinrich (d. 1552). In 1538-49 rector of a school in Naumburg; author of two text-books, 1548-50.

Fabricius, Albinus. Motets from 1589, including a book issued at Gratz (Styria). G.

Felstin, Sebastian von. Galician church-musician; author of text-books in Gregorian music from 1519.

Rigulus, Wolfgang (d. 1588). In 1549-51 cantor at the Thomasschule, Leipzig, and then at the Fürstenschule, Meissen; works from 1553, besides collections and a Choralbuch, 1594.

Rinck, Hermann (1527-58). Teacher and organist at Wittenberg; works from 1555 and a noted text-book (1556). G.

Rorster, Georg (?1514-68). Physician at Amberg, Würzburg, Heidelberg and Nuremberg; editor of a large and valuable collection (1539-56). G.

Rorster, Georg (d. 1587). From 1556 cantor at Zwickau, from 1564 at Annaberg and from 1568 in the church-choir at Dresden, becoming assistant-director in 1581 and finally Pinelli's successor as chief.

Fugger family. A line of wealthy merchants at Augsburg, from 1504 having the title of nobility, who were famous patrons of art and music, maintaining a princely establishment far into the 17th century (one member of the family also in Munich). See under Augsburg in Part III.

Gallileus, Johannes. Saxon musician in Leipzig; text-book in 1520 and works from 1537. G.

Gerlach, Dietrich (d. 1575). Nuremberg music-printer from 1566, at first with Neuberger; his widow continued the business till 1592.

Gerle, Hans (d. 1570). Maker of viols and lutes at Nuremberg, probably son of Konrad G. (working from 1499); author of a noted book in tablature (1532, 3d ed. 1546), a song-book (1533) and a further lute-book (1552). See article by Tappert in Mittheil. f. Musikgesch., 1886. G.

Gesius, Bartolomäus (d. 1613). From 1592 cantor at Frankfurt-on-Oder; many works from 1588. Monograph by Blumenthal, 1913 (in Märkische Blätter). G.

Glareanus, Henricus [Heinrich Loris] (1488-1563). Famous Swiss teacher, in 1515-17 at Basel, then at Paris, from 1522 again at Basel and from 1529 at Freiburg (Baden); author of a small text-book in 1516 and of the noted Dodechordon, 1547, treating of both Gregorian and mensural music, with important examples). Memoirs by Schreiber, 1837, Fritzsche, 1890, and Ph. Spitta, 1891 (in Vierteljahrschr.). G.

Graphäus, Hieronymus (d. 1556). Nuremberg music-printer from 1533.

Grefinger, Johann Wolfgang. Hungarian priest at Vienna; author of a Psalter, 1512, and works from 1515.

Griener, Matthias (d. 1550). Choirmaster at Strasburg Cathedral; works from 1535 and a text-book (1546). G.

Gumpelzhaimer, Adam (1559-1625). Bavarian composer and theorist, from 1581 cantor at the Annakirche, Augsburg; works from 1591 and a Compendium, 1591 (many editions), based on Faber. G.

Harnisch, Otto Siegfried (d. 1630). From 1588 cantor at Brunswick Cathedral, in 1603-21 at the Pädagogium in Göttingen and then at Celle; works from 1588 and a text-book (1608).

Hasler [Hassler], Hans Leo von (1564-1612). Eminent Bavarian organist, pupil of Gabrieli, from 1585 under the patronage of the Fuggers at Augsburg, from 1601 at the Frauenkirche in Nuremberg and from 1608 court-organist at Dresden; strong and varied works from 1590. See Rud. Schwartz in Vierteljahrschr. ix. His brother Jakob (1566-1611?) was organist at Augsburg and from 1602 court-organist at Prague. G.

Hausmann, Valentin. The name of five musicians in succession, the oldest born in 1484 at Nuremberg and the last active in J. S. Bach's time, the best known being long organist at Gerbstädt (n. Merseburg), with works from 1588. G.

Heckel, Wolf. Bavarian lutenist in Strasburg who prepared a lute-book for duets (1556).

Heyden, Sebald (1498-1561). From 1519 cantor at the Spitalschule in Nuremberg and after 1537 rector at the school of the Sebalduskirche; text-books from 1532.

Judenkunig, Hans (d. 1526). Swabian lutenist at Vienna, author of two very early lute-books (1515-23).

Kleber, Leonhard (?1490-1556). South German organist from 1516 at Horb, Esslingen and Pforzheim; book in tablature in 1524. Monograph by Löwenfeld, 1897. G.

Knöfel, Johann. In 1575 town-musician at Breslau, from 1576 at Heidelberg, from 1583 in court-service at Breslau and from 1592 organist at Prague; works from 1571.

Köler, David (d. 1565). Composer at Zwickau from 1554. G.

Kotter, Hans (?1485-1542?). Alsatian organist at Freiburg (Switz.) in 1504-22 and from 1534 teacher at Bern; organ-works from 1513. Monograph by Merian, 1916.

Kugelmann, Hans (d. 1542). Bavarian trumpeter, from 1519 at the Innsbruck court and later at Königsberg, sacred songs in 1542. See article by Frdr. Spitta, 1909 (in the Riemann Festschrift). G.

Lange, Hieronymus Gregor (d. 1587). In 1574-84 cantor at Frankfurt-on-Oder; works from 1580. G.

Lechner, Leonhard (?1550-1606). From about 1570 teacher at Nuremberg and after 1584 court-director at Hochingen; works from 1575. See essay by Koller, 1904 (in Musikbuch aus Oesterreich) and Sandberger, 1904 (in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern). G.

Lemlin, Laurentius. From about 1530 court-director at Heidelberg and teacher of several noted pupils; works from 1539. G.

Leopolda, Martin (1540-89). From 1560 court-director to the king of Poland, writing several masses.

Lindner, Friedrich (?1540-97). From 1563 in court-service at Munich and later cantor at Nuremberg; works from 1585. G.

Lohet, Simon (d. 1611). Town-organist at Nuremberg and in 1571-1601 in court-service at Stuttgart; organ-works published posthumously. G.

Lossius, Lucas (1508-82). From 1540 rector of the Johanneum in Lüneburg; text-books and song-book from 1553. Monograph by Görges, 1884. G.

Luscinius [Nachtigall], Ottomar (1487-1537). Alsatian organist and theologian, pupil of Hofheimer, in 1517-23 organist at Strasburg; theoretical treatises in 1515-36. G.

Luther, Martin (1483-1546). Famous leader in the German Reformation, gifted in music and eager to turn it to service in popular religion. Besides many references in his writings and his liturgical plans of 1524-26 (the foundation of the Lutheran service), with his tractate of 1538 and his poem Frau Musica, composer of various chorale-melodies (number disputed) and about 35 hymns or translations. His most famous production is Ein' feste Burg, 1529. Among many monographs are those by Rambach, 1813, Winterfeld, 1840, Kade, 1883, Bacon and Allen, 1883, Fr. Spitta, 1905, Rautenstrauch, 1907, Kretzschmar, 1917 (in Peters Jahrbuch), K. Anton, 1918, etc. G.

Mahu, Stephan. Probably in court-service at Vienna under Ferdinand I; works only in later collections.

Mancinus [Mencken], Thomas (1550-1620?). From 1572 cantor at Schwerin, from 1576 at Güstrow, later at Königsberg and finally Wolfenbüttel; works from 1585, including a Passion. G.

Melnd, Jacob (1542-77). Till 1574 court-director at Ansbach; works from 1564. Essay by Oppel, 1911. G.

Neusiedler, Melchior (1507-90 and Hans (?1508-63), brothers. Bavarian lutenists, the elder long at Nuremberg, in 1552-61 at Augsburg and then in Italy, the younger from 1530 at Presburg; works from 1540 (at first in tablature). G.

Nucius, Johannes (?1556-1620?). Silesian Cistercian monk at Rauden and Himmelwitz; works from 1591 and text-book, 1613. Monograph by Widmann, 1921. G.

Ochsenkuhn, Sebastian (1521-74). Lutenist, from 1558 in court-service at Heidelberg; lute-book, 1558. G.

Oeglin, Erhart. The earliest music-printer at Augsburg, active from 1507. G.

Ornithoparcus, Andreas. Theorist of wandering life, author of a noted Micrologus, 1517 (many editions). G.

Osiander, Lucas (1534-1604). Protestant clergyman in Württemberg, author of the earliest Choralbuch with the melody in the treble (1586). He was also an organ-maker. G.

Othmayr, Kaspar (1515-53). Bavarian ecclesiastic at Heilbronn and Ansbach; works from 1538. G.

Ott, Hans and Jean. Nurembergers, the former a noted printer in 1533-50 and the latter a lute-maker. G.

Otto, Georg (1514-1619). From 1588 court-director at Kassel; works from 1588. G.

Paminger, Leonhard (1495-1567). Austrian Protestant, long rector of the St. Nikolaus School at Passau; many motets issued posthumously (1573-80). G.

Petrius, Johannes (d. 1550). From 1526 music-printer in Nuremberg. G.

Praetorius, Christoph (d. 1609). Silesian cantor at the Johanneum in Lüneburg in 1562-82; works from 1560.

Praetorius, Hieronymus (1560-1629). North German, in 1580-82 cantor at Erfurt and then organist at the Jacobikirche in Hamburg (succeeding his father); important works from 1599. G.

Puschmann, Adam (1532-1600). Noted Silesian Meistersinger, in 1570-72 cantor at Görlitz; songs from 1556 and works on the Meistersinger, 1574.

Raselius, Andreas (?1563-1602). Bavarian teacher in 1583-84 at Heidelberg, then cantor at Ratisbon and from 1600 court-director at Heidelberg; text-book in 1589 and works from 1594. Monograph by J. Auer, 1892. G.

Reimann, Matthieu (1544-97). North German lawyer, imperial councillor under Rudolf II, author of lute-books issued in 1598-1603.

Reiner, Jacob (1560-1606). Pupil of Lassus, teacher at the Weingarten monastery; works from 1579. G.

Rhaw, Georg (1488-1548). Bavarian theorist and printer, in 1519-24 cantor of the Thomasschule in Leipzig and then at Wittenberg, after 1525 as printer; text-book in 1518-20 and collections from 1538. G.

Rost, Nikolaus. About 1580 in court-service at Heidelberg; works from 1583.

Sachs, Hans (1494-1576). Famous poet at Nuremberg (by trade a cobbler), becoming the leading spirit among the later Meistersinger. Monographs by Schweitzer, 1889, Drescher, 1891, Gené, 1894, Holzschuher, 1906, Mummenhoff, 1908, and Nutzhorn, 1911, with melodies in Münzer's edition of Puschmann's Singsbuch, 1906.

Schlick, Arnolt. Blind Bohemian organist and lutenist in court-service at Heidelberg; book on organs and organ-playing in 1511 and a collection in 1512. G.

Schmeltz, Wolfgang (d. 1561?). Bavarian teacher and singer in Vienna from about 1540 and later pastor at Steinfeld; song-book in 1544. See Bienenfeld in I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1904. G.

Schmid, Bernard (1520-92) and Bernard [his son] (b. 1548). Organists at Strasburg, the father in 1560-64 at the Thomaskirche and then at the Cathedral, followed in both by the son; authors of collections in 1577 and 1607.

Schneegass, Cyriacus (1546-97). Saxon pastor, from 1573 at Friedrichroda; text-books in 1590-92.

Schöffers, Peter. Very early music-printer at Mayence (from c. 1510), Worms, Strasburg and Venice (from 1540). See Riemann's Notenschrift, 1896, etc.

Schramm, Melchior. Silesian organist, from 1574 at the Sigmaringen court and from 1595 at Offenburg (Baden); works from 1576.

Schröter, Leonhardt (?1540-95). From about 1570 cantor at the Altstädter Schule in Magdeburg; works from 1562 (especially Hymni Sacri, 1587). G.

Selnecker, Nikolaus (1528-92). Bavarian theologian, from 1557 at Dresden, Jena, Leipzig (1568-70, '74-88), Wolfenbüttel and Hildesheim in turn; author of many hymns and melodies (1587). G.

Senf, Ludwig (?1492-1557). Eminent Swiss composer, pupil as choirboy of Isaac at Innsbruck and in 1515-19 his successor as court-director, then at Augsburg and from 1526 at Munich (after 1530 as court-director); various notable works from 1525. Luther greatly admired his style, though adapted to Catholic worship. G.

Silva, Andreas de. Probably a Bavarian, in 1519-20 in the Papal Chapel and then at the Mantuan court; works in 1514-40. G.

Stephan, Clemens. From 1567 at Eger and after 1570 at Nuremberg; works from 1560 (including a Passion).

Susato, Tylman. Noted music-printer at Antwerp from 1543, having previously been one of the town-band (from 1529?), and also a considerable composer. His origin is disputed, probably born at Cologne. G.

Tiefenbrucker [Duifopgrucar], Kaspar (1514-71). Bavarian violin-maker, from at least 1553 working in Lyons; no absolutely certain examples are extant, but a few viols are ascribed to him. He seems to have belonged to a family otherwise associated with Italy. G.

Tonsor, Michael. Bavarian cantor or organist at Ingolstadt and Ottingen; church-works in 1570-1605.

Virdung, Sebastian. Bavarian priest, from about 1500 at the Heidelberg court; author of the oldest work on instruments as used in the early 16th century (1511). G.

Vulpinus, Melchior (?1560-1615). From 1596 cantor at Weimar; works from 1602. G.

Waissel, Matthias. Prussian lutenist at Frankfurt-on-Oder; lute-book in 1573.

Walther, Johann (1496-1570). Famous friend and coadjutor of Luther, from 1525 electoral choir-master at Torgau (in 1548-54 at Dresden); works from 1524 (the first Protestant hymn-book). See Kade's monograph, 1878, and articles by Holstein, 1884, and Haas, 1922, with many books on Luther and the music of the Reformation. G.

Wannenmacher [Vannius], Johann (d. 1551). Rhenish cantor at Bern and in 1515-30 at Freiburg (Baden), later in Switzerland again; works from 1536.

Weber, Georg. Cantor at Weissenfels before and after the Thirty Years' War; works from 1568. See Werner's history of the Weissenfels music.

Wenzel von Samter (?1525-72). Polish church-musician; works from 1554.

Zunge, Nikolaus. From 1597 court-director at Brunswick, from 1602 at Danzig and from 1612 at Berlin; works from 1597.

(e) ENGLISH

Allison, Richard. London teacher, contributing to Day's Psalter in 1592 and issuing one of his own in 1599 (having the melody in the treble); part-songs and lute-pieces later. G.

Aston, Hugh (d. 1522). Early composer of masses, motets and some virginal-pieces. G.

Barley, William. Early London music-printer in 1592-1614. G.

Bathe, William (1564-1614). Irish priest and diplomat, from 1591 on the Continent, mostly in Spain; two theoretical handbooks, 1584, 1600, the former the first English work of its kind. G.

Bevin, Elway. Welsh organist at Bristol Cathedral in 1589-1637; scattered compositions and a text-book (1631). G.

Brade, William (1560-1630). From 1594 in court-service at Copenhagen and Berlin at alternate intervals, in 1609-14 director at Hamburg, then at Gottorp, in 1618-19 at Halle and finally at Berlin again; works issued from 1609. G.

Bull, John (1563-1628). Eminent organist, in 1582-85 at Hereford Cathedral, in 1591-1613 at the Chapel Royal, from 1613 at the court in Brussels and from 1617 at Antwerp Cathedral; a fine player and an ingenious composer; works include several anthems and about 150 pieces for organ or virginal. G.

Byrd, William (1538-1623). Distinguished organist and composer, from 1563 at Lincoln Cathedral and from 1572 at the Chapel Royal (both in spite of his being a Catholic); from 1575 the holder (with Tallis) of exclusive rights in printing and selling music; many strong works from 1575, including church-music, madrigals and keyboard-pieces. G.

Day [Daye], John (1522-84). Noted London printer from about 1547: issued settings for the Prayer Book services in 1560 and a Psalter in 1562, both in 3- or 4-part harmony. G.

Downland, John (1562-1626). A lutenist who as a youth was in service to Cobham and thus in Paris in 1579-83 and after 1594 again much on the Continent (at Brunswick, Kassel, Venice, Florence, Nuremberg, etc.), in 1598-1606 being court-lutenist at Copenhagen; tunes in 1592 and secular pieces from 1597. G.

Este [East], Thomas (d. 1609?). Important London printer from 1587, including a Psalter, 1592, and many sets of madrigals and canzonets. G.

Farmer, John. In 1595-98 cathedral-organist at Dublin and later active in London; hymn-tunes in Este's Psalter, 1592, and madrigals in 1599. G.

Farnaby, Giles. In 1592 contributor to Este's Psalter and some secular pieces from 1598. G.

Farrant, Richard (?1530-80). From about 1547 in the Chapel Royal and from 1564 organist at St. George's, Windsor; several fine anthems. G.

Fayrfaz, Robert (?1470-1521). From 1498 organist at St. Alban's Abbey; Mus.D. of Cambridge in 1502 and of Oxford in 1511 (the first there); in the Chapel Royal under Henry VIII; various scattered works, sacred and secular. G.

Giles, Nathaniel (?1550-1633). From 1581 organist at Worcester Cathedral and from 1585 at St. George's, Windsor, besides being from 1597 choir-master at the Chapel Royal; Mus.D. of Oxford in 1622; a service and various anthems. G.

Holmes, John (d. 1638). Organist of Winchester Cathedral till 1602 and then at Salisbury till 1610; some works from 1601. G.

Hunnis, William (d. 1597). Giles' predecessor as choir-master in the Chapel Royal; various curious settings of religious texts. G.

Johnson, Edward. Scattered pieces from 1591 and 3 tunes in Este's Psalter, 1592. G.

Johnson, Robert. Scottish church-musician; works to both Latin and English texts, including some with secular words. G.

Kirbye, Georg (d. 1634). Eminent madrigalist from 1597, besides many tunes for Este's Psalter, 1592. G.

Marbeck [Merbecke], John (1523-85?). From about 1541 organist at St. George's, Windsor; best known as the adapter of the new English service to Gregorian melodies (1550); author of various religious books. G.

Morley, Thomas (1557-1603). Pupil of Byrd, in 1591-92 organist at St. Paul's, London, and then (till 1602) singer in the Chapel Royal; from 1598 holder of a license to print song-books and music-paper, having been engaged in editing various collections of canzonets, etc., from 1593; many notable madrigals, ballets etc., besides services and anthems, and a text-book, 1597. G (with list of books).

Mundy, John (d. 1630). From about 1585 organist at St. George's, Windsor (with Giles), Mus.D. of Oxford in 1624, secular and sacred works from 1594 (including some descriptive keyboard-pieces). G.

Shepherd, John. In 1542-54 organist at Magdalen College, Oxford, and later member of the Chapel Royal; many fine masses and motets. G.

Tallis, Thomas (d. 1585). From about 1545 organist of the Chapel Royal (previously at Waltham Abbey); as composer of sundry parts of the new English services (including the Litany) and of many noble motets, anthems and canticles, he is often called 'the father of English cathedral music'. See under Byrd. G (with list of works).

Taverner, John. In 1526-30 organist at Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford; numerous sacred works to Latin words, relating him to the best composers of his time. G (with list of works).

Tye, Christopher (d. 1572). In 1541-61 organist of Ely Cathedral and in orders from 1560; many able masses, motets, anthems, etc. G (with list of works).

Watson, Thomas. Editor of a madrigal-book in 1590. G.

Weekes, Thomas. Organist at Winchester College till 1602 and then at Chichester Cathedral; many anthems, services and some instrumental pieces, besides madrigals, ballets, etc., from 1597. G (with list of sacred works).

White, Robert (?1540-74). In 1562-66 organist at Ely Cathedral, then at Chester and finally at Westminster Abbey, London; extremely able motets, anthems, canticles, etc. G (with list of works).

Wilbye, John. Commonly counted the best of the English madrigalists; works from 1598. G.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY

(a) ITALIAN

Abbatini, Antonio Maria (?1595-1677). Maestro of churches in or near Rome, including the Lateran and S. Maria Maggiore; sacred works from 1627 (some polyphonic) and 2 operas, one (1654) being an early comedy. G.

Agazzari, Agostino (1578-1640). Siennese, from 1606 maestro at Rome and after 1630 at Siena; works from 1602, including the pastoral Eumelio, 1606. Early advocate of figured bass (1608) and author of a treatise on church-music (1638). G.

Agostini, Paolo (?1583-1629). Pupil and son-in-law of G. B. Nanini, maestro in Roman churches, finally at St. Peter's; works from 1618. G.

Agostini, Pietro Simone (b. 1650). Court-director at Parma; several operas from 1658?, 2 oratorios, cantatas, etc. G.

Ala, Giovanni Battista. Organist at the Servitori, Milan; works in 1617-34. G.

Albrici, Vincenzo (1631-96). From 1650 in service of Queen Christina of Sweden at Stralsund, then mostly at Dresden in 1654-80 (with terms at Neuburg and London), in 1681-82 organist at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig, and then at Prague; many vocal and instrumental works.

Aldrovandini, Giuseppe Antonio Vincenzo (?1675-1707). Pupil of Perti, prominent at Bologna; 15 operas (from 1696), 6 oratorios, instrumental pieces, etc. G.

Allacci, Leone (1586-1669). Of Greek origin, but educated in Rome, becoming teacher of Greek and from 1661 custodian of the Vatican library; author of a Drammaturgia, 1666, the first list of early operas. G.

Allegri, Domenico. Maestro at S. Maria Maggiore, Rome, in 1610-29; an early writer or works with instruments (from 1617).

Allegri, Gregorio (1582-1652). Pupil of the Naninis, from 1629 singer in the Papal Chapel; works from 1618, including the famous 9-part Miserere sung during Holy Week at Rome. See Cametti, 1915 (in Rivista Musicale). G.

Almici, Niccolò (1596-1684). The most gifted of the Cremonese family of violin-makers and teacher of Andrea Guarneri and Stradivari. His son Geronimo (1649-1740) was not at all his equal. G.

Amati, Vincenzo (1629-70). Sicilian maestro at Palermo Cathedral; church-music in 1656 and an opera (1664).

Antonini, Pietro degli (?1645-1720). Prominent maestro at Bologna churches and head of two Accademie; works from 1670, including 3 operas, 3 oratorios, instrumental pieces, etc.

Arrest, Giulio Cesare (1630-95). From 1685 maestro at S. Petronio, Bologna, and often head of the Filarmonici; works from 1663 and a collection of organ-pieces, besides a theoretical discussion with Cazzati (1659).

Arrigoni, Giovanni Giacomo. Court-organist at Vienna; concerti di camera, 1635, apparently the earliest of their class.

Badia, Carlo Agostino (1672-1728). Venetian court-composer at Vienna from 1696; 27 operas, 21 oratorios, many solo-cantatas, etc.

Bai, Tommaso (?1650-1714). Bolognese singer at St. Peter's, Rome, and finally maestro; scattered church-works, including a noted Miserere, used in rotation with that of Allegri. G.

Banchieri, Adriano (?1565-1634). Bolognese organist, pupil of Guami, at Bosco, Imola and Monte Oliveto; founder of the Accademia de' Filomusi (about 1623); numerous works from 1595, including intermedi (from 1598) and hand-books of plain-song and organ-playing (from 1601), the latter the first systematic treatment of figured bass. G.

Barbarino, Bartolommeo. Maestro at Pesaro and Padua; works from 1606. See Radiciotti in I. M. G. Sammelbde. xiv.

Bartè, Girolamo. From 1607 maestro at Volterra Cathedral; works from that year. G.

Bartoli, Erasmo (1606-56). Member of the Oratorians at Naples; scattered sacred works. Memoir by Camillo Franco, 1786 (MS).

Bartolini, Or' in Dio. From 1633 maestro at Udine Cathedral; works, sacred and secular, from 1606.

Bassani, Giovanni Battista (?1657-1716). Paduan violinist, pupil of Castrovillari, from 1677 organist or maestro at Ferrara, but also connected with the Bologna Filarmonici; fine sacred music from 1690, many solo-cantatas (from 1680), 5 operas, 9 oratorios, etc. Memoir by Pasini, 1906 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.). G.

Bellazzi, Francesco. Maestro at S. Francesco, Milan; works from 1618.

Belli, Domenico. Early writer in the monodic style, in 1610-13 choir-trainer at S. Lorenzo, Florence; works from 1616.

Belloni, Giuseppe. Church-works from 1603.

Benevoli, Orazio (1605-72). Pupil of Ugolini, from about 1625 maestro at various Roman churches (from 1646 at St. Peter's), but in 1643-45 court-musician at Vienna; many able works, including extraordinary polyphonic masses. G.

Berardi, Angelo. Church-musician at Viterbo, Spoleto and Trastevere; works from 1663 and theoretical handbooks in 1681-93.

Bernabei, Giuseppe Ercole (?1620-87). Pupil of Benevoli, in 1653-65 organist at S. Luigi in Rome, then maestro at the Lateran, in 1667-72 at S. Luigi, then at St. Peter's and from 1674 court-director at Munich; scattered works from 1669, including 5 operas at Munich. Memoir by Rensis, 1920. His son Giuseppe Antonio (1649-1732) followed him at Munich, writing much church-music and 15 operas. G.

Bernardi, Stefano (d. 1638?). In 1615-27 cathedral-maestro at Verona and then at Salzburg; sacred and secular works from 1613, including instrumental pieces. See Spies in Salzburger Chronik, 1899.

Bertali, Antonio (1605-69). Veronese court-musician at Vienna, in 1649 becoming director; cantatas from 1631, 4 operas in 1653-61, 3 oratorios and lesser stage-works. Monograph by Laroche, 1919.

Biondi, Giovanni Battista. Minorite from Cesena; many church-works from 1606.

Bona, Giovanni (1609-74). Piedmontese cardinal at Rome; books on psalmody, 1663-71.

Bonini, Severo. Florentine Benedictine, an early cultivator of the monodic style; madrigals, motets, etc., from 1607, including a setting of Arianna (1613), with a theoretical tract (MS).

Boniventi, Giuseppe (b. 1660?). Venetian maestro at Padua and later at the court of Baden; 12 operas in 1690-1727.

Bononcini, Giovanni Maria (1640-78). Pupil of Colonna, court-musician and cathedral-choirmaster at Modena; important vocal and instrumental works from 1666, with a text-book in counterpoint in 1673. Father of M. A. and G. B. Bononcini. G.

Bontempi [Angelini], Giovanni Andrea (1624-1705). Cultivated Perugian, for a time singer at St. Mark's, Venice, from 1647 in court-service at Dresden, associated with Schütz; text-books in 1660-95 and 3 operas (1662-73). Monographs by Rossi-Scotti, 1879. G.

Brunelli, Antonio. Pupil of G. M. Nanini, from 1606 maestro at San Miniato, Prato and for the duke of Tuscany; works from 1605 and text-books in 1606-10.

Buonamente, Giovanni Battista. From 1636 choir-master at the Franciscan monastery in Assisi; instrumental works from 1626, being among the earliest examples of violin-sonatas.

Caldara, Antonio (1670-1736). Eminent Venetian composer, pupil of Legrenzi, in youth a singer at St. Mark's and from 1700 'cellist there, then at Vienna, Rome and Madrid and from 1716 assistant of Fux at the Vienna court; works from 1688, including much noble church-music, over 30 oratorios, nearly 75 operas, many pieces for chamber-ensemble, etc. Monographs by F. v. Kraus and Posthorn, 1920. G.

Caprioli, Carlo. Roman violinist, called to Paris by Mazarin; an opera in 1654 and an oratorio in 1683.

Caresana, Cristoforo (1655-1730?). Tarentine, from about 1680 court-organist at Naples; sacred works from 1681. G.

Carissimi, Giacomo (1605-74). Eminent Roman composer, from 1624 singer or organist at Tivoli and from 1628 maestro at S. Apollinari in Rome; teacher of A. Scarlatti, Kerll, Bernhard and Charpentier; the first strong promoter of the cantata and oratorio and influential in separating the functions of recitative and aria; works from 1643, including much church-music, at least 15 short oratorios, various cantatas, organ-pieces, etc. See articles by Chrysander, 1876 (in Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung), Brenet, 1897, Cametti, 1917 (both in Rivista Musicale), and histories of the oratorio. G.

Casati, Gasparo (d. 1643). Maestro at Novara Cathedral; works from 1641.

Cavalli [Caletti-Bruni], Pietro Francesco (1602-76). Son of a choirmaster at Crema, from 1617 singer at St. Mark's in Venice, from 1640 second organist and from 1668 first; next to Monteverdi the earliest strong opera-writer; works from 1639, including over 40 operas. See histories of the opera. G.

Cazzati, Maurizio (?1620-77). From 1641 maestro at Mantua, from 1647 at the court at Bozzolo, from 1653 at S. Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, from 1657 at S. Petronio, Bologna, and from 1673 at the Mantuan court; member of academies in Ferrara and Bologna; many works from 1642, including notable instrumental pieces. G.

Cesti, Marc' Antonio (1618-69). With Carissimi and Cavalli, the third leading composer of early opera and oratorio; from 1646 choirmaster in Florence, in 1662-66 singer in the Papal Chapel and then second court-director at Vienna; works from 1649, including about 10 operas and various cantatas. See works on opera-history. G.

Ciaja, Azzolino Bernardino della (1671-1755). Sienese organist, from before 1700 settled at Pisa, where in 1733 he gave a 4-manual organ to S. Stefano ai Cavalieri and assisted in its construction; works from 1700. G.

Cifra, Antonio (1575-1638). Pupil of G. B. Nanini, from 1609 maestro at the Casa Santa at Loreto (excepting 1622-25 at the Lateran in Rome); numerous sacred and secular works from 1605. G.

Clari, Giovanni Carlo Maria (1669-1754). Pupil of Colonna, from 1712 maestro at Pistoia; many works for church-use and noted duets and tertets da camera (1720), besides an opera (1695). G.

Cocchi, Claudio. Genoese Minorite, from 1627 maestro at Trieste, Avignon and from 1632 Milan (S. Francesco); works from 1626.

Colombi, Giuseppe (1635-94). All his life in court-service at Modena, from 1678 also maestro at the Cathedral; instrumental works only from 1668.

Colonna, Giovanni Paolo (1627-95). Bolognese (son of a Venetian organ-maker), at first organist at S. Apollinari in Rome, from 1659 maestro at S. Petronio, Bologna, and in 1675 a leading promoter of the Filarmenici there; numerous fine works from 1672, including 3 operas and 11 oratorios; teacher of several noted pupils. G.

Corelli, Arcangelo (1653-1713). The first of the great violinists; pupil of Benvenuti, with considerable travel as a youth in Germany, but from 1671 settled in Rome, becoming a protégé of Cardinals Pamfili and Ottoboni and gaining great renown as player and teacher; works from 1683, especially sonatas for solo or trio and concerti grossi, being counted the originator of the latter. See monographs by Piancastelli, 1914, Vatielli, 1916, and Cametti, 1922 (both in Rivista Musicale), with histories of violin-music. G.

Corsi, Giuseppe. From 1659 maestro at S. Maria Maggiore in Rome, in 1665-68 at the Lateran, in 1668-74 at Loreto, then again at Rome and from 1681 at the Mantuan court; works from 1669, including oratorios and cantatas.

Costantini, Fabio and Alessandro, brothers, born at Rome. The former maestro at Orvieto in 1614-16 and after 1618 (at Tivoli in 1616-18), and the latter after 1643 maestro at St. Peter's, Rome; works (somewhat in conjunction) from 1614. G.

Cristofori, Bartolommeo di Francesco (1655-1731). The inventor of the pianoforte; in youth a harpsichord-maker at Padua and from about 1690 at Florence in the ducal service, becoming custodian of the court-instruments in 1716; his first instrument with hammers described by Maffei in 1711, the earliest extant specimen dating from 1720 (at the Metro. Museum, New York). Monographs by Puliti, 1874, and Casaglia, 1876, and see histories of the piano. G.

Croveti, Giovanni Battista (d. 1682). Modenese, at first organist at Reggio, then in Rome (in 1609 teaching the young Ferd. Lassus and in some way agent there for the Munich court) and later maestro at Ferrara, in 1629-34 court-director at Munich, followed by terms at Milan, Modena and Bergamo (S. Maria Maggiore); works from 1619.

Diruta, Agostino. Augustinian from Perugia, probably nephew and pupil of Girolamo Diruta (16th C.), from 1622 maestro at Asola, in 1630-46 at Rome and then at Perugia; works from 1617. G.

Donati, Ignazio. From 1612 cathedral-maestro at Urbino, Ferrara, Casalmaggiore, Novara, Lodi and Milan (1631-38) in succession, probably also at Pesaro earlier; works from 1612. G.

Doni, Giovanni Battista (1594-1647). Cultivated Florentine lawyer, in 1621-22 secretary to Cardinal Corsini at Paris, later to Cardinal Barberini at Rome, Paris, Madrid and Rome again; author of treatises on Greek music from 1635 and unpublished essays, including notes on the new monodic style. For his patron he made a double lyre or 'amphichord' (description edited in 1763 by Gori and Fasserli). Memoirs by Bandini, 1755, essay on the lyre by Vatielli, 1908, and selections from writings by Solerti, 1903 (in his Origini). G.

Draghi, Antonio (1635-1700). Prolific composer of operas and oratorios, from 1658 in varied court-service at Vienna; works from 1661, including about 175 operas and stage-pieces, over 40 oratorios or cantatas and some church-music. Memoir by Neuhaus, 1913 (in Adler's Studien). Giovanni Battista Draghi, active in London from 1667 as harpsichordist and playwright, may have been his brother. G.

Erba, Dionigi. Milanese nobleman, from 1692 maestro at S. Francesco; works from 1695, including part of an opera and a Magnificat whence Handel is supposed to have borrowed in his Israel (1739). G.

Fabri, Stefano. Name of two Roman musicians, the earlier maestro at St. Peter's in 1599-1601, till 1607 at the Lateran, and the later (1643-58) maestro at S. Luigi, St. Peter's and S. Maria Maggiore for short terms; church-works from 1604 and 1642 respectively. G.

Falconieri, Andrea (b. 1600?). Neapolitan, from 1621 apparently in Spain and France and from 1650 choirmaster at Naples; villanelle, madrigals and clever instrumental pieces from 1616.

Farina, Carlo. Early Mantuan violinist, from 1625 in the Dresden court-band and later for a time at Danzig; dances in 1626-28.

Fedeli, Ruggiero (d. 1722). From 1687 at the Dresden court, in 1691-1705 at that in Berlin and after 1705 court-director at Kassel; cantatas, some church-music and an opera (1703).

Ferrari, Benedetto (1597-1681). Poet and theorbist from Reggio, early active at Venice, in 1645-51 at Modena, then at Vienna and Ratibson, in 1653-62 and from '74 court-director at Modena; wrote texts for many early operas (including the one first publicly given in 1637); works from 1633, including an oratorio, fine pieces for instruments and collected poems (1644). One of the first to use the term 'cantata'. G.

Ferri, Baldassare (1610-80). Noted Perugian singer, in 1625-55 at the Polish court and then at Vienna. Memoir by Conestabile, 1846. G.

Foggia, Francesco (1605-88). Roman composer, pupil of Cifra, G. B. Nanini and Agostini, from about 1630 employed at Bonn, Munich and Vienna, from 1643 maestro at the Lateran in Rome, from 1661 at S. Lorenzo in Damaso and from 1678 at S. Maria Maggiore; works from 1645. G.

Fontana, Giovanni Battista (d. 1630). Early Brescian writer for the violin; works from 1608.

Freschi, Giovanni Domenico (1640-90). Vicenzan cathedral-maestro and composer of 13 operas, 2 oratorios and church-music (from 1660).

Frescobaldi, Girolamo (1583-1643). Eminent Ferrarese organist, pupil of Luzzaschi, early in Belgium, but from 1608 settled at St. Peter's in Rome, gaining renown as player and composer; many important works from 1608, chiefly for organ. Monographs by Haberl, 1887 (in Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch), Cametti, 1908 (in Rivista Musicale), and Bennati, 1908 (in Festschrift at the tercentenary of his Roman advent), and see histories of organ-music. G.

Gabrieli, Domenico (?1640-90). Bolognese 'cellist, from 1680 playing at S. Petronio, Bologna, and finally at Modena; 9 operas from 1683 and various other works. G.

Gagliano, Marco [di Zanobi] di (?1575-1642). From 1608 maestro at S. Lorenzo in Florence and from 1611 also court-director; works from 1602, including both good a cappella writing and notable stage-works in the monodic style (Dafne, 1607, with 3 operas and an

- cratorio). Monograph by Vogel, 1889 (in Viertelehrschr.), and see works by Goldschmidt, 1901, and Solerti, 1905. His brother Giovanni Battista (?1585-1650?) was his assistant at S. Lorenzo from 1613 and from 1634 in court-service, with sacred works from 1622. G.
- Ghizzolo, Giovanni.* Brescian Franciscan, from 1613 court-director at Correggio and Ravenna, in 1622-25 maestro at S. Antonio, Padua, and then at Novara; sacred and secular works from 1608.
- Giacobi, Girolamo* (1567-1630). From 1604 maestro at S. Petronio in Bologna; church-works from 1601.
- Gianettini* [Zanettini], Antonio (1649-1721). Court-director at Modena; several operas and oratorios from 1681 (some repeated at Hamburg).
- Grandi, Alessandro de'.* Noted Venetian composer, pupil of G. Gabrieli, from 1610 maestro at Ferrara, in 1617-20 at St. Mark's, Venice, and then at S. Maria Maggiore, Bergamo; many works from 1615. G.
- Graziani, Bonifacio* (1605-64). Church-musician at Rome; many excellent works (mostly published posthumously).
- Grillo, Giovanni Battista.* In 1620-23 organist at St. Mark's, Venice; works from 1608.
- Guarnieri family.* Famous violin-makers at Cremona, including Andrea (?1626-98), his two sons, Pietro (b. 1655) and Giuseppe (b. 1666), and for his nephews, see Part II. G.
- Gussago, Cesario.* Organist at Brescia; works in 1604-12.
- India, Sigismondo d'.* Sicilian, chamber-musician to various Savoyard noblemen from 1612; works in 1607-27.
- Lambardi, Camillo.* In 1588-1631 maestro at S. Annunziata in Naples; works from 1600.
- Lambardi, Girolamo.* Venetian priest; works from 1586.
- Landi, Stefano* (?1590-1655?). Maestro at Padua till 1629 and then singer in the Papal Chapel; notable for church-music, the first stage-works at Rome (a pastoral in 1619 and an opera in 1634), cantatas and instrumental pieces.
- Lappi, Pietro.* Florentine, from 1601 maestro at Brescia; works from 1600.
- Legrenzi, Giovanni* (1625-90). Eminent Bergamese organist and composer, at first employed in Bergamo and Ferrara, from 1681 second and from 1685 first maestro at St. Mark's, Venice, besides directing the Ospedale dei Mendicanti; notable for advancing the formal aria in cantata and opera and for organizing the incipient orchestra into effectiveness; works from 1654, including 18 operas, 6 oratorios, many cantatas and instrumental pieces. Essay by Naisle, 1917. G.
- Lotti, Antonio* (?1667-1740). Distinguished pupil of Legrenzi, all his life active at St. Mark's, Venice, becoming second organist in 1692, first in 1704 and maestro in 1736 (except on leave in 1717-19 at Dresden); many noble works from 1683, including about 25 operas, 4 oratorios and notable church-music; also teacher of many fine pupils. Essay by Spitz, 1918. G.
- Lully* [Lulli], Jean Baptiste de (1632-87). Famous Florentine, from 1646 in menial service at Paris, but soon taken into the king's '24 violons', which he re-organized; from 1653 court-composer and after 1672 holder of the opera-monopoly first granted to Perrin and Cambert; the effective founder of the French type of ballet and opera (in the latter aided by the librettist Quinault); about 50 stage-works, many pieces for instruments and some church-music. Memoirs by Lajarte, 1878, Radet, 1891, Rolland, 1907 (in Mercur Musical), Prunières, 1910, and Laurencie, 1911, with many opera-histories. His three sons also gained distinction. G.
- Maggini, Giovanni Paolo* (1580-1631?). Noted Brescian violin-maker. Memoirs by Huggins, 1892, and Berenzi, 1890-1907. G.
- Manelli, Francesco* (?1595-1670?). Until 1630 singer or maestro at Tivoli Cathedral and then at Bologna or Venice, engrossed in operatic undertakings; works from 1629, including 10 operas (his Andromeda given at the opening of the first opera-house in 1637). See Radiciotti's history of music at Tivoli, 1907.
- Marazzoli, Marco* (d. 1662). Singer in the Papal Chapel, writing 5 operas (two in 1639 and '54 early examples of comedies), 2 oratorios and several cantatas.
- Marini, Biagio* (1600-55?). Brescian violinist, employed at Venice, Brescia, Parma and from 1623 at the Rhenish palatine court; one of the first virtuosos and writers for chamber-ensemble; works from 1617. See Einstein in I. M. G. Sammelbde. ix. G.
- Marini, Carlo Ambrogio.* From 1687 violinist at S. Maria Maggiore, Bergamo; works, 1687-96.
- Mattei, Nicola.* Italian violinist, from 1672 active in London, publishing several books from about 1685. He was followed by his son Nicholas (d. 1749?). G.
- Mazzaferrata, Giovanni Battista.* Maestro at the Accademia della Morte in Ferrara; works from 1668, including cantatas and an oratorio.
- Mazocchi, Domenico* (?1590-1650?) and Virgilio (d. 1646), brothers. The former musician to the Borghese family in Rome, and the latter from 1629 maestro at St. Peter's; works of the first from 1626; the second wrote one of the earliest comic operas (1639). G.
- Melani family.* Notable group of eight brothers at Pistoia, the best known being Jacopo (b. 1623) and Alessandro (?1630-1703), both important as early writers of comic operas (from 1657). The second was maestro at S. Petronio, Bologna, from 1660, in 1667-69 at Pistoia and then at S. Maria Maggiore and S. Luigi in Rome.
- Melli, Domenico Maria.* Paduan lawyer, one of the first to apply the monodic style; works, 1602-09.
- Merula, Tarquinio.* Cremonese organist, from 1623 at S. Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, in 1624-26 at the Polish court, from 1628 at S. Agata in Cremona, from 1639 at Bergamo Cathedral and from 1652 at Cremona Cathedral; member of the Filomusi at Bologna; many sacred and secular works from 1615. G.
- Micheli, Romano* (?1575-1655?). Roman priest, pupil of Suriano, famous for his experience in canon-writing, from about 1625 maestro at S. Luigi; works from 1615 and a small treatise (1618). G.
- Michi* [Mihl], Orazio (1595-1641). Noted performer on the double harp (58 strings), from 1614 employed by Cardinals Montalto and Moritz at Rome; also one of the early promoters of the aria. See Caimetti in Rivista Musicale, 1914.
- Millieu, Francesco* (b. 1565?). Ferrarese, early in service at the Polish and Austrian courts and after 1614 maestro at Volterra and Chioggia; works from 1617.
- Monferrato, Natale* (d. 1885). All his life at St. Mark's, Venice, from 1647 second and from 1676 first maestro; church-works from 1647.
- Natale, Pompeo.* Singer at S. Maria Maggiore in Rome, teacher of Pitoni; madrigals from 1656.
- Neri, Massimiliano.* From 1644 first organist at St. Mark's, Venice, and from 1665 court-organist to the Elector of Cologne; works from 1644.
- Pacchioni, Antonio Maria* (1654-1738). Modenese composer in the Palestrina style; works from 1678, including 2 oratorios. G.
- Pace, Pietro.* From 1597 organist at Pesaro and from 1613 at Loreto; works from 1597. G.
- Pacelli, Asprilio* (?1570-1623). In 1597-1603 maestro at the German College in Rome and then court-director at the Polish court; works from 1597. G.
- Pallavicino, Carlo* (1630-88). From 1667 at the Dresden court, after 1672 as court-director (but with an interval in 1674-85, spent in Italy); about 20 operas from 1666 and some other works. Memoir by Brunati. His son Stefano (1672-1742) became court-poet at Dresden and later at Düsseldorf. G.
- Pane, Domenico del.* From 1654 singer in the Papal Chapel and from 1669 maestro; works from 1675. G.
- Pasquini, Bernardo* (1637-1710). Important organist at S. Maria Maggiore in Rome and chamber-musician to Prince Borghese; teacher of Durante, Gasparini and Muffat; works from 1672, including 10 operas, 8 oratorios, notable cantatas and clavier-sonatas. G.
- Penna, Lorenzo* (1613-93). Maestro in turn at Monferrato, the Carmelite monastery at Mantua and Imola Cathedral; works from 1656 and 3 textbooks (from 1672).
- Perti, Jacopo Antonio* (1661-1756). From 1690 maestro at S. Pietro in Bologna and from 1696 at S. Petronio and prominent in the Filarmonici; many able works from 1680, including about 25 operas, 20 oratorios, many cantatas and church-music. Memoir by Atti, 1844. G.
- Pesenti, Martino* (1600-48?). Blind Venetian, pupil and imitator of Monteverdi; secular music from 1621.
- Pisa, Agostino.* Roman lawyer, author of the earliest work on conducting (1611).

Pistocchi, Francesco Antonio (1659-1726). Sicilian singer and precocious composer (from 1667), active at Bologna, Ferrara and Parma, in 1696-1701 at Ansbach and Vienna, from about 1705 head of the earliest real singing-school at Bologna; wrote several operas, 3 oratorios, various songs, etc. See Busi's life of Martini, 1891. G.

Piloni, Giuseppe Ottavio (1657-1743). Eminent church-musician at Rome, pupil of Natale and Foggia, from 1677 maestro at S. Marco, besides serving also at S. Apollinare, S. Lorenzo, the Lateran (from 1708) and St. Peter's (from 1719), writing an enormous number of works, many polychoric on a large scale, including a full series of masses, etc., for a year; author also of a text-book and a history of the maestri in Rome in 1500-1700. Memoir by Chiti (unpublished). G.

Poglietti, Alessandro (d. 1683). From 1661 court-organist at Vienna; important clavier-works, many imitative or programmic. Memoir by Kocirz, 1916 (in Adler's Studien). G.

Pollarolo, Carlo Francesco (1653-1722). Brescian pupil of Legrenzi, from 1655 singer at St. Mark's, Venice, from 1690 second organist and from 1692 second maestro; works from 1684, including over 70 operas, 10 oratorios, etc. G.

Porta, Francesco della (1590-1666). Milanese organist; sacred works from 1645. G.

Possetti, Pellegrino. Vocal works issued at Venice from 1623.

Provenzale, Francesco. In 1669-1704 head of the Conservatorio dei Turchini in Naples and the real founder of the Neapolitan school of composers, earlier subdirector at the Royal Chapel; 8 operas from 1653, many oratorios, cantatas and motets. See Rolland's opera-history, 1895, and memoir by Goldschmidt, 1906 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.).

Quagliati, Paolo. From about 1608 organist at S. Maria Maggiore in Rome; works from 1588. G. Rognone-Tegrio, Giovanni Domenico and Francesco, brothers. The elder from about 1600 organist at S. Marco in Milan and from 1619 court-director, and the younger maestro at S. Ambrogio; works from 1598.

Rosa, Salvatore (1615-73). Eminent Neapolitan painter, well-trained in music; author of a sharp satire on church-music (first printed in 1664?), to which Matthæson's Mithridate, 1749, was a reply, besides solo-cantatas. Essays by S. Morgan, 1824, and d'Arienzo, 1894 (in Rivista Musicale). G.

Rossi, Francesco (b. 1645?). Abbot at Bari, writing 6 operas from 1674, an oratorio and some church-music.

Rossi, Michel Angelo. Violinist and organist at Rome, pupil of Frescobaldi, writing organ-pieces and a sacred drama (1637). G.

Rossi, Luigi [Aloysius Rubens] (1598-1653). Trained as singer at Naples, from 1646 at Paris on Mazarin's invitation, producing 2 operas; scattered works, including over 100 cantatas. Monographs by Wotquenne, 1909, and Prunières, 1910-13 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde. and Zeitschr.). G.

Rovetta, Giovanni. Pupil of Monteverdi at St. Mark's, Venice, from 1627 second and from 1644 first maestro there; works in 1626-62, including 2 operas.

Ruggeri, Giovanni Martino. Venetian composer of 10 operas and many instrumental pieces from 1690.

Sabbatini, Galeazzo. Court-director at Mirandola; works from 1625 and a small text-book in 1628. G.

Sabbatini, Pietro Paolo. Roman church-musician; works in 1628-57, including a Gregorian handbook, 1650. G.

Sacratì, Francesco Paolo (d. 1650). Early Venetian opera-composer, from 1649 court-director at Modena; 8 operas from 1639 (notably La Finta Pazza, 1641) and madrigals.

Sammartini, Pietro. A court-musician at Florence; sacred works from 1635.

Sanesi, Giovanni Felice (?1600-79). Roman singer, after 1637 in the court-chapel at Vienna, becoming second choirmaster in 1649 and first in 1669; works from 1633, including early cantatas, 3 operas and 4 oratorios. See I. M. G. Sammelbde. xv.

Sartorio, Antonio (?1620-31). Venetian, in 1666-75 court-director at Brunschwick-Wolfenbüttel and then second maestro at St. Mark's, Venice; 13 operas from 1661.

Savioni, Mario (b. 1608). From 1642 singer in the Papal Chapel and its director in 1659 and '68; works from 1646, including early cantatas.

Seacchi, Marco. Roman pupil of Fel. Anerio, in 1623-48 court-director at Warsaw; works from 1634, including an opera, an oratorio and pamphlets against Siefert (1643-47).

Scarlatti, Alessandro (1659-1725). Distinguished Sicilian composer, pupil of Provenzale and Carissimi, early director for Queen Christina of Sweden at Rome, in 1684-1702 court-director at Naples, then maestro at S. Maria Maggiore, Rome, but with sojourns at Florence and Venice, and from 1708 again court-director at Naples, though with some residence in Rome; the first great master in the Neapolitan school, highly influential in opera, oratorio and chamber-music; works from 1683, including 115 operas, about 15 oratorios, many cantatas, church-music, instrumental pieces, etc. Teacher of his son Domenico, Logroscino, Durante and Hasse. Memoirs by Dent, 1905, and Van den Borren, 1922. His brother Francesco was in 1689-1715 maestro at Palermo and from 1719 in London, besides being somewhat in company with Alessandro at Rome and Naples. G.

Severi, Francesco (d. 1630). Perugian singer in the Papal Chapel from 1613; works from 1615.

Siface [Giovanni Francesco Grossi] (1653-97). Artificial soprano, in 1675-77 in the Papal Chapel, in 1679-87 at the Modenese court and then at Paris and London. See C. Ricci's Vita Barocca, 1904. G.

Spagna, Arcangelo. Roman canon, author of 31 oratorio-texts from 1656 (collected 1706) and of an oratorio-history (1720). See Schering's Gesch. d. Oratoriums, 1911.

Steffani, Agostino (1654-1728). Eminent Venetian composer, pupil of Kerl and E. Bernabei, from 1675 court-organist at Munich and from 1681 co-director with Bernabei, in 1688-98 court-director at Hanover and much engaged in diplomatic errands, then in political service at Düsseldorf and soon named papal representative in Germany, though holding his post at Hanover till replaced by Handel in 1710; works from 1674, including about 20 operas, famous vocal duets and a theoretical pamphlet (1695). See essays by Woker in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, xii, G. Fischer's Musik in Hannover, 1903, Einstein, 1910 (in Kirchenmusik. Jahrbuch), and Untersteiner in Rivista Musicale, xiv. G.

Stradella, Alessandro (?1645-81). Life-history unknown except for the story told by Bourdelot in his Histoire (1715) of his eloping with a Venetian and being murdered in revenge; works include an opera (1678), 6 oratorios, over 20 cantatas and instrumental works. Monographs by Catelani, 1866, P. Richard, 1866, H. Hess, 1906, and F. M. Crawford, 1911. G.

Stradivari family. Famous violin-makers at Cremona, including especially Antonio (1644-1737) and his sons Francesco (1671-1743) and Omobono (1679-1742). Monographs by Fétis, 1856, Lombardini, 1872, Riechers, 1895, and Hill, 1902. G.

Strozzi, Barbara. Probably a Venetian noblewoman; various works from 1644.

Strozzi, Bernardo. Franciscan at Rome; sacred works in 1618-30.

Strozzi, Gregorio. Abbot and papal representative at Naples; church-works from 1655 and a book of canonic vocal studies (1683).

Tarditi, Orazio. From 1622 organist at Arezzo, Faenza, Murano and Volterra and from 1639 maestro at Forlì, from 1644 at Jesi and in 1647-55 at Faenza; many works from 1622.

Tenaglia, Antonio Francesco. Florentine composer at Rome, writing an opera (1661), over 20 cantatas, etc.

Tommasi, Giuseppe Maria, Cardinal (1649-1713). Author of several books on the Roman service-books (1680-97, and collected, 1748-54).

Torelli, Giuseppe (?1660-1708). Eminent Veronese violinist, in 1685-95 in service at S. Petronio, Bologna, then at Vienna and Ansbach, in 1701 returning to Bologna; works from 1686, including the earliest concertos for violin and also concerti grossi. G.

Torri, Pietro (?1665-1737). From 1689 organist at Munich, in 1697-1707 at Brussels and from 1715 court-director at Munich; 26 operas from 1690, an oratorio, duets, etc.

Tosti, Pier Francesco (1646-1727). Noted Bolognese artificial soprano, becoming widely known in Germany and in 1692 settling in London as a favorite teacher; excellent treatise in 1723. G.

Trabacci, Giovanni Maria. From about 1606 court-organist at Naples and later director; works from 1602. G.

Troilo, Antonio. Town-musician at Vicenza; instrumental works from 1606.

Turini, Francesco (?1589-1656), son of Gregorio (16th C.). From 1601 in court-service at Prague, but from at least 1624 organist at Brescia Cathedral; works from 1615. G.

Uccellini, Marco. Long court-director at Modena and also for a time maestro at the cathedral; instrumental works in 1639-67, with perhaps 3 later operas.

Ugolini, Vincenzo. Pupil of G. B. Nanini at Rome, in 1592-1603 maestro at S. Maria Maggiore, then at Benevento, in 1616-20 at S. Luigi and finally at St. Peter's (Capella Julia); an able follower of the Palstrina tradition, with works from 1615 (1599?).

Urio, Francesco Antonio. About 1690 maestro at SS. Apostoli in Rome and later at the Friari in Venice; his works include an oratorio and a Te Deum, whence Handel borrowed many themes and passages in 1739-43. G.

Valentini, Giovanni. From 1617 court-organist at Gratz and later at Vienna; works from 1611. G.

Valentini, Pier Francesco. (d. 1654). Pupil of G. M. Nanini at Rome; able works from 1629, including remarkable canons and 2 'favole' (1654), besides textbooks (ms.). G.

Vercini, Antonio. Violinist at the Florentine court; works from 1692. G.

Vitali, Filippo. Florentine, perhaps at first maestro at S. Lorenzo, but from 1631 singer in the Papal Chapel; works from 1616, including a drama and 6 intermedii (1620-22) in the monodic style. G.

Vitali, Giovanni Battista (1644-92). Cremonese pupil of Cazzati, about 1667 violist at S. Petronio, Bologna, and later at the court of Modena; works from 1666, some important as foreshadowing Corelli's sonatas. His son Tommaso Antonio from 1677 was leading violinist at the Modenese court, with works from 1693. G.

Vittori, Loreto (1604-70). Pupil of G. B. Nanini and Suriano, at first singer at the Florentine court and from 1622 in the Papal Chapel; several dramas from 1639. Memoir by Rau, 1916.

Ziani, Pietro Andrea (1630-1711). Eminent Venetian, from 1657 maestro at S. Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, in 1669-76 second organist at St. Mark's, Venice, and then (till 1684) in the royal chapel at Naples; works from 1640, including over 20 operas, 3 oratorios, etc. See Kretschmar in Peters Jahrbuch, 1910. His nephew Marc' Antonio (1653-1715), after service at Mantua, from 1700 was at the court in Vienna, after 1712 as chief director, writing 45 operas and serenatas, 17 oratorios and many church-works (from 1676).

(b) GERMAN, AUSTRIAN, ETC.

Abel, Clamor Heinrich. Westphalian chamber-musician at Hanover; sonatas and suites in 1674-77. G.

Agricola, Georg Ludwig (1643-76). Court-director at Friedenstein (n. Gotha); madrigals and chamber-pieces from 1670. G.

Agricola, Johann (?1570-1605?). Teacher at the Erfurt Gymnasium; sacred music from 1601. G.

Agricola, Wolfgang Christoph. Probably Bavarian notary at Neustadt-on-Saale, issuing masses, motets and a song-book. G.

Ahle, Johann Rudolph (1625-73). From 1646 cantor at Erfurt and from 1654 organist at the Blasiuskirche in Mühlhausen and prominent in the town-council; many sacred works from 1647 and some textbooks. Memoir by Joh. Wolf, 1902 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.). His son Johann Georg (1651-1706) succeeded him at the Blasiuskirche and in 1680 was named poet-laureate by Leopold I; excellent works from 1671, and an expansion of his father's singing-method (1704). G.

Alban, Matthias (1621-1712). Able Tyrolean chamber-musician, pupil of Stainer, followed by two sons (till 1730). G.

Albert, Heinrich (1604-51). Saxon lawyer, pupil of Schütz and Stobäus, from 1630 organist at Königsberg Cathedral; often called the founder of the modern German lied, especially as he was a skillful poet as well as melodist; works from 1638, including cantatas and 2 singspiele (1645). See Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst, xi-xiii. G.

Alberti, Johann Friedrich (1642-1710). Schleswiger, pupil of Fabricius and Albrici, in ?1665-98 organist at Merseburg Cathedral; works from 1673.

Aisted, Johann Heinrich (1588-1638). Hessian mathematician, in whose works (1611-13) are sections about music.

Altenburg, Michael (1584-1640). Clergyman at or near Erfurt; interesting musical works from 1608, including a sort of Passion and instrumental pieces. Memoirs by Morschmann in the Monatshefte, xi, and Meinecke, 1903. G.

Arnold, Georg. Austrian organist at Innsbruck and later at the Bamberg court; church-music in 1651-72.

Aschenbrenner, Christian Heinrich (1654-1732). Pomeranian violinist, pupil of Theile and Schmelzer, from 1677 active at Zeitz and Merseburg, from 1695 court-musician at the former and in 1713-19 at the latter; pieces in 1673. G.

Bach family. Out of the many Bachs before 1700 mention is due of Johann (1604-73), from 1635 town-director at Erfurt and later organist at the Predigerkirche; his brother Christoph (1613-61), active at Weimar, Erfurt and Arnstadt; Heinrich (1615-92), another brother, from 1641 organist at Arnstadt; Johann Christian (1640-82), son of Johann above and his successor at Erfurt; Georg Christoph (1642-97), from 1668 cantor near Meiningen and from 1688 at Schweinfurt; Johann Christoph (1642-1703), son of Heinrich, from 1665 organist at the Georgs- or Marktkirche in Eisenach, the most able of the older Bachs; Johann Michael (1648-94), his brother, from 1673 organist at Gehren; Johann Ambrosius (1645-95) and Johann Christoph (1645-93), twin sons of Christoph, both violinists, the one from 1671 at Eisenach, the other at Arnstadt; Johann Egidius (1645-1717), brother of Joh. Christian and his successor at Erfurt, followed in turn by his son Johann Christoph (1685-1735?); and Johann Christoph (1671-1721), son of Joh. Ambrosius and brother of the great Joh. Sebastian, organist at Erfurt, Arnstadt and (from 1690) Ohrdruf. None of these except Joh. Christoph of Eisenach is much represented by extant works. G.

Baltzer, Thomas (?1630-63). Able North German violinist, from 1656 in England and from 1661 leading the royal band; works from 1659. G.

Banawat, Jakob. Choirmaster at Constance Cathedral; works from 1641.

Becker, Diedrich. North German violinist, for a time organist in Holstein and then town-musician at Hamburg; works from 1668. G.

Bendeler, Johann Philipp (?1660-1712?). Cantor at Quedlinburg; author of several manuals (from 1686), including one on organ-building. G.

Bernhard, Christoph (1627-92). East Prussian, pupil of Erben, Siefert and Schütz, as well as Carissimi, from 1649 singer in the Dresden court-choir, and from 1655 assistant-director (though forced away in 1664-74 by intrigues on the part of Italian singers), finally in 1781-88 court-director; important works from 1665, including unpublished text-books. G.

Bestler, Samuel (1574-1625). Organist and school-master at Breslau; many works from 1602. His brother Simon (1593-1633) was in 1610-20 cantor at Breslau and then at Liegnitz. G.

Biber, Heinrich Ignaz Franz von (1644-1704). Famous Bohemian violinist, employed at the courts of Olmütz and Salzburg (from 1673), becoming director in 1684 (ennobled in 1690); many works from 1676, including 2 stage-works (1681, '99) and some church-music. G.

Bleyer, Georg. For a time court-musician at Rudolstadt and in 1676 an applicant for the cantorate at the Thomasschule, Leipzig; instrumental pieces from 1670.

Bleyer, Nikolaus (1590-1658). Court-violinist at Bückeburg and from 1624 town-musician at Lüneburg; works from 1621.

Bockshorn, Samuel [Capricornus] (?1629-65). After service as cantor at Reutlingen, Presburg and Nuremberg, from 1657 court-director at Stuttgart, making a fine reputation as conductor and composer, though pursued by local jealousy; works from 1655, including an oratorio whose authorship is disputed between him and Carissimi. See articles by Brenet, 1897 (in Rivista Musicale) and Sittard, 1902 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.) and essay by Buchner, 1921. G.

Bodenschatz, Erhard (1576-1636). Clergyman at Schulpforta, Rehhausen and Gross-Osterhausen; some works from 1599 and two valuable collections in 1603-21 and '06. G (with contents of the former).

Briegel, Wolfgang Karl (1626-1712). Bavarian from Nuremberg, from 1650 cantor at Gotha and from 1670 court-director at Darmstadt; numerous fine vocal and instrumental works from 1652. G.

Bruhns, Nikolaus (1665-97). North German violinist and organist, pupil of Buxtehude, filling posts at Copenhagen and Husum and reputed highly; scattered works, including cantatas and organ-fugues. G.

Bultstedt, Johann Heinrich (1666-1727). Noted Thuringian organist, pupil of Pachelbel, from 1684 engaged at churches in Erfurt (from 1691 at the Predigerkirche); works issued from 1713, including a controversial treatise (1717) in opposition to Mattheson. He was the first to use the term 'suite' in Germany. G.

Conradi, Johann Georg. Until 1690 court-director at Römheld and then (till 1693) conductor at the Hamburg Opera, perhaps later at Oettingen; 7 operas at Hamburg and some church-music. G.

Crüger, Johann (1598-1662). From 1622 organist and cantor at the Nikolaikirche, Berlin, and teacher at the Graues Kloster, becoming famous for his church-melodies (from 1640), besides several text-books (from 1624?). Memoir by Krückeberg, 1922, and see Vierteljahrshr. 1891. G.

Dedekind, Constantin Christian (1628-97). Early in court-service at Dresden as singer or violinist and after 1676 tax-collector at Meissen; works from 1655, including cycles of religious songs. G.

Diesner, Gerhard. About 1660 in the court-band at Kassel and later in London; works from 1660.

Dilliger, Johann (1593-1647). Cantor at Wittenberg and from 1625 at Coburg; many religious pieces from 1620.

Draud, Georg (1573-1636?). Hessian clergyman, author of 4 valuable book-lists (1611-25) containing much musical material.

Drese, Adam (1620-1701). Thuringian, pupil of Seacchi, at first court-director at Weimar, from 1662 at Jena and from 1683 at Arnstadt; works from 1652, including suites.

Düben family. Saxon organists, including Andreas (1558-1625), at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig, his son Andreas (?1590-1662), at the German church in Stockholm, later court-organist and director, his son Gustaf (1624-90), succeeding his father as organist and director, and especially his son Gustaf (1659-1726), not only court-director, but entitled marshal and baron, besides other representatives influential in Sweden. Extant works are mostly dances. See monograph by Stiehl, 1889 (in Monatshefte) and histories of music in Sweden.

Ebeling, Johann Georg (1637-76). North German cantor and teacher, from 1662 Crüger's successor at the Nikolaikirche, Berlin, and from 1668 professor of Greek and cantor at the Carolinum in Stettin; best known as editor of Gerhardt's hymns (1666-67), some chorales and a small work on ancient music. G.

Eberlin, Daniel (?1630-91). At first a soldier against the Turks, then librarian at Nuremberg, choirmaster at Kassel and Eisenach, in business at Hamburg and finally again at Kassel; known also as violinist and contrapuntist; few works from 1675. Telemann was his son-in-law.

Ebner, Wolfgang (?1610-65). Bavarian organist, from 1634 at St. Stephen's, Vienna, becoming choirmaster in 1663, as well as court-organist from 1637; few works from 1648.

Elmenhorst, Heinrich (1632-1704). From 1660 pastor at Hamburg, hymnist and promoter of the opera; author of an opera-handbook (1688).

Engelmann, Georg. Music-director at Leipzig University, writing dances from 1616.

Erbach, Christian (1570-1635). Able Hessian organist, early employed by the Fugers in Augsburg and from 1602 Hasler's successor as town-organist; many fine works from 1600, including motets and organ-pieces. G.

Erben, Balthazar (d. 1686). For a time town-organist at Weimar and at least from 1658 choir-master at the Marienkirche, Danzig; only scattered works extant.

Erlebach, Philipp Heinrich (1657-1714). Court-director at Rudolstadt; works from 1697, including notable cantatas and songs, a singspiel (1693) and organ-pieces.

Faber, Benedikt. In 1602-31 in court-service at Coburg, writing sacred and occasional pieces.

Fabricius, Werner (1633-79). Pupil of Scheide-mann, choirmaster at the Paulinerkirche, Leipzig, and from 1657 organist at the Nikolaikirche, besides practicing as lawyer; dances and sacred songs from 1657 and a manual for organ-examiners (1656). G.

Finger, Gottfried. Moravian, from 1685 in court-service at London, after 1702 at the Berlin court and in 1717-23 active at Düsseldorf and Mannheim; important instrumental works from 1688, besides various stage-works at London, Berlin, etc. G.

Fischer, Johann (?1650-1721). Able Bavarian violinist, pupil of Bockshorn, with study at Paris, from about 1680 employed at Augsburg, Ansbach, Mitau, Schwerin, Copenhagen, Stralsund, Stettin, Stockholm and Schwedt; works from 1681, including the earliest examples of the French style of overture in Germany. Monograph by Wójcikówna, 1921. G.

Fischer, Johann Kaspar Ferdinand (1650-1746). In 1696-1716 court-director at Schlackenwerth (Bohemia), noted as a clavier-player; vocal and instrumental works from 1695. G.

Forster, Kaspar (1617-73). From 1607 cantor at the Danzig Gymnasium and from 1627 choirmaster at the Marienkirche, besides having a book-shop.

Förtsch, Johann Philipp (1652-1732). From 1678 singer at Hamburg and in 1680 for a short time court-director at Gottorp, then active as physician; works from 1684, including 12 operas and 2 text-books. Memoir by Zelle, 1893.

Fränck, Johann Wolfgang (?1641- after '95). In 1673-78 court-director at Ansbach and then in operative work at Hamburg, probably after 1690 in London; works from 1679, including about 15 operas. See essays by Zelle, 1889, K. Sachs, 1910 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Squire, 1912 (in Musical Antiquary), and A. Werner, 1913 (in Sammelbde.).

Fränck, Melchior (?1573-1639). From 1603 court-director at Coburg; able works, especially secular, from 1601, showing him an important promoter of the monodic style in Germany. Monograph by Obrist, 1892. G.

Friderici, Daniel. From 1617 cantor and teacher at Rostock; many able works from 1614, including a favorite text-book. G.

Fritzsche, Gottfried. Noted organ-maker at Dresden (large examples from 1614).

Froberger, Johann Jakob (?1605-67). Eminent pupil of Frescobaldi, at intervals (1637, '41-45, '53-56) famous as court-organist at Vienna and from 1657 protégé of Countess Sibylla of Würtemberg, but life otherwise unknown; in 1662 he visited London, so destitute that he actually served as organ-blower at Westminster Abbey for Chr. Gibbons; many works from 1649, notable as showing him the establisher of the keyboard-suite in its classical form as well as a master in organ-style. Monograph by Beier, 1881, and see many histories. G.

Fromm, Andreas. In 1649-51 cantor at the Stettin Gymnasium, in 1649 writing the first German oratorio. See Rud. Schwartz, 1899 (in Peters Jahrbuch).

Füllsack, Zacharias. In 1600-12 a town-musician at Hamburg, with C. Hildebrand issuing a collection of dances (1607-09).

Furckheim, Johann Wilhelm (?1635-82). Saxon organist and violinist, from 1655 in the court-band at Dresden and from 1666 court-organist; important chamber-works from 1674.

Ghro [Groß], Johann. From 1604 organist at St. Afra in Meissen and later court-organist at Wesenstein; works from 1603. G.

Grimm, Heinrich (?1593-1637). North German, pupil of M. Praetorius, in 1619-31 cantor at Magdeburg and then at the Catharineum in Brunswick; many works from 1623, giving evidence of his adoption of the Venetian styles, and a text-book in singing. Ghro. See Ghro.

Grossmann, Burckhard. An official at Jena who in 1616 secured settings of Psalm 116 from 16 composers, published in 1623.

Hammerschmidt, Andreas (1612-75). Important Bohemian organist, from 1632 at the Wesenstein court, in 1635-39 at the Petrikirche in Freiberg (Saxony) and then at the Johanniskirche in Zittau, early adopting the Italian concert-style; works from 1634, including dances, many Andachten and chorales. Memoir by Schünemann, 1912 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.). G.

Hanff, Johann Nicolaus (1630-1706). At first cantor at Eutin and then organist at Schleswig Cathedral; scattered works indicate his skill in choral-elaboration.

Hasse, Nikolaus. Organist at the Marienkirche in Rostock; works from 1656.

Helder, Bartholomäus (d. 1635). Teacher and pastor near Gotha; sacred melodies from 1615.

Herbst, Johann Andreas [Autumnus] (1588-1666). Bavarian theorist, in 1615-23 in court-service at Butzbach or Darmstadt, then choirmaster at the Barfüsser-Kirche in Frankfurt, except at Nuremberg in 1636-46; works from 1613 and treatises from 1642. Memoir by Nagel, 1910 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), and see Valentin's Musik in Frankfurt, 1906. G.

Horn, Johann Kaspar. Tyrolean lawyer, like Froberger concerned in the settling of the suite-form; works from 1664.

Joseph [Josephil, Georg]. Musician at the Breslau court, from 1657 setting many hymns by Joh. Scheffler, quickly adopted into Protestant usage.

Kapsberger, Johann Hieronymus von (d. 1650?). Noted lutenist, long active at Venice as a promoter of the monodic style; many works from 1604. G.

Kerll, Johann Kaspar (1627-93). Eminent Saxon organist, pupil of Valentini, Carissimi and Frescobaldi, in 1656-77 court-director at Munich and then court-organist at Vienna; works from 1657, including several operas. One of his canzone was used by Handel in his Israel. G.

Kindermann, Johann Erasmus (1616-55). From 1630 organist at the Aegidienkirche in Nuremberg; works from 1630, including able organ-pieces. G.

Kircher, Athanasius (1602-80). Learned Jesuit, variously located (in the Rhine Valley, Sweden, France, Bavaria, Austria and finally at Rome), writing voluminously and on all sorts of subjects without real knowledge or method; musical books from 1650. G.

Klemm, Johann. Pupil of Erbach and Schütz, from 1625 court-organist at Dresden; works from 1629. G.

Knüpfer, Sebastian (1633-76). From 1657 cantor at the Thomasschule, Leipzig; scattered works from 1663. G.

Krieger, Adam (1634-66). Short-lived poet and organist, in 1655-57 at the Nikolaikirche in Leipzig; many effective Arien from 1657. G.

Krieger, Johann Philipp von (1649-1725). Able Bavarian, pupil of Schröder at Copenhagen (where he was suborganist at the Petrikirche) and of Rosenmüller, from 1670 court-organist at Bayreuth, from 1677 at Halle and later in court-service at Weissenfels; works from 1679, including about 15 singspiele, chamber-music, etc. His brother Johann (1652-1735) from 1672 was organist at Bayreuth, from 1678 court-director at Greiz and from 1681 organist at Zittau; works from 1684. Memoirs by Eitner, 1895 (in Monatshefte), and Seiffert, 1919. G.

Kuhnau, Johann (1660-1722). From 1684 organist at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig, and from 1701 cantor at the Thomasschule; works from 1689, including interesting 'Bible' sonatas, and several books from 1688. G.

Kusser [Cousser], Johann Siegmund (1660-1727). Born in Hungary, but spent his youth in Paris, from 1690 court-director at Wolfenbüttel, in 1694-96 director of the Hamburg Opera, in 1698-1704 director of the Stuttgart Opera and then in England; one of the formers of the German type of opera, and also one of the first to introduce French orchestral pieces; works from 1682, including about 12 operas. Monograph by Scholz, 1911. G.

Lagkner, Daniel. Styrian, court-organist at Losdorf; works from 1602.

Leopold I (1640-1705). Emperor from 1658, not only a great patron of music, but a ready composer; works include 15 oratorios, 7 operas and much church-music. During his reign at least 400 Italian operas had their premières at Vienna.

Le Sage de Richée, Philipp Franz. Noted lutenist at Breslau (?), issuing a set of pieces in 1695.

Lippius, Johann (1585-1612). Alsatian student of theory, writing 3 essays (1609-12) in which he sought to blend the old counterpoint with the new harmony.

Loewe, Johann Jakob (1628-1703). Pupil of Schütz, from 1655 court-director at Wolfenbüttel, from 1663 at Zeitz and from 1682 organist at the Nikolai- and Marienkirchen at Lüneburg; notable works from 1657, including solo-songs, chamber-suites and 2 operas.

Loewenstern, Mathäus Apelles von (1594-1648). Silesian nobleman, writing religious music and an oratorio (1646). G.

Lübeck, Vincentius (1654-1740). Eminent Hanoverian organist, from 1673 at SS. Cosma et Damian in Stade and then at the Nikolaikirche in Hamburg; noted as both player and teacher, but few works extant (edited in 1921 by Harms).

Meder, Johann Valentin (1649-1719). After living at various places, from 1687 cantor at St. Marien in Danzig, in 1698-99 at Königsberg and from 1701 organist at Riga Cathedral; able but scattered works, including a Passion and 2 operas.

Meibom, Marcus (1626-1711). Schleswiger scholar, variously active in Holland, Denmark, Sweden, France and England, editing among other works an epochal collection of 7 ancient treatises on music (1652, new edition by Jan, 1895), besides some tractates. G.

Meursius, Johannes (1619-1639). Dutch scholar, editor of 3 Greek musical treatises (1616) and a work on the ancient dance (1618).

Michael, Tobias (1592-1657), son of Rogier (16th C.). From 1619 cantor at Sondershausen and from 1631 at the Thomasschule, Leipzig; works from 1634 (with 2 early pieces). G.

Mielczewski, Martin. Polish church-musician, court-composer to Ladislaus IV and later to Prince Karl Ferdinand at Plock; many works from 1643.

Moritz, Landgrave of Hesse (1572-1632). Noted musical patron and capable composer; secular and sacred works from 1600. See Zulauf's history of music at Kassel, 1902. It was he who sent the young Schütz to Venice for study. G.

Muffat, Georg (?1645-1704). Probably Alsatian, but perhaps of Scottish descent, educated in Paris, till 1674 organist at Molsheim (n. Strasburg), then in Vienna, in 1678-87 organist to the Archbishop of Salzburg (with further study in Rome) and after 1690 in like service at Passau; important instrumental works from 1682. Memoirs by Stollbrock, 1888, and Werra, 1893 (in Kirchenmusik. Jahrbuch). G.

Müller, Heinrich (1631-75). Pastor and university-professor at Rostock, from 1659 publishing many hymns and tunes. G.

Murschhauser, Franz Xaver Anton (1663-1738). Alsatian, pupil of Kerll, from 1691 choirmaster at the Frauenkirche in Munich; works from 1696 and 2 text-books (one sharply criticized by Mattheson). G.

Nauwach, Johann. In court-service at Torgau; one of the early German users of the monodic style; works from 1623. See Kretzschmar's history of the German lied, 1912, Einstein in I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1912, and Volkmann in Zeitschr. f. Musikwissenschaft. 1922.

Otto, Stephan (b. 1594?). Saxon cantor at Freiberg, Augsburg, Weesenstein and Schandau; works from 1631. G.

Otto, Valerius. Saxon, from 1607 organist at the Lutheran church in Prague and musician to Prince Lichtenberg; works from 1611, including interesting dances.

Pachelbel, Johann (1653-1706). Eminent Bavarian organist, from 1674 assistant at St. Stephen's, Vienna, in 1677-78 court-organist at Eisenach, then at the Predigerkirche in Erfurt, in 1690-92 at the Stuttgart court, then at the Gotha court and from 1695 at the Sebalduskirche in Nuremberg, as composer uniting the best qualities of the South German and Thuringian schools and highly influential as teacher and model; works from 1683. Monographs by Botsiber, 1901, Sandberger, 1901 (in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich und in Bayern respectively) and Beckmann, 1919 (in Archiv f. Musikwissenschaft). G.

Petz, Johann Christoph (d. 1716). Bavarian, in 1676-86 singer or violinist at the Peterskirche in Munich, in 1695-1701 court-director at Bonn and from 1706 opera-conductor at Stuttgart; instrumental works from 1685 and 3 stage-works.

Petzold, Johann Christoph (1639-94). From 1664 violinist and trumpeter at Leipzig and from 1681 in the town-band at Bautzen; important dances and suites from 1669, besides 3 books.

Peurl, Paul. Early in the century organist and organ-maker at Steyer (Austria); works from 1611, including the earliest examples of the German suite with variations. Monograph by Francke, 1915.

Pipegrop, Heinrich [Baryphonus] (1581-1655). From 1606 town-cantor at Quedlinburg and subrector at the Gymnasium; able theoretical works from 1609?

Posch, Isaak. Carinthian organist, from 1618 at Laibach; dances from 1618.

Praetorius, Michael (1517-1621). Famous Thuringian, from 1604 court-organist and director at Wolfenbüttel and Grünigen, besides official relations with the courts of Dresden and Magdeburg; very numerous works from 1605, with several books, chief of which is the Synagma, 1615-20, the great source-book for the instrumental music of the period. Monograph by W. Gurlitt, 1915. G.

Printz, Wolfgang Kaspar (1641-1717). Bavarian theorist, cantor at Promnitz, Triebel and Sorau (from 1665); books from 1665, including an important history (1690). Monograph by Eugen Schmitz, 1904 (in Monatshefte).

Profe, Ambrosius (1589-1661). In 1617-29 cantor at Jauer and from 1633 organist at the Elisabethkirche in Breslau; editor of useful collections of church-music from 1641. G.

Reusner, Esajus (1636-79). Important Silesian lutenist, from 1655 in court-service at Liegnitz and Brieg and from 1671 at Berlin; dances and arrangements from 1667. See essay by Norlind, 1907 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.).

Richter, Ferdinand Tobias (1649-1711). Noted Bavarian organist, from 1683 court-organist at Vienna; works from 1684, including 2 oratorios and several dramatic cantatas. G.

Rist, Johann (1607-67). North German clergyman, from 1644 poet-laureate and in 1653 ennobled; hymns and tunes from 1636 and many collections of great value. Monograph by Krabbe, 1910, and see Kretzschmar's history of the German lute, 1912.

Ritter, Christian. After service at the Swedish court, in 1633-88 second director and chamber-organist at the court of Dresden and after 1704 probably at Hamburg; few works extant, but is thought to have decidedly influenced J. S. Bach. Monographs by Buchmayer, 1909 (in the Riemann Festschrift) and Norlind, 1911 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.).

Rosenmüller, Johann (?1620-84). From 1642 assistant at the Thomasschule, Leipzig, and from 1651 Michael's substitute as cantor, as well as organist at the Nikolaikirche, but forced to leave in 1655, going to Hamburg and then to Italy, from 1674 being court-director at Wolfenbüttel; many works from 1645, especially for instruments. Monograph by Horneffer, 1898, and see Net's history of German instrumental music, 1902. G.

Rubert, Johann Martin (?1614-80). Bavarian organist, from 1640 at the Nikolaikirche in Stralsund; works from 1645.

Sartorius [Schneider], Erasmus (1577-1637). Schleswiger, from 1590 cantor at the Marienkirche in Rostock and from 1604 cantor and vicar at Hamburg Cathedral, writing a treatise on the struggle between the old and the new music (1622) and a text-book (1635).

Sartorius, Paul. Bavarian organist, about 1600 in service of Grand duke Maximilian; works from 1599.

Scheidemann, Heinrich (?1596-1663). Able North German organist, pupil of Sweelinck, from 1625 at the Katharinenkirche in Hamburg (preceeding Reinken); many organ and clavier-pieces left in manuscript and some vocal works from 1651. Monograph by Seiffert, 1891 (in Vierteljahrschr.). G.

Scheid, Samuel (1587-1654). Eminent Saxon organist, pupil of Sweelinck, from 1609 at the Moritzkirche in Halle as well as director for the Prussian administrators; many works from 1620, including his Tabulatura Nova, 1624, a pioneer example of masterly chorale-elaboration. Monograph by A. Werner, 1900 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.) [Schütz, Schein and Scheidt are often called 'the three Ss' of the period.] G.

Scheffelhut, Jakob. About 1680 cantor at St. Anna in Augsburg; works from 1682, especially many suites and sonatas.

Schein, Johann Hermann (1586-1630). Eminent Saxon composer, from 1616 cantor at the Thomasschule in Leipzig, after one year as court-director at Weimar; manifold works from 1609. Monographs by Prüfer, 1895, 1908. [With Schütz and Scheidt one of 'the three Ss'.] G.

Schenk, Johann [Jean]. Gambist at the court of Düsseldorf and later in Amsterdam; works from about 1690. G.

Scherer, Sebastian Anton (1631-1712). Bavarian, from 1653 in the town-band at Ulm, from 1668 director and from 1671 cathedral-organist; works from 1655. Monograph by Blessinger, 1913.

Schüldt, Melchior (1592-1667). Noted Hanoverian organist, pupil of Sweelinck, from 1623 at Wolfenbüttel, from 1626 at Copenhagen and from 1628 at the Marktkirche in Hanover; very few works extant. See articles by Seiffert, 1891, and T. W. Werner, 1920 (in Vierteljahrschr. und Archiv f. Musikwissensch.).

Schmelzer, Johann Heinrich (?1630-80). All his life in the Imperial Chapel at Vienna, in 1671 becoming second director and in 1679 chief; instrumental works from 1662, including many ballets for operas. Monograph on the latter by Wellesz, 1914.

Schmidt, Bernhard [Father Smith] (d. 1708). An organ-maker who came to London in 1660 and gained renown by instruments at the Chapel Royal, Westminster, the Temple Church, St. Paul's, Durham Cathedral, etc., besides being organist at St. Margaret's (Westminster) from 1675. G.

Schop, Johann. North German instrumentalist (violinist, lutenist, trumpeter, etc.), employed at Wolfenbüttel, Copenhagen (1615-19), perhaps Paris, and after 1621 town-director at Hamburg; works from 1633. Monograph by Moser, 1918 (in the Kretzschmar Festschrift). G.

Schultheiss, Benedict (d. 1693). Organist at the Aegidienkirche in Nuremberg; works from 1679. G.

Schultz, Johannes (d. 1653). North German organist, from 1605 at Dannenburg; works from 1617, mostly instrumental. Monograph by Siebeck, 1913.

Schultze, Christoph (1606-83). Pupil of Schein, from 1633 cantor at Delitzsch; vocal works from 1647, including a Passion (1653). See essay by A. Werner in Archiv f. Musikwissensch. i.

Schürmann, Georg Kaspar (?1672-1751). Hanoverian singer and opera-composer, in 1693-97 employed at Hamburg, then long in Italy and from 1707 court-director at Wolfenbüttel; over 50 operas from 1700. Monograph by G. F. Schmidt, 1913. G.

Schütz, Heinrich (1585-1672). Eminent Saxon composer, educated for the law, but also sent by Moritz of Hesse to study with the Gabriels in Venice, from 1613 court-director at Kassel and from 1617 director at Dresden (with long absences, as at Copenhagen, Brunswick and Hanover); many works from 1611, including the first real German opera (1627) and several epochal oratorios or Passions (from 1623), besides madrigals, Psalms, etc. Memoirs by Schäfer, 1854. Frdr. Spitta, 1886. Ph. Spitta, 1894, and Pirro, 1913, with many histories. [With Schein and Scheidt one of 'the three Ss'.] G.

Schwenmer, Heinrich (1621-96). Bavarian, pupil of Kindermann, from 1650 assistant at the Lorenzschule in Nuremberg, from 1656 cantor at the Sebalduskirche (till '86 with Hainlein) and from 1693 organist; works from 1655. G.

Sebastiani, Johann (1622-83). Saxon, from 1661 court-director at Königsberg; works from 1664, including a Passion (1672). G.

Selle, Thomas (1599-1663). From 1634 cantor at Itzehoe (Holstein) and from 1641 cantor at the Johanneum in Hamburg and director at the city-churches; able works from 1624. Monograph by Arnheim, 1910 (in the Liliencon Festschrift), and see Moser's history of the German Passion, 1920 (in Peters Jahrbuch).

Siebenhaar, Malachias (1616-85). From 1644 clergyman, cantor and teacher at Magdeburg; important songs and motets from 1659.

Smith, Father. See Schmidt.

Speer, Daniel. Stadtpfeifer at Göppingen and after 1680 cantor there and in Waiblingen; works from 1681, including a Choralbuch and a text-book.

Spiridio, Berthold. Carmelite monk, from 1670 at Bamberg; author of a text-book in organ- and clavier-playing, etc. 1670-83, besides 2 collections.

Staden, Johann (1581-1634). Bavarian organist, from 1604 at the Kulmbach court and after 1618 at the Sebalduskirche in Nuremberg; many able works from 1606, including songs and dances. His son Sig*mund Theophilus* (1607-55), from 1635 organist at the Lorenzkirche in Nuremberg, is noted as the composer of Selewig (1644), the earliest extant German opera, besides some songs. See Eug. Schmitz in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, vii, and in the Liliencron Festschrift, 1910. G.

Stadlmayr, Johann (1560-1648). In 1603-07 in service to the Archbishop of Salzburg and then court-director at Innsbruck; sacred works from 1593. G.

Stainer [Steiner], Jakob (1621-83). Noted Tyrolean violin-maker, active near Innsbruck from about 1645. G.

Steigleder, Johann Ulrich (1580-1635). Able South German organist, from 1605 at the Stiftskirche in Stuttgart and from 1627 also at the court; works from 1624. G.

Stobäus, Johann (1580-1646). East Prussian, pupil of Eccard, from 1602 cantor at the Cathedral at Königsberg and from 1626 court-director; works from 1624. See Mayer-Reinach in I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1904. G.

Strunok, Delphin (1601-94). North German organist, in 1630-32 at Wolfenbüttel, then at Celle and from 1639 at the Martinikirche in Brunswick; scattered works only. G.

Strunok, Nikolaus Adam (1640-1700), son of the above. Notable violinist and opera-writer, early assisting his father as organist, in 1661-65 in court-service at Celle and then at Hanover, in 1678-82 town-musician at Hamburg, then in service to the Grand-duke of Hanover and from 1688 second court-director at Dresden, becoming chief in 1693, but going to Leipzig to conduct opera in 1696; works from 1671, including over 20 operas and an oratorio. Memoirs by Zelle, 1891, and Berend, 1915. G.

Teschner, Melchior (1584-1635). Silesian clergyman, composer of church-songs from 1614. G.

Theile, Johann (1646-1724). Noted Saxon teacher and contrapuntist, occupying posts at Leipzig, Stettin, Gottorp, Hamburg, Wolfenbüttel, Merseburg and Naumburg; at Hamburg he wrote two pieces for the opening of the Opera (1678); works from 1673, including masses, a Passion, a Christmas oratorio, etc. Memoir by Zelle, 1891. G.

Tunder, Franz (1614-67). Noted North German organist, pupil of Frescobaldi, from 1641 at the Marienkirche in Lübeck (preceeding Buxtehude, his son-in-law); scattered works, vocal and instrumental. G.

Vetter, Andreas Nikolaus (1666-1710). Bavarian organist, pupil of Wecker and Pachelbel, in 1690-91 at the Predigerkirche in Erfurt and then court-organist at Rudolstadt; about 25 pieces extant.

Verdandt, Johann. About 1640 organist at the Marienkirche in Stralsund; works from 1641.

Vogtlander, Gabriel (?1580-1643). From 1633 trumpeter at Lübeck and from 1639 at Copenhagen; valuable collection in 1642.

Voss, Gerhard Johann (1577-1649). Teacher of speaking at Leyden in 1618-33 and then of history at Amsterdam; treatises on music as one of the sciences, 1647, '50-58. His son Isaak (1618-89) was a learned philologist at Stockholm and in Holland and England (from 1670); book on rhythm (1673). G.

Wagenseil, Johann Christoph (1633-1708). From 1697 professor of canon law and librarian at Altdorf (n. Nuremberg), author of a book on the German language (1697), with an excursus on the Meistersinger.

Walther, Christoph Thomas (1568-1648). Alsatian, from 1599 teacher at the Strasburg Gymnasium (later University) and cantor at the Thomaskirche; works from 1611 and a text-book. G.

Walther, Johann Jakob (b. 1650). Thuringian violinist, from 1676 in court-service at Dresden and later at Mayence; rather peculiar instrumental works from 1676. G.

Wecker, Georg Kaspar (1632-95). Fine Bavarian organist, pupil of Kindermann, whom in 1655 he followed at the Aegidienkirche in Nuremberg, whence in 1695 he went to the Sebalduskirche (preceeding Pachelbel, his pupil); few works preserved. G.

Weckmann, Matthias (1621-74). Important Thuringian organist, pupil of Schütz and Sweelinck, in 1641-55 court-organist at Dresden (but at the Danish court in '42-47) and then at the Jacobikirche in Hamburg, where he started a Collegium Musicum; remarkable cantatas, suites and sonatas left in manuscript. Monograph by Seiffert, 1900 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.). G.

Weissensee, Friedrich (?1560-1622). Thuringian clergyman and teacher, from 1590 at the Latin School at Gohesee (n. Erfurt), in 1596-1602 at the Altstädte Schule in Magdeburg and then pastor near by; notable choral works from 1599.

Werckmeister, Andreas (1645-1706). Thuringian organist, in 1664-74 at Hasselfelde, from 1675 court-organist at Quedlinburg and from 1696 at the Martinikirche in Halberstadt; author of important books on tuning from 1681, including the earliest plea for equal temperament (1691), and on composition. G.

Widmann, Erasmus (1572-1634). Württemberger poet and cantor, from 1614 at Rothenburg; works from 1604 and several text-books.

Witt, Christian Friedrich (?1660-1716). Notable Saxon composer, pupil of Wecker, from about 1685 court-organist and later director at Altenburg; scattered cantatas and instrumental works. See Seiffert in Allgem. Deutsche Biographie.

Wolfs, Johann. In about 1575-1617 organist at Heilbronn, issuing a valuable collection of pieces in 1617.

Zachau, Friedrich Wilhelm (1663-1712). Saxon organist, from 1684 at the Liebfrauenkirche in Halle, where he was Handel's first teacher; scattered cantatas and organ-works. G.

Zachau, Peter. In the Lübeck town-band; few pieces from 1678.

Zeuner, Martin. From about 1612 court-organist at Ansbach, with secular and sacred works from that date.

Zuber, Gregor. Violinist in the Lübeck town-band, issuing dances in 1649-59.

(c) ENGLISH

Akeroyde, Samuel. Writer of popular theater-songs from 1685. G.

Aldrich, Henry (1647-1710). Noted dean of Christ Church (College) at Oxford from 1689; 2 services and about 50 anthems. G.

Amner, John (d. 1641). From 1610 organist at Ely Cathedral; 3 services, 15 anthems and a set of choral hymns (1615). G.

Banister, John (1630-79). Violinist in charge of the royal band from 1663; music for 2 plays (1667-77) and some songs; maintained successful concerts from 1672. His son John (d. 1735) was also in the royal band till Queen Anne's time, writing some theater-music. G.

Barnard, John. A minor canon at St. Paul's, in 1641 issuing the first collection of cathedral-music. G.

Bartlett, John. Lutenist who published Ayres in 1606 and took a Mus. B. at Oxford in 1610. G.

Bateson, Thomas (?1575-1630). From 1599 organist at Chester Cathedral and from 1609 at Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin; able madrigals from 1604 and some church-music. G.

Batten, Adrian (?1585-1637). From 1614 singer at Westminster Abbey and from 1624 organist at St. Paul's; services and over 30 anthems. G.

Bennet, John. Excellent madrigals in 1599-1614 and some tunes. G.

Blow, John (1649-1708). Eminent organist at Westminster Abbey in 1668-79 and from 1695 (the interval filled by his pupil Purcell), as well as at the Chapel Royal from 1676; varied works from 1663, including odes and clavier- and organ-pieces, besides many services and anthems. See Cummings in Proceedings of Mus. Assoc. 1903. G.

Britton, Thomas (1651-1714). A London coal-dealer who in 1678 established weekly concerts of significance. G.

Campion, Thomas (1575-1620). Physician, poet and from 1595 writer of songs and masques, besides a text-book (1618). G.

Child, William (1606-97). From 1632 organist at St. George's, Windsor, and from 1661 also at the Chapel Royal; Mus. D. of Oxford in 1663; sacred and secular works from 1639. G.

Clark, Jeremiah (d. 1707). From 1692 organist at Winchester College and from 1695 at St. Paul's (also at the Chapel Royal from 1704); incidental music for plays and odes from 1676? and some anthems. G.

Clifford, James (1622-98). From 1661 canon at St. Paul's, with duties as curate or chaplain elsewhere; collection of anthem-texts in 1663 (the first issued in London). G.

Coleman, Charles (d. 1664). Musician in the royal band, writing airs and masque-music from 1636. His son Edward (d. 1669) was similarly active. G.

Cooke, Henry (d. 1672). From 1660 noted choir-master at the Chapel Royal, writing some anthems and also the music for Charles II's coronation. G.

Coperario [Cooper], John. Lutenist and gambist, trained in Italy, teacher in the royal family; songs from 1606. G.

Creighton, Robert (1639-1734). Clergyman and professor of Greek at Cambridge, from 1674 canon and precentor at Wells Cathedral, writing services and anthems. G.

Cross, Thomas. Able music-engraver in London from 1683. G.

Dallam family. Noted organ-makers from about 1605, including Thomas and his sons Robert (1602-65), Ralph (d. 1673) and George. They built organs for Worcester, York, Durham, Canterbury, St. Paul's and other cathedrals and large churches. G.

Deering, Richard (d. 1630). From 1617 organist at a nursery in Brussels and from 1625 in royal service at London; sacred works from 1597 (all for the Catholic service). G.

Dowland, Robert (d. 1641), son of John (16th C.). Lutenist in court-service from 1626; notable works from 1595. G.

Eccles, John (?1668-1735). In the royal band from 1694 and its director from 1700; many songs and stage-pieces from 1681. G.

Este, Michael (d. 1638?), perhaps son of Thomas (16th C.). Writer of madrigals from 1601 and of anthems (1624). G.

Farmer, Thomas (d. 1695?). Writer of songs and instrumental pieces from 1675. G.

Ferrabosco, Alfonso (1575?-1628), son of Alfonso (16th C.). Violinist in the royal band, from 1604 writing music for masques by Ben Jonson and songs from 1609. His son followed him as court-musician. G.

Ford, Thomas (?1580-1648). Musician attached to the court; many part-songs and dances from 1607. G.

Gibbons, Orlando (1583-1625). Eminent organist and composer, from 1604 at the Chapel Royal and from 1623 also at Westminster; numerous superior works from 1611, including church-music, madrigals and virginal-pieces. His son Christopher (1615-76) was organist at Winchester Cathedral in 1638-44, at Westminster in 1660-66 and also in the Chapel Royal from 1660; few works only. The father was Mus. D. of Oxford from 1622 and the son from 1664. G.

Hall, Henry (?1655-1707). Organist at Exeter Cathedral in 1674-86? and at Hereford Cathedral from 1688, where his son succeeded him; canticles, anthems and some songs from 1693. G.

Harris, Renatus (?1640-1715). The most noted of a family of able organ-makers. G.

Hilton, John (1599-1657). In 1628-44 organist at St. Margaret's (Westminster); many songs and catches from 1627. G.

Holborne, Antony and William, brothers. Authors of a book in 1597 including about 55 pieces for the 'citharn' and a few part-songs. G.

Holder, William (1616-97). Clergyman, from 1660 prebendary of Ely, author of a text-book in harmony (1694) and a few anthems. G.

Hole, William and Robert. Music-engravers from 1611, said to be the pioneers in England. G.

Humfrey, Pelham (1647-74). Chorister in the Chapel Royal, with prolonged study abroad at royal expense, from 1672 Cooke's successor as choir-master; anthems, songs and odes from about 1664. G.

Jeffries, George. About 1643 organist at Oxford; many anthems and motets. G.

Jenkins, John (1592-1678). Lutenist and violist, fluent composer of fancies, rants and some vocal pieces, besides 12 trio-sonatas (1664). G.

Jewett, Randolph (1603-75). Pupil of O. Gibbons, from 1631 organist of the two Dublin Cathedrals, in 1643-44 at Chester Cathedral and from 1666 at Winchester Cathedral; some anthems from 1662. G.

Johnson, Robert (d. 1634). In the royal band from 1604; songs from 1614, especially several to accompany plays. G.

Jones, Robert. Noted lutenist, with songs and madrigals from 1600. G.

King, Robert. Member of the royal band, with songs and part-songs from 1684. G.

Lanière, Nichola (1588-1666), the most famous of a line of musicians at the court. In court-service from 1604 and in 1626-44 court-director and marshal (head) of the corporation of musicians, recovering both offices in 1660; masque-music from 1613 and many songs. He was expert in painting and in 1625-27 was in Italy as buyer for the royal collection. G.

Laves, William (1582-1645) and Henry (1595-1662), brothers. Members of the Chapel Royal, both writing masque-music and songs, with some anthems, from 1633. G.

Leighton, William. Editor of a collection of about 55 metrical hymns and psalms in 1614, of which 8 are his. G.

Lenton, John. From 1685 violinist in the royal band, from 1682 writing music for many plays, besides an instruction-book for the violin (1694). G.

Locke, Matthew (?1630-77). In court-service from 1661, writing much masque-music of fine quality from 1653, many songs and anthems, besides the earliest English text-book in thorough-bass (1673). G.

Lowe, Edward (?1610-82). From 1630 organist at Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, and also from 1660 at the Chapel Royal, besides being from 1661 professor of music at Oxford; anthems and a book on cathedral-music. G.

Mace, Thomas (1613-1709?). Author of Musick's Monument, 1676, a quaint, discursive book on church-music, the lute, the viol, etc. G.

Milton, John (?1563-1647), father of the great poet. A scrivener in London, but also competent in music; madrigals, anthems and tunes from 1601. See works by Spaeth, 1909, '12. G.

Nicolson, Richard (d. 1639). From 1595 organist at Magdalen College, Oxford, and from 1626 the first professor in the University; few works from 1601. G.

Pearson [Pearson, Pierson], Martin (?1590-1651). Probably from 1613 choir-master at St. Paul's; part-songs, anthems and instrumental pieces from 1614. G.

Philips, Peter (?1560-1633?). Of Catholic parentage, hence from about 1590 on the continent, first at Rome, then at Antwerp, where he was viceregal organist from 1596, in 1612-21 and from 1628 canon at Soignies (at Béthune in the interval); able motets and madrigals, with some instrumental pieces, from 1591. Monograph by Bergmans, 1903. G.

Pilkington, Francis. Singer at Chester Cathedral from 1602 and precentor from 1623; madrigals and part-songs from 1605. G.

Playford, John (1623-86). Noted London publisher, from 1650 issuing only musical books, including a standard text-book (1654), a collection of dance-tunes (1650), a Psalter (1677), etc. His son Henry (1657-1720?) continued the business and from 1699 managed concerts in London and later in Oxford. G.

Porter, Walter (?1595-1659). Member of the Chapel Royal in 1616-44; and also choir-master at Westminster in 1639-44; madrigals and motets from 1632. G.

Purcell, Daniel (?1660-1717), brother of the next. In 1688-95 organist at Magdalen College, Oxford, and from 1713 at St. Andrew's (Holborn); much music for plays from 1696, besides anthems, organ-settings of tunes, etc. G.

Purcell, Henry (1658-95). Highly gifted, but short-lived, organist and composer, trained by Blow, from 1679 at Westminster and from 1682 also at the Chapel Royal; manifold works from about 1675, including much noble church-music, remarkable settings for the stage and instrumental pieces. Memoir by Cummings, 1882, and see articles by Squire, 1905 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), and Arkwright, 1910 (in Musical Antiquary), etc. G.

Ravenscroft, Thomas (1593-1635?). Editor of several collections, including a Psalter (1621). G.

Rogers, Benjamin (1614-98). In 1639-41 organist at Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, from 1660 assistant at St. George's, Windsor, and in 1664-85 at Magdalen College, Oxford; Mus.D. of Oxford in 1669; much church-music, part-songs, etc., from 1653. G.

Simpson, Christopher. Famous gambist, long under the patronage of Sir Robert Bolles and his son; author of a method for violists (1659) and a treatise on composition (1665), with various later editions, and some scattered pieces. G.

Simpson, Thomas. Violist, about 1610 in court-service at Frankfurt, in 1617-21 at Schaumburg and later at Copenhagen; works from 1610. G.

Tomkins, Thomas (d. 1656). From 1596 organist at Worcester Cathedral and from 1621 also at the Chapel Royal, in both cases stopping activity after 1644; many works from 1622. The most noted of a considerable family. G.

Tudway, Thomas (?1650-1726). From 1670 organist at King's College, Cambridge, also to the University and from 1705 professor, as well as organist and composer to Queen Anne; Mus.D. of Cambridge in 1705; made a remarkable collection of church-music (1714-20), containing many works of his own, which is in the British Museum. G.

Turner, William (1652-1740). Chorister at the Chapel Royal and later singer at Lincoln Cathedral and from 1669 at the Chapel Royal, St. Paul's and Westminster; Mus.D. of Cambridge in 1696; many works from 1676. G.

Wallis, John (1616-93). From 1649 professor of mathematics at Oxford, editing Greek musical works from 1662.

Ward, John. Under the patronage of the Fanshawe family, with madrigals and other works from 1613. G.
Wilson, John (1595-1674). In court-service before and after the Civil War; Mus.D. of Oxford in 1645; music for plays from 1613 and many other works later. G.

Wise, Michael (?1648-87). From 1668 organist at Salisbury Cathedral and from 1675 also member of the Chapel Royal; much notable church-music from 1643. G.

(d) FRENCH, BELGIAN, SPANISH, ETC.

Afflard, Michel d'. Singer in the Chapelle Royale, Paris, writing a manual of sight-singing (1691) in which the principle of the metronome was used. G.
Aguilera de Heredia, Sebastiano. Spaniard, choir-master at Saragossa Cathedral; church-music from 1618. G.

a Kempis, Nicholas. From about 1630 organist at St. Gudule in Brussels; concerted works from 1644. G. [May be Italian.]

Almeida, Fernando d' (1618-60). Portuguese, pupil of Lobo, from 1638 monk at Thomar; few works extant.

Anglebert, Jean Baptiste Henri d' (?1628-91). Court-clavecinist at Paris; various pieces from 1689. G.
Arauzo [Araujo], Francisco Correa de (?1581-1663). Spanish Dominican, at length professor at Salamanca and bishop of Segovia; general treatise in 1626.

Aurcousteau, Arthur d' (d. 1656). From about 1630 choir-master at the Sainte-Chapelle, Paris; works from 1614. G.

Bogssel, Antoine (?1585-1643). From 1615 in court-service at Paris and from 1632 superintendent; several collections of court-music from 1617. G.

Borchgrevink, Melchior (d. 1632). Danish organist, pupil of G. Gabrieli, from 1600 court-organist at Copenhagen and from 1618 court-composer; works from 1605.

Bourdellot [Michon], Pierre (1610-85). In 1642-51 court-physician at Paris and later in charge of the Abbey Macé; author of a Histoire de la Musique that was finished and published by his brother (1715).

Brossard, Sébastien de (1654-1730). French priest, from 1659 choir-master at Strasburg Cathedral and from 1700 at Meaux Cathedral; works from 1691, including collections and a Dictionnaire (1703), the first to contain terms as well as persons. G.

Buztehdue, Dietrich (1637-1707). Eminent Danish organist, pupil of his father, from 1657 in small posts in Denmark and from 1668 at the Marienkirche in Lübeck, where from 1673 he established notable Abendmusiken; numerous important works from 1671. Memoirs by Jimmerthal, 1877 and Pirro, 1913. G.

Cambert, Robert (?1628-77). French organist, from about 1655 at St.-Honoré, Paris, and later in service of the Queen Dowager; from 1669 holding a stage-monopoly with Perrin; stage-pieces from 1659, including Pomone, 1661, the first French opera. Monograph by Pougin, 1881. G.

Campra, André (1660-1744). Important French opera-writer, from 1681 choir-master at Arles and at Toulouse, in 1694-1700 at Notre-Dame in Paris; church-works from 1695 and about 20 operas and divertissements from 1697. G.

Cange, Charles Dufranne, Sieur du (1610-88). Compiler of a glossary of mediæval terms (1678) still useful in music-history, especially in its successive enlargements (latest by Favre (1883-88, 10 vols.).

Cardoso, Manuel (1569-1650). From 1628 choir-master at the Carmelite monastery in Lisbon; scattered works. G.

Chambonnieres, Jacques Champion de (?1600-70?). Court-clavecinist under Louis XIV and teacher of the elder François Couperin, d'Anglebert and Le Bégue; pieces issued in 1670. Monograph by Quittard, 1898 (in Revue Internat.). G.

Charpentier, Marc Antoine (1634-1704). Important composer, pupil of Carissimi, from about 1655 employed by Louis XIV, Mlle. de Guise and the Duc d'Orléans and from about 1684 choir-master at the Jesuit College and also the Sainte-Chapelle; numerous able works from 1678, including 2 operas, about 25 oratorios or cantatas, much church-music and some instrumental pieces. See Brenet's Musiciens de la Sainte-Chapelle, 1910. G.

Coelho, Manoel Rodriguez. Able Portuguese organist, at first at the Elvas and Lisbon Cathedrals and from 1603 at the Lisbon court; works issued in 1620.

Colasse, Pascal (1649-1709). Pupil of Lully and his assistant in completing some of his opera-scores, from 1683 one of the four directors of the Chapelle Royale and from 1696 court-director; 12 operas from 1687 and many songs. G.

Comes, Juan Bautista (1568-1643). Spaniard, pupil of Perez, at first choir-master at Lerida, from 1605 at the Valencia College, in 1619-38 second court-director at Madrid and then choir-master at Valencia Cathedral; scattered works collected by Guzman in 1889.

Couperin family. The older representatives were three brothers: Louis (1630-65), from about 1650 organist at St.-Gervais in Paris and violinist in the royal band, François (1631-98), organist at St.-Gervais from 1669, and Charles (1638-69), organist at St.-Gervais from 1665. Louis left some dances and François organ-pieces dated 1690. The son of François was Nicholas (1680-1748), who late in life followed in the family line at St.-Gervais, preceded by François ('le Grand'), son of Charles (1668-1733). See article on the latter. G.

Desmarests, Henri (1662-1741). At first in court, service at Paris, but about 1700 forced to flee to Spain, becoming court-director at Madrid, and from 1714 under the patronage of the Duke of Lorraine at Lunéville; about 10 operas and ballets from 1682, besides church-music. G.

Dumanoir, Guillaume (b. 1615). Violinist in the royal band at Paris from 1655 and in 1657 named 'Roi des ménestriers'; author of a small work on dancing (1664) and a few violin-works.

Dumont, Henri (1610-84). Belgian organist, from 1639 at St.-Paul in Paris and also from 1665 court-director; much church-music, including organ-pieces, from 1652. Monographs by Quittard, 1907 (in Mercure de France), and Gastoué, 1912 (on his masses).

Esguibel, Juan. Spaniard, choir-master at Salamanca Cathedral; masses from 1608. Monograph by Geiger, 1918 (in the Sandberger Festschrift).

Gaultier family. Noted French lutenists in the time of Louis XIII and XIV, the most famous being Jacques (d. 1670?), in 1617-47 at the English court and then, a favorite teacher in Paris, and his cousin Denis (d. 1672) from about 1615 active at Paris, with pieces from 1655. Others are Pierre (1642-97), who from 1685 held a license from Lully to produce operas at Marseilles, besides writing many lute-pieces, and Jacques' son Ennémond (1635-80?), from about 1669 active in Paris. General monograph by Fleischer, 1886 (in Vierteljahrschr.), and see articles by Laurencie, 1909, '12 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.). G.

Grigny, Nicolas de (1671-1703). Able French organist, from about 1698 at Rheims Cathedral; organ-pieces issued in 1711.

Guldron, Pierre (b. 1665?). From about 1590 singer in the Chapelle Royale in Paris, from 1601 court-composer and later director under Louis XIII; works from 1602. G.

Hacqart, Carolus (?1649-1730?). Dutch or Belgian composer, living first at Amsterdam and from 1679 at The Hague, where in 1693 he started weekly concerts; works from 1674, including a singspiel in 1680.

Haym, Gilles (d. 1650). Belgian church-musician, from 1638 court-director at Liège for Duke Wolfgang Wilhelm; works from 1620. See Monatshefte, 1896.

Huygens, Constantin (1596-1687). Highly cultivated Dutch diplomat and man of letters, player on many instruments and a zealous musical patron; wrote numerous instrumental pieces, made a collection of instruments and among his many letters often dealt with musical matters (selection edited by Jonckbloet and Land in 1882), besides a book on the use of the organ (1641). Autobiography first published in 1817. Memoir by Van Reijn, 1832, and see various works on Dutch music. G.

João IV (1604-56). From 1640 king of Portugal and a well-trained musician; sacred works issued from 1657. He greatly extended the musical library begun by his grandfather (totally destroyed in the earthquake of 1755, but catalogue extant) and wrote two treatises on church-music (1649-54).

Jumilhac, Pierre Benoit de (1611-82). French Benedictine at St. Maur, author of a book on plain-song (1673). Monograph by Brenet, 1902.

Laquerre, Elisabeth Claudé de, née Jacquet (1659-1729). French gambist and organist, wife of a Parisian organist; works from 1694, including an opera, cantatas, violin-sonatas, etc.

Lalande, Michel Richard de (1657-1726). Precocious Parisian player on several instruments, from about 1680 in court-employment, from 1683 one of the four directors; works from 1689, including an opera, several ballets and many motets. G.

Lallouette, Jean François (1651-1728). Parisian violinist under Lully and till 1677 his secretary, from 1695 choirmaster at Notre-Dame; works from 1677, including an opera (1685), motets and a summary of works in Latin, Italian and French for and against the opera (1697).

Lambert, Michel (1610-96). Noted French lutenist, from 1650 in court-service; works from 1661. He was Lully's father-in-law.

Le Bague, Nicolas Antoine (1630-1702). French organist, at first at St.-Médéric in Paris and from 1678 one of the four court-organists; works from 1676, including an organ-method. G.

Maraix, Marin (1656-1728). Famous Parisian gambist, pupil of Hottemann, Sainte-Colombe and Lully, in 1685-1725 soloist in the royal band; works from 1686, including many gamba-pieces and 4 operas (from 1693). He added a seventh string to his instrument. See Pougin in Ménestrel, 1896. G.

Mersenne, Marin (1588-1648). Minorite monk at Paris, a student of philosophy, physics and music, in contact with scholars in many places; author of a large Harmonie Universelle, 1636-37 (really a sort of encyclopedia) and several lesser treatises (from 1634). His correspondence has been edited by Pirro (1909). G.

Moreau, Jean Baptiste (1656-1733). At first choirmaster at Langres, but later a member of the court-choir at Paris; works from 1689, including music for Racine's Esther and Athalie (for women's voices), a Requiem and a tractate. See Kathl Meyer's essay on the origin of choral music for women's voices, 1915.

Nassarre, Pablo (b. 1664). Spanish Franciscan, organist at a monastery in Saragossa; author of two theoretical works (1693, 1723-24).

Nivers, Guillaume Gabriel (1617-after 1700). Pupil of Chambonnières, from 1640 organist at St.-Sulpice in Paris and also singer in the Chapelle Royale; works from 1646, including church-music and several theoretical books.

Pedersøn, Mogens (?1580-1630?). Danish pupil of G. Gabrieli (sent at royal expense), from 1618 assistant court-director at Copenhagen; works from 1608. See Hammerich's Musik am Hofe Christians IV, 1892.

Pereira, Domingos Nunes (d. 1729). Long choir-master at Lisbon Cathedral, writing church-music, villancicos, etc.

Pereira, Marcos Soares (d. 1655). Able Portuguese church-composer, court-choirmaster at Lisbon, with several works for 8-12 voices.

Perrin, Pierre (?1620-75). Attaché of Mazarin and the Duke d'Orléans and from 1659 associated as librettist with Cambert, they together holding the first exclusive rights for opera-production (1669, transferred to Lully in '72). G.

Philidor, André Danican- (d. 1730). The first noted member of a line of instrumentalists in royal service at Paris, composer of band-music and some stage-pieces, associated with Fossard in arranging and copying the musical library at Versailles (from 1684), the remnants of which are now at the Paris Conservatory. G.

Puteanus, Ericius (1574-1646). Able Dutch scholar at Padua and from 1606 at Louvain, the earliest advocate of the modern form of the medieval solmization (from 1599).

Quinault, Philippe (1635-88). From 1672 the able librettist for operas by Lully. Monographs by Lindemann, 1904, and E. Richter, 1910.

Raison, André. From about 1685 organist at Ste.-Généviève in Paris, publishing organ-pieces in 1687 and 1714.

Rebel, Jean Ferry (1661-1741). Parisian violinist, from 1699 in the orchestra at the Opéra and from 1707 conductor and later prominent in the court-band; important works from 1703, including an opera, ballets and chamber-pieces. G.

Rebello, João Lourenço (1609-61). From 1624 musician at the Lisbon court, teacher of João IV; church-music issued in 1657.

Reinken, Jan Adam's (1623-1722). Famous Dutch organist (born in Alsace), pupil of Scheidemann, in 1657-58 at Deventer, then Scheidemann's assistant at the Katharinenkirche in Hamburg and in 1663 his successor, becoming the head of the North German organ circle; not many works extant. G.

Roster, Charles. French violinist, in court-service at Bonn, becoming second director; works from 1688.

Ruckers family. Noted harpsichord-makers at Antwerp, the line beginning with Hans (d. c. 1623), active from 1579, and his four sons, of whom Hans (b. 1578) and Andreas (b. 1579) were the ablest. Their instruments became famous far and wide. G.

Souhaitly, Jean Jacques. Parisian Franciscan, from 1665 advocating the use of numeral-names for tones as a help in elementary study.

Valerius, Adrianus (d. 1625). Dutch notary at Veere, publishing a collection of many popular songs in lute-tabulature (1625-26). G.

Vallet, Nicolas. French publisher at Amsterdam, issuing songs, lute-pieces and some Psalms in 1615-19.

Vredeman, Jacques. Town-director at Leeuwarden, author of various secular pieces in 1603 and a textbook in 1618.

PART III

PLACES, INSTITUTIONS AND ORGANIZATIONS

---

APPENDIX C

OPERAS AND ORATORIOS SINCE 1900

The following notes are not meant to serve as a musical gazetteer or directory, but as a mere suggestion of how varied and extensive have been the enterprises carried on in different countries during the past three or four centuries. They are examples selected from material obtained in indexing the biographies in Part II, the choice being made so as to indicate the historic importance of typical centers, both large and small. Appendix C is added to show how widely diffused is the production of a single form of composition at the present time.

*To save space, only titular leaders are specified, such as choirmasters, organists, conductors and the like. In stating terms of office a date followed simply by a hyphen shows that the person served till the entry of the next person named. Some of the musicians born at the different places are enumerated, but with no attempt at completeness, since in several cases the lists run to hundreds of names. Proper names in these lists are often abbreviated. In many cases historical monographs are indicated by author and date (for fuller reference see Riemann's Musiklexikon, 10th ed.). An appended 'G.' or 'A.' has the same meaning as in Parts I and II.*

Aix-la-Chapelle. Third largest city in the Rhine Province (40 m. west of Cologne), close to the present boundary of Belgium (in 1793-1815 it belonged to France). Its musical life centers in the cathedral, the opera-house, two orchestras and other societies under the care of the municipal director and more than one conservatory. Since 1825 it has been one of the meeting-places of the annual Lower Rhine Festival (with Cologne and Düsseldorf).

Among the municipal directors have been Ferd. Ries 1834-36, F. Wüllner '58-, Breunung '65-, Kniese '84-, Schwickerath '87-, F. Busch 1912 and Raabe '20-. In 1921 the Gesangverein celebrated its centennial (Festschrift by Fritz).

The Festival conductors here have been Ries 1825, '29, '34, Spohr '40, Reissiger '43, Mendelssohn '46, Lindpaintner '51, '54, Liszt '57, F. Lachner '61, '70, Rietz '64, '67, '73, Breunung '76, '79, Wüllner '82, Kniese '85, Schwickerath '88-1912.

The director of the Hochschule für Musik is Pochhammer 1902-.

Birthplace of Louis and Gerhard Brassin 1840, '44, Jos. Sittard '46, Leo Blech '71, César Saerchinger '84, etc.

Altenburg. Capital of the duchy of Saxe-Altenburg (25 m. south of Leipzig), having court-music at times somewhat important. At the court the directors or organists have included Gottfried Schmidt 1617-, J. E. and C. F. Witt '58-1716, J. L. Krebs, with his son and grandson 1750-1803, Wilh. Stade 1860-91 (with Rehberg as leader of the chorus and the orchestra in '88-90), Szenker 1916-20.

The Männergesangsverein marked its fiftieth year in 1913 by a Festschrift.

Birthplace of J. F. Agricola 1720 (at Dobitzchen), Frdr. Müller '86 (at Orlamünde), Mor. Köhler 1855, M. G. Fest '72, etc.

Altona. Largest city in Schleswig-Holstein, adjoining Hamburg on the Elbe and sharing in its musical life.

Recent leaders of the Singakademie have been A. Krug 1885-, and Woyrsch '95-. Since 1903 the latter, who is organist at the Johanniskirche, has also directed municipal symphony-concerts.

Birthplace of C. E. F. Weyse 1774, S. W. Dehn '99, Ed. Marxsen 1806 (at Nienstädten), Corn. Gurlitt '20, Karl Reinecke '24, etc.

History of the Dilettantenverein by Mützenbecher, 1919.

Amsterdam. The largest city of the Netherlands, capital of the northern province and the leading musical center of the country, having an opera-house, two noted orchestras, many choral societies and a strong conservatory. As early as the middle of the 16th century it was made famous by the Sweelincks as a center for organ-music. Only a few of its manifold present activities can be mentioned.

The operatic headquarters is the Stads-Schouwburg (built in 1894). Among conductors of Dutch opera have been Raabe 1899-1903, Gilse 1908-09, and Dresden 1920-21.

The Concertgebouw-Orkest, founded in 1888, is one of the finest in Europe; its conductors have included Kes 1888-, and Mengelberg '95-. The Cecilia and Maatschappij Concerts (started in 1840) have been led by Van Bree 1840-, Verhulst '57-, J. Röntgen '86, and Mengelberg '98-.

Among many other organizations the oldest was the Felix Meritis, founded in 1777 to promote culture in all forms, including music, and from 1815 till its dissolution in 1888 maintaining annual series of concerts, the conductors being Van Bree 1829-, J. M. Coenen '57-, Verhulst '65-, and J. Röntgen '86-88. Since 1898 Mengelberg has led the choral society Toonkunst. G.

The Musiekschool, founded in 1862 under the auspices of the National Music Society (the Maatschappij) and reorganized in 1884, has been directed by F. Coenen 1862-, Dan. de Lange '95-, and J. Röntgen 1913-.

During the century 1550-1650 the Oude Kerk had as organists three generations of Sweelincks, the second, J. P. Sweelinck, exerting wide influence in 1580-1621.

Birthplace of J. G. Bertelman 1782, L. F. P. Drouet '92, J. B. van Bree 1801, Rich. Hol '25, Éd. Silas '27, Éd. de Hartog '29, Henri Viotta '48, Benno Hollander '53, Bern. Zweers '54, Jacques Urlus '68, Joh. Snoer '68, Chrn. Kriens '81, etc.

History by Scheurleer, 1904 (also many earlier articles). The 25th anniversary of the Concertgebouw in 1913 was marked by a memorial volume.

Ann Arbor, Mich. Small city (about 40 m. west of Detroit), the seat of the University of Michigan, which since 1880 has provided musical courses, from 1888 maintaining a strong School of Music and from 1893 notable festivals on a large scale. In 1898 the University acquired the valuable Stearns Collection of Musical Instruments (exhaustive catalogue by Stanley, 2d ed. 1921). A.

At the University the music-directors or professors have been Cady 1880-, A. A. Stanley '88-1920 and E. V. Moore 1923-.

Birthplace of H. E. Krehbiel 1854.

Ansbach. Small city in Bavaria (25 m. southwest of Nuremberg), once the capital of a margravate held by the Hohenzollerns and thus associated with Brandenburg. Its court-music had some importance in the 16-17th centuries. Among the court-directors were Meiland ?1565-74, Riccio ?'76-94?, J. W. Franck 1673-78, Pistocchi ?'95-, Torelli '98-1701.

Histories by Opper, 1911, and Mersmann, 1916, with arts. in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1909-10.

Antwerp. Second city of Belgium and one of the great ports of western Europe. In the 15-16th centuries it rivalled Venice as a leading cultural center. It has a striking cathedral, opera in both French and Flemish, several orchestras, various choral societies and a strong conservatory.

The early choirmasters at the Cathedral include Barbireau 1448-, Obrecht '92-1504, Baulduin 1513-18, Clemens non Papa c. 1540, Turnhout '63-72, and Pevernage '77-91. Noted organists include John Bull 1617-28, Bosch 1764-1802, Callaerts 1856-, Courboin 1902-04.

Opera has been given mainly at the Théâtre Royal (built 1834, rebuilt 1863), the Théâtre Dramatique Flamand (opened 1872) or the recent Opéra Flamande (1906). In 1882-1916 the conductor of Flemish opera was Keurvels.

Recent orchestral conductors are, for the Harmonie, Lennaerts 1914-, for the New Concerts, Mortelmans, for the Popular Concerts, Willems, at the Zoological Gardens, Keurvels (to 1916).

The Conservatory, begun in 1867 as a municipal school, became national in 1897, its directors being Benoit 1867-, Blockx 1902- and Wambach '12-.

Birthplace of J. H. Simon 1783, J. F. J. Janssens 1801, Alb. Grisar '08, J. M. J. Gregoir '17, Jos. Callaerts '38, A. J. Goovaerts '47, Jan Blockx '51, Ed. Keurvels '53, Ernest Van Dyck '61, L. Mortelmans '68, Alfred Megerlin '80, E. M. Courboin '86, etc.

Histories by Gregoir, 1869 (with other books), Donnet, 1899 (bells), Theunissen, 1906 (14-16th cents.), and De Gers, 1914 (Théâtre Royal).

Armagh. Small city in northern Ireland (about 35 m. southwest of Belfast), anciently a chief center of the national culture, now the seat of a Roman Catholic archbishop and an Anglican bishop.

Records of organists begin in 1634, including Hawshaw 1661-95, Bettridge 1722-52, R. Barnes '59-74, R. Langdon '82-94, J. Jones '97-1816, Robt. Turle 1823-, T. O. Marks '72-, Hewson 1917- and Chaundy '20-.

Arnstadt. Very old Thuringian town (20 m. southwest of Weimar), once the seat of a small court, musically interesting because one of the headquarters of the Bach clan in the 17-18th centuries.

J. S. Bach held his first position as organist here in 1703-07, succeeding to the place held by his granduncle Heinrich in 1641-92 and followed in 1707-39 by his cousin Joh. Ernst. His grandfather Christoph and his uncle Joh. Christoph were court- and town-musicians in 1654-61 and 1671-94 respectively. Here, too, he found his first wife. The organ that he played (new in 1701) was rebuilt in 1863 under H. B. Stade, organist 1840-82.

Drese was court-choirmaster in 1683-1701.

Birthplace of Joh. Christoph Bach (of Eisenach-1642, Joh. Michael Bach '48, and Joh. Günther Bach '53).

Augsburg. Important Bavarian city (35 m. northwest of Munich), from the 13th century (till 1806) an imperial free city and a noted headquarters for commerce and art. In the 16-17th centuries the members of the extensive Fugger family were liberal patrons of music. Its older musical centers are the cathedral (R. C.) and the school and church of St. Anna (Prot.), and it now has a municipal orchestra, an oratorio-society and a conservatory.

Among the musicians at the Cathedral have been Kerle 1568-, Klingenstein '75-1614, Erbach 1625-35, Bühler 1801-24, J. M. Keller '39-, K. Kemper '65- and Kammerlander '71-92. Cantors at St. Anna include Gumpelzhaimer 1581-1625, Kräuter 1713-, Seyfert 1743- and F. H. Graf '73-95.

Organists for the Fuggers or the city about 1600 include Aichinger 1584-1628, H. L. Hasler 1585-1602 and Erbach 1595-1625.

Both the Musikschule and the Oratorienverein were founded in 1865 by Schletterer (d. 1893). From 1905 Wilh. Weber and Sluničko were joint-directors of the former (Weber d. 1918) and in 1892-1918 Weber conducted the latter.

Birthplace of S. Dietrich c. 1490, W. Ebner c. 1610, Leop. Mozart 1719, J. C. Kessler 1800, Otto Müller '37, Cyrill Kistler '48 (at Gross-Aitingen).

Extensive historical summaries in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, v, ix, x.

Baltimore, Md. Chief city of Maryland and the eighth in the United States, having two orchestras, a choral society and a noted conservatory.

The Peabody Conservatory was opened in 1868 as a part of the Peabody Institute (founded by George Peabody in 1857, but not in operation till after the Civil War), which includes a large library and an art-museum. The Institute also maintains the Peabody Orchestra, conducted by the Conservatory director. The directors have been Southard 1868-, Hamerik '71- and Randolph '98-. G, A.

The Symphony Orchestra, established in 1916 by the city, has been led by Strube from that time. The conductor of the Oratorio Society since 1894 has been Pache.

Birthplace of the Misses Sutro 1870, '72, Fritz Binder '73, H. R. Thatcher '78, F. C. Bornschein '79, J. N. Hering '86.

Bangor. Small city in North Wales, with a cathedral and the University College of North Wales.

The roll of organists begins about 1640 and includes among others Shrubsole 1782-84, Jos. Pring '93-, Jas. S. Pring 1842-, Rob. Roberts '68-, Roland Rogers '71-, T. W. Morgan '92-, and Rogers 1906 (reappointed). There is a curious reference to an 'organ and choir' as early as 1360. The present fine organ dates from 1897.

Barcelona. Second city of Spain, on the Mediterranean, capital of the old province of Catalonia, with a cathedral, a university, an opera-house and a conservatory.

The Cathedral had some importance in the later 16th century, when P. A. Vila and his nephew L. F. Vila were choirmasters.

The opera-season competes in interest with that at Madrid.

Directors at the Conservatory (Liceo Isabel II) have included Balart ?1860- and Nicolau 1892-.

Birthplace of Dom. Terradellas 1711, Balt. Saldoni 1807, Gab. Balart '24, Ant. Nicolau '58, Enr. Morera '65, Maria Gay '79, Jaime Pahissa '80 and Joan de Manén '83.

Barmen. See Elberfeld.

Basel. Second city of Switzerland, on the Rhine, having a cathedral, a university, an opera-house, two orchestras, an important choral society and a conservatory.

Among the conductors here have been Aug.

Walter 1846-96; of the Musikgesellschaft concerts and the Gesangverein, Volckland 1875- and Suter 1902-18; and at the Stadttheater Prümers 1903-10 and Lert 1919-20.

The directors of the Musikschule have been Bage 1868-, H. Huber 1896-, Suter 1918- and W. Rehberg '21-.

Birthplace of Frdr. Hegar 1841, Karl Courvoisier '46, Hans Merian '57, Alb. Fuchs '58, Karl Hess '59, Ed. Bernoulli '67, Walter Courvoisier '75 (at Riehen), etc.

For historical articles by Riggensbach, Nef, P. Meyer, Merian and Schipke, see Riemann's Lexikon.

Bath. Noted English watering-place (in Somerset), having an abbey-church of importance and usually symphony-concerts in the season, as well as occasional festivals.

At the Abbey Church a noted organist was J. K. Pyne, Sr. 1840-98.

Among the orchestral conductors was Visetti in 1878-90.

Birthplace of J. K. Pyne, Jr. 1852, Alb. Ham '58 and T. T. Noble '67.

Bautzen. Small city in Saxony (about 30 m. east of Dresden), the capital of the old district of Upper Lusitania, having a cathedral (R. C.). Since 1898 Biehle has been cantor at the Petri-kirche (Cathedral, used by both Catholics and Protestants). In 1905, '07 and '12 he directed festivals.

Birthplace of G. A. Merkel 1827 (at Oberoderwitz).

Bayreuth. Small Bavarian city (in Upper Franconia), once capital of a principality. Its present musical eminence is due to Wagner's choosing it as the site for his Bühnenfestspielhaus (begun in 1872 and opened in 1876). At frequent intervals great Wagner festivals have been held since (interrupted in 1914, but perhaps to be resumed in 1924). G.
Among the organists or directors at the court in the old days were Joh. Staden 1604-16, J. P. Krieger and his brother '70-78.

The chief Wagner conductor was Hans Richter 1876-1912, but many others have served as assistants.

In 1890-1905 Jul. Kniese, who from 1892 was chorusmaster at the Festivals, directed a School for Dramatic Singing.

Birthplace of J. C. Wunderlich 1755, J. C. L. Abeille '61 and Max Reger 1873 (at Brand). Here Wagner made his home from 1872 and here he was buried in 1883. Liszt joined him in 1876 and here he too was buried in 1886. So with Richter, who died in 1916.

On the older music see article by Seiffert, 1894 (in Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung), and on the recent festivals see the Wagner literature.

Bergamo. Small city in northern Italy (about 30 m. northeast of Milan), having a cathedral, the much older church of S. Maria Maggiore, an opera-house (Teatro Donizetti) and a conservatory.

Among the musicians at S. Maria Maggiore in the 17th century were Cavaccio 1581-, Merula 1623-24, Grandi '27-37, Legrenzi ?1650-57 (organist) and Crivelli 1654-?. More recent maestri are Mayr 1802-, Rovelli 1819-38, Cagnoni '87- and Pizzi 1897-1900. Merula was at the Cathedral in 1639-52.

The Istituto Musicale (now called Donizetti) was founded in 1805 and among its directors have been Mayr 1805-45 and Pizzi 1897-1900.

Birthplace of Pietro Locatelli 1693, Ant. Lolli 1730?, Gaet. Crivelli '74, Gaet. Donizetti '97, A. C. Piatti, 1822, etc.

Histories by Alessandri, 1875, and Scotti, 1901.

Bergen. Second city of Norway, having a cathedral, several musical societies and an organists' school.

At the Cathedral Schjøtt has been choirmaster since 1878, giving many choir-concerts.

Among the conductors for the Harmonie (concert-society) or at the Theater are Halvorsen 1893-, Schiøler '99- and S. Lie 1901-02.

In 1852-92 F. W. F. Vogel, the noted organist, maintained a School for Organists.

Birthplace of Ole Bull 1810, Edv. Grieg '43, Joh. Haarklou '47 (at Sondfjord).

History of the Theater by Wiers-Jensen, 1922.

Berlin. Capital of the Kingdom of Prussia and since 1871 of the German Empire; with London and Paris one of the largest cities in Europe. About the middle of the 14th century it became a seat of the Electorate of Brandenburg, which from 1415 was held by the Hohenzollerns. Its court-musicians begin to be mentioned before 1600, but did not become notable till the Kapelle was improved under Frederick the Great, first as crown prince (at Rheinsberg) and from 1740 as king (mostly at Potsdam). The more important enterprises, however, waited till the 19th century, especially for the interest of Friedrich Wilhelm IV (1840-61) and that of the later Emperors. Since about 1850 the city has more and more taken its place as one of the great art-centers of Europe, especially noted for its operatic, orchestral, chamber- and choral music, for its series of concerts of every sort, for its facilities for technical study, for research and for publication. Among many churches the Cathedral (Lutheran), with its famous Domchor, is naturally first; besides the Royal (or State) Opera there are several other headquarters for dramatic music; orchestral and choral societies are many and energetic; the governmental and other music-schools have long ranked with the best; for a half-century the University, with its great library, has actively promoted musical scholarship; and there is much music-publishing and instrument-making of high order. Only a few of its enterprises can be here mentioned.

Among the court-directors have been the following (overlapping dates indicate division of duties, as between the Royal Chapel, the opera and other functions): K. H. Graun 1740- (with K. P. E. Bach as cembalist in '40-67), J. F. Agricola '59-, J. F. Reichardt '75-, Himmel '95-1806, Seidel (in part from 1808 and with B. Romberg 1815-19) '22-30, Spontini '20- (opera), Meyerbeer '42-64, Moser '41-51, W. Taubert '45-70, H. Dorn '49-69, Eckert '69-79, Rob. Radecke '71-87, Kahl '80-92, Weingartner '91-1908, Muck (in part from 1892) 1908-12, Rich. Strauss '98-, Leo Blech (in part from 1906) 1913-, Furtwängler '20-22, etc.

Besides the increasing importance of the Opera under court-patronage, several other dramatic enterprises have great significance, such as the Komische Oper, the Volksoper, the Neues Schauspielhaus, Reinhardt's Grosses Schauspielhaus, etc.

The directors of the Domchor have been, after preliminary work by Erk in 1836-38 and the reorganization under Mendelssohn in '38-43, Grell 1843-, Neithardt '45, Hertzberg '61-, Alb. Becker '91, H. Prüfer '99-1909, etc. Among the organists may be named Hellwig 1813-38, Grell '39-, Küster '57-78, Irrgang, 1910-16, etc. A long list of organists at various city-churches might be given, especially at the old Nikolaikirche.

The oldest choral organization is the noted Singakademie, founded in 1792 and conducted by K. F. C. Fasch 1792-, Zelter 1800-, Rungenhagen '33-, Grell '51-, Blummer '76- and G. A. Schumann 1900-.

The Sternscher Gesangverein, founded in 1847, has been led by Jul. Stern 1847-, J. Stockhausen '74-, Bruch '78-, Rudorff '80-, Gernsheim '90-, Fried 1904- and Fröbe '11-12, being then disbanded.

Of orchestral organizations apart from the court-orchestra mention may be made of the Sinfonie-Kapelle, founded in 1843 and led by F. Liebig 1843-, Jul. Stern '67- and Brenner '72-97 (after '76 known as 'Neue').

The conductors of the Philharmonisches Orchester, founded in 1881, have been Joachim 1881-

(with others), Wüllner '83-, Klindworth '84, Kogel '87-, Nikisch '95-1907 (at intervals), Rebiček '97-, Scharrer 1904-, Kunwald '07-, C. Hildebrand '12-, R. Hagel '19- and Furtwängler '22-.

Those of the Blühner-Orchester have been Stransky 1909-, S. V. Hausegger '10-, Scheinpflug '14-, Meyrowitz '20- and C. Hildebrand '21-.

The governmental schools are technically parts of the Königliche Akademie der Künste and grouped under the title of Königliche Hochschule für Musik (though this title is also used specifically of the third division).

They comprise the three schools:

the Institut für Kirchenmusik, founded in 1819 (opened in 1822), the directors being Zelter 1819-, A. W. Bach '32, Haupt '69-, Rob. Radecke '92- and Kretzschmar 1907-; the Meisterschule für musik. Komposition, founded in 1833, the directors being latterly Humperdinck 1900-21, with G. A. Schumann '13- and Rich. Strauss '17-; the Hochschule für ausübende Tonkunst, founded in 1868, the directors being Joachim 1868-1907, Kretzschmar 1909- and Schünemann '20-.

Among other schools the oldest is the Stern Konservatorium, founded in 1850 (first called 'Berliner'), the directors being Th. Kullak 1850-55, Marx '50-57, Jul. Stern '50-, Rob. Radecke '83-, Jenny Mayer '88-, G. Hollaender '95- and Felitz 1915-. A rival of this was the Neue Akademie der Tonkunst, started in 1855 and discontinued in 1890, the directors being Th. Kullak 1855- and his son Franz Kullak '82-90.

The Klindworth-Scharwenka Konservatorium was formed in 1893 by the union of Klindworth's Klavierschule (1882) and X. Scharwenka's Konservatorium (1881), the directors being the two Scharwenkas till 1914, assisted by H. Goldschmidt in 1893-1905 and followed by Robitschek. X. Scharwenka directed his own school in New York in 1891-98, followed by Burmeister in 1898-1903.

Among the directors or professors at the University are to be named B. Klein 1820-, A. B. Marx '32-, Hrr. Bellermann '66-, Ph. Spitta '75-94, O. Fleischer '95-, Friedländer 1903-18, Kretzschmar '04-21 and Joh. Wolf '08-22.

Birthplace of J. C. Pepusch 1667, K. F. Zelter 1758 (at Petzow-Werder), Dan. Steibelt '65, Prince Louis Ferdinand '72 (at Friedrichsfelde), Ldw. Berger '77, K. F. Rungenhagen '78, Karl v. Winterfeld '84, F. W. M. Kalkbrenner '88 (en route from Kassel), L. W. Maurer '89 (at Potsdam), Giac. Meyerbeer '91, Ldw. Rellstab '99, E. A. Grell 1800, Ph. Wackernagel 1800, Alb. Lortzing '01, Ed. Rietz '02, Jul. Schneider '05, K. F. Weitzmann '08, F. W. Jähns '09, Wilh. Taubert '11, Jul. Rietz '12, P. L. Hertel '17, Rud. v. Hertzberg '18, Alb. Löschhorn '19, K. A. F. Eckert '20, Aug. Conrad '21, Herm. Helmholtz '21, Herm. Wichmann '24, Rich. Wüerst '24, Louis Schlottmann '26, Emil Naumann '27, Wold. Bargiel '28, Hans v. Bronsart '30, Jul. Alsleben '32, Hnr. Bellermann '32, A. H. Zabel '35, Ldw. Bussler '38, K. D. J. Fuchs '38 (at Potsdam), E. F. K. Rudorff '40, Hnr. Hofmann '42, Frz. Kullak '44, Otto Lessmann '44 (at Rüdersdorf), Frz. Ries '46, Oscar Hammerstein '47, Hans v. Wolzogen '48 (at Potsdam), Martin Röder '51, Rich. Henneberg '53, Ferd. Hummel '55, Paul Kalisch '55, Fritz Kaufmann '55, Arth. Egidi '59, Paul and Karl Prill '60, '64, Leop. Schmidt '60, Frdr. Koch '62, Kath. Senger-Bettaque '62, Hugo Kaun '63, Wald. v. Bauszner '66, Joh. Wolf '69, Alb. Reiss '70, Oscar Fried '71, Otto Goritz '73, Paul Gräner '73, Karl Straube '73, Karl Kämpf '74, Erich Band '76, Bruno Walter '76, Kurt Sachs '81, Joh. Sembach '81, Kurt Schindler '82, Wilh. Furtwängler '86, W. M. Rummel '87, H. J. Moser '89, etc.

Histories (general) by Ledebur, 1861, C. Sachs, 1909-10, Weissmann, 1911, Krückeberg, 1922; (opera) by L. Schneider, 1852, Brachvogel, 1877-78, Schäffer and Hartmann, 1886, Weddigen, 1899; (Domchor) by Einbeck, 1893; (Singakademie) by Lichtenstein, 1843, Blummer, 1891, Kamerau, 1891; (Philharmonic) by Altmann, 1902, Sternfeld, 1907; (Liedertafel) by Kuhlö, 1909; (Akad.d.Künste) by Hans Müller, 1896, (Inst. f. Kirchenmusik) by Schipke, 1922, (Hochschule) by Langhans, 1873, Reissmann, 1876; (Stern Konserv.) by Taubert, 1910.

Bern. Capital of Switzerland, having a cathedral, a university, a music-school, etc.

Among the Cathedral-organists was K. Hess 1882-1912, who was also music-director at the University. The frequent organ-recitals have long been noted.

The Cäcilienverein has been led by Ad. Reichel 1867- and K. Munzinger ?1896-1909, the former being also city-director and the latter head of the Musikschule.

Birthplace of Karl Locher 1843, Karl Weidt '57, Rob. Hermann '69 and Volkmar Andreä '79.

Bethlehem, Pa. Manufacturing city in north-eastern Pennsylvania, where, owing to its having been settled by Moravians in 1742, music has always been cultivated. In 1900-05 and since 1912 annual Bach Festivals have been held here under Wolle as director, gaining a position of national importance. A.

History of the Festivals by Walter, 1918.

Beverley. Small town in England (Yorkshire), with a fine Minster like a cathedral.

The recent succession of organists includes G. Lambert 1778-, G. J. Lambert 1818- and Colborne '74-.

Birmingham. Second largest city in England and one of its chief manufacturing centers, the seat of its most noted musical festival and having, besides choral and orchestral organizations, a music-school of importance, a university and a cathedral of recent establishment.

The Festivals date from 1768 and have been usually triennial since 1796 (held in the Town Hall since its erection in 1834). The conductors have included Crotch 1808, S. Wesley '11-14, Greateorex '20-29, W. Knyvett '34-43, Mendelssohn and Moscheles '46, Costa '49-82, Hans Richter '85-1912. Among the works first given here are Mendelssohn's Elijah 1846, Bennett's Woman of Samaria '67, Sullivan's Light of the World '73, Gounod's Redemption and Mors et Vita '82, '85, Dvořák's Spectre's Bride and Requiem '85, '91, Parry's Judith and King Saul '88, '94, Stanford's Eden and Requiem '91, '97, Henschel's Stabat Mater '94, Elgar's Gerontius, Apostles and Kingdom 1900, '03, '06, Bantock's Omar Khayyám '06-09, etc. G.

At the University (founded in 1899) the music-professors have been Elgar 1905- and Bantock '08-, the latter being also director of the Music School of the Birmingham and Midland Institute.

At the Cathedral (created from St. Philip's in 1905) the organists have been Stephenson 1906- and Dunnill '14-.

Birthplace of Wm. Pole 1814, F. E. Bache '33, Chas. Lunn '38, J. H. S. Clarke '40, W. Bache '42, Franklin Taylor '43, J. F. Bridge '44 (at Oldbury), C. S. Heap '47 and H. W. Wareing '57.

History of the Festivals by Deakin, 1897.

Bologna. City of moderate size in northern Italy (about 60 m. north of Florence), an important center from ancient times. In the 17th century it was musically active in forming many clubs and in promoting the early extension of the opera (first opera-house in 1680). In the 18th it was prominent for its teachers (especially Martini) and its educational importance has been continued through its modern conservatory. It is the seat of a cathedral, a university, several famous churches, two opera-houses, etc. G.

Of several accademie the most prominent are the Accademia dei Filomusi, founded in 1622 by Banchieri, and especially the Accademia dei Filarmonici, founded in 1675, membership in the latter being an honor highly esteemed ever since.

The ancient church of S. Petronio much over-shadows the Cathedral. Among its choir-masters have been Spataro 1512-, D. Ferrabosco '40-46, Rota '83-97, Giacobbi 1604-30, Cazzati '57-, Melani '60-67, Colonna '74-, Arresti '85-, Pertti '96-1756, Mattei '1800-, Pilotti '26-38, Gaspari '57- and Mancinelli '81-86. At S. Francesco Martini was choirmaster in 1725-84, followed by Mattei.

At the Liceo Musicale Rossini, which in 1864 was reorganized out of the Liceo Filarmonico (founded in 1804), the directors have lately included Mancinelli 1881-, Martucci '86-, Bossi 1902-, Mugellini '11-, Busoni '13-, Marinuzzi '16- and Alfano '19-. The Liceo has a remarkable library. It is worth remembering that at Bologna Pistocchi conducted one of the earliest schools for singing (c. 1705-15).

Birthplace of Giov. Spataro 1458?, A. and D. Ferrabosco 1513, '43, Adr. Banchieri '67, Lor. Penna 1613, G. P. Colonna '37, Dom. Gabrieli '40?, P. F. Tosi '47, Tom. Bai '60? (at Crevalcuore), J. A. Perti '61, Att. Ariosti '66, Gius. Aldrovandini '73?, L. A. Predieri '88, G. A. Ristori '92, Giamb. Martini 1706, Bern. Ottavini '36, Bart. Campagnoli '51 (at Cento), Vinc. Righini '56, Gius. Piotti '84, Gaet. Gaspari 1807, Fed. Paridini '25, Adelaide Borghi-Mano '26, Fil. Marchetti '31, Stan. Mattei '50, Eug. Pirani '52, Luigi Torchi '58 (at Mordano), Ott. Respighi '79, Ferd. Liuzzi '84, etc.

Histories of varied scope by Giordani, 1855, Gaspari, 1867-80, Bignami, 1882, Nascimbene, 1884, C. Ricci, 1888-1904, G. Sarti, 1895, Frati, 1896, Cosentino, 1900-03, Boriani, 1908, Trebbi, 1914, and Vatiei, 1921. Most of these deal especially with operatic history.

Bonn. Important city on the Rhine (15 m. above Cologne), in 1356-1794 the residence of the Electors of Cologne and since 1786 the seat of a noted university. Its musical interest naturally centers in its having been the home of the Beethoven family (from the grandfather's coming in 1733).

Directors in the Electoral Chapel include Zudoli 1753-, Touchemoulin '60-, L. van Beethoven (the composer's grandfather) '61- and A. Lucchesi '74-94, besides the concertmasters Mattioli '77-, Jos. Reicha '85- and J. A. Ries '91-94, and the organist Neefe '81-94. The young Beethoven acted as Neefe's deputy from 1782 and as cembalist in the orchestra from 1783.

Directors at the University include Breidenstein 1826-76, L. Wolff '84- and Schiedermair 1914-.

City-directors have been Wasielewski 1869-, L. Wolff '84-, H. Grütters '98-1922 and Sauer 1907-.

Birthplace of J. P. Salomon 1745, Ferd., Franz and Hub. Ries '48, 55, 1802, L. van Beethoven 1770, Frdr. Koenen 1829, K. L. Brambach '33, Herm. Deiters '33, Jos. Ludwig '44, Frdr. Schirmer '81, etc.

Bordeaux. The fourth city in France and one of the two great Atlantic ports.

Birthplace of Pierre Gaviniés 1726, F. H. Barthélemon '41, Bern. Sarrette '65, Pierre Rode '74, Chas. Lamoureux 1834, Ed. Colonne '38, C. P. Taffanel '44, Alvarez '61, Maurice Renaud '62, Henri Expert '63, C. A. Tournemire '70, Roger-Ducas '75, Geo. Barrère '76, Jean Nouguès '76, Gust. Samazeuilh '77, Jacques Thibaud '80, Jos. Bonnet '84, etc.

Boston, Mass. Capital of Massachusetts and chief city of the section of the United States known as New England, with its annexed or affiliated cities and towns one of the large population-centers of the country. From colonial days it was long foremost in cultural interests and has been musically notable for its choral and orchestral organizations, for its promotion of musical education and for instrument-making and publishing. Hence radiated in the 19th century the most productive impulses in the evolution of the American piano and the building up of public-school music. Music has long been emphasized at Harvard and Boston Universities (the former at Cambridge). G, A (many articles).

The Handel and Haydn Society, founded in 1815, is one of the earliest American choral societies and for more than a half-century the most important. Its chief conductors have been Zerrahn 1854-95, '97-98, B. J. Lang '95-97, R. L. Herman '98 and Emil Mollenhauer '99-. At times festivals have been held in addition to the usual concerts. Other noted choral societies are the Apollo Club (1871), led by Lang '71- and Mollenhauer 1902-, and the Cecilia Society (1874), led by Lang '74-, W. Goodrich 1907-, Fiedler '10-11, Clifton '15- and A. Shepherd '17-20.

From about 1850 the Germania Orchestra (a troupe of expert players from Berlin) made its headquarters here (disbanded in 1854), and also the Mendelssohn Quintette Club (disbanded in 1895), these both being useful in awakening interest in orchestral and chamber-music over a wide territory.

The Harvard Musical Association (1837), starting as an undergraduates' club, in 1865-82 grew into a concert-giving agency of importance, mostly with Zerrahn as conductor. It also collected a fine library.

In 1882, under the patronage of H. L. Higginson, was formed the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra, the conductors of which have been Henschel 1882-, Gericke '84-89, '98-1906, Nikisch '90-94, Paur '94-98, Muck 1906-08, '12-18, Fiedler '08-12, Rabaud '18-, Montaux 19- and Kussewitzky, '24-. From this branched off in 1885 the Kneisel Quartet (transferred to New York in 1905 and disbanded in 1917), besides other ensembles.

Music Hall (1852) was long a noted center for concerts and its organ (1863-84) served as a pioneer influence in arousing interest in organ-music and playing. In 1899 was opened the much finer Symphony Hall.

The Boston Ideal Opera Company (1879), succeeded in 1887 by The Bostonians, was effective in performing light operas throughout the country for over twenty years. In 1908 the Boston Opera Company was formed in affiliation with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York (from 1909 located in a fine new Opera House), but its activity ceased with the outbreak of war in 1914.

The first efforts for musical education were made under Lowell Mason in the Boston Academy of Music (1833-47), followed by B. F. Baker's Boston Music School (1851-68) and Eichberg's Boston Conservatory (1867-93). The much more extensive and influential New England Conservatory, founded in 1867, has been directed by Tourjée 1867-, C. Faelten '91- and Chadwick '97-, becoming the prototype of many institutions elsewhere.

Harvard University appointed J. K. Paine professor in 1862, his successor as head of the musical division being Spalding 1906—.

The Boston Public Library contains a remarkable music-section, the nucleus of which was the Allen A. Brown Musical Library, acquired in 1894.

Birthplace of J. S. Dwight 1813, S. P. Tuckerman '19, J. C. D. Parker '28, Wm. Mason '29, Chas. R. Adams '34, G. P. Upton '35, G. L. Osgood '44, Alice C. Fletcher '45, F. W. Root '46, W. F. Apthorp '48, L. C. Elson '48, Wm. Berger '61, Arth. Whiting '61 (Cambridge), Sidney Homer '64, Karleton Hackett '67, Marg. R. Lang '67, H. F. Gilbert '68 (Somerville), Francis Rogers '70, W. C. Gale '71 (Cambridge), H. K. Hadley '71 (Somerville), E. B. Hill '72 (Cambridge), Arth. Elson '73, D. G. Mason '73, Olive Mead '74 (Cambridge), P. G. Clapp '88, etc.

History of the Harvard Musical Association 1912, and of the Symphony Orchestra by Howe, 1914; see also W. A. Fisher, Notes on Music in Old Boston, 1918, etc.

Bremen. Large commercial city in northern Germany (on the Weser), from 1646 counted among the 'free cities', now as a port second only to Hamburg. Though musical interests are traceable from the 13th century, its musical life, as expressed in the direction of the opera, the cantorate at the cathedral and the leadership of choral and orchestral concerts, has been notable only since 1800.

At the Cathedral (Petrikirche) the cantors have included Riem 1814—, Reinhthal '58— and Nössler '93—.

The Singakademie, founded in 1815, has been led by Riem 1815—, Reinhthal '58—, Erdmannsdörfer '89—, G. A. Schumann '96—, Panzner '99— and Wendel 1909—. The last four have also conducted the Philharmonie (orchestra).

Recent conductors at the Stadttheater include Seidl 1883—, Nössler '85—, J. Ruthardt '93—98, Gilse 1905—, O. Hess '08—, Klemperer '11 and K. Pringsheim '15—18. In 1882—85 the manager was Angelo Neumann, later at Prague.

Birthplace of Wilh. Fritze 1842, Ad. Hagen '51, Wilh. Klatte '70, etc.

Histories by Arnheim, 1911 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), and Weltmann, 1914.

Brescia. Moderate-sized city in northern Italy (midway between Milan and Verona), noted in the 16th century for the making of organs by the Antegnati family and later as the earliest seat of artistic violin-making under Gasparo da Salò (d. 1609), Maggini (d. c. 1640) and others, thus slightly antedating the more brilliant Cremonese school.

At the Cathedral early organists were Merulo 1556—, Maschera '57—, C. Antegnati '84—1619, F. Turini, 1624—56 and recently Tebaldini 1879—83. Quaranta (d. 1887) was long choir-master.

The head of the Istituto Venturi (music-school) since 1897 is Romanini, Birthplace of Cost. Antegnati 1557?, Val. Bona 1560?, Giov. Ghizzolo ?, C. F. Polaroli 1653, A. M. Benincori 1779, Cost. Quaranta 1813, Giov. Bajetti '15, Ant. Bazzini '18, Giov. Tebaldini '64, etc.

Histories by A. Valentini, 1894, and Glissenti, 1895 (both mainly on the Teatro Grande).

Breslau. Capital of Silesia and one of the larger cities in Germany, having a cathedral and several other historic churches, a university, a noted opera-house, choral and orchestral organizations, important conservatories, etc., which make it the most significant musical center in Germany east of Berlin and Dresden.

At the Cathedral the choirmasters include J. I. Schnabel 1805—31, Brosig '53—, Greulich '84— and Filke '91—1911. Among the organists have been Gottwald 1819—, Frz. Wolf '33—, Brosig '42—53, and Greulich '70—84. At the Bernhardinkirche Hesse was organist in 1831—63.

At the Stadttheater the chief conductor since 1896 has been Prüwer. It is to be noted that Weber was conductor here in 1804—06, followed by Bierey (till 1828).

The Singakademie, founded in 1825, has been led by Mosewius 1825—, Reinecke '59—, J. Schäffer '60— and Dohrn 1901—.

Leaders of the Orchesterverein have included B. Scholz 1871—, Bruch '83—, Maszkowski '90, and Dohrn 1901—.

At the University the music-directors have included J. I. Schnabel 1812—, Mosewius '32—, Reinecke '59—, J. Schäffer '60—1902, Kinkeldey 1909— and Max Schneider '15—. With the University is connected the Institut für Kirchenmusik. Both the University and the Stadthaus have remarkable libraries.

The founder of the Schlesisches Konservatorium in 1880 was Ad. Fischer, who directed it till '93. Since 1910 its head has been Puchat.

Birthplace of E. G. Baron 1696, F. W. Berner 1780, C. F. H. Über '81, Hnr. Panofka 1807, Ad. Hesse '08, Carl Kossmaly '12, Ed. Franck '17, Jul. Stern '20, Salomon Jadassohn '31, Rob. Eitner '32, Herm. Scholtz '45, Rob. Musiol '46, Marie Hanfstängel '48, Georg Henschel '50, Max Kalbeck '50, Mor. Moszkowsky '54, Paul Caro '59, Frank Damosch '59, Hugo Goldschmidt '59, Walter Damosch '62, Oskar Bie '64, Walter Petzet '66, Arn. Schering '77, Otto Klemperer '85, etc.

Histories by Mosewius, 1850 (Singakad.), J. Schäffer, 1875 (ditto), Münzer, 1890, M. Schlesinger, 1897 (opera), E. Bohn, 1905, Sittenfeld, 1909 (opera), Guckel, 1912 (Domchor), H. Behr, 1912 (Orchesterverein), etc.

Bristol. Large city in the west of England, always one of the chief ports. It is musically notable because of its cathedral and (since 1873) its triennial festivals. G.

Records of music at the Cathedral run back to 1542. Among the organists have been Bevin 1589—1637, Deane 1640—, Heath '69—82, Priest 1711—, Jas. Morley '35—56, R. Wasbrough '81—

1802, J. Wasbrough 1807-, J. D. Corfe '25-Riseley '76-, P. C. Buck '99- and H. W. Hunt 1901-.

The Festivals have been conducted by Hallé 1873-93 and Riseley '96-. Among the works here first performed are Macfarren's John the Baptist 1873, Mackenzie's Jason '82, Stanford's Wellington Ode and C. B. Rootham's Andromeda 1908.

The Madrigal Society has been led by Corfe 1837- and D. W. Rootham '64-1922.

Birthplace of Chas. Wesley 1757, Sam. Wesley '66, Ed. Hodges '96, T. G. Reed 1817, J. S. B. Hodges '30, Geo. Riseley '45 and C. B. Rootham '75.

Brooklyn, N. Y. Large city on Long Island, opposite New York City and since 1896 incorporated into it. It shares intimately in the musical life of the metropolis, but has always had enterprises of its own, at times including opera. G (New York, Symphony Concerts), A (various articles).

The Philharmonic Society (orchestra), founded in 1857, had as conductors Eisefeld 1857-, Bergmann '65-66, '70-73, and Theo. Thomas '62 (in part), '66-70, '73-91. Since 1891 the Society has given up its own orchestra, though maintaining annual series of concerts.

The Apollo Club (men's voices), started in 1878, has been led only by Dudley Buck 1878- and J. H. Brewer 1903-. The Oratorio Society has been led from its beginning in 1893 by W. H. Hall, through whom it has connection with the concert-enterprises of Columbia University.

Birthplace of G. F. Bristow 1825, Emma Thurstby '54, Emil Mollenhauer '55, J. H. Brewer '56, Oscar Saenger '68, H. A. Brockway '70, Victor Benham '71, Lillian Blauvelt '74, E. E. de Gogorza '74, Marie Rappold '80?, etc.

Bruges. Small Belgian city, capital of West Flanders, commercially prominent in the Renaissance, having a cathedral and a music-school, besides concert- and theater-music.

At the Cathedral (then St. Donatien) it is to be remembered that Busnois and Obrecht both had terms as choirmaster at the end of the 15th century.

At the Conservatoire recent directors have been Waelput 1869-, Gheluwe '70-1914 and Mestdagh '18-.

Birthplace of Arnold van Bruck, Willaert (probably) and Gombert, all before 1500, Jachet de Buus, early 16th C., with Karel Mestdagh 1850 and Jos. Ryelandt '70.

Brünn. Capital of the margravate of Moravia and one of the leading commercial cities of Austria (now included in Czechoslovakia), with varied musical activities.

Recent conductors at the Stadttheater include Rottenberg, A. Veit and F. Neumann 1919-.

Directors of the orchestra and music-school of the Musikverein have been Kitzler 1868-, T. Ochs '99-1900 and then Frotzler. The Philharmonie (orchestra) has been led by Veit and Peterka 1920-. In 1881-1919 Janáček conducted an Orgelschule.

Birthplace of Frz. Lauska 1764, Jos. Strauss '93, H. W. Ernst 1814, Max Maretzek '21, Wilma Neruda '39, Frz. Neruda '43, Otto Findeisen '62, Rud. Berger '74, J. G. Mraczek '78, Paul Stefan '79, Edwin Linder '84, Hans Gál '90, Erich Korngold '97, etc.

Histories by d'Elvert, 1873 (Moravia in general) and Bondi, 1907 (opera from 1882).

Brunswick. Noted city of moderate size in northern Germany (midway between Hanover and Magdeburg), capital of the important duchy of Brunswick and hence associated not only with Wolfenbüttel near by, but with Lüneburg to the north. Its court-music, including the opera, has been famous since about 1600. It has a cathedral and several fine old churches.

The court-directors have included Zange 1597-, M. Praetorius 1604-12, J. J. Loewe '55-, M. Köler '63-, Rosenmüller '67-, Theile '84-, Kusser '90-, Schürmann 97-1751, I. Fiorillo 1754-, Schwanenberg '62-1804, Georg Müller c. 1830-, Abt '52-, H. Riedel '82-, R. Hagel 1911- and Pohlig 1914-. At the Opera Clarus was associated with Riedel from 1800 or earlier.

From 1869 H. Schrader was organist at the Andreaskirche and in 1882-1911 at the Cathedral and court. It is to be recalled that in 1639-94 Delphin Strungk was organist at the Martinikirche.

The director of the Conservatory is Wegmann. Birthplace of N. A. Strungk 1640, F. Fiorillo 1753, Louis Spohr '84, the Gebrüder Müller (both sets) '97-1808, 1825-34, L. C. Mézeray 1810, Louis Köhler '20, Frz. v. Holstein '26, W. A. Rischbieter '34, Hans Sommer '37, Aug. Schulz '37 (at Lehre), Herm. Winkelmann '49, Hans Bussmeyer '53, Aug. Iffert '59, Theo. Kelbe '62, Müller v. d. Ocker '68, Rud. Breithaupt '73, etc.

Histories by Chrysander, 1863, F. Hartmann, 1905 (opera), and G. F. Schmidt, 1913 (life of Schürmann).

Brussels. Famous capital of Belgium and the largest city (after Paris) in the West of Europe. As one of the centers of Brabant and later under Burgundy it participated in the advance of the Netherlands school of composition in the 15-16th centuries, its viceregal chapel during the long Spanish domination becoming somewhat conspicuous. But its chief eminence began with the resumption of independent national life in 1815-30, its opera, its orchestral concerts and its conservatory coming to rank with the best in Europe.

Under Charles V and Philip II Brussels shared with Madrid in the services at court of many fine musicians, including Gombert and Crecquillon in the 16th century and the Turnhouts in the 17th, as well as probably the organist Phillips. From about 1630 à Kempis was organist at Ste.-Gudule.

The noted operatic center is the Théâtre Royal de la Monnaie, rebuilt in 1817. Recent leading conductors have been J. Dupont, Jr. 1872-?, E. Mathieu c. '80, L. Jehin '82-88, S. Dupuis 1900-, Lohse '11-, P. Coppola '12-13. In 1900-14 M. Kufferath was general director.

The Concerts Populaires have been led by Vieuxtemps 1870-, J. Dupont, Jr. '72-, S. Dupuis 1900-11 and latterly Otto June.

The Conservatoire was developed in 1832 out of the earlier École Royale (1823) and its directors have included F. J. Fétis 1833-, Gevaert '71, Tinel 1909- and L. Dubois '12-. Its famous library and museum was first developed under Fétis; recent librarians have been Wotquenne 1894- and Van den Borren 1919-. G.

Birthplace of Pierre van Malder 1724, J. E. Pauwels '68, F. van Campenhout '79, Aimé Leborne '97, L. J. Meerts 1800, Alex. Artôt '15, Franç. DeMunck '15, X. V. Elewijck '25, Guil. Paque '25, A. J. E. Mailly '33, Ernest DeMunck '40, Victor Mahillon '41, Ad. Wouters '41, G. L. Huberti '43, Maur. Kufferath '52, Léon Dubois '59, Paul Gilson '65, Ernest Closson '70 (at St. Josse), Chas. Van den Borren '74, Henri Verbrugghen '74, etc.

Histories by Van der Straeten, 1867-88, and Van den Borren, 1913 (both on Belgium in general), Isnardon, 1890 (Conservatoire), Dandelot, 1897 (Société des Concerts from 1828), Bergmans, 1922 (Académie Royale), etc.

Bucharest. Capital of Rumania, having a somewhat notable opera-house and a conservatory.

Birthplace of Franz Kneisel 1865 and Alma Gluck '84.

Bückeburg. Small city (20 m. southwest of Hanover), capital of the principality of Schaumburg-Lippe, long noted for its court-music.

Among past court-directors was J. C. F. Bach 1756-95 (J. S. Bach's third surviving son). Since 1888 the office has been held by Sahla, also the founder of the Orgelhochschule and an Oratorienverein. Since 1916 K. A. Rau has also been an official in the music-bureau, from 1917 directing the new Institut für musikwissenschaft. Forschung and in 1919 starting a Musikschule under governmental patronage. In 1920-21 Matzke was city-director and conductor of the orchestral concerts.

Birthplace of W. F. E. Bach 1759, Karl and Adolf Bargheer 1831, '40.

Buda-Pest. See Pest.

Buenos Aires. Capital of Argentina and the largest city in South America, its rapid growth in size dating from about 1880. Since that time it has advanced in musical enterprises, having a noted opera-house, orchestral concerts, music-schools, etc.

The first director of the Teatro Colon, opened in 1906, was Mancinelli, followed in 1912 by Salvati.

The director of the older Conservatorio since 1905 is Drangosch. In 1903 A. Williams started the Conservatorio de Buenos Ayres, which now has branches in other cities of the Republic.

Birthplace of Justin Clérice, 1863, Ettore Panizza '75 and Ernesto Drangosch '82.

Cambrai. Small town in northern France (c. 40 m. southeast of Lille), in the 15-16th centuries one of the centers of the Gallo-Belgic school of counterpoint (associated with Douai and Tournai, both near by).

Among the choirmasters or teachers at the Cathedral are the names of Obrecht 1483-85, Courtois and Hellinck c. 1530-60.

Until the recent war there was a branch of the Paris Conservatory here, the director in 1837-41 being Mazas and latterly Bigerelle.

Histories by Coussemaker, 1843, Hudon, 1880, and Arduin and Dassonville, 1912 (Collège de Cambrai from 1270).

Cambridge. Small city in the east of England (55 m. north of London), the seat of one of the two great universities and musically noted for the services maintained in several of its constituent colleges. G.

The most famous establishment is that of King's College, where the organists have included E. Gibbons 1592-99?, J. Tomkins 1606-21, H. Loosemore '27-, Tudway '70-, R. Fuller 1727-J. Randall '43-, J. Pratt '99-, Amps, 1855- and Mann '76-.

At St. John's College the organists have included names from before 1670, among them J. Sharpe 1777-, Clarke-Whitfield '99-1820, Walmisley 1833-, Garrett '57-, Sweeting '97- and C. B. Rootham 1902-.

At Trinity College the earliest record is from 1594, later names being G. Mason 1612-, R. Ramsay '28-44, G. Loosemore '60-82, Tireman 1741-J. Randall '77-, Clarke-Whitfield '99-, Beale 1820-, S. Matthews '21, Walmisley '33-, J. L. Hopkins '56-, Stanford '73- and Alan Gray '92-.

In addition, it may be noted that long terms at other Colleges include those of J. Pratt at St. Peter's in 1813-55 and of E. W. Naylor at Emmanuel since 1898.

The post of organist to the University has been filled by Fuller 1731-, Tireman '43-, Randall '55-, J. Pratt '99-, J. L. Hopkins 1856-, Garrett '73 and Mann '97-.

In the University the professors of music have been Staggins 1684-, Tudway 1705-26, Greene '30-, Randall '55-, Hague '99-, Clarke-Whitfield 1821-, Walmisley '36-, W. S. Bennett '56-, Macfarren '75- and Stanford '87-. G.

The University Musical Society, founded in 1843-44, has been led by Amps 1855-, J. L. Hopkins '60-, Stanford '73-, C. Wood '88-, Gray '94- and Rootham 1912. G.

Birthplace of O. Gibbons 1583, Jas. Hawkins 1660, John Pratt 1772, C. D. Maclean 1843, W. H. Frere '63, E. M. Lee '74, H. J. W. Tillyard '81, etc.

Cambridge, Mass. See Boston.

Canterbury. Small city in southeastern England (15 m. from Dover), the seat of one of the finest and most famous of the English cathedrals.

Records of organists at the Cathedral extend to before 1420. The longer terms have been those of Wm. Selby 1540-70, Marson '99-1632, R. Wren 1675-91, Henstridge '99-, Raylton 1736-, S. Porter '57-, H. Skeats, Sr. 1803-, T. E. Jones '31-, Longhurst '73, Perrin '98 and C. C. Palmer 1908-.

Birthplace of Stephen and G. J. Elvey 1805, '16 and H. A. Fricker '68.

Cardiff. Important seaport in South Wales, the seat of the University of South Wales. Since 1892 musical festivals have been held here at intervals.

In 1892 and '95 the conductor at the Festivals was Barnby, in 1902, '04, '07 and '10 Cowen. Among works here first given are Jos. Parry's Saul of Tarsus 1892, Stanford's Bard '95, Cowen's John Gilpin and Veil 1904, '10, C. H. H. Parry's Vision of Life '07, Brewer's Sir Patrick Spens '07, and Mackenzie's Sun-God's Return.

Carlisle. Small city in the north-west corner of England, close to the Scottish border, the seat of a cathedral.

Among the organists at the Cathedral have been J. Howe 1665-, T. Howe '93-1734, Grotorex 1781-, T. Hill '85-1833, H. E. Ford '42-, Mercer 1903-, Nicholson '04, Walrond '09- and F. W. Wadely '10-.

Birthplace of W. T. Best 1826.

Catania. Large port on the eastern coast of Sicily.

Birthplace of Giov. Pacini 1796, Vinc. Bellini 1801, and Pietro Platania '28.

Chemnitz. Important commercial city of Saxony (45 m. southwest of Dresden), maintaining various musical enterprises, including opera and symphony-concerts.

Recent city-directors include Sitt 1873-80, Pohle '89- and Malata 1909-.

At the old Jacobikirche, which has a noted choir, the cantors include Th. Schneider 1859- and Mayerhoff '98-1915, with Hoyer as organist since 1912.

The Lehrergesangverein has been led by Th. Schneider 1886-, Pohle '89- and Mayerhoff 1910-15.

The head of the Musik- und Opernschule is K. Wallbrecht.

Birthplace of Dulichius 1562, C. G. Neefe 1748, D. G. Türk '50 (at Claussnitz), Th. Kirchner 1823 (at Neukirchen), K. A. Fischer '29 (at Ebersdorf), Anton Krause '34 (at Geithen), Max Heinrich '53, Aug. Riedel '55 and Frz. Mayerhoff '64.

Chester. Small cathedral-city in the west of England (15 m. south of Liverpool), on the border of Wales, with musical festivals at intervals since 1772.

The roll of organists at the Cathedral runs back to 1541, and includes R. White 1567-, Stevenson '70-, Bateson '99-1609, T. Jones 1614-37, Stringer '61-73, Edmund Baker 1727-64, J. Bailey '76-, E. Bailey 1803-, Haylett '24-, Gunton '41- and J. C. Bridge '77-.

The old series of Festivals extended from 1772 to 1829, with 8 meetings, the conductors being Wm. Hayes in 1772, C. Knyvett, Sr. in '83, '86 and '91 and Grotorex in 1806, '14, '21 and '29. The new series, held triennially from 1879, was conducted by J. C. Bridge until 1900. Among the works here first given are Bridge's Daniel and Rudel 1885, '91. G.

Chicago, Ill. Second largest city of the United States and the metropolis of the Middle West. Especially since the great fire of 1871 it has had an extraordinarily rapid growth in cultural advantages, including music, and is now one of the chief centers of the country for opera, orchestral and choral music and professional education. Only a few of its many enterprises can here be named. G (Symphony Concerts), A (several articles).

Among choral societies a pioneer was the Beethoven Society, directed in 1873-84 by Wolfsohn. The noted Apollo Musical Club (men's voices), started in 1872, has been led by Dohn 1872-, Bergstein '74-, Tomlins '75- and Wild '98-. The latter also since 1895 has directed the Mendelssohn Club, which began in 1894 under F. W. Root. The Madrigal Club since 1900 has been under Clippinger.

The chief early orchestral enterprise was the Philharmonic Society, conducted in 1860-67 by Balatka. The famous Chicago Symphony Orchestra, founded in 1891, has had for conductors only Theo. Thomas from 1891 and Stock from 1905 (except temporarily in 1918-19). It was in this that Thomas brought to realization his ideal of a permanent orchestra of the highest quality. Among other orchestras may also be mentioned the American Symphony Orchestra, led for a time from 1914 by its founder, G. D. Gunn, aiming to preserve American compositions.

The Chicago Opera Company, formed in 1910 (often called 'Chicago-Philadelphia', because more or less dividing its seasons between the two cities, latterly also with visits to New York), owes its eminence to the genius of Cleofonte Campanini, the chief conductor and director, succeeded in 1920 by Marinuzzi.

The customary center for the Opera and for most larger concerts has been the Auditorium built in 1889, but the Symphony Orchestra erected its own hall in 1904.

Among the larger music-schools are the Chicago Musical College, founded by Ziegfeld in 1866 and directed by him alone till 1905-06, when he was joined by Borowski and Kinsey, who later succeeded him, and the American Conservatory, founded in 1886 and directed since then by Hattstaedt, from 1894 assisted by Hackett and Weidig.

Birthplace of Walter Spry 1868, Walter Keller '73, L. Campbell-Tipton '77, Rich. Buhlig '80, Albt. Spalding '88, Eleanor Spencer '90, Eddy Brown '95, etc.

Histories by Upton, 1908, and Hackett, 1913 (early opera).

Chichester. Small cathedral-city in southern England (15 m. northeast of Portsmouth).

Names of organists are on record from 1542, among them being Weelkes 1602-23, J. Reading '74-, Kelway 1720-47, Th. Bennett 1803-, H. R. Bennett '48-, Ph. Armes '61-, Thorne '63-, Gladstone '70, J. K. Pyne '73-, Hylton-Stewart '74-, D. J. Wood '75-, Aylward '76-, F. J. Read '87-, F. J. W. Crowe 1902- and F. J. Read '21- (reappointed).

Christiania. Capital and chief city of Norway, in recent times with considerable musical importance.

At the Nationaltheater, built in 1899, the conductor from the first has been Halvorsen, who also directs symphony-concerts.

The Philharmonic Orchestra, started in 1849, was led by K. Arnold 1849-, Winter-Helm '74- and Selmer '83-96.

The Musical Union, founded in 1867, was led by Grieg 1867-, Svendsen '72-, Olsen '78- and Svendsen again '80-83.

The Conservatory, founded in 1865, has long been directed by P. Lindemann.

Birthplace of Wald. Thrane 1790, Halfdan Kjerulf 1815, J. S. Svendsen '40, Edmd. Neupert '42, Rikard Nordraak '42, Joh. Selmer '44, Erica Lie '45 (at Kongsvinger) and Hjalmar Bergström '64.

Cincinnati, O. Large city of the United States (near the southwest corner of Ohio, on the Ohio River), in the period before the Civil War sharing with St. Louis the leadership of the Middle West. It early displayed a musical interest which is now especially manifested in its recurrent festivals, its orchestra and its conservatories. A.

The Festivals, held biennially (or nearly so) since 1873, grew out of gatherings of German singing-societies from as early as about 1850. For a long period they had no rival in importance. The chief conductors have been Theo. Thomas 1873-1904, Van der Stucken 1906-12, Kunwald '14-16, Ysaÿe '18-20 and Van der Stucken '23. Works here first given include D. Buck's Golden Legend 1880, Gilchrist's Psalms '82, J. K. Paine's Song of Promise '88 and Kelley's Pilgrim's Progress 1918. G, A.

The Symphony Orchestra, as first started in 1895, was led by Van der Stucken until 1907 and then disbanded because of difficulties with the Musicians' Protective Union. In 1909 it was reorganized and has since been led by Stokowski 1909-, Kunwald '12-17, Ysaÿe '18- and Fritz Reiner '22-. In 1915 it was munificently endowed by Martha C. Dow. G, A.

The Cincinnati Conservatory, founded in 1867 by Clara Baur, was directed by her till 1912, followed by her niece, Bertha Baur. A.

The College of Music, founded in 1878 in affiliation with the Festival Association, has been directed by Theo. Thomas 1878-80, Nichols and Neff as presidents '80-94, Van der Stucken '94-99 and Gantvoort as manager '99-1920. A.

The Metropolitan College of Music was started in 1903 by Sterling, who has remained at its head.

Birthplace of Gustav Dannreuther 1853, Julie Rivé-King '57, W. S. Sterling '59 and J. M. Spargur '79.

Cleveland, O. Large city of the United States, now the fifth in size (in northern Ohio, on Lake Erie). A.

The present Symphony Orchestra was formed in 1918, being conducted from the start by Nikolai Sokolov, assisted (from 1920) by Arth. Shepherd.

In 1920 the Institute of Music was founded with E. Bloch as director.

Birthplace of J. H. Beck 1856, Ella Russell '64 and Lila P. Robeson '80.

Coblentz. Capital of the Rhine Province of Prussia, at the confluence of the Rhine and the Moselle.

At the Stadttheater Hnr. Sauer was conductor in 1895-1907, followed by L. Meinecke.

The Conservatory, founded in 1889, has been directed by L. Ebert 1889-1908, with Maszkowski '89-90, Heubner '90-1905 and Kes 1905-, the latter three being also leaders of the Musikverein.

Birthplace of J. P. Lindpaintner 1791, Frz. Hüntten '93, Joh. Müller 1801, Henriette Sontag '06 and Karl Anschütz '15.

Coburg. Small city in the south of central Germany, close to the border of Bavaria (30 m. north of Bamberg), capital of an ancient duchy and since 1826 one of the capitals of the new duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, its musical life centering in the court-establishment. See Gotha. Among the early court-directors was Melchior Franck 1603-39. The recent list includes Drouet 1836-, A. Späth '54-, Langert '73- and A. Lorenz '98-, the office usually including leadership at the court-theater and conducting the Oratorien-Verein.

Birthplace of G. S. Löhlein 1727 (at Neustadt), J. N. Forkel '49 (at Meeder), B. W. Senff 1815, Duke Ernst II '18, Selmar Bagge '23, Felix Draeseke '35, Aug. Langert '36, F. E. Kaiser '53, etc.

History of the opera by H. Hirschberg, 1910.

Cologne. Famous city on the Rhine, now the third largest city in Germany. Musically it is noted for its opera, its two principal orchestras, its several choral societies and its strong conservatory, these together making it the chief musical center in the Rhine Valley. Since 1821 it has been one of the meeting-places for the Lower Rhine Festivals (with Düsseldorf and Aix).

At the Cathedral the choirmasters or organists have included Bernhard Klein ?1813-18, Frz. Weber '38-76 (organist), Koenen '63-, Cohen '87-1910.

At the Stadtheater or the Opernhaus (1902) recent conductors have included Koessler 1881-82, Mühlendorfer '81-1906, F. Weissleder 1904-22, Knoch '09-11, Brecher '11-16, Klemperer '17- and H. H. Wetzler '19-. In 1904-11 Lohse was director and recently F. Remond.

The office of city-director, including leadership of the Gürzenich concerts (so called from the hall where they are given), has been held by K. Kreutzer 1840-46, Ferd. Hiller '50-, F. Wüllner '84-, F. Steinbach 1902- and Abendroth '15-. The orchestra has come to rank as one of the best in Europe.

The Festival conductors have been Burgmüller '21, F. Schneider '24, B. Klein '28, F. Ries '32, Mendelssohn '35, '38, K. Kreutzer '41, Dorn '44, '47, Hiller '58-83, F. Wüllner '86, 1901, H. Richter '89-98, F. Steinbach '04-13, Abendroth '22. G (Niederrhein. Musikfeste).

The Männergesangsverein has been led by Frz. Weber 1842-76, Hnr. Zöllner '85- and O. Singer '90-92. Zöllner was also head of the Wagnerverein. In 1875-1900 Seiss was conductor of the Musikalische Gesellschaft.

The directors of the Conservatory, which was established in 1850 by the city, have been Ferd. Hiller 1850-, F. Wüllner '84-, F. Steinbach 1902- and Abendroth '15-, with assistance from Klauwell in 1905-17.

In 1906 Wilhelm Heyer established the remarkable Musikhistorisches Museum (instruments, portraits, books, etc.), of which since 1909 Kinsky has been curator.

For the court-kapelle of the Elector of Cologne see under Bonn.

Birthplace of Bernhard Klein 1793, Frz. Weber 1805, Frz. Commer '13, Jacques Offenbach '19, Max Bruch '38, Bernhard Pollini '38, Aug. Bungert '46 (at Mülheim), Otto Dorn '48, Wilh. Heyer '49, Hans Müller '54, Rich. Franck '58, Rich. Gompertz '59, Karl Venth '60, Fritz Volbach '61 (at Wipperfurth), Aug. v. Othegraven '64, Felix vom Rath '66, Wilh. Niessen '67, Hans Breuer '70, etc.

Histories by Klauwell, 1900 (conservatory), G. Hagen, 1912 (opera), Wehsener, 1913 (orchestra), E. Wolff, 1915 (in Die Stadt Köln), etc.

Copenhagen. Capital and by far the largest city of Denmark, notable since the 16th century as one of the chief musical centers in northern Europe and now conspicuous for its opera, its orchestras, its various choral organizations and its conservatories.

Among the organists at the Fruekirke (Lutheran Cathedral) have been Weyse 1805-42, Hylsted '76-79, O. Mallng 1900- and G. Helsted 04-. Mallng was at the S. Petrikirke in 1878-91 and at the Heiligeisteskirke in '91-1900. Among other organists may be named Nebelong, from 1881 at the Johanneskirke, and Barfod, from 1894 at the Frederika- or Markkirke.

Among organists or directors in the court-kapelle may be named the Borchgrevincks about 1600, Scalabrini 1748-53 and '75-81, Sarti '55-75, J. A. P. Schulz '87-95, Kuhlau 1818-32, Gläser '42-, Gade '61-, Svendsen '83-, F. Rung 1908- and Hoeberg '12-. With Gade was also associated Paulli in 1864-83 and in 1851-70 Lövenskjold was court-organist.

At the Nationaltheater (Opera) the conductors in recent years have been the court-directors as above. In 1817-34 Schall held the office. Opera is also given at the Kasino and the Volkstheater.

Besides those of the Royal Orchestra excellent concerts are given at the Tivoli (Gardens), among the conductors being C. J. Andersen 1894- and Schnedler-Petersen 1909-.

The Musical Union from about 1850 rose to distinction under Gade, followed in '65-70 by Paulli. The present leader is A. C. Nielsen.

The Cecilia (for older church-music), founded in 1851, has been led by H. Rung 1851-, Paulli '72- and F. Rung '77-1914. The latter also led a Madrigal Choir from 1887. The Concert Union was started by Mallng in 1884 and led by him for some years.

The Conservatory, originally endowed by Moldenhauer, but since 1902 under royal patronage, was directed from 1867 by N. W. Gade, J. P. E. Hartmann and Paulli, the first and third being followed in '91 by Winding and Helsted and Hartmann in 1900 by J. G. Matthison-Hansen. In 1899 O. Mallng took Winding's place. Since 1915 the directorate has been shared by C. Nielsen, A. W. Gade and A. Svendsen.

The Horneman Conservatory has been conducted by Horneman 1880-, F. Rung '93 and Holm 1906-. There is an Organists' School under Nebelong and an Orchestral School under Schnedler-Petersen.

For holders of the Ancker Scholarship, see under Prizes.

Birthplace of A. P. Berggreen 1801, J. P. E. Hartmann '05, J. F. Fröhlich '06, Henrik Rung '07, S. H. Paulli '10, N. W. Gade '17, Erik Siboni '28, Ed. Lassen '30, L. V. Tofte '32, Emil Hartmann '36, Jörgen Mallng '36, S. V. H. Kalhauge '40, E. C. Horneman '41, Asger Hamerik '43, Joachim Andersen '47, A. K. W. Grandjean '47, J. H. Nebelong '47, Angul Hammerich '48, Otto Mallng '48, P. E. Lange-Müller '50 (at Frederiksberg), Victor Bendix '51, Fred. Rung '54, Corn. Rybner '55, Gustav Helsted '57, Ludwig Holm '58, A. W. Gade '60, Rob. Hansen '60, Wm. Behrend '61, L. C. A. Glass '64, Alfred Tofte '65, Sophus Danning '67, F. V. Henriques '67, Erik Schmedes '68 (at Gjentofte), Georg Hoeberg '72, Roger Henriksen '76, Ludolf Nielsen '76 (at Nørre Tvede), P. A. v. Klenau '83, etc.

Histories of the Conservatory by Hammerich, 1892, Bondesen, 1898, and Hetsch, 1917; of the singing-society Arion by Seodder, 1899; of the Chamber Music Union (founded in 1868) by Hammerich, 1918; and more general by F. Bendix, 1913, Lindström, 1913, and Hammerich, 1921.

Cracow. Large city at the western end of Galicia, now assigned to Poland, though from 1796 mostly claimed by Austria. For three centuries from 1320 it was the capital of Poland; her kings were crowned there till 1764 and its cathedral is the national mausoleum. Cracow and Lemberg (200 m. to the east) are the musical centers of the region between Hungary and Poland, in both cases artistic activity centering in a historic cathedral, significant opera-seasons, orchestral and choral societies and one or more conservatories.

At the Cathedral (R. C.) a special endowment (since 1543) supports the Rorantische Hofkapelle, which still maintains music in the pure Palestrina-style (history by Chybinski, 1910). The Opera has been conducted recently by Wallek-Walewski.

The head of the Konservatorium für Musikfreunde in 1918-21 was Zelenski.

Birthplace of Frz. Mirecki 1791, Ant. de Kontski 1817, Jan Drozdowski '58, Hnr. Opienski '70, Hans Kronold '72, Josef Hofmann '76, Ad. Chybinski '80 and Ignaz Friedmann '82 (at Podgorze).

Histories by Kubalski, 1906 (in Krakauer Bibliothek), and Tomkowicz, 1907 (in Krakauer Jahrbuch).

Crema. Small town in the center of northern Italy (about midway between Milan and Cremona), with a somewhat significant cathedral. At the Cathedral the choirmasters have included Gazzaniga 1791- and Pavesi 1818-50.

Birthplace of Brigitta Banti 1759, Stef. Pavesi '79 and Giov. Bottesini 1821.

Histories by L. Barbieri and V. Benvenuti, 1888.

Cremona. Small city in northern Italy (on the Po about 50 m. southeast of Milan), musically famous in the 16-18th centuries as the chief seat of Italian artistic violin-making (cf. Brescia), especially in the hands of the Amati, Guarneri and Stradivari families. Its cathedral is also noted. G.

Among the maestri at the Cathedral are Ingegneri 1576-92, Massaini '94-98, Scaletta 1607-?, Merula ('28-39) '52-?, etc.

Birthplace of many Amatis (Andr. ?1530, Ant. '55, Girol. '56, F. A. '90, Nic. '96, Girol. 1649), Guarneri (Andr. ?1626, Pietro '55, Gius. '66, G. A. del Gesù '87, Pietro '95), and Stradivari (Ant. 1644, Franc. '71, Omobono '79), also Cost. Porta 1530?, Tib. Massaini '50?, Cesare de Zachariis '65?, Bened. Pallavicino '60?, Monteverdi '67, Ign. Donati '90?, G. B. Vitali 1644?, Storione 1751, Franc. Bianchi '52, Carlo Bignami 1808 and Amilcare Poncielli '34.

Histories by Luechini, 1887-95 (the last on the Cathedral). See also many works on violin-making.

Czernowitz. Capital of Bukowina (in 1775-1919 a duchy or crownland of Austria-Hungary, now attached to Rumania), having a cathedral (Orthodox Greek), a university and considerable musical life.

In 1874-1908 A. Hřimaly was head of the Musikschule and the Musikverein, followed in the former by Horner and in the latter by Krämer. Birthplace of Eus. Mandyczewski 1857, Ldw. Rottenberg '64 and Ottokar Hřimaly '83.

Histories by Norst, 1903, and A. Hřimaly, 1904.

Danzig. Important port on the Baltic, capital of the province of West Prussia, through much of its long history actually or virtually a free city and long prominent in the Hanseatic League (with Hamburg, Bremen and Lübeck). Musically a center in northeastern Germany (midway between Stettin and Königsberg), having good opera-seasons, a noted choral society and more than one conservatory, besides the historic Marienkirche.

Recent conductors at the Stadttheater include Weingartner 1885-87, Hoesslin 1907-, Huber-Anderach '09- and H. Hess '10-. Among the directors have been Emil Fischer 1863-70, Stolzenberg '78-82 and (recently) C. Grützner. Leaders of the Singakademie (founded in 1817) have included Markull 1836-87, G. Schumann '90-, Heidingsfeld '96- and F. Binder 1901-.

At the Marienkirche in the 17th century the organists included Siefert 1623- and Hinsch (or Hintze) '66-?, with K. Förster 1627-52, B. Erben '58- and J. V. Medre '87-98 as choirmasters.

The head of the Danzig Conservatory (founded in 1899) is Heidingsfeld, of the West Prussia Conservatory F. Binder and of the Riemann Conservatory (founded in 1906) Wermbter 1912-.

Birthplace of Paul Siefert 1586, Kaspar Förster (Jr.) 1617, Christoph Bernhard '27, Arrey v. Dommer 1828, Max Abraham '31, R. F. Faltin '35, Rich. Metzdrff '44, Emil Kronke '65, Karl Schuricht '80, etc.

Histories by Rauschning, 1911, Günther, 1911 (in Westpreuss. Geschichtsvereins Mittheilungen), Medem, 1892, and Siebenfreund, 1917 (both on the Gesangverein or Singakademie).

Darmstadt. Capital of the grand duchy of Hesse (15 m. south of Frankfurt), with court-music since early in the 17th century and especially notable during the past hundred years. At times its opera has attained much brilliance. Among the older court-directors are Herbst 1619-23, Briegel '70- and Graupner 1712-60. Under the new régime have been Vogler 1807-, K. J. Wagner '11-22, A. Ganz '25-40, K. Mangold '48-, F. Marpurg '68-73, Schlösser '76-, Dehaan '87-, Weingartner 1914- and Balling '19-, with the additional conductors at the Hoftheater Schindelmeisser 1853-, Nešvadba '64-76, E. Steinbach '75-77, Ottenheimer 1914-, Pander '19- and Rosenstock '22-. In 1813-46 Rinck was court-organist, having been town-organist from 1805.

Among the local institutions are a Musikverein and a Mozart-Verein, usually led by some of the court-musicians.

The Akademie der Tonkunst is directed by Wilh. Schmitt and Willy Hutter.

Birthplace of Chrp. Schetky 1740, Louis Schlösser 1800, G. G. Gervinus '05, Karl Mangold '13, K. F. Pohl '19, Ad. Schlösser '30, Karl Muck '59, Hnr. Spangenberg '61, Karl Hallwachs '70, Frdr. Noack '90, etc.

Histories by Pasqué, 1852-68, Knispel, 1900-10, Nagel, 1901- (survey to 1800 in preparation), Kleefeld, 1904, and Noack, 1916.

Dessau. Capital of the duchy of Anhalt (35 m. southeast of Magdeburg), with court-music often important (including opera).

Among the court-directors have been F. W. Rust 1775-96, Lichtenstein '98-1800, Frdr. Schneider 1821-, Th. Schneider '54- (church-music only), Ed. Thiele '60-, Klughardt '82-, Mikorey 1902-, Knappertsbusch '19-22. G. Preitz is now state-organist.

Birthplace of F. W. Rust 1739, Aug. Mühling '86, Aug. Lindner 1820, Bern. Cossmann '22, Wilh. Rust '22, Th. Schneider '27, Jul. Tausch '27, Frdr. and Leop. Grützner '32, '35, Walter Pielke '48, etc.

Histories by Hosäus, 1882, Urban, 1909, and Arth. Seidl, 1913.

Detmold. Capital of the principality of Lippe (about 50 m. southwest of Hanover).

Among the court-directors have been Brahms 1854-58, Bargheer '63-76 (the kapelle then temporarily disbanded) and Rögely 1915-20. Since 1908 Weweler has led the Oratorienverein. Birthplace of Ldw. Deppe 1828 (at Alverdissen).

Detroit, Mich. The fourth largest city in the United States, situated on the river connecting Lakes Huron and Erie (facing Canada). The Symphony Orchestra was founded by Weston Gales in 1914 and conducted by him till 1918, when Gabrilovitch succeeded. A.

The Madrigal and Orpheus Clubs are led by C. F. Morse.

Of many music-schools the Detroit Conservatory is the oldest (founded in 1874), directed by J. H. Hahn 1874- and York 1902-. G. A. Birthplace of Max Bendix 1866.

Dijon. One of the chief cities of eastern France, with a fine cathedral and a branch of the Paris Conservatory.

The École de Musique, founded in 1868, has been directed by Poiset 1868-, Lévêque 1904- and L. Dumas '19-.

Birthplace of Arbeau, 1519, J. P. Rameau 1683, Claude Balbâtre 1729, Stéphen Morelot, 1820, Chas. Poiset '22, André Cœuroy '91, etc.

Donaueschingen. Small town in southern Baden (30 m. east of Freiburg), the residence of the princes of Fürstenburg.

Among the court-directors have been Fiala 1792-, K. Kreutzer 1816- and J. W. Kalliowoda '22-66. The opera-conductor in ?1820-49 was K. Keller.

Since 1921 the Prince has maintained chamber-music festivals to promote music by recent composers.

Birthplace of Wilh. Kalliowoda 1827.

Histories by the court-library, 1914, and Burkard, 1921 (in Neue Musikzeitung).

Dordrecht (Dort). Small city of Holland (10 m. southeast of Rotterdam).

In 1860-1918 Van der Linden was leader of the Harmonie, Liedertafel and other societies.

Kes has also conducted series of concerts. Birthplace of Corn. van der Linden 1839, Cornelia Van Zanten '55 and Willem Kes '56.

Dortmund. Large city in Westphalia (about 30 m. south of Münster), with opera-seasons, orchestral and choral concerts, music-schools, etc.

At the Stadttheater the director is H. Bollmann and the chief conductor C. Wolfram.

The leader of the Musikverein in 1882-1921 was Janssen (also of the Männergesangsverein), who was named city-director from 1890. The Philharmonisches Orchester was led by Hüttner in 1887-1919, who also organized and directed the Conservatory (from about 1890) and an Orchesterschule.

Birthplace of D. F. E. Wilsing 1809 (at Hörde), Karl Pottgiesser '61, Wilh. Middelschulte '63 (at Werne), Karl Corbach '67, Otto Nodnagel '70, etc.

History by Feldmann, 1830.

Dresden. Capital of the kingdom of Saxony and now the sixth city in size in Germany, owing its rise in material and artistic prominence originally to the extravagance of the Electors Augustus II and III (1670-1763), who were also kings of Poland. But the musical importance of the court began more than a century earlier. At various times it has been one of most conspicuous centers for opera and for varied concert-life. Throughout the 18th century and till 1840 Italian and German influences struggled for control in the opera and also Protestantism and Catholicism in the church-music. To-day the chief interests focus in the two opera-houses and the orchestra inherited from the royal régime, various choral organizations, the several leading churches, the historic Kreuzschule and the modern Conservatory.

Among the older court-directors were Joh. Walther 1548- (in 1525-30 also in the Elector's service at Torgau), Le Maistre '54-, Scandelli '68-, Pinelli '80-, G. Forster, Jr. '86-, R. Michael '87-, Schütz 1617-, C. Pallavicino '72-73, V. Albrici '76-, C. Bernhard '81- and N. A. Strungk '93-96, with Pallavicino again in 1686-88 as director of the newly-introduced Italian opera. In 1717-19 Lotti brought an Italian troupe to Dresden repeatedly, and later Italian styles were fostered by Porpora in 1728-33 and '48-51, in competition with Hasse, director in 1731-63 (kapelle then disbanded for a time), J. G. Naumann '76-1801 (with Seydelmann and Schuster as associates from 1787), Paër 1802–07, Morlacchi (Italian opera) '10–41, C. M. v. Weber (German opera) '16–26 (at the end with Marschner), Rich. Wagner '42–49, K. A. Krebs '50–, Schuch '72–, and Kutschbach 1914–. The leaders of German opera have included K. A. Reissiger '26–, Rietz '60–, F. Wüllner '77–, Hagen '83–, F. Reiner '1914– and F. Busch '22–, assisted by Striegler 1912– and K. Pembaur '13–. The present Hoftheater was built by Semper in 1878 and later supplemented by the Albert-Theater in the Neustadt on the east side of the Elbe. Among the earlier court-organists were H. L. Hasler 1608–12, Klemm '25–51 (with Weckmann at times), B. Albrici '54–63 and Furchheim '66–82; the later series includes A. Klengel 1816–52, Joh. Schneider '25–64, Kretschmer '54–1901, Berthold '64–82, G. Merkel '64–85 and K. Pembaur 1901–. (duplication due to there being two positions, one in the Court Chapel proper, the other in the Court Catholic Church). The development of the court-orchestra into general importance belongs mostly to the 19th century.

At the Kreuzschule, founded in the 13th century and, like the more famous Thomasschule in Leipzig, important as an agency of musical education in relation to church-music, in the long list of cantors are to be named S. Baumann 1539–53, B. Petermann '89–1606, Lohr '25–, Beutel '54–92, Petritz '94–1715, T. C. Reinhardt 1720–, Homilius '55–, C. E. Weinlig '85–, C. T. Weinlig 1814–17, J. Otto 1830–, Wermann '76– and O. Richter 1906–. The cantorate includes care of the music at the Kreuzkirche, where A. Sittard was organist in 1903–12, followed by Pfannstiehl. Among other church-musicians may be named V. Schurig 1873–93 cantor at the Annenkirche, F. Reichel '78–89 at the Johanniskirche, O. Thomas '90–1910 at the Paulikirche, Stier 1911– at the Versöhnungskirche, etc.

The oldest of the many choral organizations is the Dreyssig-Singakademie, among whose conductors have been Dreyssig 1806–15, Joh. Schneider '30–, A. Reichel '57–, G. Merkel '67–73, Müller-Reuter '89–93, etc. In 1914 the Robt. Schumann Singakademie, which from 1901 was led by A. Fuchs, from '10 by Pembaur and from '13 by Edwin Lindner, was merged in a new Singakademie, led by Lindner, who in 1915 started also the Philharmonic Orchestra. In 1848 Kade founded the Cäcilia (for older church-music), followed in '60 by Kretschmer.

The Königliches Konservatorium was opened in 1856 and has been directed by K. A. Reissiger and Tröstler 1856–, J. F. Pudor '59–, H. Pudor '87–, E. Krantz '90– and his sons '98– (with J. Rietz '60–, F. Wüllner '77– and A. Hagen '84–90 as artistic directors). Among other institutions are the Pädagogische Musikschule, conducted since 1883 by Kaden, and the Dresdene Musikschule, managed by H. Schneider (with many branches).

The music-section of the Royal Library has been made significant under M. Fürstenau 1852– and K. A. Riccius '89–93, etc.

Birthplace of Groh 1580?, T. Michael '92, Furchheim 1635?, J. G. Naumann 1741, Jos. Schuster '48, Frz. Seydelmann '48, G. B. Bierey '72, A. A. Klengel '83, Mor Hauptmann '92, Otto Kade 1819, Mor. Fürstenau '24, Hans v. Bülow '30, K. H. Döring '34, Otto Kitzler '34, Eugen Krantz '44, Felix Schmidt '48, Hugo Jüngst '53, Th. Müller-Reuter '58, Otto Schmid '58, Otto Lohse '59, Hugo Dechert '60, Konrad Heubner '60, Th. Gerlach '61, Kurt Hösel '62, Hur. Pudor '65, Karl and Paul Miersch '65, '68, Karl v. Kasel '66, Hugo Röhr '66, Paul Büttner '70, Paul Scheinpflug '75, Joh. Reichert '76, Karl Ehrenberg '78, Kurt Striegler '86, etc.

Histories by Fürstenau, 1849–81, Mannstein, 1863, Pröls, 1876, O. Schmid, 1893–1919, Brescius, 1898, A. Reichert, 1908, Pembaur, 1920, etc., with many works on individual court-musicians.

Dublin. Capital and largest city of Ireland, having two cathedrals, a university (Trinity College), an orchestra, choral societies and several music-schools.

At Christ Church Cathedral, where records run back to 1546, the longer terms as organist have been those of Bateson 1609–30, Hawkshaw '61–88, D. Rosingrave '98–, R. Rosingrave 1727–, G. Walsh '47–, R. Woodward '65–77, Doyle '80–1813, W. Warren 1805–41, F. J. Robinson '16–41, R. P. Stewart '44–, Horan '94–, Fitzgerald 1907–, Kitson '13– and Weaving '20–.

At St. Patrick's Cathedral (also Protestant), with records from 1509, long terms have been those of Jewitt 1631–42, Hawkshaw '61–78, D. Rosingrave '98–, R. Rosingrave 1727–47, Cogan '80–, J. Mathews 1806–27, J. Robinson '29–43, R. P. Stewart '52–, W. Murphy '61–, Marchant '79– and Hewson 1920–.

At the University the music-professors have been Earl Mornington 1764–74, John Smith 1845–, R. P. Stewart '61–, Prout '94–, P. C. Buck 1910– and Kitson '20–. In 1774–1845 there was no appointment.

The Orchestral Society was organized in 1899 by Esposito, who has remained its conductor.

Since 1897 annual festivals (Feis Ceoil) have been held to promote Irish music by means of competitions and performances (two of the earlier of these were held in Belfast).

The Royal Irish Academy of Music was founded in 1848 and reorganized in 1856 (the title 'Royal' being acquired in 1872). There is no director, the control being in a Board of Governors.

Birthplace of Michael Kelly 1762, T. S. Cooke '82, John Field '82, Samuel Lover '97, M. W. Balfe 1808, R. M. and W. C. Levey '11, '37, Jos. Robinson '15, R. P. Stewart '25, P. S. Gilmore '29, G. W. Torrance '35 (at Rathmines), Tom Karl '46, Barton McGuckin '52, C. V. Stanford '52, Victor Herbert '59,

H. P. Greene '65 (at Old Connaught House), etc.

Durham. Small city in northern England (about 60 m. north of York), with a famous cathedral and a university.

At the Cathedral the roll of organists (from 1557) includes R. Hutchinson 1614-46, W. Greggs '81-, Heseltine 1710-, Ebdon '63-1811, Henshaw 1813-, Armes '62- and Culley 1907.

At the University the music-professors have been Armes 1897- and J. C. Bridge 1908-.

Birthplace of Thos. Ebdon 1738, Nich. Kilburn 1843 (at Bishop Auckland) and Algernon Ashton '59.

Düsseldorf. The second city of the Rhine Province (25 m. below Cologne), for more than a century noted for its Academy of Painting and its musical enterprise. Since 1818 it has been the chief of the three meeting-places of the Lower Rhine Festivals (with Cologne and Aix). Its musical life has been largely guided by a town- or city-director, in charge of the opera, the municipal orchestra and chorus, the music in the leading churches etc. There are now also various music-schools.

The list of municipal directors includes Mendelssohn 1833-, J. Rietz '36-, F. Hiller '47-, Schumann '50-, J. Tausch '53-, Butths '90- and Panzner 1909-. Since 1903, however, the opera at the Stadttheater has been in charge of Ludwig Zimmermann, with various conductors.

The Festival conductors have been Burgmüller '18-22, Spohr '26, F. Ries '30, Mendelssohn '33-42, J. Rietz '45, '52, '69, Hiller '53, '55, '60, O. Goldschmidt '63, '66, Rubinstein '72, Joachim '75, '78, Breunung '81, Brahms '84, Tausch '87, F. Wüllner '90, Butths '93, R. Strauss '96, Panzner '08-14. G (Niederrhein. Musikfeste).

The Brahms-Konservatorium was directed by Eccarius-Sieber in 1900-16, and the Düsseldorfer Konservatorium by Butths since its foundation in 1902.

Birthplace of Karl Almenräder 1786, Julius Eichberg '24, Frdr. Niecks '45, E. S. J. Van der Straeten '55, Max Alvary '56, etc.

History by Baltz, 1887.

Edinburgh. Capital of Scotland, the seat of a cathedral, a university and various choral societies. It has always been the center for whatever music-publishing has been undertaken in Scotland.

The oldest church is St. Giles', which was at one time actually the Cathedral and is still popularly so called. But the present Cathedral is St. Mary's, consecrated in 1879. Its organist since that time has been T. H. Collinson.

The Reid Professorship at the University is based on a bequest of Gen. John Reid (d. 1809). It has been held by John Thomson 1839-, H. R. Bishop '41-, H. H. Pierson '44-, John Donaldson '45-, Oakeley '65-, Niecks '91-and Tovey 1914-. As provided in the deed of gift, an annual Reid Concert was given till 1893 (when the institution was set aside), after 1867 having been much expanded into 'festival' dimensions. G (Reid Concerts).

The Reid Symphony Orchestra has been led by Tovey since 1917. For the Scottish Orchestra see under Glasgow.

The Choral Union has been led by Collinson since 1883.

Birthplace of Mary A. Paton 1802, David Bap-tie '22, Mme. Parepa-Rosa '36, A. C. Mac-kenzie '47, J. F. Rowbotham '54, Helen Hope-kirk '56, Louis Rée '61, J. D. Brown '62, Chas. Macpherson '70, etc.

Eisenach. Small town in Thuringia (about 50 m. west of Weimar), now the second center of the grand-duchy of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, but earlier the capital of a separate duchy. In the 17-18th centuries it was one of the headquarters of the Bach clan.

Among the court- or town-musicians the most famous was Joh. Christoph Bach (cousin of J. S. Bach's father), who was organist in 1665-1703 and the ablest of the older Bachs. Hebenstreit was court-director in 1706-09, followed by Telemann (in residence to 1711, but in titular service to '18). Joh. Ambrosius Bach (J. S. Bach's father) was in the town-band in 1671-95. Recent organists and directors have been Thureau 1863-, Rinkens 1905- and W. Armbrust '22-.

In the villa once used by the poet Fritz Reuter the Wagner Museum collected by Von Oesterlein of Vienna has been located since about 1900. One of the early acts of the Neue Bach-Gesellschaft (started at Leipzig in 1903) was the purchase of J. S. Bach's birthplace as a Bach Museum.

Birthplace of G. C. Bach 1641, Joh. Nikolaus Bach '69, Joh. Jakob Bach '82, Joh. Sebastian Bach '85, Joh. Ernst Bach 1722, J. W. Hertel '27 and Otto Urbach 1871.

Elberfeld-Barmen. Large double commercial city in the Rhine Province (25 m. north-east of Cologne), with much varied musical life. Among conductors at the Elberfeld Stadttheater have been H. Sauer 1892-95, Wetzler 1908-09 and Knappertsbusch '13-18. In 1909-11 Heger was at the Barmen Opern-Theater.

From 1854 Reinecke led the Konzertverein at Barmen, followed in '59-97 by A. Krause, while O. Lüstner was city-director in '77-89 and Hagel in '95-96. From '85 Rauchenecker led an Orchesterverein in Barmen and in '89-1906 one in Elberfeld.

Among various music-schools, Conservatories in both cities are now directed by Potthof-Zimmermann (that at Barmen founded in 1883, that at Elberfeld in 1889, the latter under Rauchenecker in '89-1906).

Elberfeld is the birthplace of Karl Riedel 1827 (at Kronenberg), Wilh. Bäumker '42, Ernst Heuser '63, Louis Koemmenich '66, Alfred Remy '70, Hans Knappertsbusch '88, etc.

Ely. Small town in the east of England (15 m. north of Cambridge), the seat of a famous cathedral which has been of decided musical importance.

The notable roll of organists at the Cathedral (earliest entry in 1453) includes Tye 1541-, Rob. White '62-, J. Farrant '66-72, Barcroft '79-, Amner 1610-, Claxton '41-, J. Ferrabosco '62-, Jas. Hawkins, Sr. '83-, Kempton 1729-62, H. Skeats, Sr. '78-, H. Skeats, Jr. 1804-, James '31-, Chipp '66-, Harwood '87-, Noble '92-, H. P. Allen '98-, A. W. Wilson 1901- and Ponsonby '19-.

Erfurt. Noted city of moderate size in Thuringia (midway between Weimar and Gotha), in the 13-15th centuries virtually a free city (member of the Hanseatic League in the 15th), but before and after under the control of the Archbishops of Mayence, until in 1802 assigned to Prussia. In 1392-1816 it had a university of importance (the first in Germany to have four faculties). Its musical interest centers in its being in the 17-18th centuries one of the headquarters for the Bach clan, in its old Protestant churches (the famous Cathedral is Catholic), its energetic societies and its music-schools.

Among the early town-cantors were H. Praetorius 1580-82, Joh. Bach 1635- and Joh. Egidius Bach '73-1717. Joh. Bach was organist at the Predigerkirche, as also were J. Pachelbel 1678-, A. N. Vetter '90- and J. H. Buttstedt '91-1727.

In 1906-16 Wetz was conductor of the Singakademie, the Musikverein and other societies, and Kopff is now in charge of the Oratorienverein.

At the Thuringes Landeskonservatorium the director since 1912 has been W. Hansmann, with Rinkens since 1922 over the Lehrerseminar. The head of the Akademie der Tonkunst is E. Voigt.

Birthplace of Mich. Altenburg 1584 (at Alach), Joh. Ambrosius Bach 1645 (father of J. S. Bach), J. J. Walther '50, J. H. Buttstedt '66, Joh. Bernhard Bach '76, J. G. Walther '84, W. H. Pachelbel '85, Konst. Bellermann '96, Jakob Adlung '99, J. C. Kittel 1732, F. V. Buttstedt '35, J. W. Hässler '47, J. F. Bellermann '95, A. G. Ritter 1811, Karl Reinthaler '22, Otto Gumprecht '23, Ed. Mollenhauer '27, Rob. Schwalm '45, Oscar Brückner '57, Rich. Hagel '72, etc.

Histories by Lemcke, 1886, and Pieck, 1899.

Erlangen. Small university-town in Bavaria (10 m. north of Nuremberg).

The list of University-directors includes J. G. Herzog 1854-, Oechsler '88- and Ernst Schmidt 1917-, the last two being also head of the Institut für Kirchenmusik.

Eton. Small town on the Thames, opposite Windsor, the seat of Eton College, one of the most noted of the English public schools.

Records of organists at the College Chapel are found from about 1575. Until 1867 they were usually drawn from St. George's Chapel at Windsor; since then they have included Hayne 1867-, Maclean '72-, Barnby '75-, Lloyd '92- and Basil Johnson 1914-.

Exeter. Important cathedral-city in the west of England (Devonshire).

The roll of organists at the Cathedral begins about 1585 and includes Langdon 1753-, Wm. Jackson '77-, Jas. Paddon 1804-, S. S. Wesley '35-, Alfred Angel '42-, D. J. Wood '76- and Ernest Bullock 1919-. In 1609-44 Edward Gibbons was priest-vicar, though apparently not organist.

Birthplace of Matt. Locke 1630?, Rich. Langdon 1729?, W. B. Gilbert 1829, Wm. Jackson '30, W. H. Cummings '31, (at Sidbury), etc.

Ferrara. Small city in the valley of the Po (about 60 m. southwest of Venice), in the 15-16th centuries, when under dukes of the Este family, famous as a center for painting and literature, now slightly notable musically for its opera and conservatory.

Among the court-directors from about 1530 were Vicentino, Gallus, A. della Viola and de Rore, with the organists Berchem 1555-? and Luzzaschi '76-1607.

Among the choirmasters at the Cathedral were G. F. Tosi 1683-90? and Bellinzani 1722-26. Grandi was at S. Spirito in 1610-17.

Early musical influence was exerted by the Accademia della Morte and the Accademia dello Spirito Santo (similar in purpose to many other clubs in Italian cities).

The Istituto Musicale Frescobaldi was long directed by P. Neri, followed now by G. Cattolica.

Birthplace of Lud. Agostini 1534, Fr. Milleville '65-, Girol. Frescobaldi '83, Ant. Draghi 1635, P. B. Bellinzani '90?, Lucrezia Agujari 1743 and Tancredi Mantovani 1864.

Histories by Gennari, 1883 (opera), Solerti, 1891 (court), Bennati, 1912 (in local history), etc.

Florence. Famous large city in upper central Italy (about 75 m. south of Bologna), from the 12th century one of the leading commercial cities of Europe and soon also a noted center for art and letters, particularly during the period dominated by the Medici family (1380-1730). From 1570 it was the capital of the grand-duchy of Tuscany. In 1865-71 it was the temporary capital of the new kingdom of Italy.

In musical history it was twice the scene of important innovations that presently affected the whole progress of the art—about 1300, at the rise of the so-called 'ars nova', and just before 1600, when the 'stilo rappresentativo' was devised. Both of these innovations were reactions against ecclesiastical polyphony as an exclusive method of composition and both tended to exalt solo melody with accompaniment (the one primarily vocal, the other vocal with instruments). The first led to the cultivation of the ballad, canzona and madrigal (secular part-songs), while the second opened the way for the musical drama or opera. In both cases, however, the ablest development of the new styles took place elsewhere.

The court-music remained important through the 18th century, with some emphasis, also, on church-music. Interest now centers in the opera, organizations for orchestral and chamber-music and the conservatory. G.

Among the court-directors have been Cortecchia 1539-, Malvezzi '71-90?, Bati 1606-, M. da Gagliano '11-40? (with Frescobaldi as organist in 1628-33), Habermann ?1735-40, Nardini '70-, G. F. Mosel '93-, Mabellini 1847-97. In the 16-17th centuries the maestri at S. Lorenzo were usually drawn from the court-cappella.

The chief headquarters for opera is the Teatro della Pergola (founded in 1638, present building erected in 1857). Opera is also given at the Teatro Verdi. From 1848 Mabellini was leader or conductor at the former.

In the old days Florence was one of the places where the Accademie flourished, the most noted being the Accademia Filarmonica. Since the unification of Italy it has been prominent for its choral and orchestral societies, especially the Cherubini (choral), led by Ehlerst 1863-, Von Bülow '69- and Buonamici '73-1914, the Società del Quartetto and the Società Orchestrale (both started about 1865).

The Regio Istituto Musicale, founded in 1860 (on the basis of earlier schools), has been directed by Casamorata 1860-81, G. Tacchinardi 1891- and Pizzetti 1917-.

Birthplace of several workers in the 'ars nova' in the early 14th century, Landino 1325?, Aron 1490?, Giov. and Paolo Animuccia 1500?, Fil. Neri '15, A. F. Doni '19, Vinc. Galilei '33?, Pietro Strozzi '45?, Jac. Peri '61, Ott. Rinuccini '62?, Fil. Vitali '85?, G. B. Doni '94, Tenaglia 1630?, J. B. Lully '39, F. B. Conti '82, Vittoria Tesi 1700, G. F. Mosel '54, Bern. Mangozzi '58, Luigi Cherubini '60, Ferd. Giorgetti '96, Bald. Gamucci 1822, Giov. Giovacchini '25, Franc. Cortesi '26, Ciro Pinsuti '29 (at Sinalunga), Carlotta Patti '40, Gius. Buonamici '46, Reg. Grazzini '48, Aless. Kraus, Jr. '53, Fer. Busoni (at Empoli), Mario Ancona '70, Luisa Tetrizzini '74, Amadeo Bassi '76, Alb. Bimboni '82, Ezio Camussi '83, Mario Castelnuovo '95, etc.

Histories by Puliti, 1884, Ademollo, 1885, Gandolfi, 1892-1914, Mussi, 1896, Pavan, 1901, C. Lozzi, 1902, Solerti, 1903-05, A. Bonaventura, 1910 (in La Toscana al del fine Granducato), G. Piccini, 1912, etc.

Frankfort-on-the-Main. Large city in western Germany (25 m. east of the Rhine), until 1866 one of the great free cities and then incorporated into Hesse-Nassau. From 1356 till 1806 it was the place where the emperors of the Holy Roman Empire were elected and crowned, and in 1816-66 the German Federal Diet had its seat here. Its commercial prominence from the 13th century was at first associated with the holding of a notable annual fair. Its musical importance belongs almost wholly to the later 19th century, though foreshadowed long before. It now has one of the finest opera-houses in Europe, many superior orchestral and choral concerts, more than one strong music-school, a music-history museum, etc.

Among early city-directors were Herbst 1623-36, '46-66, G. P. Telemann 1712-, Bodinus '21- and J. B. König '27-58.

At the Stadttheater, replaced in 1880 by the new Opernhaus, recent conductors have been Golttermann 1853-92, I. Lachner '61-75, Frank '77-79, Dessoff '81-, Rottenberg '92-now, C. Wolfram '98-1914, Pittrich 1901-04, F. Neumann '04-19, Pollak '12-17, Brecher '16-20, Lert '20-, and Szenkar '20-. Besides opera the orchestra gives first-class symphony-concerts; hence the employment of more than one leading conductor.

The more recent conductors of the famous Museum Concerts, founded in 1808, have been Kogel 1891-, Hausegger 1903-, Mengelberg '07-, Furtwängler '20- and Scherchen '22-.

The oldest of the choral societies is the Cäcilienverein, founded in 1818 and conducted by Schelble 1818- (assisted in 1836 by Mendelssohn and Hiller), Ferd. Ries '37-, K. Voigt '38-40, Karl Müller '60-, Grütters '92-, Mengelberg 1908-20. The Rühlscher Gesangverein, founded in 1852, has been led by Rühl 1852-74, Kniese '76-, B. Scholz '84-, S. Ochs 1908-, Schuricht '10?-, and Pander '21-. Various other societies might be mentioned.

The oldest educational institution is the Musikschule, started in 1860 and directed by H. Henkel 1860-99 and Hauff 1860-91 (now by Frl. S. Henkel), but the most famous is the Hoch-Konservatorium (so called from the giver of the original endowment), whose directors since its foundation in 1878 have been Raff 1878-, B. Scholz '82-, I. Knorr 1908- and Bauszner '16-. In 1885 Max Schwarz started the Raff-Konservatorium, which he has since conducted.

Other educational facilities are furnished by the Musikhistorisches Museum established by Nicolas Manskopf and the noted musical library of P. A. Hirsch, of which Kathi G. Meyer has been librarian since 1922.

Birthplace of Ferd. v. Hiller 1811, Aless. Kraus, Sr. '20, Ad. Gollmick '25, Mathilde Marchesi '26, Frdr. Hermann '28, K. H. A. Reiss '29, Luise Ress '43, L. M. A. Stiehle '50, Ant. Urspruch '50, Siegr. Ochs '58, M. J. Loewengard '60, R. H. Hohenemser '70, Viktor Boschetti '71, Alf. Hertz '72, Ottilie Metzger '78, P. A. Hirsch '81, Herm. Abendroth '83, K. A. Rau '90, etc.

Histories by Pasque, 1872, Israel, 1876, Nanau, 1903 (Hoch Conservatory), J. Schneider, 1904 (Jubilee of Kirchengesangverein), Valentin, 1906, Mamroth, 1908 (opera), I. Knorr, 1908 (Museum Concerts), etc.

Freiburg. The chief city in southern Baden, having a fine cathedral, a university, regular opera-seasons, a city-orchestra and choral society, etc.

The city-director since 1890 has been G. Starke, who is one of the conductors at the opera as well as of the city-orchestra (founded in 1887). The opera-director since 1914 is Klenau. In 1919-20 C. Hildebrand led the opera, the symphony-concerts and the Chorverein. The Musik-Konservatorium is directed by G. Wille-Helbing.

Birthplace of Gustav Starke 1862.

Histories by Trenkle, 1856, and Birnschein, 1912 (city-orchestra).

Geneva. Noted city in southwestern Switzerland, now the third in size. Its location and development have associated it closely with France and Italy and it has had much importance at times in artistic and literary history. In the 16th century it became the fountain-head of Calvinistic Protestantism. Since 1920 it has been the official seat of the League of Nations. At the Cathedral (Prot.) the organist since 1887 has been Barblan, who also directs two societies for sacred music.

Recent conductors of the Concerts d'Abonnement by the city-orchestra have been Rehberg 1892-, Stavenhagen 1907- and Ansermet '15-18. The latter started the Orchestre de la Suisse-Romande in 1918. Stavenhagen also led the Société du Chant at the Conservatory in 1907-14.

The Conservatoire was founded in 1835. Its present director is Ferd. Held, with Bartholony as prefect.

Birthplace of J. J. Rousseau 1712, Sig. Thalberg 1812, Louis Nicole '63, Camilla Landi '66, Pierre de Maurice '68, A. A. Bachmann '75, Clotilde Bressler-Gianoli '75, Jean Bartholony '80, Ernest Bloch '80, etc.

History by Choisy, 1914.

Genoa. Large city in northern Italy (on the Mediterranean), always of commercial and maritime importance. Though not of the same prominence in music as several other Italian cities, it is somewhat notable for its cathedral, its opera-house (the Teatro Carlo Felice, one of the largest in Italy) and its music-schools.

The modern fame of the Carlo Felice was established under the great conductor Mariani 1852-73, followed by G. G. Rossi '73-79.

The Civico Istituto di Musica Nicolò Paganini was first started in 1829 and taken under municipal control in 1838. Among recent directors are S. A. Ferrari 1860-85 and Polleri '98-. At the Liceo Musicale Amilcare Zanella G. G. Rossi was director in 1879-85, followed by Parodi, who is still in charge.

Birthplace of G. B. Penelli 1544, Nic. Paganini 1782, Fel. Romani '88, E. C. Sivori 1815, C. E. di Barbieri '22, S. A. Ferrari '24, G. B. Polleri '55, Lor. Parodi '56, etc.

Histories (of the opera) by Del Prato, 1874, Brocca, 1895-98, etc.

Gera. Capital of the (younger) principality of Reuss (35 m. southwest of Leipzig), musically noted for its court-music and its choral society.

The recent court-directors have been Tschirch 1852-, Kleemann '89- and Laber 1914-22, all of whom have also led the Musikverein.

Ghent. Third city of Belgium (about 35 m. west of both Brussels and Antwerp), having a cathedral, a university, opera in French or Flemish, a noted conservatory, etc.

Opera is given at the Grand Théâtre or Théâtre Français (built in 1840). The direction is under De Rycke, with Deveux as conductor. The Conservatoire Royale, founded in 1835 and adopted by the state in 1879, has had as directors Mengal 1835-, Andries '51-, Samuel '71- and E. Mathieu '98-, with Miry as assistant in 1857-89. The director also conducts the Concerts du Conservatoire.

Birthplace of C. L. J. Hanssens 1777, M. J. Mengal '84, Jean Andries '98, Jos. Ghys 1801, C. L. Hanssens '02, A. M. G. Limnander '14, Karel Miry '23, J. B. van den Eeden '42, Flor. Van Duyze '43, Ed. Blaes '46, P. H. J. Lebrun '61, etc.

Histories by Neuville, 1828 (opera from 1750), P. Bergmans, 1901 (conservatory), O. Bergmans, 1912 (ditto), etc.

Giessen. Capital of Upper Hesse (35 m. north of Frankfurt), the seat of a noted university.

At the University an early music-director was Gassner 1818-26; the present incumbent is Trautmann (since 1896), who leads the Akadem. Chorverein and the orchestra of the Konzertverein.

It is to be noted that Rinck was town-organist here in 1790-1805.

Birthplace of Hnr. Neeb 1807 (at Lich), Herm. Levi '39, Ad. Hempel '68 and Reinhard Oppel '78 (at Grünberg).

Glasgow. Noted port on the west coast of Scotland (20 m. from the mouth of the Clyde), the second city in size in Great Britain, having a cathedral, a university, a fine orchestra and choral society, etc.

At the Cathedral the organist (since 1897) is H. F. R. Walton.

The Scottish Orchestra, founded in 1891, has been conducted by Henschel 1893-, Kes '96-, Wilh. Bruch '98-, Cowen 1900-, Mlynarski '10- and Ronald and Harrison (jointly) '19-, with Verbrugghen as assistant in 1903-15. G.

The Glasgow Choral and Orchestral Union includes the above and the associated choral society. The Orchestra gives annual series of concerts in Edinburgh and other Scottish cities.

Birthplace of Andr. Black 1859, Eug. d'Albert '64, F. A. Lamond '68 and Jas. Friskin '86.

Gloucester. Small city in the west of England on the Severn (midway between Bristol and Worcester), musically important for its cathedral and as being one of the seats of the famous Three Choirs Festivals (with Worcester and Hereford).

The earliest mention of an organist at the Cathedral is from 1562. The longer terms have been those of Jeffries 1682-, Hine 1710-30, M. Smith '40-, Mutlow '82-, Amott 1832-, S. S. Wesley '65-, C. H. Lloyd '76-, C. L. Williams '82- and A. H. Brewer '97-. The organ was rebuilt in 1920.

The Three Choirs Festivals date back to 1724, being therefore the oldest of the provincial festivals. They are held annually at each of the three cathedral cities in rotation (nearly 200 meetings thus far). The conductors have usually been the organists of the cathedral where the meeting occurs (but Boyce in 1739-42, Wm. Hayes in 1757-63 and Stephens in 1766). Among recent works first given at Gloucester are Parry's Prometheus Unbound 1880, Job '82, Song of Darkness and Light '98, Sinfonia Sacra, part i, 1904 and English Te Deum '13, Lloyd's Andromeda 1886, J. F. Bridge's Forging of the Anchor 1901, Brewer's Emmas 1901, Bantock's Christus '07-10 and Saint-Saëns' Terre Promise 1913. G.

Birthplace of J. S. Smith 1750, John Clarke-Whitfield '70, G. W. Morgan 1823, W. H. Hadow '59 (at Ebrington), A. H. Brewer '65, and Ivor Gurney '90.

History of the Three Choirs Festivals in successive volumes by Lysons, 1811, Amott, 1864, and Williams and Chance, 1894.

Görlitz. City of moderate size in western Silesia (near the boundaries of Saxony and Bohemia, 60 m. east of Dresden), having an orchestra and choral societies, besides some opera.

Among the organists at the Peter- und Paulskirche have been Joh. Schneider 1812-, F. A. Succo '26-39 and R. Fleischer '70-1904. The last also conducted the Singakademie.

In 1912-20 Schattschneider was city-director, conducting the Städt. Orchester and organizing a Volkschor and a Conservatory.

The Silesian Festivals, started in 1876, have often been held here.

Birthplace of Adam Puschmann 1532, Joh. Nucius '56?, J. A. Hiller 1728 (at Windisch-Ossig), Reinhold Succo 1837, Erich Kloss '63 and Otto Richter '65 (at Ebersbach).

Histories by Jecht, 1911 (festivals), and Gondolatsch, 1914.

Gotha. Small city in Thuringia (30 m. west of Weimar), one of the capitals of the duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, since the 17th century noted for its court-music. See Coburg.

Among the court-directors have been Briegel 1650-70 (cantor), J. Pachelbel '92-95 (organist), Stölzel 1719-, G. Benda '50-, Anton Schweitzer '80-87, Spohr 1805- (concert-master), A. J. Romberg '15-21, Lampert '55-, Langert '73- and A. Lorenz '98-. The last led the Musikverein in 1901-19. Since 1880 Rabich has been court-organist and director of the concert-society Liedertafel and the Kirchengesangverein.

The opera-seasons at the Hoftheater have often been important.

Birthplace of Cyr. Schneegass 1546, F. L. Benda 1746, F. L. Schreiber 1817 (at Bienstedt), Artur Eccarius-Sieber '64, etc.

Histories by Hirschberg, 1910, and Rabich, 1921.

Gothenburg. The second city of Sweden and the chief port (5 miles from the Cattegat), having a cathedral, a university, enterprising orchestral and choral societies and several music-schools. At the Cathedral recent organists have been Seldener ?1850- and Elfrida Andrée '67-.

Leaders of the Musical Union have included Smetana 1856-, Hřmaly '61-68, Hallén '72-78, '83-84 and Liljefors 1902-11, while since 1907 Stenhammer has conducted the Orchestral Union (founded in 1905). It was here that La Hay in 1782 organized the Académie de Musique, the pioneer Swedish choral society. Birthplace of Wilh. Bauck 1808, Jul. Günther '18, Henriette Nissen '19, Anders Hallén '46, K. M. Atterberg '87, etc.

Histories by W. Berg, 1914, and Lamberg, 1915 (Orchestral Union).

Göttingen. University-town in southern Hanover (about 60 m. south of Hanover).

Among the music-directors at the University have been Forkel 1778-, J. A. G. Heinroth 1818-46 and Freiberg '87-1920.

Gratz (Graz). Capital of the duchy of Styria and now the second city in the Austrian Republic (over 100 m. southwest of Vienna), having a cathedral, a university, regular opera-seasons, a notable concert-society, a conservatory, etc. In the 16-17th centuries, also, court-music had some importance.

At the Cathedral recent choirmasters or organists have been Joh. Weiss 1884-91 and Meurer 1904-. With this is more or less associated the musical training in the Theological Seminary.

The director of the Städt. Theater (present building opened in 1899) is Grevenberg, with various conductors (as S. v. Hausegger in 1895-96, Winternitz about 1900, Posa in 1911-13, L. Seitz, Markowitz, Petritsch, etc.). The oldest organization is the Styrische Musikverein, founded in 1815 and throughout its long history maintaining varied concerts and a strong conservatory, the directors being Hysel 1819-, A. Leonhardt '41-, G. Ott '43-53, jointly with Netzer '43-, W. Mayer (Rémy) '64-, K. Muck '85-, Kienzl '86-, Degner '91- Wickenhauser 1902-, Rosensteiner '07 and Mojsisovics '12-, with Spörr as orchestra-conductor in 1899-1902. Several other schools might be named.

At the University F. v. Hausegger was docent in music-history and theory in 1872-99.

Birthplace of Marie Koschak (Pachler) 1792, W. K. Mühlendorfer 1836, Emil Scaria '38, Hnr. v. Herzogenberg '43, Wilh. Gericke '45, Ernest v. Schuch '47, Ad. Doppler '50, Rich. Heuberger '50, Rich. Sahla '55, H. G. Noren '61, Marie Soldat '64, Irene v. Chavanne '68, Hedwig Materna '71, S. v. Hausegger '72, Rod. v. Mojsisovics '77, Herm. Grabner '86, etc. It is noticeable that many of these have been conductors of distinction.

Histories by H. Bischoff, 1889, Seydler, 1900 (on the Domchor, in Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch), anonymous, 1909, Karajan, 1910 (both on the Singverein), etc.

Greifswald. University-town in Pomerania (on the Baltic, 25 m. southeast from Stralsund). The music-director at the University since 1907 has been Zingel.

Groningen. Important city in the north of Holland, having a university, orchestral and choral societies and a music-school. Since about 1900 Küller has led the Harmonie-Orkest and the choral society 'Bekker', besides for a time directing the Musiekschool, in the latter succeeded by Cl. Schröder.

Birthplace of Bram Eldering 1865 and Louis Zimmermann '73.

History of the Harmonie-Orkest by Van der Funk, 1912.

Hague, The. Capital of the Netherlands, the third city in size and a center of much wealth and culture. It has been since 1899 the seat of the Hague Tribunal for international arbitration. Besides opera-seasons at the Théâtre Royal, it has an orchestra, many concert- and choral societies and a noted conservatory, with some music in connection with the court.

Recent directors of the Residentie-Orkest (so called because the city is the royal 'residence') have been Viotta 1896- and Arooij 1917-. From 1883 and '86 Viotta also led the Wagner and Excelsior societies, as well as from 1896 the Caecilia. The older Diligentia was led by J. H. Lübeck in 1829-60 and then for a time by Verhulst. Lübeck was also court-director.

The Oratorio Society was conducted by S. De Lange in 1885-93 and by Wagenaar since 1919.

The Royal Conservatory was founded in 1827 by Reissiger. Its directors have been J. H. Lübeck 1827-, W. F. G. Nicolai '65-, Viotta '96- and Wagenaar 1918-. Among other schools is De Toonkunst, directed since 1918 by Zwart.

It is to be noted that about 1880 Jenny Lind established here a large pension-fund for musicians.

Birthplace of Joh. Meursius 1579 (at Loozuinen), Chr. Huyghens '96, Joh. Verhulst 1816, J. M. Coenen '24, Ernst and Louis Lübeck '29, '38, D. F. Scheurleer '55, Ant. Hekking '56, Jacques van Liet '75, etc.

History by Scheurleer, 1911 (music in the late 18th cent.).

Halle. The fourth largest city in Saxony (20 m. northwest of Leipzig), commercially important since the 12th century and long a member of the Hanseatic League, though overshadowed by Leipzig, remaining a free city till about 1480. From about 1650 it has been under Prussian domination. Its most famous institution is the University and its musical interests center in some of the old churches, the Stadttheater, a noted choral society, orchestral concerts, etc. In the 17th century the court-music had some importance.

Among musicians at the court in the 17th century were S. Scheidt 1609-54, organist at the Moritzkirche and most of the time court-director, and J. P. Krieger, vice-director in 1677-80 and then transferred to Weissenfels.

Organists at the Liebfrauenkirche include Zachau (Handel's teacher) 1684-1712, W. F. Bach 1747-64, Türk '87-1813 and, latterly, Zehler 1880-1915. At the Ulrichskirche Türk was cantor in 1776-87 and Franz organist in 1841-68, while Zehler played there in 1870-80.

The Singakademie, founded early in the century, but now known by Franz' name, because made notable by him, has been directed by Franz 1841-, O. Reubke '67- and Rahlwes 1910-. A Neue Singakademie was started by Vorletzsch in 1903.

At the Stadttheater recent conductors have included Tittel 1901-07, Ohnesorg '12-, Weyzler '13- and Pander '16-19.

The music-directors at the University have included Türk 1779-, Naue 1813-, Franz '59-68, O. Reubke '92-, Rahlwes 1913-, with Balthazar in charge of the church-music seminar since 1919. The professors have included Abert 1909- and Schering '20-. The students' association Friderician has been led by Fehler 1887- and O. Richter 1904-06.

Among the music-schools is the Konservatorium founded and directed by Heydrich and also a Riemann-Seminar.

Birthplace of Sam. Scheidt 1587, J. A. Kobelius 1674, G. F. Handel '85, J. F. Naue 1787, A. B. Marx '95, Karl Loewe '96 (at Löbejün), Rob. Franz 1815, F. W. Stade '17, Th. Krause '33, Herm. Mendel '34, Paul Knüpfer '66, R. H. Stein '82, etc.

Histories by Abert, 1908 (Singakademie), Mund, 1908 (church-organs), Glenewinkel, 1909 (music in the late 18th cent.), and Preibisch, 1912.

Hamburg. Famous city and seaport in north-western Germany (75 m. from the mouth of the Elbe), from the 13th century a leading member of the Hanseatic League and from 1510 designated a free city. It is now the second largest city in Germany and the third center of maritime commerce in the world. Its musical prominence in northern Europe became apparent from about 1600 and has always been maintained. Its older churches were often served by noted musicians. Before 1700 it had begun to be a focus for operatic interest. This latter has been so well kept up that it is now one of the chief operatic capitals in Europe. With this has gone eminent enthusiasm for orchestral and choral music. And the conservatory, though comparatively recent, has gained wide recognition.

The series of city-directors (usually with special oversight of the city-churches) includes Schop 1621-, Selle '41-, Chr. Bernhard '64-, Gerstenbüttel '75-, Telemann 1721-, K. P. E. Bach '67-, C. F. G. Schwencke '89- and Hanke 1822-35.

At the Cathedral (demolished in 1805) among the choirmasters were Mattheson 1715-, Keiser '28-37 and J. V. Görner '52-?. At the Katharinenkirche cantors or organists include Hans Scheidemann ?1590-, Hnr. Scheidemann 1625-, Reinken '63- (or '54-), Telemann 1721-, K. P. E. Bach '67-, C. F. G. Schwencke '89-1822. At the Jacobikirche Jakob Praetorius was organist in the 16th century, followed by his son Hieronymus in 1586-1629 and by Weckmann in 1655-74; recent incumbents have been F. A. and Karl Mehrkens (since 1893). At the Nikolaikirche J. F. Schwencke 1829-92 was followed by F. G. Schwencke '52-96. At the Petrikirche Armbrust was organist in 1869-96 and W. Köhler choir-master since about 1900. In 1912 the old Michaeliskirche moved into a new edifice, with a notable organ, A. Sittard being organist. In the old days the care of the church-music was usually combined with the position of cantor in the Johanneum, founded in 1529 as a school for teachers, among the cantors being Elers 1529-90, Selle 1641-68 and Telemann 1721-67. This school still continues; in its present building (erected in 1834) are the city-library and two or three museums.

The Stadttheater, built in 1678, was the earliest in northern Germany; it became noted under Conradi 1690-, Kusser '94- and Keiser '95-1706. The early conductors in the 19th century included K. A. Krebs 1827-50, I. Lachner '53-58 and A. F. Riccius '64-72?. After the rebuilding in 1874 B. Pollini was director in '74-97, the list of conductors including E. Steinbach '74, Sucher '78-88, A. Hagen '79-82, Zumpe '84-86, Weingartner '87-89, Kienzl '89-?, P. Prill '89-92, Mahler '91-97, Lohse '93-95, Gille '97-1906, Pittrich '98-1901, Stransky 1903-09, Brecher '03-11, Wetzler '05-08, Klemperer '09-12, Weingartner '12-13, Meyrowitz '13-17, Alwin '17-20, etc. The Neue Oper was conducted in 1913-15 by G. Göhler.

The oldest societies are the Singakademie and the Philharmonic Concerts, founded by Grund in 1819 and 1828 respectively and usually having the same conductors, the list including Grund 1819-, J. Stockhausen '62-, Bernuth '67-, R. Barth '95-1904, Panzner 1909-, S. v. Hausegger '10-, Keussler '20- and Muck '22-. The so-called Subscription Concerts, started in 1886 by Herm. Wolff, were first conducted by Von Bülow and after 1894 mostly by Nikisch (to 1921), acquiring a high reputation. Many other organizations might be named that give orchestral or choral concerts, such as the Verein der Musikfreunde, the Orchester-Konzerte, the Cäcilienverein (founded by K. Voigt about 1840), the Bach-gesellschaft (founded by F. A. Mehrkens in 1872), etc.

It is to be remembered that here Weckmann conducted in 1668-74 a Collegium Musicum, one of the earliest undertakings of the concert class.

The Konservatorium, established in 1873, has been directed by Bernuth 1873-, Fiedler 1903- and R. Barth '08-. The Brahms-Konservatorium was carried on in 1908-20 by W. Armbrust.

Birthplace of Hieron. Praetorius 1560, Hnr. Scheidemann '96?, Joh. Rist 1607 (at Otten-sen), Joh. Mattheson '81, J. A. Hasse '99 (at Berge-dorf), F. W. Grund 1791, J. F. Schwencke '92, Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient 1804, Fanny and Felix Mendelssohn '05, '09, Karl Voigt '08, Frdr. Pacius '09, Ferd. and Luise David (Duleken) '10, '11, Louis Lee '19, O. F. v. Königs-löw '24, Herm. Berens '26, Louise Japha '26, Otto Goldschmidt '29, Mme. Tietjens '31, Wilh. Langhans '32, Joh. Brahms '33, Karl v. Holten '36, Ferd. Thériot '38, Emil Krause '40, Carl Rosa '42, Ad. Neuen-dorff '43, Hnr. Schradieck '46, K. F. Armbrust '49, Arnold Krug '49, J. H. Spengel '53, Herm. Behr '59, Otto Taubmann '59, Rich. Burmeister '60, Emil Sauer '62, Wilh. Mauke '67, Willy Burmeister '69, Walter Niemann '76, etc.

Histories by Lindner, 1855, Meinardus, 1878, Chrysander, 1878 (in Allgem. Mus. Zeitung), Uhde, 1879, Zelle, 1889-93, Kleefeld, 1899 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.) —all these on the opera—Sittard, 1890, and an account in the catalogue of the Exposition of 1921 of music in the time of Bach.

Hanover. Large city in the center of north-ern Germany (about 100 m. south of Hamburg), the capital of the duchy or kingdom of the same name—as the former associated with Brunswick originally and then with Celle and Lüneburg, as the latter after 1700 so connected with Eng-land that in 1714-1837 the two countries had the same kings. Its musical life since the 17th century has centered in the court-opera and orchestra, which have often ranked with the best in Germany (at both Hanover and Wolfen-büttel).

Among the court-directors have been Ant. Sartorio 1666-75, Steffani '88-, Handel 1710-, Venturini '15-45, Sutor 1818-28, Marschner '31-, K. L. Fischer '59- (with B. Scholz '59-65), Von Bülow '77-, Frank '79-, Herner '87-1900, Abrányi 1907-, Gille '10-17, Weigmann '11-?, K. Leonhardt '12-20. Among the court-organists and leaders of the Singakade-mie have been A. Schmitt, followed in 1829-85 by Enckhausen. The court-directors have lately led symphony-concerts by other or-ganizations than the Opera.

At the Marktkirche it is to be noted that in the 17th century the organists were Ant. Schildt 1593-1621, '26-29, Lud. Schildt 1621-26 and Melch. Schildt '29-67.

Recent directors of the Konservatorium have been H. Brune and of the Beethoven-Konservatorium C. Wagener.

Birthplace of Melch. Schildt 1592, J. J. Quantz 1697, Karl Engel 1818 (at Thiedenwiese), Georg Goltermann '24, G. A. Schmitt '27, Karl Klindworth '30, Georg Fischer '36, Ernst Schiever '44, Karl Gille '61 (at Eldagsen), Jul. Lorenz '62, Adele Lewing '66, etc.

Histories by G. Fischer, 1899-1918, and Noack, 1902. See also under Marschner.

Heidelberg. Noted small city in northern Baden (about 12 m. southeast of Mannheim), until 1720 the residence of the Elector Palatine, with a famous university (the oldest in Germany), opera-seasons, orchestral and choral music, etc.

Among the court-directors under the Electors were Lemlin '1540-, C. J. Hollander '64-68, Knöfel '76-83, Raselius 1600-02, J. A. Keller '51-85 (when the kapelle was disbanded for a time because of French invasions) and K. L. P. Grua, who went with the Elector when the court was moved to Mannheim in 1720.

At the University the music-directors or professors have been Schletterer 1854-58, Nohl '60-65 (lecturer) '80- (professor), Ph. Wolfrum '84-, Abert 1919-20 (professor) and Poppen 1919- (director). Poppen shares with Radig the conduct of the Stadttheater and the City Orchestra.

In 1885 Wolfrum started the Bach-Verein, which Poppen now directs.

There are several music-schools, including that supported by the city.

Birthplace of J. G. Vossius 1577, Frz. Tausch 1762, Ferd. Langer 1839, Th. Pfeiffer '53, and H. M. Poppen '85.

Histories by Frdr. Walter, 1898, Maler, 1910 (Bach-Verein), and Fritz Stein, 1912 (revised, 1921).

Helsingfors. Capital of Finland and the main center of its cultural life, with a cathedral, a university, Swedish and Finnish theaters, orchestral and choral societies and a conservatory. Leading conductors at the Opera have been Faltin 1873-83, Merikanto '90-?, Järnefelt 1904-05, Mennicke '13-17, Mikorey '19- and H. Gura '20-.

The Symphony Concerts have been led by Faltin 1869- and Schneevogt 1912-. Faltin was also leader of the Oratorio Society and music-director at the University in 1870-1910?, Krohn being docent in the latter since 1900.

The directors of the Conservatory, founded in 1882, have been Wegelius 1882-, Järnefelt 1906-, Ekman '07- and Melartin '11-.

Birthplace of Rob. Kajanus 1856, Paul H. v. Mickwitz '59, Ilmari Krohn '67, Oscar Merikanto '68, Aino Ackté '76, Heikki Klemetti '76, Sulo Hurstinen '81 and E. G. Furnjehlm '83.

For histories see under National Music (Finland) in Appendix A.

Hereford. Small city in the west of England, with a notable cathedral, which is one of the meeting-places for the Three Choirs Festivals (with Gloucester and Worcester, each about 25 m. distant).

At the Cathedral organists are traceable since 1580, including John Bull 1582-85, Swarbrick 1721-, Clack '54-79, Coyle '89-, Dare 1805-, Hayter 18-, Clarke-Whitfield '20-, S. S. Wesley '32-, J. Hunt '35-, G. T. Smith '43-, Colborne '77-, Sinclair '89- and P. C. Hull 1918-. Under Sinclair the organ was rebuilt. The first of the Hereford Festivals was held in 1726. They have regularly been conducted by the cathedral-organists. Among the works here first given have been Parry's De Profundis 1891, Te Deum, 1900, Sinfonia Sacra, part ii, '06 and Nativity Ode '12, Lloyd's Song of Judgment 1891 and Hymn of Thanksgiving '97, Stanford's Battle of the Baltic '91 and Last Post 1900, J. F. Bridge's Cradle of Christ '94, Coleridge-Taylor's Atonement 1903, Walford Davies' Noble Numbers '09, etc. See under Gloucester.

Innsbruck. Now the fourth city in Austria and capital of the Tyrol (about 100 m. south of Munich). From 1490 it was a favorite residence of Maximilian I (before and after becoming emperor) and retained court-life through the 17th century. During the last century its musical life has centered in the varied activities of the Musikverein, which maintains orchestral and choral concerts and a conservatory.

Among the prominent musicians at the grand-ducal court were Hofhaimer 1480-1519? (organist), Isaac '84-96 (composer) and C. J. Hollander 1568-70, Stadlmayr 1607- and Ambr. Reiner '48-72 (directors).

The Musikverein was founded in 1818 by J. B. Gänsbacher. Recent directors (orchestra, chorus and Musikschule) have been Jos. Pembaur, Sr. 1875- and Schennich 1918-.

Birthplace of J. F. Hummel 1841, Jos. Pembaur, father and son '48, '75, Max Steinitzer '64, Mart. Spörr and Karl Pembaur '76.

Various historical studies by Waldner, 1897-1911.

Jena. University town in Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach (45 m. southwest of Leipzig).

Music-directors at the University (including usually leadership of the Singverein) have been F. W. Stade 1842-, K. E. Naumann '60-, F. W. Stein 1906- and Poppen '14-18.

Birthplace of F. E. Niedt 1674, Oskar v. Hase 1846, Jul. Kniese '48 (at Rode) and Felix Berber '71.

Kansas City, Mo. Large city on the western border of Missouri (at the junction of the Missouri and Kansas Rivers).

The Symphony Orchestra, founded in 1910, has been conducted since 1912 by Carl Busch. A. The Conservatory, managed by the city, has been directed by Volpe since 1922.

Karlsruhe. Capital of the grand-duchy of Baden (near the Rhine, about 50 miles south of Mannheim), long noted as an artistic and musical center, especially in opera (since 1853). The list of court-directors includes Molter 1722-

33, '43-65 (at Durlach, a town near by, which was the seat of the court till 1776), J. A. Schmittbaur '76-, Joh. Brandl 1806-, Jos. Strauss '24-, Frdr. Krug '49-, W. Kalliwoda '53-, H. Levi '64-, Zenger '72-, Dessoff '75-, Mottl '81-, Balling 1903-11 (with Lorentz 1899 and Göhler '07-09), Cortelezis '13-. The present noted Hoftheater was opened in 1853, till 1869 with Devrient as director. The music at the court-church was directed by Brauer in 1888-1917, followed in 1918-19 by Poppen. The court-directors have charge of the opera and the concerts of the court-orchestra.

The Philharmonischer Verein was led by Mottl in 1880-92, followed by Rybner (till 1904). In 1905 Brauer started the Bach-Verein.

The Conservatory, founded in 1884, has been directed by Ordenstein 1884- and H. K. Schmid 1921-.

Birthplace of Frdr. Klose 1862 and Ernst Knoch '75.

Histories by Schiedermair, 1913 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Ordenstein, 1915 (in the Festschrift at the local bicentennial), and Poppen, 1919 (on church-music, in Zeitschr. d. Gottesdienstes).

Kassel (Cassel). Capital of the old domain of Hesse and now of the province of Hesse-Nassau (about midway between Hanover to the north and Frankfurt to the south), with a court-establishment at times of importance (including opera).

Among the court-directors have been G. Otto 1588-1619, D. Eberlin '1760-85, R. Fedeli 1709-22, Chelleri '25-57, I. Fiorillo '62-80 (with J. C. Kellner as organist in '75-1803), Blangini 1809-13 (under Jerome Bonaparte as king of Westphalia), Spohr '22-, Karl Reiss '59-, Treiber '81- (with Mahler in '83-85) and Beier '99-, assisted by Zulauf 1903- and W. Pauli '08-. Since 1866 Rundnagel has been court-organist.

The Conservatory was founded in 1895 (director, J. Böhrner) and there are several other music-schools.

Birthplace of Gertrud Mara 1749, J. B. Logier '77, C. F. and Ph. Barth '87, 1804, Otto Kraushaar 1812, Frdr. Krug '12, J. J. Bott '26, Jos. Mosenthal '34, A. F. Christiani '36, Karl Gleitz '62 (at Hitzeroode), Andr. Dippel '66, Ernst Zulauf '78, etc.

Histories by Apell, 1806, Lyncker, 1865, Zulauf, 1902, Bennecke, 1906, and G. Heinrichs, 1921-22.

Kharkov. Large city in southern Russia, now the capital of the Ukrainian Republic.

A branch of the Imperial Musical Society was established here in 1873 by Slatinn, who until recently has been its director.

Birthplace of Peter Sokalsky 1832, Ach. Alferaky '46, Alex. Siloti '63, Th. Akimento '76, Alex. Saslowsky '76 and Serg. Bortkiewicz '77.

Kiel. Large city and port in Holstein on the Baltic (about 60 m. north of Hamburg), since 1895 at the eastern end of the Kiel Canal. In recent years it has developed considerable musical interest, with regular opera-seasons, two orchestras, choral societies and a conservatory. Recent conductors at the Stadt- or Vereinigte Theater have been Pander 1915-16, Neubeck '15- and A. Grau. Neubeck also started an Oratorienverein.

The Gesangverein and the affiliated orchestra have been led by H. Stange 1876- and Kunsemüller 1912-14. The Philharmonisches Orchester has been led by Mayer-Reinach 1905-, Neubeck '15- and F. W. Stein '18-.

At the University the music-directors have included Stange 1878-, Kunsemüller 1914- and F. W. Stein '18-, with Mayer-Reinach as lecturer since 1904. The last has been head of the Conservatory since 1908.

Birthplace of Otto Jahn 1813, Herm. Stange '35, Herm. Grädener '44, Hortense Panum '56, etc.

History of opera in the 18th century (when Kiel was the seat of the dukes of Holstein) by Gersdorff, 1911-12.

Kiev. The second largest city in the Ukrainian Republic.

A branch of the Imperial Musical Society was established here in 1876 by Puchalsky, who continued as director till '89, followed by Vinogradsky and (in 1913) by Glière. The last two have also conducted the Symphony Orchestra.

There are more or less regular opera-seasons at the City Theater.

Birthplace of P. I. Turtchaninov 1779, A. N. Vinogradsky '54, R. M. Glière '75, Simon Buchhalter '81, etc.

History of the Music School by Miklashevsky, 1913.

Königsberg. Large city on the Baltic, capital of the province of East Prussia, in the 16th century the seat of the Dukes of Prussia, in the 17th a headquarters of the Electors of Brandenburg, in 1701 the scene of the assumption by them of the royal title and always closely associated with Prussian dominion. It has a cathedral, a university, regular opera-seasons, numerous musical societies and several conservatories.

In the 17th century, under the Electors, the court-directors were Riccio 1579-, Eccard 1604-, Krocker '08-, Stobäus '26-, Case '47-, Sebastiani '63-83. At the Cathedral Stobäus was cantor in 1602-26 and Hnr. Albert organist in 1630-51.

The oldest organization is the Sängerverein, founded in 1847 and recently conducted by R. Schwalm 1875-, Brode '98- and Sieben 1918-20. With this is more or less affiliated the Philharmonie (orchestra), led by Schwalm 1878-84, Brode '91-, Scheinpflug 1910-, Siegel '14- and L. Hess '17-20. Brode, Siegel and Hess have also led Symphony Concerts at the Städt. Theater or the Tiergarten. In addition there is the Musikverein, led by Wendel 1898- and Scheinpflug 1909-14.

At the University music-directors have included Brode 1894- and Fiebach 1918-.

The Conservatory has been directed by Kühns since about 1900, and the East Prussian Conservatory by Fiebach since 1918.

Birthplace of J. G. Goldberg 1730?, J. F. Reichardt '52, E. T. W. Hoffmann '76, J. T. Mosewius '88, Chas. Mayer '99, Hnr. Dorn 1804, Ed. Sobolewski '08, Otto Nicolai '10, Ldw. Schindeldeisser '11, Ernst Haberer '13, Louis Ehlert '25, G. J. Japha '35, Ad. and Gust. Jensen '37, '43, Herm. Goetz '40, Louis and Paul Pabst '46, '54, Max Spicker '58, Rich. Sternfeld '58, Alf. Reisenauer '63, Herm. Güttler '87, etc.

Histories by Döring, 1852, Rockel, 1897 (Sängerverein), Mayer-Reinach, 1904 (court-music to 1720, in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Moser, 1906, Güttler, 1916 (both on the Conservatory), and Küsel, 1915.

Krefeld. Manufacturing city of moderate size in the Rhine Province (12 m. northwest of Düsseldorf).

The Konzertverein was led in 1893-1919 by Müller-Reuter, followed by R. Siegel as city-director.

More or less regular opera-seasons are provided at the Stadtheater, a recent conductor being Crugier.

The Conservatory was directed by Müller-Reuter in 1902-19.

Histories by Müller-Reuter, 1902-10, and C. Starck, 1912 (Denkschrift celebrating the 25th anniversary of the Kirchenchor).

Laibach. City of moderate size, capital of Carniola (former crownland of Austria, east of Trieste) and headquarters of the Slovenes.

Recent organists at the Cathedral have been Anton Förster, Sr. 1868- and Premel 1909-, the latter being also head of the Orgelschule of the Cäcilienverein. It may be noted that in the early 17th century Posch was organist here.

There are two theaters (the Slovenian started in 1892) at which opera is given. Since 1922 Hubad has been intendant of both.

The oldest organization is the Philharmonische Gesellschaft, maintaining both concerts and a Conservatory, directed by Zöhrer 1882- and Weis-Ostborn 1913-. The corresponding Slovenian society is the Glasbena Matica, of which Gerbič was director from about 1900, followed by Hubad in 1917-19.

Birthplace of Matt. Hubad 1866.

History of the Philharmonic Society by Kessbacher and Bock, 1902.

Leeds. Large manufacturing city in the north of England (in Yorkshire, about 50 m. north-east of Manchester), musically notable since 1858 for its festivals and various concerts in the Town Hall.

At the Town Hall (built in 1858) there is a notable organ in Victoria Hall, the municipal organists having been Spark 1858- and Fricker '98-1917.

There are many choral and orchestral societies, including the Philharmonic, founded in 1894, whose conductors have been Stanford 1897-, Fricker 1900- and Bairstow '17-, the Choral Union, now led by Coward, the Saturday Concerts, started by Fricker, the Symphony Orchestra, led since 1918 by Harty, etc.

At the University regular series of recitals are given. There are several music-schools, including that supported by the city.

The Festivals began in 1858, but were not resumed till '74, then becoming triennial, the conductors being W. S. Bennett '58, Costa '74-77, Sullivan '80-98, Stanford 1901-10. Among works here first given are Bennett's May Queen '58, Macfarren's Joseph and King David '77, '83, Sullivan's Martyr of Antioch and Golden Legend '80, '86, J. G. Barnett's Building of the Ship '80, Mackenzie's Story of Sayid '86, Stanford's Revenge, Voyage of Maeldune, Te Deum, Songs of the Sea and Stabat Mater '86, '89, '98, '04, '07, Dvořák's St. Ludmila '86, Parry's St. Cecilia's Day and Invocation to Music '89, '95, Corder's Sword of Argantyr '89, Elgar's Caractacus '98, Cowen's Ode to the Passions '98, O. Goldschmidt's Music '98, Coleridge-Taylor's Blind Girl 1901, Glazunov's Memorial Cantata, '01, C. Wood's Two Veterans and Ballad of Dundee, '01, '04, Walford Davies' Everyman '04, Bantock's Sea-Wanderers '07, Vaughan Williams' Sea Symphony '10, Harty's Mystic Trumpeter '13, etc. G.

Birthplace of John Naylor 1838, J. V. Roberts '14 (both at Stanningley), Frank Kidson '55, Alb. Mallinson '70, P. A. Scholes '77, etc.

History of the Festivals by Jos. Bennett and F. R. Spark, 1892.

Leipzig. The largest city in the kingdom of Saxony and now the fifth in size in Germany (about 70 m. northwest of Dresden), from medieval times one of the great centers of European trade (especially at first through its annual fairs), since the 17th century the chief headquarters of book-publishing and selling in Europe, through this and its large university acquiring great importance in science and literature, especially from the 18th century, and also steadily growing in musical importance through the convergence of several lines of special activity. Throughout the 19th century it has ranked as one of the foremost headquarters for opera, symphonic and choral music, musical education and every branch of the larger music-trades (publishing and instrument-making). Among the historic institutions for which it is most famous are the Thomasschule and the circle of city-churches (with which J. S. Bach was associated for more than a quarter-century), the Gewandhaus Orchestra (which Mendelssohn made the most celebrated in Europe) and the Conservatory (also set in motion by Mendelssohn), which has exerted a wider influence than any other similar institution except, perhaps, the Paris Conservatory. G.

The Thomasschule is the most famous of several school-foundations in Germany whose origin antedated the Reformation and whose practical importance was promoted by that movement. Though concerned only with secondary education and drawing scholars from the humbler classes, such schools were influential through their usual connection with one or more of the municipal churches. In Leipzig the cantor of the school had oversight of the music especially in the Thomaskirche and the Nikolaikirche (with two others to a less degree) and the choirs were drawn from the schoolboys. In Leipzig, also, the cantor was titularly in charge of music at the University until late in the 18th century. Since 1550 the cantors have been M. Heyer 1551, V. Otto '64, Calvisius '94, J. H. Schein 1615, T. Michael '30 (assisted after '50 by Rosenmüller), S. Knüpfer '57, J. Schelle '76, Kuhnau 1701, J. S. Bach '23, Harrer '50, Doles '55, J. A. Hiller '89, A. E. Müller 1804, Schicht '10, C. T. Weinlig '23, Pohlenz '42, Hauptmann '42, E. F. Richter '68, W. Rust '79, Schreck '92 and Straube 1918-. In 1877 the School moved into new buildings.

Organists at the Thomaskirche have included Ammerbach 1560-97, A. Düben ?-1625, V. Albrici '81-, Kühnel '82-, Kuhnau '84-1701, J. G. Görner 1729-78 (with son from '66), J. G. H. Voigt ?1802-11, Fr. Schneider '13-21, Pohlenz '27-43, Papier '69, W. Rust '78- and Piutti '80-1902; at the Nikolaikirche Rosenmüller 1651-, A. Krieger '54-, W. Fabricius '57-79, J. G. Görner 1721-, Joh. Schneider '30-87, A. E. Müller '94-1804, E. F. Richter 1862- and Papperitz '68-99; at the Peterskirche E. F. Richter 1851-62 and Fr. Stade 1895-1920; at the Paulinerkirche (University) J. G. Görner 1716-21, Fr. Schneider 1807-, Joh. Schneider '11-12, Ernst Müller 1907-16; at the Reformierte Kirche C. E. Weinlig 1767-73, Riem 1807-14, G. A. Thomas '64-66 and Fr. Stade '85-95; etc.

The Gewandhaus Concerts grew out of the concerts begun by J. A. Hiller in 1763, but not known by this name till 1781, when they were located in the public hall then added to the Gewandhaus or House of the Drapers' Guild. They had been foreshadowed by the series conducted by Doles in 1743-56 on a smaller scale. The conductors have been J. A. Hiller 1763-, Schicht '85-, J. P. C. Schulz 1810-, Pohlenz '27-, Mendelssohn '35-43, '45-47, Ferd. Hiller '43-44, Gade '47-, Rietz '48-, Reinecke '60-, Nikisch '95- and Furtwängler 1922-. Their worldwide fame began under Mendelssohn's administration. A new concert-hall, also known as the Gewandhaus, was erected in 1884. With the orchestra is associated a chorus for use on occasion. G.

Another historic orchestral society is the Euterpe (founded in 1824) the chief conductors of which have been C. G. Müller 1829-, Verhulst '38-42, Netzer '44-45, A. F. Riccius '49-, H. Langer '55-, Bronsart '60-, Blassmann '62-, Bernuth '64-, Jadassohn '67-, Volckland '69-, Treiber '76- and P. Klengel '81-86. In 1896-1914 Winderstein conducted notable Philharmonische Konzerte.

Among the leaders of the Singakademie (founded in 1807) have been Pohlenz 1827-, E. F. Richter '43-, Jul. Rietz '47-, Bernuth '60-68, Kretzschmar '71-76, R. Hofmann '80-, Sitt '83-, P. Klengel '92-98, and Wohlgemuth 1900-. The famous Riedel-Verein (founded in 1854) has been led by Riedel 1854-, Kretzschmar '88-, K. G. Göhler '98- (except Pembaur in 1907-08), Wetz 1913- and Mayerhoff '15-. The Bach-Verein (founded in 1874) has been led by Volckland 1874-, Herzogenberg '75-, Sitt '85- and K. Straube 1903-19, being then merged with the Gewandhauschor. These are but examples out of many of the organized musical activities of the city.

The first Stadtheater was built in 1691 and throughout the 18th century was so popular as to check interest in other music. During the 19th century its artistic importance steadily advanced under conductors like Fr. Schneider 1817-21, Marschner '26-31, Lortzing '44-45, Jul. Rietz '47-, A. F. Riccius '54-64, Strantz '70-, Seidl '75- (with Sucher in '76-78 and then Nikisch), Nikisch '82-89, Paur '91-, Panzner '93-, Gorter '99-, R. Hagel 1902-10, Lohse '12- (with Knappertsbusch '18-19 and then Weissleder).

At the University the recent music-directors have been G. W. Fink 1842-, H. Langer '46-, Kretzschmar '87-, Hnr. Zöllner '98-, Reger 1907- and Brandes '09-. In 1878-80 H. Riemann was docent, returning in '95 and becoming professor in 1901-19, besides being named head of the Collegium Musicum (research-institute) in 1908, as well as of a similar institute under state auspices in 1914; his successor since 1920 is H. Abert. The University singing-society is the Paulus, led by the director. The Psychologisches Institut was under Wundt in 1875-1918, followed by F. E. Krüger.

The Konservatorium, established in 1843 by Mendelssohn with the aid of funds designated by the Saxon government, was the first in Germany. Its direction is in the hands of a board of which the heads have been Mendelssohn 1843-47, Schleinitz '47-, H. Günther '81- and Röntsch '97-. It was at first located in the Gewandhaus, but in 1887 removed to its own building. Among many music-schools mention may be made of the Musik-Institut directed by Zschocher in 1846-97 and now by Th. Raillard.

The business of music-publication is more extensive here than in any other center in the world, the oldest and largest house being that of Breitkopf & Härtel (see also under Peters, Hofmeister, Schubert, Kistner, Senff, etc.), with periodicals like the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung (1798-1882), the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik (from 1834), the Signale für die Musikal. Welt (from 1840), etc. It is to be noted that here is the Musikbibliothek Peters (library for reference), in 1893–1901 in charge of E. Vogel, followed by R. Schwartz (with regular Jahrbuch).

Birthplace of F. W. Zachau 1663, J. A. Fabricius '68, J. P. Kunzen '96, J. A. Scheibe 1708, J. C. Frdr. and J. Chrn. Bach '32, '35, J. F. Rochlitz '69, A. F. Häser '79, K. L. Drobisch 1803, K. F. Becker '04, Jul. Knorr '07, Rich. Wagner '13, F. C. W. Praeger '15, Clara Wieck (Schumann) '19, Elise Polko '22, K. A. Hassler '25 (at Hohenmölsen), Rich. Pohl '26, Ldw. v. Brenner '33, Marie Lipsius (La Mara) '37, Georg Unger '37, Alb. Payne '42, Alf. Richter '46, Ferd v. Inten '48, G. F. Kogel '49, B. F. Richter '50, Martin Krause '53 (at Lobstädt), Paul Klengel '54, Hnr. Zöllner '54, Jul. Röntgen '55, Jul. Klengel '59, Alex. v. Filitz '60, Joh. Merkel '60, Arth. Prüfer '60, Karl Stoeving '61, Jos. Wohlgemuth '63, Steph. Krehl '64, Jos. Libeskind '66, Ernst Müller '66, Paul Gerhardt '67, Kurt Hering '70, Elena Gerhardt '83, Frieda Hempel '85, Georg Kiessig '85, etc.

Histories of the Euterpe, 1837, '74, Stalfbaum, 1842 (Thomassch.), Dörfel, 1881–84, Kneschke 1893 (both on the Gewandhaus), Kipke and B. Vogel, 1888 (Conservatory), P. Langer, 1902 (Singakad.), Frdr. Lampadius, 1902, Primus, 1908 (both Thomassch.), Wustmann, 1909, F. Schmidt, 1912, F. Schulze, 1917, G. F. Schmidt, 1919 (both opera), Festschrift of the Conservatory, 1918, Benneemann, 1920, W. Lange, 1921, Kotschke, 1922 (University), etc.

Lemberg. Capital of Galicia (formerly in Austria) and now the third city in Poland (about 200 m. east of Cracow), the seat of an R. C. cathedral, a university and an active Musikverein, besides regular opera-seasons.

Directors of the Musikverein, which supports orchestral and choral concerts and manages the Conservatory, have included Mikuli 1858–88 and M. Soltys '99–.

Among conductors at the Stadttheater have been Jarecki 1873–1900, L. Rozycki 1908–, Niewiadomski '18–19, Wolfsthal, Slomborski, Wronski, etc. Jarecki was also choirmaster at the Cathedral.

Birthplace of A. F. and Karl Doppler 1821, '25, Maur. Strakosch '25, Th. Leschetizky '30 (at Lancut), Alex. Zarzycki '34, Eug. Gruenberg '54, Moriz Rosenthal '62, M. Soltys '63, Max Zech '64, Th. Lierhammer '68, Max Ettinger '74, B. Wallek-Walewski '85, Adam Soltys '90, etc.

Lichfield. Cathedral-town in the center of England (15 m. north of Birmingham).

Among the organists at the Cathedral have been Mich. Este ?1618–38, several by the name of Lamb '62 to 1749, John Alcock 1750–60, Wm. Brown '66, Spofforth 1807–, Bedsmore '64– and J. B. Lott '81–. In 1908 the organ was moved and rebuilt.

Liège. The fourth city of Belgium (about 30 m. west of Aix-la-Chapelle), prior to its devastation by the Germans in 1914 having a cathedral, a noted conservatory and regular opera-seasons.

The Conservatoire Royal, founded in 1827, has been directed by Daussoigne-Méhul 1827–Soubre '62–, J. T. Radoux '72– and S. Dupuis 1911–14. It shares with the Brussels Conservatory the right of awarding a Prix de Rome (see Prizes in Part I). Concerts Populaires have regularly been given under its auspices. Its latest building was erected in 1884.

Opera has been long given at the Théâtre Royal, recent conductors including Massin and Duchatel.

At the Cathedral the list of choirmasters of repute runs back to the 16th century. Vroye served in this office in 1835–73.

Birthplace of Adam Reiner ?1480, Jean Guyot 1512? (at Châtelet), Henri Dumont 1610 (at Villers d'Évêque), A. E. M. Grétry 1741, Aug. Gathy 1800, L. J. Massart '11, F. H. Prume '16 (at Stavelot), Hub. Léonard '19 (at Bel-laire), César Franck '22, Ad. Samuel '24, Aug. and Jos. Dupont '27, '38 (at Ensival), J. T. Radoux '35, Ph. Rüfer '44, M. P. J. Marsick '48 (at Jupille), Ovide Musin '54 (at Nandrin), Sylvain Dupuis '55, César Thomson '57, Eug. Ysaÿe '58, Armand Parent '63, Juliette Folvile '70, Jos. Jongen '73, Gaston and Éd. Déthier '75, '85, Ivan d' Archambeau '79, Maur. Dambois '89, etc.

Histories by Auda, 1911, and Maquette, 1918–21 (in Rivista Musicale).

Lincoln. Cathedral-city in east-central England (about 60 m. southeast of York).

Organists at the Cathedral are noted from as early as 1439, including Byrd 1563–72, Geo. Holmes 1705–21, Skelton '94–1850, J. M. W. Young 1850– and G. J. Bennett '95–. In 1898 a large new organ was installed.

Festivals (somewhat in alternation with Peterborough) have been held here at intervals since 1889, at first under Young's direction, but since '96 under that of Bennett.

Birthplace of Jas. Stimpson 1820 and S. P. Waddington '69.

Linz. The third city of the present Austria (on the Danube in Upper Austria, midway between Vienna and Munich), having a cathedral (two edifices), regular opera-seasons and an energetic Musikverein.

Among the musicians at the Cathedral have been Roser and F. X. Glöggel 1798–1839 as choirmasters and Schiedermayer (till 1840), Bruckner 1855–67 and Neuhofer 1909– as organists. Conductors at the Stadttheater have included F. X. Glöggel 1772–1839, Gericke 1865–74, Frotzler '97–?, Winternitz '98–?, and more recently O. Hess, Hernried, Zilzer and Gans. The Musikverein, which maintains choral and orchestral concerts, as well as the Musikschule, has been directed by Thiard-Laforest 1870–89 and Göllerich '96–. There are various other organizations, like the Schubertbund, the Fröhsinn, etc.

Birthplace of F. X. and Frz. Glöggel 1764, '97, Ant. Bruckner 1824 (at Ansfelden), Aug.

Göllerich '59, Arn. Winternitz '74 and Frz. Gräffinger.

Historical notes by Gräffinger (in Linzer Tagespost).

Lisbon. Capital, largest city and always the chief musical center of Portugal, in its court-chapel and cathedral sharing more or less in the artistic life of Spain, France and Italy from the 16th century, as also on the side of secular music during the 19th.

Among the influential choirmasters at the Cathedral in earlier days were Lobo 1594-1639, D. N. Pereira ?1700- and Moraes '29-47.

Among the earlier court-musicians were R. de Mel (before 1580), Coelho 1603-20? (organist), Garro '09-?, Lesbio (composer), M. S. Pereira (before 1655), D. Scarlatti 1721-29 (cembalist), D. Perez '52-58, Marcos Antonio (about 1800), etc.

The introduction of foreign operas seems to date from about 1735 and was specially furthered by the Neapolitan D. Perez in 1752-78. The Teatro São Carlos was built in 1793, the earlier directors being Moreira 1793-, Marcos Antonio ?1799-1830 (with interruptions in 1807-21, when the country was in the hands of the French) and Schira 1835-40. Recently in charge of Aug. Machado 1892-1908.

The Conservatorio Real, founded in 1833 (on the basis of schools previously conducted by ecclesiastics), has been directed by Bomtempo 1833-, Migone '42-57, Cossoul '63-80 and A. Machado '94-10. The society known as the Amadores de Musica also maintains an Academia (director, Gara) and an orchestra.

Birthplace of Felipe Magalhães 1610? (at Azeitao), F. d'Almeida '18?, A. M. Lesbio '39, D. N. Pereira '60?, J. de S. Moraes '89, M. A. Portugal 1762, J. D. Bomtempo '75, G. A. Cossoul 1828, Aug. Machado '45, Fr. d'Andrade '59, etc.

For histories, see under National Music (Portugal) in Appendix A and art. by Von Waxel in the supplement to Mendel's Lexikon, 1883.

Liverpool. The third largest city in England and the principal port, with a noted orchestra and concert-hall, some festivals in the past and a cathedral of recent establishment.

The Philharmonic Society was formed in 1840, its conductors including Zeugheer 1843-, Mellon '65-, Benedict '67-, Bruch '80-, Halle '83- and Cowen '96-1914.

The center of musical performances is St. George's Hall, opened in 1854, where the organists have included Best 1855-94 and Peace '97-. At the Cathedral, established at St. Peter's in 1880 and beginning to occupy its new building in 1910, the organists have been Burstall 1880- and Goss-Custard 1917-.

Festivals have been held here in 1784, '90, '94, '99, 1823, '27, '30, '33, '36 and '74, the conductor in '23-36 being G. T. Smart and in '74 Benedict. Mendelssohn's St. Paul was here first given in England in 1836 (soon after its première at Düsseldorf).

Birthplace of J. L. Hatton 1809, Chas. Santley '34, Henry Coward '49, Maria Brema '56, C. S. Macpherson '65, Ern. Newman '69, Thos. Beecham '79, etc.

Llandaff. Small cathedral-town in South Wales (near Cardiff).

Among more recent organists are Gladstone 1866-, Aylward '70-, C. L. Williams '76-, Brooksbank '82- and Beale '94-. The present organ was built in 1900.

London. Capital, much the largest city and the musical metropolis of Great Britain, resembling Paris in being the artistic headquarters of the country in a peculiar sense. Its court-music has centered in the Chapel Royal (for sacred music) and there are now really four cathedrals (including Westminster Abbey). The two outstanding opera-houses are Covent Garden and Drury Lane, with others historically important. Around the venerable Philharmonic Society may be grouped various orchestras, just as from the now defunct Sacred Harmonic Society are descended numerous choral organizations. Among many schools of music the Royal Academy, the Royal College and the Guildhall School stand out conspicuously, with various undertakings on the part of institutions of general character. The instrument-collection at the South Kensington Museum is one of the finest in the world, just as the musical treasures of the British Museum are unsurpassed in many ways from the librarian's point of view. Music-publishing and instrument-making have here one of their chief habitats. This centrality of importance has been most noticeable during the past hundred years, but on the operatic side it runs back a century further and on the side of sacred music as far as the sixteenth century. In that century, too, instrumental writing had here a notable development.

Since the 15th century there has been a Chapel Royal, originally at Whitehall (Palace), but since about 1700 at St. James's Palace (there is still another at St. George's, Windsor), besides one once maintained at Savoy Palace (and still called by the name). The more prominent organists have been Tallis ?1545-85, Bull '91-1613?, O. Gibbons 1604-25, Tomkins '21-56, Wm. Child '32-97, C. Gibbons '60-76, Lowe '60-82, Blow '76-1708, Purcell '82-95, Croft 1704-27, Weldon '08-36, M. Greene '27-55, Travers '37-58, Nares '56-83, Boyce '58-79, T. S. Dupuis '79-96, S. Arnold '83-1802, C. Knyvett '96-1822, J. S. Smith 1802-36, G. T. Smart '22-67, Sale '38-56, G. Cooper '56-, Jekyll '76-, Creser '91-, W. G. Alcock 1902-, Lloyd '16- and Roper '19- (overlapping terms are due to there being two or more regularly in service at once). The office of choirmaster (Master of the Children), originally distinct from that of organist, has been held by Abington 1465-83, T. Day 1637-54, H. Cooke '60-72, Gates 1740-58, Ayrton '83-1805, Hawes 1817- and Helmere '46-90. In addition, the office of composer (instituted in 1699) has sometimes been held by others than the above (as, for example, by Goss in 1856-72). Among recent organists at the Chapel in the Savoy are Frost 1865- and Haynes '91-1900. G (Chapels Royal and Savoy).

At St. Paul's Cathedral records of organists go back to about 1525. The present edifice was opened for service at the end of 1697 (taking the place of that destroyed in the Great Fire of 1666), the organists including Jer. Clark 1695-, Brind 1707-, Maur. Greene '18-, John Jones '55-, Attwood '96-, Goss 1838- (with Geo. Cooper, Jr. as suborganist from '43), Stainer '72-, G. C. Martin '88- and Macpherson 1916- (with R. S. Marchant as suborganist).

At Westminster Abbey the organists' roll begins about 1560 and includes Hooper 1606-21, O. Gibbons '23-25, Portman '33-48?, C. Gibbons '60-66, Blow '68-, Purcell '79-, Blow (reappointed) '95-, Croft 1708-, J. Robinson '27-, B. Cooke '62-, S. Arnold '93-, R. Cooke 1802-14, Greatorex '19-, Turler '31-, J. F. Bridge '82- and Nicholson 1919-.

At Westminster Cathedral (R. C.) the organist since 1901 has been Terry, with E. S. Mitchell lately as assistant.

For St. Saviour's Cathedral, see Southwark.

Among the innumerable churches peculiar distinction attaches to Temple Church, belonging to the lawyers' corporation of the Temple (so called because deriving its extensive property from the Knights Templar in the 14th cent.). The organists have included C. J. Stanley 1734-, R. J. S. Stevens '86-1810, Warne 1826- E. J. Hopkins '43-, H. W. Davies '98-, and Th. Ball 1923-.

Of the several theaters that have served for opera the oldest now existing is Drury Lane, originally built in 1696 and replaced by new buildings in 1794 and 1812 (at first known as the Theatre Royal). In 1738-78 it was the scene of many stage-works by Arne and after 1812 of foreign operas of various sorts, especially after '33 under Bunn's management. Later managers included Mapleson in '68-77, Carl Rosa in '83-87 and Harris in 1887-88. In 1870, '82-83 and from '92 it was much used for German opera. Among the conductors have been Benedict in '52-59 and Randegger in '83-98. Since 1910 Beecham has directed several series of much brilliance.

Next in order of age is His Majesty's (originally King's, then Queen's and later Her Majesty's), opened in 1705. In 1711-45 this was the place for the premières of numerous operas and some oratorios by Handel. New edifices were erected in 1790 and 1869, in each case after fires. After Handel's time it was managed as an opera-house by the Earl of Middlesex (among the conductors being Galuppi 1741-, Lampugnani '43- and Lahoussaye '70-75), and throughout most of the 19th century was the favorite place for lyric drama, one of the latest managers being Mapleson ('62-68, '77-84). Its site is now occupied by Beerbohm Tree's theater. G.

More conspicuous than these is Covent Garden, first opened in 1732 and twice replaced (1809 and '58), which, though used by Handel in 1735-57 and by Bishop in 1810-24, did not become widely known as an opera-house till 1847, its managers being Beale '47-49, Gye '49-, Harrison '77-84, Harris '88- and the Royal Opera Syndicate (or successors) '96-. Among the conductors have been Costa '47-, Vianesi '71-83, Randegger '87-98, Mancinelli '88-1906 (at intervals), Cl. Campanini 1900-12, Messenger '01-, Hy. Russel 1903-09, Pitt '07-14. In 1914-19 the house was closed, reopening under Beecham.

It is to be noted in connection with these extensive modern undertakings that the earliest performances of what was called 'opera' in England were arranged by Davenant in 1656 (under Cromwell!) and more definitely from about 1675. G.

The most famous of the orchestral organizations is the Philharmonic Society, formed in 1813 and conducted by G. T. Smart 1813-44, Costa '46-54, Wagner '55, W. S. Bennett '56-, Cusins '67-83, Sullivan '85-, Cowen '87- Mackenzie '92-, Cowen again 1900-07, Beecham '16-. Among the guest-conductors in the earlier years were Cherubini in '15, Spohr in '20 and '43, Weber in '26, Mendelssohn in '29, '42, '44, '47, etc. The first editors of the analytical programs were Macfarren in '69-, Hueffer '81- and Jos. Bennett '85-1903. G (with summary of works given to 1910).

Since 1895 H. J. Wood has developed various series of orchestral concerts of superior quality at Queen's Hall. From this enterprise the London Symphony Orchestra branched off in 1902, its concerts being under various conductors.

The Crystal Palace orchestral concerts began in 1855 under Manns and continued with increasing importance till 1901.

In 1877 a series of Wagner concerts was given in Albert Hall under Wagner himself and Hans Richter. These led to the starting in 1879 of what came to be called the Richter Concerts, continuing regularly till 1897 and somewhat afterward.

The New Symphony Orchestra (or Royal Albert Hall Orchestra) was started in 1906 by Beecham, but transferred to Ronald in 1908, under whom it has become highly significant.

Without attempting the impossible task of tracing the extensive history of concert-enterprises in general, it is worth while briefly to mention some of them in chronological order for purposes of reference.

The earliest undertaking was that of Thos. Britton, commonly known as 'the small-coal man' (from his business), who arranged weekly musicales of significance in 1678-1714. To this followed Pepusch's Academy of Antient Music, which he directed in 1710-52 and which closed in '92 under the lead of Samuel Arnold. G.

The oldest vocal association now existing is the Madrigal Society, formed in 1741 as a private club (not for giving public concerts) and long conducted by the members in rotation. Permanent conductors were later instituted, including Hawes 1809-, Turle '46-, Jas. King '49-, Cipr. Potter '55-, O. Goldschmidt '71-76, Stainer '78- and J. F. Bridge '87-. Prizes began to be offered from 1811. Somewhat like this is the Catch Club, founded in 1761 and giving highly-valued prizes from 1763 (except in 1794-1821). G.

The Concert of Antient Music, maintained by an aristocratic committee from 1776 till 1848, offered much orchestral and some choral music, often with eminent soloists. The conductors included Joah Bates 1776-, Greatorex '93-, Wm. Knyvett 1832-40 and H. R. Bishop '43-48. The Handel Commemorations of 1784, '85, '86, '87 and '91, the first of which was meant to celebrate the centenary of the composer's birth, were held in Westminster Abbey under the general direction of the committee, though with greatly augmented forces. The society's library ultimately went to the Royal College (see below). G.

The Cacilian Society, formed in 1785, was a private choral society for giving sacred works, at first on a small scale, but later including full oratorios, among the conductors being Vincent, Thos. and Jos. Walker, Shoubridge and others. The Society continued until 1861. G.

Prominent among various undertakings about 1800 were the so-called Vocal Concerts, carried on in 1792-94 and 1801-22 mainly by Samuel Harrison, the Knyvetts and Greatorex (after 1801). For a single season these were followed by the British Concerts.

Oratorio-music was taken up by the Choral Harmonists' Society in 1833-51 under the leadership of Novello, Lucas, Neate and Westrop. But a much more influential enterprise in this field was the Sacred Harmonic Society, founded in 1832 and led by Surman till 1848 and then by Costa until its dissolution in 1882. It was revived for a time under Hallé (till '85) and Cummings (till '88). In 1857 the Society began the series of Handel Festivals at the Crystal Palace which after the centenary observance of 1859 became a triennial event. These latter were continued in 1883-1900 under Manns and in 1903-12 under Cowen.

In 1867 Novello, Ewer & Co. started Barnby's Choir (named from its leader) and in 1871 Gounod began a similar organization at Albert Hall (then first opened). In 1872 these were united into the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society (now the Royal Choral Society), the conductors being Barnby till '96 and then J. F. Bridge. To these followed in 1875 the notable Bach Choir, which has been led by Goldschmidt 1875-, Stanford '85-, H. W. Davies 1903- and H. P. Allen '07-.

In the field of chamber-music it is to be remembered that in 1844-80 John Ella directed the weekly meetings of the Musical Union, supplemented in 1850-59 by 'musical winter evenings', both series being accompanied with careful analytical programs. A somewhat parallel undertaking was that of the Quartet Association in 1852-55. In 1858-67 the Musical Society exercised varied functions, including both concerts and gatherings for papers and discussions. In 1859 Chappell & Co. instituted the so-called Popular Concerts (ultimately given on both Saturdays and Mondays), which continued with striking effect till 1898 (1000 concerts up to '87).

During the past forty years the number of concert-organizations has steadily increased in all directions, providing for the tastes of many different classes of patrons and also for the local needs of the many sections into which the metropolis is divided.

The oldest of the conservatories is the Royal Academy of Music, founded in 1822 and directed by Crotch 1822-, Cipr. Potter '32-, Lucas '59-, W. S. Bennett '66-, Macfarren '75- and Mackenzie '88-. The London Academy of Music was started in 1861 and directed by Wyld till '90, followed by Pollitzer in '90-1900 and in 1904 merged with other schools into what was called the United Schools. The Tonic Sol-fa College was begun by John Curwen in 1863 and in '80-1916 more fully established under J. S. Curwen. This is mainly an examining institution, as is also the Trinity College of Music, which dates from 1872.

The National Training School for Music began in 1876, its directors being Sullivan (till '81) and Stainer. In 1882 this was merged into the Royal College of Music, the directors of which have been Grove '82-, C. H. H. Parry '94- and H. P. Allen 1918-.

The Guildhall School of Music followed in 1880, its directors being Weist-Hill 1880-, Barnby '92-, Cummings '96- and Ronald 1910-.

Out of many institutions of general education that maintain musical professorships reference should be made to Gresham College, where such a position was instituted in 1596, the first incumbent being John Bull, followed (after a long series of curiously nugatory appointments) by Aylward 1771-, R. J. S. Stevens 1801-, Ed. Taylor '37-, Wyld '63- and J. F. Bridge '90-. At King's College Hullah was instructor in 1844-74, followed (till '89) by W. H. Monk; these two were also at Bedford College and the former at Queen's College. At London University J. F. Bridge has been professor since 1903.

The largest libraries are those of the British Museum and of the Royal College, while the chief collections of instruments are at the South Kensington Museum and at the Royal College.

Birthplace of Wm. Byrd 1538, John Dowland '62, Nich. Lanière '88, Chr. Gibbons 1615, John Playford '23, John Banister '30, Hy. Aldrich '47, Pelham Humfrey '47, Hy. Playford '57, Hy. and Dan. Purcell '58, '60?, Jer. Clarke '69?, Maur. Greene '95, T. A. Arne 1710, Wm. Boyce '10, John Hawkins '19, Th. Aylward '30?, Benj. Cooke '30, John Battis-hill '38, Sam. Arnold '40, Sam. Webbe, Sr. '40, Wm. Jones '46, J. W. Callcott '66, Sam. Webbe, Jr. '70, Jn. Braham '74, Wm. Horsley '74, G. T. Smart '76, Vinc. Novello '81, H. R. Bishop '86, Cypriani Potter '92, Wm. Chappell 1809, S. S. Wesley '10, J. W. Davison 13, G. A. and W. C. Macfarren '13, '26, Hy. Smart '13, A. J. Ellis, T. A. Walmisley '14, E. F. Rimbault '16, E. J. Hopkins '18, H. C. Litolf '18, Geo. Cooper '20, Geo. Grove '20 (at Clapham), Mme. Sainton-Dolby '21, Hy. Willis '21, Hy. Leslie '22, W. H. Monk '23, W. S. Rockstro '23 (at No. Cheam), Jas. Coward '24, F. A. G. Ouseley '25, A. J. Hipkins '26, Chas. Steggall '26, J. B. Calkin '27, T. H. Weist-Hill '28, H. C. Banister '31, W. G. Cusins '33, S. A. Pearce '36, J. F. Barnett '37, Hy. Carter '37, Alf. and Hy. Holmes '37, '39, Georgina Weldon '37 (at Clapham), Geo. Hart '39, Scotson Clark '40, John Stainer '40, Hy. Gadsby '42, Janet Patey '42, Arth. Sullivan '42, Ed. Lloyd '45, Thos. Wingham '46, Frdk. Crowest '50, M. B. Foster '51, Frz. Rummel '53, Barclay Squire '55, J. A. Fuller-Maitland '56, H. J. Stewart '56, Tob. Matthay '58, Ethel M. Smyth '58, C. J. Sharpe '59, W. E. Whitehouse '59, W. H. Hall '62, Liza Lehmann '62, J. E. West '63, J. L. Browne '66, Max Pauer '66, Reg. Steggall '67, Granville Bantock '68, E. H. Fellowes '70, W. C. Macfarlane '70, Percy Pitt '70, R. K. Rumbford '70, H. J. Wood '70, P. C. Buck '71, Hy. Russell '71, Frdk. Austin '72, W. H. Rothwell '72, Harold Bauer '73 (at New Malden), Landon Ronald '73, Sam. Coleridge-Taylor '75, S. H. Nicholson '75, Norman O'Neill '75, W. Y. Hurlstone '76, W. W. Whitaker '76, T. F. Dunhill '77, H. B. Gardiner '77, H. C. Colles '79, E. L. Bainton '80, Leop. Stokowski '82, Arn. Bax '83, Lord Berners '83, York Bowen '84, Felix White '84, B. J. Dale '85, J. G. Williams '88, Arth. Bliss '91, Cedric Sharpe '91, Edric Cundall '93, Eug. Goossens '93, etc.

Histories by Hogarth, 1863 (Philharmonic), K. F. Pohl, 1867 (Mozart and Haydn), P. Fitzgerald, 1882, Mapleson, 1888 (both opera), Kidson, 1900 (publishers) H. Klein, 1903, C. Maude, 1903, Wyndham, 1906 (both opera), Lafontaine, 1909 (Chap. Royal), C. W. Pearce, 1909 (churches and societies), Enitron, 1909, Reyher, 1909 (the old masques), M. B. Foster, 1912 (Philharm.), Northcote, 1912 (opera), W. J. Lawrence, 1922 (masques), etc., besides general works on music in England (see Appendix A, under National Music).

Los Angeles, Cal. Large city of rapid development in southern California (now the largest in the state and the tenth in the United States).

The leading organization is the Philharmonic Orchestra, since 1919 led by Rothwell, succeeding the Symphony Orchestra, at first led by Harty Hamilton and from 1897 by Ad. Tandler. There are also an Oratorio Society, vocal clubs, a School of Music at the Univ. of Southern California (W. F. Skeele, dean from 1898) and a Conservatory (Zielinski, director 1910-22).

Lübeck. Historic city of northern Germany (near the Baltic, 35 m. northeast of Hamburg), now the third of the free cities, but in the 14-15th centuries the head of the Hanseatic League and one of the chief commercial centers in northern Europe. Its older musical importance was associated with the famous Marienkirche. It now has opera-seasons, orchestral and choral societies and a conservatory.

At the Marienkirche the succession of organists has been P. Hasse 1616-, Tunder '41-, Buxtehude '68-, Schiefferdecker 1707-, J. P. Kunzen '32-, A. K. Kunzen '57-, C. Königslöw '71- and G. Herrmann 1831-78. It was to hear the noted 'Abendmusiken' under Buxtehude that J. S. Bach made his laborious trip in 1705. These sacred concerts continued even into the 19th century. The church now has three organs.

Among recent conductors at the Stadttheater have been Balling 1898-1901, Pander 1915 and Wetzler '15-19.

The Singakademie, founded in 1832, was led by K. Stiehl in 1878-97, and the Symphony Concerts by K. G. Göhler in 1915-18 and by Hoesslin in '19-20. There is also a Gesangverein, started in 1880.

The Konservatorium is directed by Luise Kaibel and A. Hofmaier.

Birthplace of Frdr. Kunzen 1761, Luise Küster 1823, Karl and Hnr. Stiehl '26, '29, Karl Gramm '44, Fritz Scheel '52, Karl Waack '81, etc.

Histories by K. Stiehl, 1885-1902 (six works, one on the Marienkirche), and Hennings, 1907-13 (on the Singakademie and Gesangverein).

Lucca. Cathedral-city in northern Italy (35 m. west of Florence).

The Cathedral has had musical importance from the 16th century, among the choirmasters then being Dorati 1557- and Fr. Guami '93-1601, with J. Guami as organist in '91-1611. In 1808-43 Santucci was maestro and since about 1890 Luporini.

The Liceo Musicale Pacini takes its name from the fact that G. Pacini removed hither the Istituto that he had founded at Viareggio (a few miles to the west) and directed it till 1867. The present director for many years is Luporini.

Birthplace of Jos. and Franc. Guami ?1540-44, Crist. Malvezzi '47, Franc. and Mich. Gasparini 1668, '85, Franc. Geminiani '74, Luigi Boccherini 1743, Marco Santucci '62, D. A. Cerù 1817, Alfr. Catalani '54, Giac. Puccini '58, Gaet. Luporini '65, Ad. Betti '75, etc.

Histories by Cerù, 1871, Nericì, 1879, Landucci, 1906, and Pellagrini, 1914.

Lyons. Large city in southeastern France, now third in size in the republic, important as a center for commerce, industry and much in intellectual and artistic life, including opera, large concert-undertakings, a conservatory, etc. At the Grand Théâtre Hainl was conductor in 1840-63 and about 1900 Vizentini director, followed by Beyle, recently with Bovy and Ryder as conductors.

In 1865-1915 L. Reuchsel, the organist at St.-Bonaventure, conducted the sacred music society Ste.-Cécile. In 1902 Witkowski organized a Schola Cantorum (choral) and in 1905 the Société des Grands Concerts (orchestral), both of which still flourish.

The École de Musique, opened in 1874 as a branch of the Paris Conservatory, has recently been directed by Savard 1902- and Florent Schmitt '21-.

Birthplace of Jacques Gauthier 1597?, Pierre Perrin 1620?, Louis Marchand '69, J. M. Leclair '97, Chas. Widor 1845, J. L. Lassalle '47, Alex. Luigini '50, J. F. Delmas '61, Hip. Miranda '62, Edm. Monod '71, Amédée and Maur. Reuchsel '75, '80, etc.

Histories by Hainl, 1852, Tricot, 1899, M. Reuchsel, 1903, Holstein, 1904 (Conservatory), Sallès, 1907 (opera), Vallas, 1908, and J. B. Martin, 1908 (church-music).

Madrid. Capital and largest city of Spain, the main center of its intellectual and artistic life, with a cathedral, a university, a noted opera-house, various concert-enterprises and a conservatory. Its court-music was significant during the 16th century. In recent times the city has been the natural focus of most of the energy of the new school of Spanish composers and performers.

Among the choirmasters in the Royal Chapel during the 16th century were Peñalosa ?1480-1516, Gombert 1537-56?, G. Turnhout '72-, La Hèle '80-, Ph. Rogier '89-, Victoria '96-, Clavijo 1602- and Comes '19-32. Early in the 18th the organists included Torres 1702-38, followed by Nebra. In the 19th the list includes Lidón 1808-, Rodríguez '27-, Eslava '47-78, etc.

The introduction of Italian opera dates from about 1750. The present Teatro Reale was built in 1850, recent conductors being Mancinelli 1888- and E. Serrão '94-. The most popular dramatic form, however, is the zarzuela, mostly presented at various smaller houses.

The Société des Concerts, started in 1867, has been led by F. A. Barbieri 1867-, Mancinelli, '91- and Monasterio '94-1903. Other orchestral enterprises are the Filarmonica (1915) and the Sinfonica (now led by Arbós), with the Masa Coral (1918). There are also several chamber-music organizations.

The Conservatorio de María Cristina, founded in 1830, has been directed by Eslava 1844-, Arrieta '68-, Monasterio '84- and Bretón 1903-. Birthplace of Stef. Artega 1730, Isabella Col-bran '85, Man. Patr. García 1805, Raf. Hernando '22, F. A. Barbieri '23, Adelina Patti '43, Fern. Arbós '63, Alb. Jonás '68, etc.

Histories of the opera by Diana, 1850, Carmena, 1878, Pedrell, 4 vols. thus far, Cotarello, 1917, and various works on music in Spain.

Magdeburg. Capital of the Prussian province of Saxony (about 90 m. west of Berlin), in the Middle Ages and since one of the leading commercial towns of northern Europe, long prominent in the Hanseatic League, though never a free city. Its older musical significance came from its cathedral and churches, with the school that was started at the Reformation. Its civic enterprise has expressed itself in fostering the opera, in various organizations for instrumental and vocal music and in several music-schools. At the Cathedral the more recent organists have been A. Mühling 1843-, A. G. Ritter '47- and Forchhammer '85-. In 1853-58 Rebling was choirmaster.

Among the cantors at the Altstädte Schule, founded in 1524 (resembling the much older Thomasschule at Leipzig and the Kreuzschule at Dresden) were M. Agricola 1527-5, Bonus '56-, Dreszler '63-, L. Schröter '77- and E. Hering '95-?. Music-masters at the more modern Seminar have included A. Mühling 1823- and Rebling '47-97.

In the office of town-director in the 18th century were C. F. Rolle 1721- and J. H. Rolle '52-75, the latter being organist at the Johanniskirche in '46-85, the same post held by Rebling in 1858-97. At the Ulrichskirche in the middle of the 18th century Rabert was organist, followed by A. E. Müller in 1789-94 and later by A. Mühling 1823- and J. Mühling '43-80.

The Gesellschaftskonzerte have been led by A. Mühling 1823-, J. Mühling '47-, Rebling '80- and F. Kauffmann '89-. The Sinfoniekonzerte by the City Orchestra (from 1889) have been led by Kauffmann 1889-, Krug-Waldsee 1901- and Rabl '15-. The leaders of the Kirchengesangvereine have been Rebling 1846- and Kauffmann '97-, while since about 1900 Müller von der Ocker has had charge of the Volks-Singakademie.

A recent conductor at the Städtisches Oper has been Göllrich.

The Konservatorium is directed by M. Sunne-mann, and there are several other institutions.

Birthplace of Joh. a. Burck 1541? (at Burg), Martin Agricola '56, G. P. Telemann 1681, F. E. Fesca 1789, F. C. Ehrlich 1807, Karl Schuberth '11, Alb. Niemann '31 (at Exleben), Herm. Riedel '47 (at Burg), Georg Dohrn '67, Kurt Beilschmidt '86, etc.

History of the music at the Cathedral by Engelke, 1913 (in a general local history).

Manchester. The fourth largest city in England and one of its principal manufacturing centers, with a cathedral, a university, a famous orchestra, regular opera-seasons, various choral and chamber-societies, schools of music, etc. G. At the Cathedral (or St. Mary's, which was so designated in 1847) the list of organists begins in 1635 and includes Betts 1714-, Rob. and Rich. Wainwright '68-82, Sudlow 1804-, J. J. Harris '48-, J. F. Bridge '69-, Pyne '75-, Nicholson 1909- and A. W. Wilson '19-.

The Philharmonic Orchestra (or Hallé Concerts), started in 1857, have been conducted by Hallé 1857-, Cowen '96-, Richter '99-, Baling '11-14 and Harty '20-. They early became notable events in the music-history of the country. The so-called Gentlemen's Concerts are much older, traceable to at least 1745, but latterly abandoned. The Gentlemen's Glee Club runs back to 1830. More recent organizations are the Vocal Society, started in 1867, and the Philharmonic Choral Society, begun in 1880. The present leader of the former is Keighley and of the latter Lane. At the Town Hall Pyne was organist in 1877-1913.

For many years opera-seasons have been maintained by the Beecham Opera Company, and the latter is projecting a large Opera House, which after ten years will become the property of the city.

At the Victoria University Pyne was lecturer, organist or professor in 1901-13.

The Royal College of Music, founded in 1893, has been directed by Hallé 1893- and Brodsky '95-. There are several other large music-schools.

In the Public Library is the notable music-collection given in 1899 by Henry Watson.

Birthplace of S. P. Jackson 1818, Rich. Hoffman '31, Julian Edwards '55, W. E. Broome '68, Mme. Kirkby-Lunn '73, Ralph Kinder (at Stalybridge), Howard Carr '80, etc.

Mannheim. Largest city of Baden (in the north, on the Rhine, about 50 miles south of Frankfurt). In 1720-78 it was the residence of the Electors Palatine, who maintained a musical establishment that became not only the best in Europe, but the source whence was disseminated an epochmaking instrumental style (see Mannheim School in Part I). This court-organization had previously been at Heidelberg and in 1778 was transferred to Munich (see under both). During the 19th century the opera was notable and many orchestral undertakings prospered, besides choral societies and the like, so that the city has remained a conspicuous musical center in southwestern Germany.

The court-directors during the Electoral period were Carlo Grua 1720- (previously at Heidelberg) and Holzbauer '53-78, with Winter in charge of the opera in 1776-78. To these followed I. Fränzl 1790-, P. Ritter 1803- and Jos. Strauss '23-24. The development of the court-opera since has been under Fr. Lachner 1834-, V. Lachner '36-, Frank '72-, Frz. Fischer '77-, Paur '80-, Weingartner '89-, Röhr '92-, Reznicek '96-, Köhler '99-, Kutzschbach 1906-, Bodansky '09- (with Zemlinsky and Coates at times), Furtwängler '15- and Hoesslin '20-22. The Hoftheater (now the Nationaltheater), originally built in 1779 was restored in 1854 and is counted one of the finest in southern Germany.

The Akademiekonzerte have usually been led by the opera-conductors, as well as those of the Musikverein. But there are several other choral and instrumental organizations.

The Hochschule für Musik, founded in 1900, has been directed by Bopp 1900-, Zuschneid '07-, Rehberg '17- (with Max Welcker) and Schattschneider '21-. There is also an Opernschule and a Seminar for musicological study.

Birthplace of Frz. Beck 1730, Chru. Cannabich '31, Ignaz Fränzl '36, Ernst Eichner '40, Wilh. Cramer '45, Karl and J. A. Stamitz '46, '54, Paul Grua '54, Peter v. Winter '54, Peter Ritter '63, Karl Cannabich '64, J. F. and Frz. Eek '66, '74, B. A. Weber '66, J. B. Cramer '71, Gottfr. Weber '79 (at Freinsheim), Jacques Rosenhain 1813, Hnr. Esser '18, Emil Heckel '31, Jean Becker '33, Rob. Heckmann '48, Max Brauer '55, Willy Hess '59, Wilh. Bopp '63, Rob. Kahn '65, Alb. Mayer-Reinach '76, Berta Morena '78, Gerald Maas '88, etc.

History by Fr. Walter, 1898-99.

Mantua. Small city in northern Italy (40 m. east of Cremona), capital of the duchy or province of Mantua, which in 1328-1708 was made brilliant by the Gonzaga family. Musically it was important under their régime.

At the Cathedral the choirmasters in the 16th century include Jachet de Mantua 1527-58, Baccusi '87- and Viadana '94-1609.

Choirmasters at the Ducal Chapel and the court-church (S. Barbara, erected in 1565) include Contino 1561-, de Wert '65-, Gastoldi '82-, B. Pallavicino '96-, Monteverde 1602-12, Effrem '17-22, etc.

Birthplace of Alb. Ripa 1510?, Ales. Striggio, Sr. '35?, Hip. Baccusi '45?, Lud. Viadana '64 (at Viadana), Carlo Farina 1600?, G. B. Gordiniani 1795 and Cesare Rossi 1864.

Histories by Canal, 1881-86, Davari, 1884, A. d'Ancona, 1885, Ademollo, 1885-88, Bertalotti, 1890-91, etc.

Marburg. Small university-city in Hesse-Nassau (40 m. north of Frankfurt).

The music-directors at the University have been L. Wolff 1875-, Freiberg '80-, R. Barth '87-, Jenner '95- and Stephani 1921-. They conduct the Akademischer Konzertverein.

Marseilles. The second city and chief port of France, but not specially noted for musical life except in its conservatory.

Directors at the Conservatoire, founded in 1821, have included Barsotti 1821-, Morel '52-77 and André Gouirand recently.

At the Opéra Municipal a recent conductor has been F. Rey.

Birthplace of Denis Gaultier 1605?, And. Bernasconi 1706, J. H. A. Farrenc '94, A. F. Morel 1809, Ernest Reyer '23, Marie Carvalho '27,

J. E. D. Cohen '30, Émile Bernard '43, Victor Maurel '48, Mich. Calvo-coressi '77, Lucien Muratori '78, etc.

History by Gouiraud, 1908.

Mayence. Important city on the Rhine (25 m. west of Frankfurt), now the capital of the province of Rhein-Hesse, but until about 1800 the seat of an electorate (archbishopric) and from medieval times of much commercial importance. It has a notable cathedral, an opera-house, a municipal orchestra, choral societies, more than one music-school, etc. In the 15th century it became famous as the place where printing from movable types was invented or at least introduced by Gutenberg.

The electoral court seems not to have emphasized a musical establishment, though Zach was court-director in 1745-56 and Righini in 1788-92.

The recent city-directors and chief conductors at the Stadttheater and of the Städtisches Orchester have been E. Steinbach 1877- and Gorter 1910-. The Theater, built in 1833, was renovated in 1876. The Orchester was given permanence by a fund established in 1874-75 by Franz Schott (the publisher) and his wife. In 1892-1907 Volbach led various choral societies.

The choirmaster at the Cathedral in 1896-1911 was G. v. Weber.

Prominent among the music-schools is Schumachers Konservatorium, founded in 1881 by the critic Paul Schumacher, followed as director by his widow in 1891 and now by M. F. Voss.

Birthplace of Ldw. Fischer 1745, J. M. Kraus '56 (at Miltenberg), Margarete Schick '73, Adolf, Moritz and Leopold Ganz '96, 1806, '10, Peter Cornelius 1824, Wilh. Ganz '33, Frz. Betz '35, B. E. Scholz '35, Emma Koch '60, Wilh. Bruch '64, Wilh. Kleefeld '68, Edgar Istel '80, R. Sondheimer '81, etc.

History by Peth, 1879-83.

Meiningen. Capital of the duchy of Saxe-Meiningen (40 m. southwest of Gotha), made musically most notable by the superb development (from 1880) of its court-orchestra.

The list of court-directors includes Bott 1857- A. E. Büchner '66-, Von Bülow '80-, R. Strauss '85-, Fritz Steinbach '86-, W. Berger 1903-, Reger '11- and F. W. Stein '14 (the establishment being then broken up by the war). Since 1914, however, Paulke has been court-cantor (in charge of church-music) and leader of the Bach-Verein. It is to be noted, also, that in 1708 Joh. Ludwig Bach (J. S. Bach's third cousin) became court-cantor here and in 1711-41 was director.

Birthplace of J. G. Vierling 1750 (at Metzels), F. A. Kummer '97, C. C. Müller 1831, and Frdr. Grützmacher '66.

History by Mühlfeld, 1910.

Merseburg. Capital of the duchy of Saxe-Merseburg (1656-1738) and in medieval times the seat of an important bishopric (about 15 m. west of Leipzig).

The Cathedral is noted for having a large organ, built during the 18th century. A. F. Graun was cantor here in 1729-65 and Römheld organist in 1735-56. Among later organists have been J. G. Werner 1819-, Wilh. Schneider '22-, A. G. Ritter '44- and D. H. Engel '48-77.

Among the leading musicians at the ducal court in the early 18th century were J. C. Hertel, Aschenbrenner and Chr. Förster as directors and J. F. Alberti and G. F. Kauffmann as organists.

Metz. Capital of the province of Lorraine (90 m. northwest of Strasburg), having a cathedral, opera-seasons, two or more orchestras, a conservatory, etc.

The École de Musique, founded in 1835 and made a branch of the Paris Conservatory in 1841, was directed until the Franco-Prussian war by Desvignes 1835- and Mouzin '54-71; a recent director under the German régime was Th. Biester.

Birthplace of Louis de Persuis 1769, Ambroise Thomas 1811, Éd. Mouzin '22, Gabriel Pierné '63 and Rich. Zöllner '96.

Historical sketches of the Conservatory by Mouzin, 1860?

Milan. The third largest city in Italy and the metropolis of Lombardy, long musically famous for its cathedral, its great opera-house and its fine conservatory. In recent times, for various reasons it has become the center for a new interest in instrumental composition and performance, as well as for music-publishing.

Among the choirmasters at the Cathedral have been Gafori ?1484-, Werrecoren 1523-58, V. Ruffo '63-74, '80- (with Caimo as organist in '80-88), Gabussi '82-1611, I. Donati 1631-, Crivelli '38-42, Fioroni 1747- (with J. Chr. Bach as organist in '60-62), Sarti '79-84, Zingarelli '92-94, Boucheron 1847-76, Quarenghi '79-82, etc.

La Scala (so called because on the site of the old church of S. Maria della Scala) was built in 1776-78 by order of Maria Theresa (Lombardy being then under Austrian domination), replacing the earlier Ducal Theater; it was restored in 1878. It may be noted that Lampugnani was cembalist or conductor in 1779-89. Among its directors have been Barbaja '1820-30 (also in charge of the court-theaters in Vienna and of San Carlo in Naples), Merelli c. '35-45, Gatti-Casazza '98-1908 and Toscanini 1920-. Among the conductors may be named A. Rolla 1802-, Gius. Lamperti '42- Faccio '72-91, Mascheroni '93-, Toscanini '98-1908 (with Polacco and Cl. Campanini for short periods). G.

The Regio Conservatorio (now with Giuseppe Verdi added) was started in 1807 by Eugène de Beauharnais, then Viceroy of Italy under Napoleon, being therefore one of the oldest in Italy (in the modern series). Prior to its reorganization in 1860 the chief 'inspectors' were Basili 1827- and Vaccai '38-48; later directors have included Lauro Ressi '50-70, Mazzucato '72-, Ronchetti-Monteviti '77-, Ant. Bazzini '82- and Gallignani '97-. The Conservatory has a library and an instrument-collection, both large and important. G (Milan).

Birthplace of Francesco da Milano 1490?, Orfeo Vecchi 1540, G. D. and Franc. Rognone-Taegio '80?, Franc. Porta '90?, F. A. Urlo 1660?, G. B. Lampugnani 1706, Luigi Marchesi '55, Dom. Barbaja '78, Maria Caradori (-Allan) 1800, Gaet. Nava '02, G. B. Sammartini '04, Giuditta and Giulia Grisi '05, '11, Marietta Brambilla '07, (at Cassano d'Adda), Ern. Cavallini '07, G. A. Biaggi '19, Ad. Fumagalli '28 (at Inzagio), Ant. Zamara '29, Gust. Garcia '37, G. B. Lamperti '39, Ed. Mascheroni '59, Fr. Leoni '64, Piero Coppola '88, Amelita Galli-Curci '89, etc.

Histories of La Scala and other theaters by Chiappari, 1818, L. Romani, 1862, Cambiasi, 1872, '98, 1916-Gutierrez, 1914, Marangoni and Vanbianchi, 1922, and many other books and articles.

Minneapolis, Minn. Large city on the upper Mississippi River, with the almost adjoining city of St. Paul the metropolis of the northwestern central states of the United States. The Symphony Orchestra, formed in 1903, was soon brought to artistic importance under Oberhoffer, who in 1923 was succeeded by Verbrugghen. A.

Among the music-schools are the Northwestern Conservatory (founded in 1885 by C. H. Morse) and the School of Music, now directed by W. H. Pontius.

Modena. Small city in northern Italy (25 m. northwest of Bologna), from 1452 for four centuries capital of a duchy and from even a century earlier controlled by the celebrated Este family, having a cathedral, a university and more or less regular opera-seasons.

Among the maestri at the Cathedral in the olden time were Orazio Vecchi 1596-, Capilupi '98-1616, Uccellini ?1654-, G. M. Bononcini ?'75-, Colombi '78-94, M. A. Bononcini 1721-26, Catelani 1838-59, etc.

Among the court-directors have been Orazio Vecchi 1598-1605, Uccellini 1645-49 and again later, Sacrati '49-, Crivelli '50-, B. Ferrari '53-62 and '74-81, Gianettini '86-1721, Ant. Gandini ?1810- and Ales. Gandini '42-71 (the last continuing after the end of the dual régime).

Birthplace of Lud. and Giac. Fogliano 1470?, '73, Sper' in Dio Bertoldo 1530?, Orazio Vecchi '50?, G. M., Giov. and M. A. Bononcini 1640, '60?, '75?, Ant. Seghicielli 1802, Luigi Giordigiani '06, Ales. Gandini '07, F. L. Valdrighi '37, Alice Barbi '62, etc.

Histories by Ales. Gandini, 1873, Valdrighi, 1882, Tardini, 1883-1902, etc.

Mons. Small city in southern Belgium, capital of the province of Hainault (40 m. south-west of Brussels), but destroyed in the recent war.

Directors at the Conservatoire have included Huberti 1874- and Van den Eeden '78-1914. Birthplace of F. J. Fétis 1784 and Th. Nisard 1812.

Moscow. The traditional capital of Russia and now its largest city, the seat of government and (with Petrograd) the center of most of its intellectual and artistic life. It has long had one or more opera-houses and is the headquarters of the National Musical Society (with many branches elsewhere), as well as of the more local Philharmonic Society, each of which maintains symphony-concerts and a conservatory. It has also been an influential center for the a cappella music of the Russo-Greek Church. Although earlier visited by various artists from abroad, the rise of its active musical life dates from the recovery of the city after its occupation and burning in the French invasion under Napoleon in 1812.

Early leaders in the development of the opera-house were Frdr. Scholtz 1815- and Verstovsky '24-62. The more recent conductors at the 'Great Theatre' have included V. Suk 1881-84 and 1906-, Altani '82-?, Klenovsky '83-93, Rachmaninov 1904-06 and Dobroven 1919-.

The Imperial Musical Society was here started in 1859 by Nich. Rubinstein, who conducted its Symphony Concerts till '81, followed by Erdmannsdörfer '82-, Safonov '90- and Ippolitov-Ivanov 1906-. Its Conservatory was founded in 1866, the directors being N. Rubinstein 1866-, Hubert '81-, K. Albrecht '83-, Taneiev '85-, Safonov '89- and Ippolitov-Ivanov 1906-.

The Philharmonic Musical Society, founded in 1883, also maintains Symphony Concerts, led by Shostakovsky 1883-, Kes '98-1901, '02- and Chessin 1903-. Its Conservatory has been directed by Shostakovsky 1883-, Kruglikov '98-, Kes 1901- and Brandukov '03-. This latter grew out of a school started by Shostakovsky in 1878.

The heads of the Synodal School and Choir have included Smolensky 1889- and Rastalsky 1901-.

Birthplace of Vassili Besekirsky 1835, Nich. Rubinstein '35, Mich. Asantchevsky '38, Mich. Ivanov '49, Alex. Kastalsky '56, Georg Konius '62, Alex. Gretchaninov '64, H. E. Pfitzner '69, Arseni Korestchenko '70, Paul Juon '72, Alex. Scriabin '72, Sergei Vassilenko '72, Jos. Lhévinne '74, Mich. Ivanov-Boretzky '74, Vassili Besekirsky, Jr. '79, Leonid Sabaniev '81, etc. In 1920 Sabaniev led in the establishment of a National Institute of Musical Science.

Histories by Smolenski, 1895-98 (Synodal Sch.), Dmitriev, 1898 (opera), Manikin-Nevstruev, 1899 (Imp. Soc. concerts), etc., with many works on music in Russia (see Appendix A, under National Music).

Mühlhausen. Small Thuringian town (20 m. north of Eisenach), musically important because of the succession of organists in the 16-18th centuries.

The roll of organists at the Blasiuskirche includes Moller (a Burck) 1566-, Heydenreich 1610-, H. Schmied '34-, Vockerodt '49-, J. R. Ahle '54-, J. S. Ahle '73-, J. S. Bach 1707- and J. Frdr. Bach '08-30. During J. S. Bach's short service he prepared a notable scheme for the reconstruction of the organ. Birthplace of Joh. Eccard 1553, J. R. Ahle 1625, J. N. Hanff '30 (at Wechmar) and J. G. Ahle '51.

History by Jordan, 1905.

Munich. Capital of the duchy of kingdom of Bavaria and now the fourth largest city in Germany. It has held a place of great brilliance and influence in music since the 16th century, especially because of the genius of Lassus in the a cappella period, as the inheritor of the Mannheim traditions (from 1778) and in connection with manifold operatic and orchestral developments during the 19th century. Under the erratic Ludwig II (from 1864) it became a headquarters for the Wagner propaganda. Besides its court-establishment, it has a cathedral and many noted churches, a powerful university, several important orchestral and choral organizations, one of the best conservatories in Europe, etc.

In the court-kapelle the long list of directors includes Senfl 1530-40?, Daser '52-, Orl. Lassus '59-, Ferd. Lassus '94-1609, Ferd. Lassus, Jr. 1616-, Crivelli '29-, Porro '35-, Kerll '56-, G. E. Bernabei '74-, G. A. Bernabei '88-, Torri 1732-, Giov. Porta '38-, Bernasconi '55-, Karl Cannabich '78-, F. Fränzl 1806-, Aiblinger '26-, Fr. Lachner '36-, Rich. Wagner '64-65, Von Bülow '67-69, H. Levi '72-96, Frz. Fischer '79-1912, Rich. Strauss '86-89, '94-98, Stavenhagen '98-, Cortolezis 1907-11, Bruno Walter '14- and Knappertsbusch '22-, the last two having the title of general music-director, as also Zumpe in 1900-03 and Mottl in 1903-14, while that of intendant was borne by Rumling in 1800-25, Poissl in '25-48, Perfall in '64-1907 and Von Franckenstein in 1912-18. Additional conductors at the Hofoper to be named are Winter 1788-1825, Stuntz 1826-36, Kienzl 1892-93, Röhr since 1896, Reichenberger 1903-05, O. Hess since 1913, Heger since 1921, etc. Among the court-organists have been Paumann 1467-73, Vento 1570-, Guami '75-, Rud. Lassus '87-1625, Steffani 1675-88?, Kalcher 1798-, Pentenrieder 1826-, E. Frank '65-68, etc. In 1864-77 Fr. Wüllner was conductor of the court-choir, followed (till 1901) by Rheinberger.

It is to be remembered that in 1778, the electorates of Bavaria and the Palatinate having been united, the musical establishment formerly at Mannheim was transferred to Munich (though some of the musicians remained at Mannheim).

The present Hof- (or National-) Theater was built in 1824 to replace the earlier building that was burnt in 1823. It is one of the finest opera-houses in Europe. In addition there is the Prinzregententheater, in the newer part of the city, under the same management.

Besides the Hoforchester, conducted by one or more of the court-directors, the more important of several organizations is the Konzertvereins-Orchester, formed in 1908 to succeed the Kaim-Orchester, which was started in 1893 by Franz Kaim to give both symphony and popular concerts in his Konzertsaal. The conductors of the two enterprises have been Winderstein 1893-, Zumpe '95-, F. Löwe '97-, Weingartner and Hausegger '98-, Raabe 1903-, Schneevoigt '04-, Löwe and Prill '08-14 and Hausegger '20-.

The Oratorienverein, founded in 1854, was led till '64 by Perfall and then (till '77) by Rheinberger. Other choral organizations are the Porges Gesangverein, led by its founder in 1886-1900, and the Bachverein, started in 1909 by Alfred Stern.

The organist at the Frauenkirche (the Cathedral) since 1901 has been Jos. Schmid, who previously (from 1890) had been at the Heiliggeist-Kirche.

At the University Sandberger has been lecturer or professor since 1894. He is also head of the music-section in the Royal Library.

The directors of the Akademie der Tonkunst, founded in 1846 and reorganized in 1867, have been F. Hauser 1846-64, Von Bülow '67-69, Rheinberger '67- (as 'inspector'), Stavenhagen 1901-, Mottl '04-11, with Hans Bussmeyer '04-19, and S. v. Hausegger and Waltershausen '20-.

Birthplace of Ldw. Daser 1525?, sons and grandson of Lassus '60-95?, Th. Boehm 1794, Karl Bärmann 1811, Josephine Lang '15, Karl v. Perfall '24, Ldw. Stark '31, Dionys Pruckner '34, Max Zenger '37, Karl Bärmann, Jr. '39, Hnr. Kahl '40, G. W. Rauchenecker '44, Hnr. Vogl '45, Ern. Frank '47, Sophie Menter '48, Frz. v. Fischer '49, Max Koch '55, Herm. von der Pfordten '57, Rich. Strauss '64, Emil Oberhoffer '67, Jos. Schmid '68, Hnr. Knote '70, Th. Kroyer '73, Frz. Mikorey '73, Ern. Boehe '80, Alf. Einstein '80, Klaus Pringsheim '83, Frz. Hoesslin '85, Walter Harburger '88, etc.

Histories (mostly on the opera) by Rudhart, 1865, Grandaur, 1878, Perfall, 1892, Sandberger, 1894-95, etc., with biographies of many of the court-musicians.

Münster. City of moderate size in north-western Germany, the capital of the province of Westphalia, with a cathedral, a university, regular opera-seasons, various musical societies, etc. The choirmaster at the Cathedral since 1866 has been Frdr. Schmidt (Witt's successor as head of the Cäcilienverein).

Recent leaders of the Musikverein, founded in 1820, have been Niessen 1900- and Volbach '19-. These have also led the Liedertafel (one of the oldest in Germany, dating from 1822) and have served as music-directors at the University (revived in 1902 after having been suspended since 1818).

Birthplace of Andr. Rombert 1767, Frz. Espagne 1828, Frz. Wüllner '32, Fr. Hueffer '43, Ldw. Wüllner '58, etc.

History of the Musikverein by Fel. Hase, 1920.

Nancy. City of moderate size in northeastern France (75 m. west of Strasburg), with a cathedral, opera-seasons and considerable concert-life, a conservatory, etc.

A recent conductor at the Grand Théâtre was Poncet.

Directors at the Conservatoire, founded in 1881, have included Sandre ?1881-, Repartz '94- and Bachelet 1919-.

Birthplace of C. N. Baudiot 1773, Alexis de Gaudé '79, Ern. David 1844, Eug. Gigout '44, Chas. Dalmorès '71, etc.

History of the Conservatory by Repartz, 1897.

Nantes. The sixth largest city in France (at the head of the estuary of the Loire), with a cathedral, more or less operatic and concert-activity, a music-school, etc.

The École de Musique is affiliated with the Paris Conservatory (recent director, H. Wein-gartner).

Birthplace of Fr. Benoist 1794, L. A. Bourgault-Ducoudray 1840, Camilla Urso '42, L. de la Laurencie '61, Rouillé-Destranges '63, P. E. Ladmirault '77, etc.

Histories by Rouillé-Destranges, 1890? (opera), Maillard, 1896, Laurencie, 1906, etc.

Naples. The largest city in Italy and its principal seaport. From the 12th century it was the capital of the kingdom of Naples (or of the Two Sicilies), which in the 16-17th centuries was controlled by Spain, in 1707-35 and 1815-60 by Austria and in 1806-15 by France. It has therefore had court-music at times and its cathedral and large churches have also had some musical importance. But its greatest musical fame has come from its having been the place where the germ of the 'conservatory' was first planted (16-17th centuries) and the home of that type of Italian opera which has achieved the widest circulation and power (chiefly in the 18th century). In connection with this latter arose a legion of Neapolitan composers, singers and conductors. Its great opera-house, San Carlo, for two centuries has been one of the most celebrated in the world. G. The first music-school was that of the Netherlander Tinctoris (about 1480), which is the earliest anywhere except for classes connected with religious houses and cathedrals (see under Matrise in Part I).

The name 'conservatorio' was first applied to four charity-schools for orphans, that of S. Maria di Loreto (projected in 1535 and fully established in 1566), that of S. Onofrio a Capuana (1576), that of the Poveri di Gesù Cristo (1589) and that of the Pietà de' Turchini (started in 1583, but without musical instruction till 1670). At first devoted only to elementary teaching, these developed in the 18th century into schools of breadth and influence, often commanding the services of masterly teachers. They were gradually more or less consolidated into two and in 1806-08 (under Joseph Bonaparte) were replaced by the present Real Conservatorio S. Pietro a Majella (at first called S. Sebastiano). The directors of this latter have been Tritto, Paisiello and Feneroli (jointly) 1808-, Zingarelli '13-, Donizetti '37-, Mercadante '40- (assisted in '61-68 by Conti and then by his son), Lauro Rossi '70-, Arienzo '79-, Platania '88-, Martucci 1902- (with De Nardis), Pagliara '09-, Fano '11- and Cilèa '16-. (It may be added that with the earlier Cons. di S. Onofrio are associated the names of A. Scarlatti, Durante and Porpora and with that de' Turchini those of Provenzale, Fago, Feo, Leo and Cafaro.)

In the list of court-directors, which runs back into the 16th century, among the directors or organists are the Macques (before 1600), Trabacchi, P. A. Ziani, Falconieri and Caresana (before 1700), A. Scarlatti 1694-1702, '08-25, F. Mancini 1725-40, Sarri (second-director from 1713 and first from '40), Majo '60-70 (organist) Paisiello '84-1815 (with some interruption), Tritto 1816-24 and Sarmiento '54-69.

The Teatro San Carlo was built in 1737 and, after a disastrous fire, rebuilt in 1816. The first director after the renovation was the celebrated Barbaja. The conductors, except for short periods, seem to have been constantly varied, after the old custom. There are several other theaters where operas are produced. G.

Birthplace of Scip. Cerreto 1551, Muzio Effrem '55?, Andr. Falconieri 1600?, Ales. Stradella '45?, Nicolini '73?, Fr. Mancini '74, Fr. Durante '84, Fr. Feo '85?, Dom. Scarlatti '85, N. A. Porpora '86, Fr. Araja 1700, Nic. Logroscino '00?, Farinelli '05, Dav. Perez '11, Ign. Fiorillo '15, Regina Mingotti '21, Pasq. Anfossi '27, Gius. Giordani '44, Gennaro Astaritta '49?, N. A. Zingarelli '52, Luigi Caruso '54, Ang. Tarchi '60, Gaet. Andreozzi '63, P. C. Guglielmi '63, Gius. and Luigi Mosca '72, '75, Carlo Coccia '82, Giac. Cordella '83, M. E. Carafa '87, Luigi Lablache '94, Luigi and Fed. Ricci '05, '09, Giov. Moretti '07, Mich. Costa '08, Giov. Sbriglia '40, Enr. Bevignani '41, Tito Mattei '41 (at Campobasso), Nic. d'Arienzo '42, Ben. Cesi, Fed. Polidoro '45, Ed. Marzo '52, Rug. Leonevallo '58, Leop. Mugnone '58, Enr. Sansone '59, Luigi Romanelli '60, Ant. Scotti '66, Enr. de Leva '67, Enr. Caruso '73, Pasq. Amato '78, Lor. Filiasi '78, Alb. Gasco '79, Fr. Santoliquido '83 (at S. Giorgio a Cremano), etc.

Histories by Taddei, 1817, Villarosa, 1840-43, Florino, 1869-84, A. Alberti, 1878, Scherillo, 1883-1918, Arienzo, 1887-1902, Giacomo, c. 1890-1920, Croce, 1891-1916, Ceci, 1893, Scalari, 1909, etc.

Newcastle. Large city and port in the north of England, having now a cathedral, an orchestra, a music-school, etc.

At the Cathedral (established in 1884 at the old church of St. Nicholas) the organists have been Ions 1884- (at St. Nicholas from '57), Huntley '94-, Jeffries '95- and Wm. Ellis 1918-.

For some years Bainton has been head of the Conservatory and conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra.

New Haven, Conn. The largest city in the state of Connecticut (formerly one of its capitals), the seat of Yale University.

At the University the music-directors have been G. J. Stoeckel 1854-, Hor. Parker '94- and D. S. Smith 1920-, the last two being directors of the Yale School of Music and of the New Haven Symphony Orchestra. In 1907-23 Troostwyk also conducted the New Haven String Orchestra.

Birthplace of H. R. Shelley 1858, W. E. Haesche '67, H. B. Jepson '70, W. J. and E. A. Kraft '72, '83, and W. R. Cowles '81.

New Orleans, La. The largest city of the state of Louisiana, in the period before the Civil War one of the largest in the country and a notable center of literary and dramatic life. Musically it was the first city in the United States to maintain French and Italian opera. The first French troupe appeared there in 1791.

In 1808 the Théâtre St. Philippe was built, followed in 1813 by the Théâtre d'Orléans (twice burnt and rebuilt) and in 1859 by the New Orleans (or French) Opera House (burnt in 1919). At intervals troupes from abroad made tours to Chicago, New York and elsewhere from this as a center. Many American premières of French operas have taken place in New Orleans. A.

Birthplace of L. M. Gottschalk 1829, Ernest Guiraud '37, H. A. Lang '54 and Sam Franko '57.

New York. The largest city and chief port of the United States, elsewhere exceeded only by London. Until after 1800 its importance was at least no greater than that of Boston or Philadelphia, but in the 19th century it rapidly took the place of metropolis for the whole country. In musical enterprises its leadership has been most conspicuous since about 1850 and from about 1880 the rapidity of its advance to a place among the foremost capitals of the musical world has been phenomenal, especially on the side of the opera and every sort of vocal and instrumental concert. As in the case of the other largest cities, only a small fraction of its activities can be here indicated. G, A (various articles in both).

The earliest concert on record was about 1730 and at intervals through the 18th century the city was visited by various foreign artists, mostly from England and France (the latter only just before 1800). From about 1775 sundry musical clubs began to come into existence. In 1825 and later Italian opera was occasionally represented and by 1850 the influx of German immigrants had set in, bringing many instrumentalists, teachers and artisans. See Historical Intro. to the Am. Supplement to Grove's Dictionary.

In 1823 the Sacred Music Society was formed, followed in 1849-69 by the Harmonic Society and in 1873 by the Oratorio Society, the conductors of the last being L. Damrosch 1873-, W. Damrosch '85-, F. Damrosch '98-, Koemmenich 1912-, W. Damrosch '17- and Stoessel '21-. The Deutsche Liederkranz, started in 1847, developed especially under Agriol Paur 1850-, R. L. Herman '84-, Hnr. Zoellner '90-, P. Klengel '93-, Claasen '03-10 and Klee '17-. From this branched off in 1854 the Arion, which has been led by Bergmann 1859-60, '67-71, Anschütz '60-62, F. L. Ritter '62-67, L. Damrosch '71-, Van der Stucken '84-, J. Lorenz '95-, Trunk 1912- and Carl Hein '14-. It may be noted that the Liederkranz gave one of Lortzing's operas in 1851 and that the Arion made a European tour in 1892. The Mendelssohn Glee Club was founded in 1866 and has been led by Mosenenthal 1867-, MacDowell '96-, Mees '98-, F. Damrosch 1904, C. Dickinson '09-, Koemmenich '13-, Coffin '19- and R. L. Baldwin '23-. The Church Choral Society was conducted in 1889-1907 by R. H. Warren. It had been preceded by the Church Music Association, started in 1868 by G. T. Strong and Jas. Pech. Even more significant than these have been the Musical Art Society, conducted in 1894-1920 by F. Damrosch, and the Schola Cantorum, begun in 1909-12 as the MacDowell Club and conducted from the first by Kurt Schindler.

The oldest orchestral organization is the Philharmonic Society, founded in 1842, whose conductors have included Eisfeld 1849-, Bergmann '65-, Th. Thomas '76- (till '79 with L. Damrosch and Neuendorff), Seidl '91-, Paur '98-1902, then various guest-conductors, Safonov 1906-, Mahler '09-, Stransky '11- and Mengelberg and Van Hoogstraten (jointly) '23- (with Hadley as assistant since '20). In 1864-69, '72-78 and '80-88 Th. Thomas directed his own orchestra in more than one series of concerts. The Symphony Society, founded in 1878, has been led by L. Damrosch '78- and W. Damrosch '85- (with some interruptions); the latter took the orchestra on a European trip in 1920. The Russian Symphony Society has been conducted by Altschuler since its beginning in 1904. Since 1916 Bodansky has led the concerts of the Society of the Friends of Music and since 1920 those of the New Symphony Society. Space fails for mention of several chamber-music enterprises, but note should be made of the Mason-Thomas Soirées in 1855-68, since they laid the foundation for later advance.

The first building for opera was the Astor Place

Opera House, built in 1847, followed in 1854 by the Academy of Music (rebuilt after a fire in '67). In 1883 this was superseded by the Metropolitan Opera House, which has been administered by Stanton 1884—, Grau '91—, Conried 1903— and Gatti-Casazza '08—, among the chief conductors in recent years being Hertz in 1902—15, Toscanini in '08—15, Pollacco since '12 and Bodansky since '15. The Manhattan Opera House was set up by Hammerstein as a rival in 1906—10 and here Cl. Campanini won his first American success as conductor in '06—09. Other short-lived enterprises were the American Opera Company under Thomas in 1885—87 and the Century Opera Company in 1913—15. Several similar enterprises have been lately set on foot.

Among innumerable music-schools one of specially wide influence has been the Institute of Musical Art, directed from its foundation in 1905 by F. Damrosch. Other institutions are the New York College of Music (1878), of which A. Lambert was head in 1887—1905, followed by Hein and Fraemcke; the National Conservatory, managed by Mrs. J. M. Thurber since 1885, with Bouhy in '85—89, Dvořák in '92—95, Paur in '99—1902 and Safonov in 1906—09 as artistic directors; and the Metropolitan Conservatory (now the Am. Institute of Applied Music), in which Miss Chittenden has been the leading spirit since its start in 1886.

At Columbia University a music-department has been recognized since 1896, now including the instruction given in Teachers' College as well. The chief professors have been MacDowell 1896— and Rybner 1904—19, with McWhood in '97—1910, Farnsworth from 1900, D. G. Mason from '10 and W. H. Hall from '13 as associates. At the College of the City of New York the organ-recitals of S. A. Baldwin since 1907 have won high praise.

The Public Library has one of the largest music-collections in the country, and at the Metropolitan Museum of Art is the remarkable Brown Collection of Instruments.

New York is now the headquarters of the piano-making industry in America, early made notable by the house of Steinway (since 1853) and now by the American Piano Co. (a consolidation effected in 1908). Most noted among many music-publishers is the house of G. Schirmer (since 1866 or really earlier), one of the largest in the world. Since 1915 they have published the Musical Quarterly, edited by O. G. Sonneck.

Birthplace of Maria Nau 1818, J. H. Cornell '28, W. W. Gilchrist '46 (at Jersey City), Th. Baker '51, Ed. Reuss '51, Minnie Hauk '52, G. T. Strong '56, Gust. Kobbé '57, A. W. Lilienthal '59, Marie Van Zandt '60?, Victor Baier '61, E. A. MacDowell '61, Zélie de Lus-san '63, W. H. Dayas '64, P. H. Goepp '64, Senkrah '64, Geo. Lehmann '65, S. A. Rivar-de '65, Gust. Saenger '65, F. L. Limbert '66, David Mannes '66, Leon Rains '70, Bern.

Sinsheimer '70, Rubin Goldmark '72, O. G. Sonneck '73 (at Jersey City), Chas. Heinrich '74, Amadeo von der Hoya '74, Leon. Lieb-ling '74, G. A. Walter '75, Fritz Koenicke '76, Otto Kinkeldey '78, Alb. Mildenberg '78, Eleonora de Cisneros '80, F. M. Class '81, H. B. Gaul '81, G. H. Federlein '83, J. P. Dunn '84, Edwin Grasse '84, Deems Taylor '85, Lucille Marcel '87?, Lillian Grenville '88, Ph. James '90, A. W. Kramer '90, etc. See also under Brooklyn.

Histories by Krebbel, 1884—1919, Messiter, 1906 (Trinity Church), Anon., 1909 (Oratorio Soc.), Hune-ker, 1918 (Philharm. Soc.), Saerchinger, 1920 (in Musical Quarterly), etc.

Norfolk, Conn. A small town in northwestern Connecticut where since 1900 notable festivals have been held under the patronage of Carl Stoeckel (discontinued in 1923).

The Litchfield County Choral Union was formed in 1899 to link together choruses in the ad-jacent towns of Norfolk, Winsted, Salisbury, Canaan and Torrington. The conductor till 1915 and again in '22 was R. P. Paine, with Mees in '15—21. Here were first given sym-phonie works by Hadley, Kelley, Sibelius, Stanford, Stock, Loeffler, Carpenter and D. S. Smith and large choral works by Hor. Parker, Chadwick, Coleridge-Taylor, etc. A. History of the Festivals by Vail, 1912.

Norwich. Cathedral-city in the east of Eng-land, having important festivals since 1770.

The register of organists at the Cathedral runs back to 1585 (with also a single item in the 14th century) and includes Cobbold 1598—, Inglott 1608—21, Ayleward '60—69, H. Cotton 1721—, T. Garland '49—, J. Chr. Beckwith 1808—, J. Chas. Beckwith '09—, Zech. Buck '19—, Gladstone '77—, Atkinson '81— and Frank Bates '86—. In 1899 a new 5-manual organ was installed.

Festivals of a somewhat irregular character were held in 1770, 1802, '09, '11, '13, '14, and '17, but from '24 were put upon a triennial basis. The conductors have included G. T. Smart 1824—36, Ed. Taylor '39—42 (with Spohr in '39), Benedict '45—78, Randegger '81—1905, H. J. Wood 1905—11. From 1872 the or-ganist was Bunnnett. Works here first given include Cowen's St. Ursula '81 and Water-Lily '93, Goring Thomas' Sun-Worshippers '81, Mackenzie's Rose of Sharon '84, Stan-ford's Elegiac Ode '84, Parry's L'Allegro ed il Penseroso '90 and Pied Piper 1905, Elgar's Sea-Pictures '99, etc. G.

The Choral Union and the Philharmonic Society, both now led by Bates, are active in annual series of concerts.

Birthplace of Simon Tunsted 1515?, Ed. Miller 1731, J. Chr. Beckwith '50, Wm. Crotch '75, R. M. Bacon '76 (the founder of the regular festivals), Ed. Taylor '84, Zech. Buck '98, Ed. Bunnnett 1834, Ph. Armes '36, A. R. Gaul '37, A. H. Mann '50, C. R. Day '60 (at Horstead), etc.

Novara. Small cathedral-city in northern Italy (35 m. west of Milan).

Maestri at the Cathedral during the 19th century include Generali ?1825-, Mercadante '33-, Coccia '40- and Cagnoni '73-87. Names might also be given in the 16-17th centuries. The director of the local Istituto Musicale is Vito Fedeli.

Birthplace of G. F. Alcarotti 1536?.

Histories of the Teatro Nuovo by Imazio, 1877, Tornielli, 1887, Bustico, 1918-21 (in Rivista Musicale), etc.

Nuremberg. The second largest city in Bavaria and its leading commercial center (about 100 m. north of Munich). In the Middle Ages its geographical position gave it importance and from 1219 it was one of the strong free cities. In the 14th century it was a headquarters for the Meistersinger movement and in the 16th one of the enterprising leaders in the new industry of music-printing. In the 16-17th centuries Protestant church-music was much cultivated here, as is evidenced by the large number of competent organists and composers who originated in its circle. Its modern musical interest attaches to its several fine churches, the vigor of its operatic and concert-life and its conservatory.

Musically, the chief among the three largest churches is the Sebalduskirche, where the organists in the 17-18th centuries included Joh. Staden 1618-34, Heinlein '58-, Wecker '86-, Joh. Pachelbel '95- and W. H. Pachelbel 1706-64. Here, also, the first German player, Paumann, was in service in 1446-67. At the Lorenzkirche J. Staden was organist in 1617-18 and S. T. Staden in 1635-55. At the Frauenkirche Schwemmer was cantor in 1656-96. At the Aegidienkirche F. Lindner was cantor in 1588-97 and among the organists were J. E. Kindermann 1630-, Wecker '55- and Schultheiss '86-93.

Among recent conductors at the Stadttheater are P. Prill 1892-1901, Weigmann ?1903-07?, Tittel '07-12, Heger '13-21, Pittrich ?'18-, etc.

The Philharmonisches Orchester was formed in 1890 by Winderstein and led by him till '93; recent conductors have been Heger (from 1913) and W. Bruch. In 1909-22 Meister directed series of symphony-concerts. The leading choral society has been led by Scharer since 1914.

The Städtische Musikschule was founded in 1865 and given the title Konservatorium in 1920; its first directors were Ramann 1865- and Göllicher '90-96 and its present head is Rorich 1914-.

Birthplace of Konrad Paumann 1410?, the Hausmann family '84ff, Hans Sachs '94, Sebald Heyden '98, Nik. Selnecker 1528 (at Hersbruck), Lukas Osiander '34, H. L. Hasler '64, Joh. Staden '81, J. A. Herbst '88, J. E. Kindermann 1616, Dan. Eberlin '30?, G. K. Wecker '32, J. C. Wagenseil '33, J. P. and Joh. Krieger '49, '51, Joh. Pachelbel '53, Gottlieb v. Tucher 1798, W. B. Molique 1802, K. A. Krebs '04, K. F. Hilpert '41, Max v. Erdmannsdorfer '48, Berth. Kellermann '53, Alb. Gorter '62, Hnr. Kiefer '67, Karl Rorich '69, Ldw. Weber '91, etc.

Histories by Drescher, 1898, Hampe, 1900, Mummenhof, 1908, various articles by Sandberger, Seiffert and Schmitz in the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, v-vii, and Sandberger, 1918 (in Archiv f. Musikwissenschaft).

Oberlin, O. Small town in northern Ohio (35 m. southwest of Cleveland), the seat of Oberlin College, with a notable conservatory.

The College was founded in 1833 and provided musical instruction from 1837 (the earliest instance among American colleges), the Conservatory being organized in 1865, soon becoming important in many ways. The first instructors were G. N. Allen 1837-64, J. P. Morgan and G. W. Steele '65-, followed as directors by F. B. Rice '69- and C. W. Morrison 1901-. Through its concerts and those of the affiliated Choral Union, led by Rice from 1871 and by G. W. Andrews since 1900, not only the college and town, but a large territory has been effected. In 1884 and 1910 large buildings were erected. A.

Odessa. Large city in the Black Sea, now the commercial center of the Ukrainian Republic, having, aside from its more informal musical undertakings, more or less regular opera-seasons, a municipal orchestra and a music-school. Since 1894 Pribik has been conductor at the Municipal Theater, besides conducting the Municipal Orchestra (in 1887-94 led by Klimov).

The Music School of the Imperial Musical Society has been directed by Klimov 1887- and Malyshevsky 1908-22.

Birthplace of Vlad. de Pachmann 1848, Nik. Klenovsky '57, Dem. Achsharumov '64, Vas. Sapelnikov '68, Maria Kuznetsov '84, Tina Lerner '90, Toscha Seidel 1900, etc.

Oxford. Small city in the center of southern England (60 m. northwest of London), the seat of the older of the two most famous universities, now consisting of an affiliation of more than 20 colleges, in most of which musical services and other activities are kept up, often on an elaborate scale.

At Christ Church Cathedral (also the chapel of Christ Church [College]) organists are recorded since 1526, including Benbow 1530-, Lant '64-1605, Stonard 1608-, E. Lowe '30-82, the Goodsons '91-, R. Church 1741-, Th. Norris '76-, Crotch '90-, Wm. Cross 1807-, Wm. Marshall '25-, Ouseley '46 (briefly), C. W. Corfe '46-, C. H. Lloyd '82-, Harwood '92- and H. G. Ley 1909-.

At Magdalen College the records begin in 1510 and include Jn. Sheppard 1542-54, R. Nicholson '95-1639, B. Rogers 1664-86, Dan. Purcell '88-, Hecht '95-, Wm. Hayes 1734-, Ph. Hayes '77-, Vicary '97-, Blyth 1845-, Jn. Stainer '59-, Parratt '72-, J. V. Roberts '82- and H. C. Stewart 1919-.

At New College there are some records from the early 17th century, the list including Wm. King 1663-80, the elder Goodson '82-, Weldon '94-, S. Child 1702-, R. Church '32-, Ph. Hayes '76-97, Woodcock '99-, A. Bennett 1825-, Stephen Elvey '30-, G. B. Arnold '60-, Jas. Taylor '65-, H. P. Allen 1901- and W. H. Harris '19-.

At St. John's College the records for the 17th century have been lost; later names are Th. Norris 1765-, Ph. Hayes '90-, Crotch '97-, Wm. Cross 1807-, Wm. Marshall '25-, Stephen Elvey '46-, Grizzelle '60-, Rich. Porter '68-, Allchin '75- and Iliffe '83-.

Without extending these lists to other colleges generally, it may be noted that since 1900 Ernest Walker has been organist at Balliol College.

The organists at the University Church (St. Mary the Virgin) have included Crotch 1797-, Cross 1807-, A. Bennett '25-, Vicary '30-, Elvey '45-, Stainer '60-, J. Taylor '72- and Iliffe '83-.

The Professorship of Music in the University was founded in 1626 by a gift from Dr. Wm. Heyther of London. The incumbents have been R. Nicholson 1626-, A. Phillips '39-44, Jn. Wilson '56-, E. Lowe '61-, the Goodsons (father and son) '82-, Wm. Hayes 1742-, Ph. Hayes '77-, Crotch '97-, Bishop 1848-, Ouseley '55-, Stainer '89-, C. H. H. Parry '99-, Parratt 1908- and H. P. Allen '18-. The duties consist of one or more annual lectures, with some oversight of the granting of degrees. At intervals the office of Choragus has been filled, the functions corresponding slightly to those of music-director in the German universities; recent incumbents have included Elvey 1848-, C. W. Corfe '60-, Parry '83- and Harwood 1900-.

Various musical societies have existed in the University since the middle of the 17th century, but the most fruitful development was delayed until rather recently. In 1865 was founded the Philharmonic Society, in 1869 the Choral Society, in 1885 the Glee and Madrigal Club and in 1896 the Bach Choir. The first two, having been led by J. Taylor and Lloyd and by Allchin, Parratt, Lloyd and Roberts respectively, were merged into the Choral and Philharmonic Society, whose leaders have been Roberts 1890-, F. C. Woods '93-, Betjemann '95- and H. P. Allen 1901-, the latter succeeding Harwood as leader of the Bach Choir. There is also a competent Orchestral Society whose leaders have been Lloyd, Harwood and Allen.

The Bodleian Library and the library of Christ Church contain valuable collections. The former is one of the depositories for music covered by copyright.

Birthplace of Jas. Clifford 1622, Wm. Turner '52, Ph. Hayes 1738, H. H. Pierson 1816, Fred. Archer '38, F. E. Gladstone '45 (at Summertown), and W. E. Thomas '67.

Padua. Small city in northeastern Italy (25 m. west of Venice), with a famous university, a cathedral, the noted church of S. Antonio, regular operatic seasons and a conservatory. At S. Antonio the roll of choirmasters includes Costanzo Porta 1565-67, L. Balbi '85-91, Colombani '93-, Porta again '95-1601, Barbarino 1605-, Giulio Belli '07-11, Ghizzolo '22-, Scaletta '25-30, F. A. Calegari 1703-27, Vallotti '30-, Agost. Ricci '80-, L. A. Sabatini '86-1809, A. Calegari 1814-28 (organist from 1801), with Tebaldini '94- and Ravanello '98-1902.

The opera-performances are at the Teatro Verdi. The directors of the Istituto Musicale (municipal) have been C. Pollini 1883- and Ravanello 1914-.

Birthplace of Marchettus c. 1300, Annibale 1527, Bart. Cristofori 1655, B. G. Bassani '57, Ant. and L. A. Calegari 1757, '80?, Arrigo Boito 1842, Ces. de' Pollini '58, Emilio Pente '60, Andr. d'Angeli '68, and Alb. Fano '75.

Histories (mostly of the opera) by Facco 1849, Leoni, 1873, Mazzoni 1890-91, Fallerotti, 1892, Tebaldini, 1895 (S. Antonio), Anna Böhm, 1899-1902, and Brunelli, 1921.

Palermo. Large city in the southwest of Sicily, now fifth in size in Italy and a noted port, having a cathedral, a university, a fine opera-house and a conservatory of much antiquity.

Opera is now given in the notable Teatro Vittorio Emanuele, opened in 1897.

The Regio Conservatorio Vincenzo Bellini runs back to a charity-school started in 1615 (Conservatorio Buon Pastore), in 1737 was made into a Collegio di Musica and was taken into municipal control in 1863 under its present name. The directors have included Platania 1863-, Miceli '87-, Zuelli '94-1911, Cilèa 1913- and Fano '16-.

Birthplace of F. A. Pistocchi 1659, Matteo Palotta '89?, G. M. Jarnovic 1745, Errico Petrella 1813, Salv. Agnelli '17, Salv. Marchesi '22, Salv. Auteri-Manzocchi '45, Rom. Sapia '58, G. M. Sammarco '73, Gius. Marinuzzi '82, etc.

Histories of the opera by Basile, 1896, Pitré, 1905 (in a general local history), Majorca, 1909, etc.

Paris. Capital and metropolis of France, the third city in size in Europe and at many times conspicuous as a brilliant center for literary and artistic enterprise. Within France itself it has always tended to dominate the national culture more absolutely than is the case in any other large country. Since the later 17th century it has been notable as one of the chief headquarters for operatic music of varied schools, but with a natural emphasis on the successive types evolved by the French genius for the drama and its presentation. Aside from the two or three leading opera-houses and some supplementary performances associated with them, the oldest and most influential musical institution is the conservatory, which was the first of the modern national schools and always one of the most eminent. To this have now been added other schools of significance. During the past half-century there has been a striking development of interest in orchestral music of the highest class. Sacred and choral music has not been neglected and organ-playing has reached a remarkable pitch of excellence. Every sort of music-industry is pursued with skill and enterprise. Musical science has had here much intensive cultivation, particularly on its physical and historical sides.

The present Académie Nationale de Musique or Grand Opéra, opened in 1874, is the latest and most splendid of a succession of buildings for the establishment set up in 1669 by Louis XIV. In the 17th century the first holders of the operatic monopoly were Perrin and Cambert, followed in 1672 by the Italian Lully. In the 18th century the most striking periods were those under Rameau in 1737-64 and after the advent of Gluck in 1772-74. In the early 19th century the dominant influences were those of Rossini (till 1830) and Meyerbeer, though with steadily increasing attention to the characteristic French types. Since the new building was opened important managers have been Vaucorbeil 1880-84, Gailhard '99-, Messenger 1907- and Rouché '13- (with Chevillard as musical director till '23). Among the many conductors may be named Lamoureux 1878-, Altès '80-, Vianesi '87-, Colonne '92-, Taffanel '93- (with various others), Büsser 1902-, Vidal '06-, Gaubert '20-, etc.

The enterprise that came to be known as the Théâtre des Italiens (with other names from the buildings occupied) originated in the efforts of Viotti in 1788-91. Among directors later associated with it were Spontini 1810-, Paër '12-, Rossini '24-26, Girard '30-32 and Tilmant '38-49.

The Opéra-Comique, now on the site of the old Italiens, not far from the present Opéra, is the successor to an enterprise first set up in 1715-45 and resumed in '52. In 1791-1801 there were two rival houses, later merged together. The present fine building was built in 1898 (its predecessor having been tragically burnt in 1887). The managers who lifted the house into full rivalry with the Opéra were Carvalho 1875- and Carré '98-1912. Among the conductors have been Blasius 1802-, Kreube '16-28, Valentino '31-, Girard '37-, Labarre '47-, Tilmant '49-68, Constantin '75-, Lamoureux '76-, Danbé '77-, Luigini '97-, Messenger '98-, Bruneau 1903-, Rabaud '04-, Doret '07-09, etc.

In 1725-91 by arrangement with the management of the Opéra were provided the Concerts Spirituels (so called because held on Sundays and other days when the Opéra was not open), the conductors being A. D. Philidor 1725-, J. Aubert '27-, Moutet '28-, J. F. Rebel '34-, Royer '48-, Mondonville '55-, d'Auvergne '62-, Gossec, Gaviniès and S.

Leduc (jointly) '73-, Lahoussaye '79-, J. B. Rey '81-85, Riegel '82-86 and Berthame '83-91. These were so successful and important that they gave rise to similar undertakings in Leipzig (1763), Berlin (1783) and Vienna (1819). In Paris they were revived in a limited way in 1805, and served as prototypes for various other undertakings from 1770 onwards (Concerts des Amateurs, etc.)

The leading orchestral institutions are the Concerts du Conservatoire, started in 1828 to replace those held at the Conservatoire from 1808, of which the conductors have been Habeneck 1828-, Girard '48-, Tilmant '60-, Hainl '63-, Deldevez '72-, Garcin '85-, Taffanel '92-, Marty 1903-, Messenger '08- and Gaubert '19; the Concerts Colonne, led by Colonne 1875- and Pierné 1910- (assistant from '03); and the Concerts Lamoureux, led by Lamoureux 1881-, Chevillard '97-1923 and Paray 1921- (co-conductor at first). With these latter choral forces are sometimes associated.

The official court-chapel is the famous Sainte-Chapelle. Among the court-choirmasters have been Okeghem 1465-95, Prioris 1507-?, Sermisy '47-, Certon '62-, Cauroy '72, Ant. and J. Boessot 1617-, M. A. Charpentier '84-, Bernier 1704-26, Francœur '60-87, N. Séjan '89-91, (under the Napoleonic régime, Paisiello, Lesueur, Paër, Rey in various relations), Cherubini 1816-42, etc.

At the Cathedral of Notre-Dame the recent organists have been Vienne 1900- and Dupré '16- (technically as substitute); at the Madeleine Wély 1847-, Saint-Saëns '58-, Dubois '77- and Fauré '96-1905; at St.-Sulpice Wély 1862- and Widor '70-; at St.-Eustache Bonnet 1906-; at St.-Trinité Chauvet 1869- and Guilmant '71-1901; at St.-Clothilde Franck 1858-, Pierné '90- and Tournemire '98-.

The Conservatoire de Musique was founded in 1795, having been preceded by the École Royale du Chant (from 1784) and the Institut Nationale (from 1792), the former under Gossec and the latter under Sarrette. The directors have been Sarrette 1795- (at first with Gossec, Grétry, Méhul and Cherubini as 'inspecteurs'), Perne 1815-, Cherubini '22-, Auber '42-, A. Thomas '71-, Dubois '96- Fauré 1905. and Rabaud '20-. Its faculty has at some time included nearly every important French musician of recent times. Its library and museum are extremely notable. The librarians have been Langlé 1795-, N. Roze 1807-, Fétis '19-, Berlioz '52-, Fél. David '69-, Weckerlin '76- and Tiersot 1909-. The custodians of the museum have included Chouquet 1871- and Pillaut '86-1903.

The now highly successful Schola Cantorum was started in 1894 by Bordes, Guilmant and d'Indy, at first directed by them jointly, but since 1911 by d'Indy alone. Out of many other institutions the École Niedermeyer may be mentioned, begun under Niedermeyer in 1854-61.

Birthplace of Franco 13th C., Loys Bourgeois 1510?, Jacques Manduit '57, Guil. Dumanoir 1615, Rob. Cambert '28?, M. A. Charpentier '34, Philidor and Hotteterre families 17th C., J. F. Lallouette '51, Marin Marais '56, Mich. Lalande '57, J. F. Rebel '61, Henri Desmarests '62, Fr. Couperin '68, A. C. Destouches '72, A. L. Couperin 1725, J. P. and J. L. Duport '41, '49, Nic. Séjan '45, H. M. Berton '67, Pierre Baillot '71, F. L. Perne '72, A. J. Boucher '78, L. F. Dauprat '81, C. P. Lafont '81, J. F. d'Andrien '84, P. J. G. Zimmermann '85, J. L. Tulon '86, H. A. Chelard '89, M. D. Beaulieu '91, L. J. F. Hérold '91, Eug. Scribe '91, Ant. Primier '94, J. F. Halévy '99, Laure Damoreau 1801, J. A. L. de Lafage '01, Ad. Nourrit '02, Ad. Adam '03, Jeanne Farrenc '04, Th. Labarre '05, G. L. Duprez '06, Maria Malibran '08, A. F. Debain '09, Eug. Sauzey '09, J. L. F. Danjou '12, Marie Falcon '12, Chas. Alkan '13, G. H. Roger '15 (at St. Dennis), Rosine Stoltz '15, E. M. E. Deldevez '17, Léon Kreutzer '17, L. J. A. Lefébure-Wély '17, C. F. Gounod '18, J. E. Pacheloup '19, Ed. Batiste '20, Pauline Viardot-Garcia '21, Félix Clément '22, Jul. Stockhausen '26, E. E. Altès '30, Aug. Tolbecque '30, Chas. Lecocq '32, T. C. Salomé '34, Désirée Artôt '35, Cam. Saint-Saëns '35, Georges Bizet '38, Zelia Trebelli '38, Félix Joncières '39, Célestine Galli-Marié '40, V. A. Duvernoy '42, C. H. Méhéal '42, Louis Diémer '43, C. E. Lefebvre '43, J. L. A. Jullien '45, Alb. Lavignac '46, H. M. F. Lavoix '46, Marie Roze '46, Alb. Soubies '46, Henri Duparc '48, Benj. Godard '49, Augusta Holmès '49, Vinc. d'Indy '51, Aug. Harris '52, Paul and Lucien Hillemaacher '52, '60, Raoul Pugno '52, Eug. d'Harcourt '55, C. T. Malherbe '53, Fernand de Tombelle '54, Ern. Chausson '55, Arth. Harvey '55, André Gédalge '56, Alfr. Bruneau '57, Cam. Bellaigue '58, Cam. Chevallard '59, G. E. Marty '60, Cécile Chaminade '61, Fernand LeBorne '62, Cam. Erlanger '63, Paul Dukas '65, Alberic Magnard '65, Chas. Gili- bert '66, Clotilde Kleeberg '66, Edm. Clément '67, Jules Mouquet '67, Chas. Koechlin '67, Fréd. d'Erlanger '68, J. G. Prod'homme '71, Jules Écorcheville '72, Amédée Gastoué '73, Henri Rabaud '73, Lucien Capet '73, Pierre Aubry '74, Marie Delna '75, (at Meudon), Pierre Monteux '75, Cam. Decreux '76, Jean Chantavoine '77, Gust. Haberdeau '78, Carl Engel '83, Henri Collet '85, Rob. Lortat '85, Henri Prunières '86, Jacques Ibert '90, Georges Migot '91, etc.

Histories by G. Robert, 1895, Rolland, 1905, Gre- goir, 1880-83, Campardon, 1884 (both on the Opéra), Malherbe, 1887-93 (on the Opéra-Comique), Tho- nan, 1884, C. Pierre (on the Chap. Royale), C. Pierre, 1901 (on the Conservatoire), Elwart and Deldevez, 1860-85, Dandelot, 1897 (both on the Concerts du Cnoscerv.), and many others (see Riemann, Musiklexi- kon).

Parma. Small cathedral-city in northern Italy (60 m. northwest of Bologna), formerly the capital of an important duchy, from 1545 associated with the Farnese family.

Among the court-directors have been De Rore 1561-65, T. Traetta 1758-65, Morigi '75-, Rolla '88, Colla 1802-06, etc., and the last of the court-organists was G. G. Rossi in 1852-60, who was also conductor (till '73) at the Teatro Regio. In the Palazzo della Pilotta, now a museum and library, are still preserved remains of the extraordinary Teatro Farnese, built in 1618-19.

At the Regio Conservatorio, now named after Arrigo Boito, the directors have been G. G. Rossi 1864-, Bottesini '73-, Boito '89-, Te- baldini '97-, Zanella 1903-, Fano '05- and Zuelli '11-.

Birthplace of Marco Marazzoli 1610?, Fort. Chelleri '86, Francesca Cuzzoni 1700, the Besozzi family from 1700, Ferd. Paër '71, Italo Gardoni 1821, G. G. Rossi '28, (at Borgo S. Donnino), Giov. Bolzoni '41, Italo and Cleof. Campanini '46, '60, Art. Toscanini '67, Ildebr. Pizzetti '80, etc.

Histories by Bocchia, 1875, P. E. Ferrari, 1884, Gasparini, 1913 (Conservatory), etc., as well as various studies relating to the Teatro Farnese.

Pesaro. Small town on the Adriatic (20 m. southeast of Rimini), made musically notable by the large bequest for a conservatory left by Rossini.

The Liceo Musicale Rossini was richly endowed by Rossini at his death in 1868, but did not begin operations till 1883. Its directors have been Pedrotti 1883-93, Mascagni '95- and Zanella 1904-.

Birthplace of Lod. Zacconi 1555, G. de Sabbatini 1600?, Luigi Tomasini 1741, Luigi Bassi '66 and Gioc. Rossini '92.

Histories by Cinotti, 1895 (Liceo), Cenelli, 1897 (opera), etc.

Pest (Budapest). Capital of Hungary and formerly the second city in the empire of Aus- tria-Hungary (on the Danube, about 160 m. below Vienna). It is the metropolis of the fer- tile and versatile culture of the Magyar race, for its region analogous to Paris. Musically it is distinguished by its opera-houses, its several orchestras and its conservatories, the strong development of which belongs to the last half- century, especially since the formation in 1875 of the Academy of Music under Liszt as head. Opera is given at the fine Opera House (opened in 1884), at the National-Theater, at the Volkstheater and more or less at the Deutsches Theater, besides supplementary performances in Buda. Among the conductors or directors have been F. Erkel 1838-75, A. Bartay '38-48, Schindeldeisser '38-47 (German), Thern '41-64, K. Doppler '75-62, H. Richter '71-75, A. Erkel '75-1900, Mahler '88-91, Rebi- ček '91-93, Nikisch '93-95, Káldy '95-1901, Mader, Kerner and Rékay, all from c. '95, etc. Mader has been director since 1921. At the Volksooper F. Reiner was conductor in 1911-14 and Szenkár in '13-15.

The Philharmonic Concerts were founded by F. Erkel (c. 1860?) and led by him or A. Erkel (from '75) till '93, followed by Nikisch '93-95 and Kerner 1900-. The Musikfreunde Concerts have been led by Richter 1871-75, Káldy '75-1903, F. Löwe 1907-16, etc.

The Landes-Musikakademie, founded in 1875 and since 1920 known as the Hochschule für Musik, was associated from the start with Liszt, who was honorary president in 1875-86, followed by Mikalovitch '87-, Dohnányi 1919 and E. Hubay '19-. With the older Conservatory, which runs back to 1834, Count Zichy has long been connected as president; the director up to 1901 was E. Bartay, followed by Erney (for a time), Gobbi and Tomka, who are now in charge. There are several other strong music-schools, including that for operatic music.

Birthplace of Jos. Böhm 1795, Caroline Unger 1803 (at Stuhlweissenburg), Steph. Heller '13, Ad. Pollitzer '32, Jul. Káldy '38, Alex. Erkel '46, F. A. Korbay '46, Anton Seidl '50, Jenő Hubay '58, Tivadar Nachez '59, Jos. Bloch '62, Isidor Philipp '63, Victor Kűzdö '69, Alex. Sebald '69, Desid. Demenyi '71, Géza Molnár '72, Emil Abrányi '82, Erwin Lendvai '82, Yolanda Mérő '87, Victor Kolar '88, Fritz Reiner '88, Eug. Szendár '91, Frz. v. Vecsey '93, Georg Szell '97, Mary Zentay '97, etc.

Peterborough. Cathedral-town in the east of England (30 m. northwest of Cambridge).

At the Cathedral the organists have included Mudd 1592-1639, three Standishes 1661-, Jas. Hawkins 1714-59, Larkin 1812-, Speechly '37-, Keeton '70- and R. H. P. Coleman 1921-.

Petrograd (St. Petersburg). Capital of Russia during the imperial régime of the Romanoffs (1703-1917), becoming in the 19th century one of the largest cities in Europe. The vogue of Italian, French and German opera, with more or less orchestral and piano-music, was early established under energetic court-patronage, resulting before 1840 in the rise of original composition in large forms and after 1860 in organized effort by a national association to maintain concert-series and conservatories throughout the country from Petrograd and Moscow as centers. Under the present government the leadership has been transferred to Moscow.

The first German theater was established in 1720, followed in '37 by a house for Italian opera. By 1800 dramatic music in Italian, French or German was customary, with some works in Russian, though not by Russian composers till 1836. The foreign conductors or managers at the Court Opera include Araja 1735-59, Raupach '56-, Galuppi '65-, Traetta '68-74, Paisiello '76-, Sarti '84-1802, Cimarosa '89-92, Boieldieu 1803-10, Steibelt '11-23, with Caves as a most useful conductor in 1799-1840 and with Fed. Ricci as general inspector in '59-69. The modern excellence of performances at the Maryinsky Theatre was first secured under Const. Liadow, succeeded in 1869-98 by Nápravnik. In 1911-14 Coates was conductor.

The leaders of the Imperial Choir have included Bortniansky 1779-, F. P. Lvov 1825-, A. F. Lvov '36-67, Balakirev '83-, Arensky '95-, Smolensky 1901- and Klenovsky '03-14.

As early as 1772 a Musical Club was founded and in 1802 the Philharmonic Society, which continued till '51, much of the time conducted by Paris. In 1859 the Russian Musical Society followed with still higher aims. Among the conductors of the concerts of the last have been A. Rubinstein 1859-, Balakirev '67-, Nápravnik '69-81, Auer '87-92, Erdmannsdörfer '95-97, Chessin 1908-, Safonov '11-18, besides Glazunov at intervals. The symphony concerts started by Count Sheremetiev in 1882 have been led by him and (from 1911) by Chessin; to these were added in 1898 series of popular concerts. Other concerts were those of the Musical Free School, led by Balakirev in 1862-74 and then by Rimsky-Korsakov till '81, and the Russian Symphony Concerts, started in 1885 by Belaiev and at first led by Rimsky-Korsakov and from 1901 by Tcherepnin.

The Conservatory of the Russian Musical Society was founded in 1862 and has been directed by A. Rubinstein 1862-, Zarembo '67-, Asantchevsky '71-, Davidov '76-, Rubinstein again '87-, Johannsen '91-, A. Bernhardt '96-? and Glazunov 1909-12, '22-.

Birthplace of Y. von Arnold 1811, Gabr. Lomakin '12, Alex. Serov '20, Karl Klauser '23, Vlad. Stassov '24, Nik. Yussupov '27, Alex. Borodin '34, Mitr. Belaiev '36, E. M. Albrecht '42, Herm. Laroche '45, Alex. Taneiev '50, Annette Essipov '51, Const. v. Sternberg '52, Anatol Liadow '55, Nic. Galkin '56, Ed. Schütt '56, Arth. Friedheim '59, Alex. Ilyinsky '59 (at Tsarkoe Selo), Nik. Sokolov '59, Erik Meyer-Helmund '61, Alex. Glazunov '65, Nik. Findeisen '68, Alex. Chessin '69, Peter Schenk '70, Ossip Gabrilovitch '78, Alb. Coates '82, Igor Stravinsky '82 (at Oranienbaum), etc.

For history, see various works on music in Russia and compare data under Moscow.

Philadelphia, Pa. The largest city in Pennsylvania and now third in the United States (90 m. southwest of New York). Until after 1800 it was the largest of the colonial towns and served as capital of the united country prior to the founding of Washington in 1800. From about 1750 it was frequently visited by traveling troupes of actors and singers. In 1759 the first musical club was started and after 1785 several competent English and French musicians became resident. These banded together from 1820 for the maintenance of choral and orchestral concerts and after about 1850 opera was given with increasing frequency. During the opening years of the 20th century an orchestra of the first class has been developed and opera-seasons have become regular, together with the quickening of interest in all other directions. A (various articles).

The Musical Fund Society, founded in 1820 and continuing until 1858, took its name from an original purpose to give aid to musicians in need, but its public influence was still more important. Its concerts from 1824 were held in its own hall (enlarged in 1847). From 1857 this latter was supplemented by the erection of the Academy of Music for both concerts and opera. The much finer Opera House was opened in 1908 by Hammerstein, being originally meant to be managed in conjunction with the Manhattan Opera House in New York. (For the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company, see under Chicago.)

The present Symphony Orchestra, founded in 1900, was preceded by several earlier undertakings (such as the Germania under Wm. Stoll and the Symphony Society from 1893 under W. W. Gilchrist). It now ranks as one of the finest organizations in the country, increasing its influence by means of extended tours. Its conductors have been Scheel 1900-, Pohlig '07- and Stokowski '12-. G (iv. 805), A.

Among various choral societies, mention should be made of the Mendelssohn Club, organized in 1874 and led by Gilchrist 1874- and Norden 1917-.

Important influence has been exercised by the Manuscript Music Society since 1892, of which Gilchrist was long president, followed now by Douty.

The oldest of the music-schools is the Philadelphia Musical Academy, established in 1870, the directors being Himmelbach 1870-, R. Zeckwer '76- and C. Zeckwer, F. E. Hahn and C. L. Murphy 1917-. Other institutions are those founded by Combs (1885), Sternberg (1895) and Leefson and Hille (1899). At the University of Pennsylvania H. A. Clarke has been professor since 1875.

A unique institution is the Presser Home for Retired Musicians, founded in 1906 by Theo. Presser, liberally endowed by him and housed in a fine building in the suburb of Germantown.

Birthplace of Francis Hopkinson 1737, W. H. Fry 1813, Mich. Cross '33, C. H. Jarvis '37, David Bispham '57, Fred. Zech '58, J. G. Huneker '60, H. G. Thunder '65, Nich. Douty '70, Cam. Zeckwer '75, N. L. Norden '87, Fred. Gittelsohn '96, etc.

History of the Musical Fund Society by Madeira (Goeppe), 1896.

Pittsburgh, Pa. Large city in western Pennsylvania (at the head of the Ohio River), the metropolis of a region rich in oil, coal and iron and one of the great headquarters of the steel industry. In recent years it has become the musical center of a large region, partly in consequence of the benefactions (from about 1885) of Andrew Carnegie.

In 1889 and '95 respectively Mr. Carnegie established organ-recitals at the music-halls attached to the Public Libraries in Allegheny and Pittsburgh, the official organists being Archer 1895-, Lemare 1902- and Heinroth '07-.

The Symphony Orchestra, started in 1896 and continued till 1910, was for a time strong and influential, the conductors being Archer 1896- Herbert '98-, and Paur 1904-10. G (iv. 806), A.

The leading choral society is now the Musical Club, formed out of organizations long led by E. S. Martin, since 1916 conducted by Boyd. Chief among the music-schools is the Musical Institute, since 1915 directed by Boyd, Oetting and D. Russell. A.

At the University Earhart has been music-director since 1913 and at the Carnegie Inst. of Technology Bingham has given courses in music-psychology since 1915.

Birthplace of S. C. Foster 1826, D. D. Wood '38, A. M. Foerster '54, E. W. and A. F. Nevin '62, '71, Louise Homer '72?, W. H. Oetting '75, David Sapirstein '89, etc.

Pittsfield, Mass. Small city in western Massachusetts, since 1918 made musically notable by the Berkshire Festivals of Chamber Music under the patronage of Mrs. F. S. Coolidge of New York, in connection with which prizes are given for the best new composition submitted. A. The prize-winners have included Iarecki in 1918, E. Bloch in '19, Malipiero in '20, H. W. Warner in '21, and Weiner in '22.

Prague. Famous capital of the kingdom of Bohemia and now of the republic of Czechoslovakia (on the Moldau, about 115 m. south of Dresden). Prior to the 18th century it was at times the residence of the Emperor (notably Rudolf II in 1576-1612). Here the first German university was established in 1348 and in the next century it was one of the chief seats of learning in Europe, as well as the site of the pre-Reformation movement of John Huss. Here was the outbreak of the Thirty Years' War in 1618 and since 1620 it has been dominated by Roman Catholic influences. It has always been the natural center for the art, literature and national aspirations of the Czechs, though its nearness to both Saxony and Bavaria has made its population almost half German. Musically, it has been much associated with Vienna, Munich and Dresden. For a time in the 16-17th centuries its court-music had importance, but in recent times the cultivation of the opera in German, Italian or Czechic and of the national instinct for song and dance has been conspicuous. Educationally it has also been notable, producing or forming a long line of artists, vocal and instrumental.

Among the court-musicians under Rudolf II were De Monte as court-director in 1577-1603 and Luyton 1577— and F. Turini 1601–24 as organists.

Among the more recent choirmasters at the Cathedral (St. Veit) have been Brixi 1756–71, J. A. Koželuch 1784–, Vitásek 1814–, Führer '39–43, J. N. Skroup '45— and J. Förster '87–1907.

The opera-history has had several periods of brilliancy, some of the leaders at what is now the Deutsches Landestheater being Kucharz 1786–1800, Wenzel Müller 1808–, C. M. v. Weber '13–16, Fr. Skroup '37–53, Mahler '85–, Muck '86–92, Stransky '98–, Gust. Meyer 1903–, Klemperer '07–, K. Pringsheim '09–, K. Horwitz '11–14, Szenkar '12–13, Zemlinsky '12— and Széll '19—. At the Böhmisches Landes- (or National-) theater the leaders have included Nesvadba 1857–58, Sebor 1864–, Smetana '66–74, Klíčka c. '80–, Kovařovic '99— and Ostrčil 1921—. Opera is also given at the Stadttheater, now under the direction of Piskaček.

Among the three or more leading orchestras, the Böhmische Philharmonie, founded about 1895 by Celansky and at first led by him, has been conducted by Nedbal 1896— and Zemánek 1903–22.

Here originated the famous Bohemian String Quartet, formed in 1891 by the teacher Wihan and including Karel Hoffman, Suk, Nedbal and Otto Berger (the latter followed in 1897 by Wihan himself). Their wide tours did much to establish chamber-music in several countries. G.

Among the choral societies the Hlahol is prominent, in 1877–90 and '97–1901 led by Knittl and in '90–97 by Klíčka.

The Konservatorium was founded in 1811 (the first in Germany) and has had a distinguished history under D. Weber 1811—, Kittl '43—, Krejčí '65—, Bennewitz '82—, Dvořák 1901—, Knittl '04— and Káan Albest '07—. In 1918 it was transformed into a more strictly Bohemian institution under the new Republic. Directors at the School for Organists have included Vitásek 1826—, Pitsch '39—, Krejčí '58— and Skuhersky '66–92. Among many other schools special mention may be made of that founded by Josef Proksch in 1830 and since continued by his descendants. To maintain the tradition of German instruction the Akademie für Musik und darstellende Kunst (or Deutsches Konservatorium) was opened in 1920 with Procházka as director.

Among lecturers or professors at the University have been Ambros 1869–72, Skuhersky, '79— and Adler '85–95.

Birthplace of Eusebio, Turini 1589, Jos. Mysliweczek 1737, J. B. Krumpholtz '45? (at Klonitz) Ant. Reicha '70, Ignaz Moscheles '94, Jos. Dessauer '98, J. W. Kalliwoda 1801, A. W. Ambros '16 (at Mauth), Ed. Hanslick '25, Ad. Prosnitz '29, Wilh. Mayer ('W. A. Remy') '31, Ferd. Laub '32, Wilhemine Clausz-Szarvady '34, Hnr. Porges '37, Karl Bendl '38, David Popper '43, Jos. Rebiček '44, Hans Sitt '50, Alf. and Hnr. Grünfeld '52, '55, J. M. Weber '54, Ant. Rückauf '55, Frz. Ondříček '59, Mme. Schumann-Heink '61 (at Lieben), Karl Kovařovic '62, Rud. v. Procházka '64, Rich. Batka '68, Viktor Joss '69, Rob. Robitschek '74, Wilh. Zemánek '75, Cam. Hildebrand '76, Emmy Destinn '78, Egon Pollak '79, Joh. Kubelik '80 (at Michle), Viktor Lederer '81, R. M. Haas '86, Erich Steinhard '86, etc.

Histories of the Conservatory by D. Weber, 1817, Ambros, 1858, and Branberger, 1911, of the opera by Nejedlý, 1908, and Nettl, 1922 (in Auftakt), and, more general, by Rychnovsky, 1904 (with a semicentennial memoir of the Männergesangsverein, 1911), and Procházka, 1914. See also works under Bohemia under National Music in Appendix A.

Presburg. Important city in western Hungary, close to the Austrian boundary (on the Danube, about 40 m. east of Vienna), in 1541–1784 the capital of the kingdom of Hungary, with a cathedral and some concert-life.

Birthplace of Melchior and Hans Neusiedler 1507, '08, Sigm. Kusser 1660, Ant. Zimmermann 1741, J. N. Hummel '78, Peter Lichtenthal '80, Jos. Joachim 1831 (at Kittsee), Ldw. Strauss '35, R. M. Mader '56, Ernst v. Dohnányi '77, etc.

Ratisbon (Regensburg). Small city in east-central Bavaria (on the Danube, about 60 m. southeast of Nuremberg), formerly the capital of the Upper Palatinate, in 1663–1806 the seat of the Imperial Diet and always a headquarters of Roman Catholic learning and education. In recent times it has acquired musical prominence through the circle of scholars engaged upon the restoration of Gregorian music along lines which they believed to be historic— a movement that was later superseded by the still more searching investigations of the ecclesiastics of Solesmes. The moving spirit in this circle was F. X. Haberl, active here for nearly forty years (d. 1910).*

At the ancient Cathedral (St. Peter's) the choirmasters in recent times have included Schrems 1839—, Haberl '71— and Mitterer '82–85, and the organists Hanisch 1839— and Jos. Renner (Jr.) '93—.

In 1867 Franz Witt (since 1859 singing-teacher at the Priests' Seminary) founded here the Allgem. Deutsche Cäcilienverein, branches of which soon sprang up not only throughout Germany, but in many other countries, the general presidents including Witt 1867—, Frdr. Schmidt '89—, Haberl '99— and Herm. Müller.

In 1874 followed the founding of the notable Kirchenmusikschule, the directors of which have been Haberl 1874— and Weinmann 1910—. This has attracted pupils from many countries. Birthplace of Gregor Aichinger 1564, F. M. Grimm 1722, E. J. Schikaneder '48, J. N. Maelzel '72, Jos. Renner 1868, etc.

*It may be noted that both the Ratisbon and the Solesmes circles of investigators are directly or indirectly connected with the Benedictine order.

Histories by Mettenleiter, 1866-67, and Seybott, 1909 (on the local Liederkrantz, founded in 1839).

Riga. The capital of the medieval Livonia, which was till 1521 associated with Prussia, from 1582 with Poland, from 1660 with Sweden, from 1721 with Russia and is now the capital of the new Republic of Livonia. It is situated on the Baltic, about midway between Königsberg and Petrograd. Musically, it has shared influences from northeast Germany and from Poland and Russia. It has a cathedral, an opera-house, two or more orchestras, many choral societies and several strong music-schools.

At the Cathedral, which has one of the largest organs in Europe, the organists or choir-masters have included H. Dorn 1831-42, Bergner '68- and Creutzberg 1906-, the last of whom has made the choir notable.

The directors at the Stadttheater have included Rich. Wagner 1837-, H. Dorn '39-42, Wilm '57-60, J. Ruthardt '71-82, O. Lohse '89-93, Wetzler 1909-13 and Wihtol 1918-, under the last of whom performances in Lettish have been instituted.

The orchestral society Harmonia has been led by Waack in 1883-1915 and later by Nedela, and the Philharmonic, founded in 1903, has been directed by Himmelstjerna 1903-, Schneevoigt '09-, Hoesslin '12- and Scherchen '14-15.

The Wagner-Verein has been led by Lohse 1882-89 and Waack 1891-1915, while the latter in 1903 also established a Bach-Verein.

The branch Music School of the Russian Musical Society was led in 1882-89 by Lohse and from 1904 by Himmelstjerna. The Riga Music School was started in 1875 by Louis Pabst in association with his father.

Birthplace of Ed. Mertke 1833, Nic. v. Wilm '34, Wilh. Bergner '37, K. F. Glasenapp '47, Artur Smolian '56, V. Y. Tcheshichin '65, A. M. Schnabel '90, etc.

Histories by N. Busch, W. Neumann, 1909 (in his Baltic Lexikon), and Perl, 1919 (in Zeitschr. f. Musikwissenschaft).

Rio de Janiero. Capital and largest city of Brazil (the second largest in South America), steadily advancing in importance since the establishment of the empire in 1822. It came into contact with European music during the temporary sojourn of the Portuguese court in 1808-21. It is now noted for its brilliant opera-seasons, its varied concert-life and a conservatory.

The director at the Instituto Nacional for many years has been Nepomuceno.

Ripon. Small cathedral-city in the north of England (20 m. northwest of York).

Organists at the Cathedral are traceable from about 1400, but the records are very slight until late in the 17th century. Among the names are the two Prestons (father and son) 1690-, three Ayrtons 1748-1822, George Bates 1829-, E. J. Crow '73- and C. H. Moody 1902.

Birthplace of Wm. and Edmund Ayrton 1726, '34.

Rochester. Small cathedral-city in southeast England (midway between London and Canterbury).

The first record of organists at the Cathedral is from 1559, but without detail till after 1700. The longer terms are those of Peach 1721-53, Banks 1790-, J. L. Hopkins 1841-, John Hopkins '56-, Luard-Selby 1900- and C. H. Stewart '16-.

Birthplace of J. C. Bridge 1853.

Rochester, N. Y. The third city in the state of New York (about 60 m. east of Buffalo), the seat of the new Eastman School of Music, liberally endowed since 1919 by George Eastman and administered under the general care of the University of Rochester. Besides general instruction it is to provide somewhat specially for the use of music in conjunction with motion-pictures. A.

The director since the opening in 1922 has been Alf Klingenberg.

Rome. Large city in central Italy, now the third in size in the country. Historically it is the most famous city in the world, because the center of the ancient Roman Empire and from classical times the seat of the powerful institution of the Papacy. Since 1871 it has been the capital of the new kingdom of Italy. It has always been conspicuous for its artistic and literary riches and activity. In the development of sacred music it has played a part of extreme significance, especially in the cultivation of the a cappella style under Palestrina and his schools in the 16-17th centuries. The usages of the Papal Chapel, St. Peter's and the several great basilicas have naturally served as models for the Roman Catholic world. At intervals it has had some importance in connection with the progress of Italian opera. During the last half-century it has more and more taken its place as a prominent headquarters for modern opera, concert-music of the highest class and advanced musical education. G (several articles).

The musical establishment appertaining to office and functions of the Pope is usually known as the Papal Chapel. Its history (at first under the name Schola Cantorum) is said to go back to the time of Gregory the Great (about 600) or even earlier. Its artistic importance began with the rise of polyphonic music, which coincided in time with the temporary transfer of the Papal court in 1309-77 to Avignon (southern France). Late in the 15th century two distinct bodies of singers came to be recognized, called the Cappella Sixtina and the Capella Julia (from Sixtus IV and Julius II respectively). In the 16th century these attained great eminence as exponents of the a cappella style in its purist form. The number of singers, originally twelve, was increased to twenty-four or even thirty-two. The earliest designated maestro was named about 1390, but from 1586 he was elected by the singers for a term of one year or longer. Among the early leaders were Roselli 1548-, Rubino '50-, Palestrina '51-55 and G. M. Nanini 1604-07, with Palestrina as 'composer' in 1565-94 and F. Anerio in 1594-1614. In modern times are to be mentioned Bains in 1818-44 and recently Perosi (1898-?). In 1905 the establishment was re-organized under Pius X; at most functions the Cappella Julia officiates.

At the pontifical basilica of St. Peter's or the Vatican (S. Pietro in Vaticano) the office of maestro has been highly significant since the middle of the 16th century, the list including D. Ferrabosco 1546-50, G. Animuccia '55-, Palestrina '71-, Giovanelli '94-, S. Fabri (Sr.) '99-1601, Suriano 1603-, V. Ugolini '20-, P. Agostini '27-, V. Mazzocchi '29-, Benevoli '46-, G. E. Bernabei '72-74, Bai 1713-, D. Scarlatti '15-, Pitoni '19-43, Costanzi '54-78, Boroni '85-, Guglielmi '93-, Zingarelli 1804-, Jannaconi '11-, Fioravanti '16-, Basili '37-, P. Raimondi '50- and Meluzzi '55-97.

At the Lateran (S. Giovanni in Laterano) the maestri have included P. Animuccia 1550-, Orlandus Lassus '53-, Palestrina '55-, Zoilo '61-71, Stabile '75-, Dragoni '76-, Suriano '99-1600, S. Fabri (Sr.) 1603-07, Cifra '22-, Abbadini '26-, V. Mazzocchi '28-29, F. Foggia '43-, G. Corsi '61-, G. E. Bernabei '65-67, Pitoni 1708-19, Gasparini '25-27, Casali '59-, Anfossi '91-, Santucci '97-1808, Meluzzi, ?1840-, G. Capocci '55-, F. Capucci '98- and Casimiri 1911-.

At S. Maria Maggiore the list includes Palestrina 1561-, G. M. Nanini '71-75, Suriano '87-88, '95-99, 1600-, Ugolini 1603-, D. Allegri '10-29, Abbadini '45-, Benevoli '46-, S. Fabri (Jr.) '57-58, G. Corsi '59-61, A. Melani '69-73, F. Foggia '78-, A. Foggia '88-, A. Scarlatti 1707-09, G. Capocci 1839-55, etc. The organists in the 17th century included Quagliati about 1608-27 and Pasquini about 1660-1710.

At S. Luigi de' Francesi may be mentioned Zoilo, Suriano and the Naninis in the 16th century and Ugolini, P. P. Sabbatini, Benevoli, the younger Fabri, Micheli, G. E. Bernabei and A. Melani in the 17th.

These are but conspicuous examples among many churches that participated fruitfully in the activities of the historic 'Roman school.' The giving of operas did not begin in Rome as soon as elsewhere in Italy and has not been as striking until within the last half-century. The older opera-houses are the Teatro Costanzi and the Teatro Argentina. To these has lately been added the Augusteo, which is a center for both opera and concerts of the highest class. At this latter Molinari has been chief conductor since 1912.

The institution now usually known as the Accade- mia S. Cecilia is historically derived from a much older organization. In 1566 was started and in 1584 formally instituted the 'Congregation of Roman Musicians under the protection of S. Cecilia', which in time became the standard society for all regular musicians to join and from which at certain periods it was necessary for them to hold a license (particularly after Papal decrees in 1689 and 1764). Many non-Italian members have from time to time been admitted. Its practical operation as an examining and certifying body has varied greatly. In 1839 it acquired the title Accademia, to which was later prefixed the term Pontificia. In 1847 and 1857 efforts were made to develop a music-school under its auspices, but unsuccessfully. In 1869, however, Sgambati and Pinelli started free classes in piano- and violin-playing, which in 1870 were sanctioned by the Accademia and gradually expanded until in 1877 the Liceo Musicale was formally instituted. The directors have included Marchetti 1881-, Falchi 1902-, R. Terziani '15- and Bossi '16-23. The Accademia was promptly taken under the patronage of the new Italian government in 1871 and later the Liceo. Under their oversight significant orchestral and choral concerts are regularly provided at the Augusteo, often with guest-conductors of eminence. The library of the Liceo has grown to be one of the best in Italy.

In addition to the above the municipal orchestra or Banda Comunale gives annual concerts in the Teatro Argentina, until 1885 led by Pezzini and in '85-1921 by Vessella. For some years Mascagni has been head of the so-called Scuola Musicale Nazionale (though not subsidized by the government).

For the Prix de Rome (French and Belgian), see under Prizes in Part I.

Birthplace of G. M. Nanini 1545? (at Tivoli), Franc. Suriano '49, Stef. Fabri (1) '50?, Felice and G. F. Anerio '60, '67?, Ales. Merlo '70?, Ant. Cifra '75?, Rom. Micheli '75?, Greg. Allegri '84, Franc. Manelli '95? (at Tivoli), Marco Scacchi '95?, G. F. Sances 1600?, Orazio Benevoli '02, Franc. Foggia '05, Stef. Fabri (2) '06, Mario Savioni '08, Vinc. Albrici '31, P. S. Agostini '50, G. A. Bernabei '59, Pietro Castrucci '79, Gius. Valentini '80?, P. A. Metastasio '98, Pasquale Pisari 1725, Catterina Gabrielli '30, Ant. Boroni '38, L. A. Sabbatini '39, Gius. Jannaconi '41, Muzio Clementi '52, Val. Fioravanti '64, Gius. Bains '75, Fort. Santini '78, Pietro Gen. erali '82, Pietro Raimondi '86, Pietro Alfieri 1801, Gaet. Capocci '11, Fanny Persiani '12, Salv. Meluzzi '13, Enrico Tamberlik '20, Fil. Capocci '40, Ettore Pinelli '43, Giov. Sgambati '43, Giulio Rossi '65, Alb. Cametti '71, Lina Cavalieri '74, Gius. De Luca '76, Ed. Ferrari-Fontana '78, Bern. Molinari '80, Vinc. Tommasini '80, Vit. Gui '85, Flora Perini '87, Franc. Ticiatti '93, etc.

Histories by Alfieri, 1845, Schelle, 1872, Guéranger, 1873-98, Zuliani, 1878, Habert, 1887, Ademollo, 1888 (opera), Cametti, 1895-1919 (largely in Rivista Musicale), Memorial at the 25th anniversary of the Liceo, 1902, Radiciotti, 1906 (opera), Calvi, 1907-08 (do.), Incagliati, 1907 (the Costanzi), Celani, 1907-15 (in Rivista Musicale), Pinto, 1913 (the Argentina), Raeli, 1921, etc.

Rostock. The chief town of the grand-duchy of Mecklenburg (on the estuary of the Warnow midway between Lübeck and Stralsund), having a noted university, several fine churches and more or less opera- and concert-life.

The music at the Marienkirche has often been notable; among early cantors were E. Sartorius 1590-1604 and Friderici 1617-54, and Nik. Hasse was organist about 1650.

At times the opera at the Stadttheater has had importance. The old building, burned in 1880, was replaced in 1895. Recent conductors have been Klausner and Flohr.

At the University the music-directors have been Ferd. v. Roda 1857-, Kretschmar '77- and Thierfelder '88-.

Birthplace of K. G. P. Grädener 1812, Alb. Schatz '39, Th. Reichenau '49, etc.

Histories by Schacht 1908 (opera), Kohfeldt, 1919 (opera and the Collegium Musicum, in the history of the University), and the Festschrift of the Theater, 1921.

Rotterdam. Large city and port in the west of Holland, second in size and importance only to Amsterdam, having many important churches, fine opera-seasons, choral societies and a strong conservatory.

At the Groote Kerk (St. Laurentius) Barth.

Tours was organist in 1830-64. He was one of the founders of the Eruditio Musica (society) in 1826, of which Hutschenruijter (the elder) later became director.

German Opera was established at the Groote Schouwburg in 1860 under the direction of Thooff, some of the conductors being H. Levi 1861-64, Ad. Müller, Jr. '75-83, P. Prill '86-89 and Lachmuth (now).

The Musiekschool of the Maatschappij (national society), founded in 1845, has been directed by Verhulst 1848-, Bargiel '65-, Gernsheim '74-, Perger '90-, Sikemeyer '95- and Hutschenruijter (the younger) 1917-.

Birthplace of W. Hutschenruijter (1) 1796, David Koning 1820, Frz. Coenen '26, Berth. Tours '50, Sam. and Dan. De Lange '40, '41, Th. Verhey '48, Willem De Haan '49, W. Hutschenruijter (2) '59, L. V. Saar '68, Ant. Van Rooy '70, Dirk Schaeffer '74, Jan Van Gilse '81, Sylvain Noack '81, Corn. Van Vliet '86, etc.

Rouen. Large city in northern France (on the Seine, 75 m. northwest of Paris), with a cathedral, other noted churches, an opera-house, regular symphony-concerts, etc.

Birthplace of F. A. Boieldieu 1775, L. A. Vidal 1820, Chas. Lenepveu '40, Paul Kéfer '75, etc.

History of the cathedral choir-school by Collette and Bourdoz, 1892.

Rudolstadt. Small Thuringian town (20 m. south of Weimar), capital of the principality of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt.

The court-music has often been notable and its orchestra continues to be significant. Among the earlier directors were Erlebach ?1680-1714, (with A. N. Vetter as organist in 1691-1710), G. Gebel, Jr. 1747-53, T. M. Eberwein 1817- and Frdr. Müller '31-54.

Birthplace of H. C. Koch 1749, Ferd. v. Rode 1815 and Karl Kleemann '42.

See monograph by Engelke in Archiv f. Musikwissenschaft, i. 4.

St. Alban's. Small cathedral-town (20 m. north of London), site of one of great medieval abbeys.

The Cathedral was established in 1877 in the old abbey-church (progressively restored by Lord Grimthorpe). An organist before the suppression of the abbeys was Fayrfax 1498-1520?; the recent incumbents have been J. S. Booth 1858-, Gaffe '80- and Luttmann 1907-. The fine organ was enlarged in 1907 out of an instrument erected under Booth.

St. Asaph. Small cathedral-town in North Wales.

The roll of organists at the Cathedral runs back to 1630, among the incumbents being the Gerards (father and son) 1694-1779, Hayden 1794-, Atkins 1834-, Llewellyn Lloyd '89-, H. P. Allen '97-, A. W. Wilson '98-, C. B. Rootham 1901, Belcher '01- and Stocks '17-.

St. Gall. Capital of the canton of St. Gall in Switzerland (near Lake Constance, about 50 m. east of Zurich), the seat of a famous medieval abbey and having varied musical activities.

At the Cathedral recent organists have included Jos. Greith, followed by his son Karl Greith 1861-71 and G. E. Stehle '74-1915, the latter greatly enlarging and perfecting the choir.

The conductor at the Stadttheater is Karl Mannstädt.

Recent leaders of the Symphony Concerts and the Lehrergesangsverein have been Alb. Meyer and Schoeck 1917-.

On the important antiphony (found by Sonneleithner in 1827) in the Abbey library, see monographs by Lambillotte, 1851, and Schubiger, 1858, with many books upon the history of the Gregorian style.

St. Louis, Mo. Now the sixth city in the United States, long the close rival of Chicago and also that of New Orleans as the chief metropolis of the Mississippi Valley. A.

The Symphony Orchestra, founded in 1907, has been conducted by Zach 1907- and Rud. Ganz '21-.

The Apollo Club, started in 1893, has been led by Robyn 1893- and Galloway 1910-. The Pageant Choral Society, originally formed in 1914 to take part at the 150th anniversary of the founding of the city, has been continued since under the lead of Frederick Fischer. There are many other singing-societies.

The Beethoven Conservatory was founded in 1871 and has been directed by Aug. Waldauer 1872- and the brothers M. I. and A. I. Epstein 1902-.

Birthplace of W. H. Pommer 1851, E. R. Kroeger '62, Th. Spiering '71, J. T. Quarles '77, W. W. Stockhoff '87, A. F. Stoessel '94, etc.

St. Paul, Minn. Large city on the upper Mississippi River, with its close neighbor Minneapolis known as the 'Twin Cities of the Northwest'.

The Symphony Orchestra, founded in 1908, was led by Rothwell till 1915 and then followed by the Philharmonic Orchestra, led by Jos. Sainton. A.

Birthplace of Arth. Farwell 1872.

St. Petersburg. See Petrograd.

Salisbury. Small cathedral-city in southern England, the very beautiful cathedral succeeding in the 13th century to that originally at Old Sarum.

Among the organists at the Cathedral since the 16th century have been G. Tomkins 1631-, M. Wise '68-87, Walkeley '98-, E. Thompson 1718-, J. Stephens '46-80, Jos. Corfe '92-, A. T. Corfe 1804-, J. E. Richardson '63-, B. L. Selby '81-, South '83- and W. G. Alcock 1916-.

Birthplace of Wm. and Henry Lawes 1582, '95, Thos. Norris 1741, G. J. Webb 1803 (at Rushmore Lodge), Chas. Lucas '08, Alf. and E. T. Gilbert '28, '33, etc.

Salzburg. Small city in western Austria (close to the Bavarian boundary and midway between Innsbruck and Linz), capital of the crownland of the same name and in 800-1800 the seat of the most powerful prince-archbishop in southern Germany, whose musical establishment began to be notable in the 16th century.

Among the musicians attached to the court or the Cathedral (not completed till 1628) are to be named Hnr. Finck 1513-24, Hofhaimer '28-37 (organist), S. Bernardi 1628-34, Georg Muffat '78-87 (organist), Biber '84-1704, J. E. Eberlin 1729-62, Adlgasser '51-77 (organist), Mich. Haydn '62-1806 (organist from 1777), H. Schlager 1861-, Otto Bach '68-80 and Rippl 1908-17 (organist). It is to be remembered that in 1743-87 Leop. Mozart was in service here, first as violinist, later as court-composer and from 1762 as assistant-director.

The institution known as the Mozarteum exercises varied functions, including the giving of orchestral concerts and the conduct of a Musikschule. Its directors have included Schlager 1861-, Otto Bach '68-, J. F. Hummel '80-, J. Reiter 1908-, Graener '10-, Hirschfeld '13-, E. Schmitz '14, and Paumgartner '17-, besides Ledwinke as concert-director in 1907-14 and Szenker later. Its secretary in 1870-99 was Engl and its librarian since 1918 Frischenschlager. Since 1880 it has published a Jahresbericht devoted to studies concerning Mozart. For several years important festivals of modern chamber-music have been held here.

Opera-performances at the Stadttheater have sometimes had noted leaders, such as Muck and Hugo Wolf about 1880.

Birthplace of W. A. Mozart 1756, Jos. Woelfl '72, Sigismund Neukomm '78, Ignaz Assmayer '90, etc.

Histories by Peregrinus, 1889, Adrian, 1908, Frz. Martin, 1913, etc., besides an anonymous collection of biographies (1845) and various works on the Mozarts and Mich. Haydn.

San Francisco, Cal. Famous city and port on the Pacific Coast of the United States, owing its rise into prominence to the discovery of gold in California in 1848 and soon becoming the metropolis of the Far West. In spite of its distance from other centers it has long had an energetic musical interest, attested by its welcome to visiting artists and opera-troupes and now by the maintenance of varied permanent enterprises.

The Symphony Orchestra was formed in 1909 by the Musical Association and has been led by Hadley 1909- and Hertz '15-.

The Loring Club (men's voices), started in 1876, has been led for many years by Sabin.

The Bohemian Club (a private association that maintains annual gatherings in the redwood forests of Sonoma County) has since 1902 given open-air dramas or operas by various local composers. They also installed in 1920 at their gathering-place a large open-air organ (resembling that maintained at San Diego since 1915). See Garnett's history of the 'Grove-Plays,' 1918. A.

Birthplace of Hy. Heyman 1855 (at Oakland), W. A. Fisher '61, Leop. Lichtenberg '61, Denis O'Sullivan '68, Rita Fornia-Labey '78 and Maude Fay '83.

Schwerin. Capital of the grand-duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin (40 m. southeast of Lübeck), the court-music from about 1850 including opera, orchestra and a choir designed to rival the Domchor in Berlin.

The court-directors have included Jul. Schäffer 1855-60, the founder of the Schlosschor, followed by O. Kade '60-94; also G. A. Schmitt 1857-, Gille '91-, Meissner '97-, P. Prill 1901- and Kahler '06-, in charge more particularly of the Hoforchester and music at the Hoftheater. The court-intendants have included Plotow 1856-63, K. Ledebur (Jr.) '83- and Schmieden 1914-.

Birthplace of Thos. Mancinus 1550, W. H. Berwald 1864, Ldw. Neubeck '82, etc.

Histories by Chrysander, 1854, Kade, 1893-99, Ledebur, 1898, and Klemens Meyer, 1913-19.

Seville. Large city in southern Spain, the seat of a famous cathedral, musically important since the 16th century.

Among the early choirmasters at the Cathedral were Guerrero 1555-, Cotes 1600- and A. Lobo '04-10.

Birthplace of Crist. Morales 1512, Franc. Guerrero '27, Man. del Popolo Garcia 1775, Jer. Jimenez 1854 and Joaquin Turina '82.

Sheffield. Large manufacturing city in the north of England (35 m. east of Manchester), the headquarters in the making of cutlery, made musically notable in recent years by triennial festivals that are famous for their remarkable chorus-singing.

The chorusmaster for the Festivals from their beginning has been Henry Coward; the conductors have varied. G (Festivals).

Birthplace of W. S. Bennett 1816.

Sondershausen. Small Thuringian town (35 m. northwest of Weimar), the capital of the principality of Schwarzburg-Sondershausen (established in 1697), the court-music (orchestra and opera) becoming decidedly notable during the 19th century.

The court-directors since 1800 have included Hermstedt 1800-, G. Hermann '44-, Ed. Stein '53-, F. Marburg '64-, Volckland '68-69, Erdmannsdörfer '71-, K. Schröder '81-86, '90-1907, Ad. Schultze '86-90, T. Ochs 1907- and Corbach '11-. In addition, among the opera-conductors have been Gerlach in 1885-86, Grabosky for 3 years about 1895 and Theil and Frz. Ludwig in 1909-12.

The Hochschule für Musik (originally Fürstliches Konservatorium), founded in 1881, has been directed by Schröder 1881-86, '90-1907, Ad. Schultze '86-90, Ochs 1907- and Corbach '11-. Birthplace of H. N. and E. L. Gerber 1702, '46, Gottfried Hermann 1808, Hugo Riemann '49 (at Grossmehlra), Traugott Ochs '54 (at Altenfeld), etc.

Histories by Lutze, 1901-19.

Southwark. The borough of London lying to the south of the Thames, opposite 'the City', having both Anglican and Roman Catholic Cathedrals.

At the former (established at St. Saviour's in 1905) the organists have been Richardson in 1897-1909, followed by E. T. Cook, both maintaining services of special significance. At the latter H. G. Nixon was organist in 1839-49.

Southwell. Cathedral-town in central England (20 m. southwest of Lincoln), the see being established in 1884.

At the Cathedral, which was until 1884 a noted collegiate church, organists are on record from the 18th century, including Ayrton 1755-, Thos. Spofforth '64-, Heathcote 1818-35 and Irons '57-72, with Marriott '79-, Liddle '88- and H. W. Tupper 1918-.

Springfield, Mass. City in central Massachusetts on the Connecticut River, since 1889 the seat of more or less regular festivals.

The conductors have included Chadwick 1889-99, C. S. Cornell 1901-02 and, after a reorganization, J. J. Bishop 1903-. A.

Stettin. Important city in northeastern Germany (near the mouth of the Oder, about 95

m. northeast of Berlin), the capital of the province of Pomerania, having much operatic and concert-life.

The post of city-director (including the music at the Jakobikirche, the leadership of the Musik- and Lehrergesangvereine and instruction at the Gymnasium) has been filled by Karl Loewe 1821-, Ad. Lorenz '66- and Wiemann 1910-. There is also a municipal men's chorus.

At the Vereinigte Theater the director recently has been Illing and the conductors Jalowetz, Büsing, Alter and Webern.

The Konservatorium was started in 1868 by Kunze, who has been director till recently. In 1891-93 his associate was Knetsch, who then set up a separate school, after 1899 known as the Riemann-Konservatorium and continuing till 1906. There are many other schools. It may be noted that among the cantors at the old Fürstliches Pädagogium were Dulichius in 1587-1631 and A. Fromm in 1649-51.

Birthplace of Emil Behnke 1836, E. P. Flügel '44, Ed. Behm '62, Emil Prill '67 and Ldw. Landshoff '74.

History by Rud. Schwartz, 1898.

Stockholm. Capital and largest city of Sweden, the main center of its intellectual and artistic culture, its prominence in the northern countries dating from the 17th century (time of Gustavus Adolphus). Under the patronage of the court operatic and orchestral music were early established on a sure footing, giving rise during the 19th century to manifold concert-undertakings. It is interesting to note that the Royal Academy was founded in 1739 and the Conservatory in 1771, in both cases antedating all other institutions of the kind in northern Europe. During the 19th century it maintained its place as one of the important musical capitals in the fields of the opera, orchestral, choral and church-music and of musical education and scholarship.

In the court-music the Düben family were prominent throughout the 17th century, Andreas Düben coming from Leipzig in 1621 as court-organist (later also at the German church) and being made court-director in 1640, followed in 1663 by his son and in 1690-1726 by his grandson. To them succeeded Roman 1729-45 (called 'the father of Swedish music'), the younger Zellbell c. '50, Uttini '76-, J. M. Kraus '88-92 (with Vogler in general charge for ten years or more from '86), Häffner '97-1808, Dupuy 1812-, J. F. Berwald '23-, Foroni '49-, Ignaz Lachner '58-, Berens '61-80, Nordqvist '85-1908 (supplemented by Hallén in '92-97 and by Henneberg in '94-1907), with Järnefelt since 1907 at the Opera and since 1911 court-director. Many other conductors might be named, especially at the Opera, such as J. G. Naumann in 1776-77 and '82-84, Norman in 1861-85, Willmann in '81-88 (intendant or director), Wiklund, etc.

The Philharmonic Society, founded in 1859, has been led by Norman 1859–, Hallén '84–, Aulin 1902– and Schneevoigt 1914–. There are many other societies.

At the historic Storkyrka the organists have included the Zellbells (father and son) 1717–, Wikmanson '81–, E. G. Rosen 1800–60?, Nordqvist 1875–1908, etc. Music has also been significant at the Klarakyrka and the Oskarskyrka.

Among the directors of the Conservatory (first set on foot in 1771) have been Frz. Berwald ?1825–68, Rubenson '72–, Svedborn 1901–, Bolander '05–, and Beckman 1910–. Among other music-schools may be named that of Sigrid Carlheim-Gyllensköld, started in 1889.

Membership in the Royal Academy is conferred as an honor for prominent musicians as by the French Académie.

Birthplace of J. H. Roman 1694, J. F. and F. A. Berwald 1787, '96, Ed. Passy '89, J. A. Josephson 1818, Jenny Lind '20, Ivar Hallström '26, Alb. Rubenson '26, Louise Michaeli '30, Ldw. Norman '31, A. J. Söderman '32, Jos. Dente '38, Leon. Labatt '38, Emil Sjögren '53, Aug. Hyllested '58, Ellen Gulbransen '63, Tor Aulin '66, John Forsell '68, Olive Fremstad '70?, Will Stenhammar '71, Hugo Alfvén '72, Julia Claussen '79, etc.

Histories by Morlind, 1901–21, Svanberg, 1907–18, Personne, 1913–19, Vretblad, 1914–19, Hennig, 1916, Nordensvan, 1917, and Englander, 1922, besides various summaries of Swedish music under National Music in Appendix A.

Strasbourg. Capital and largest city of Alsace and Lorraine (near the Rhine, 55 m. southwest of Karlsruhe), having a famous cathedral, a university, an important opera-house, a city-orchestra, many concert-giving societies and a strong conservatory.

At the Cathedral the two Schmidts (father and son) were organists from 1564 and '92 respectively (both having been previously at the Thomaskirche). Among the choirmasters have been Brossard 1689–94, Garnier 1760–, F. X. Richter '79–, Pleyel '89–91, F. S. Spindler 1808–19, Frz. Stockhausen '68– and Pfitzner 1908–14 (with the brothers Mathias as organists from 1898 and 1908 respectively).

At the Operntheater (erected to replace the old Stadttheater that was destroyed in the bombardment of 1870), the directors have included Neitzel in 1879–81, Krückel in 1892–99 and now A. Otto, while the conductors have been Gutheil 1895–97, Lorentz '95–99, Lohse '97–1904, Knoch 1901–07, Gorter '03–10, Heger '07–08, Pfitzner '08–14, Wolfurt '11–12, Klemperer '12–14 and Bastide 1919–. Most of these as city-directors have had charge of orchestral and choral concerts as well.

The Conservatory, founded in 1855 and reorganized in 1873, has been directed by F. Stockhausen 1871–, Pfitzner 1908–14 and Repartz 1919–. At the University Jacobsthal was docent in musical science from 1872, becoming adjunct-professor in 1875 and full professor in '97–1905. (It is interesting that when the University was first constituted in 1621 (out of the previous Akademie) Walliser was classical and musical preceptor, probably continuing till his death (1648).]

Birthplace of Hans Kotter 1485?, Othmar Luscinus '87, Bernhd. Schmid (1, 2) 1520, '48, C. T. Walliser '68, Joh. Lippius '85, F. X. Murschhauser 1663, N. J. Hüllmandel 1751, Séb. Érad '52, J. G. Kastner 1810, F. L. Ritter '34, E. G. Dannreuther '44, Jules Loeb '57, M. J. Erb '60, Hugo Becker '64, Aug. Scharrer '66, F. X. Mathias '71 (at Dinsheim), Alf. Lorentz '72, Robt. Heger '86, P. O. Möckel '90, etc.

Histories by K. M. Berg, 1840, with its pendant by Oberdoerffer, 1914, Hubert, 1900, Büchschütz, 1900 (both on church-music), an anonymous history of the Conservatory, 1906, and various books on Alsace under National Music in Appendix A.

Stuttgart. Capital of Württemberg (40 m. southeast of Karlsruhe) and throughout the 19th century the leading cultural headquarters of southwestern Germany. The city has had most of its development in comparatively modern times, but the musical importance of the court runs back to the 16th century. It has been noted for its orchestra, its opera, its church-music and its conservatory—all under royal patronage and often developed with brilliance. In the long line of court-musicians may be named Hnr. Finck 1510–, Siess '19–?, Lechner '95–1606, J. A. Steigleder 1627–34 (the best known of a family of organists first noted about 1530), Bockshorn '57–65, Pachelbel '90–92 (organist), Petz 1706–, Brescianello '17–, Holzbauer '51–, Jommelli '53–69, Boroni '71–77, Poli '82–, Zumsteeg '93–1802, Knecht 1807–09, Kon. Kreutzer '12–, Hummel '16–, Lindpaintner '19– (with Abeille as organist in '15–38 and Ign. Lachner as assistant in '31–36), Kücken '56– (substitute from '51), Eckert '60–67, Doppler '65–98, Abert '67–88, Seifriz '70–85, Zumpe '91–95, J. A. Mayer '92–1902, Obrist '95–1900, Reichenberger '98–1903, K. Schindler 1902–03, J. Hellmesberger '04–05, Band '05–?, Schillings '08–18, Klenau '08–14, F. Busch '18–22, Rosenstock '22–, Glenck, Gans, etc. (overlapping terms due to differing duties). The most striking periods were under Jommelli, Lindpaintner and Schillings. At the Stiftskirche recent organists and directors have been Faiszt 1865– and Hnr. Lang '94–.

Leaders of the Verein für Klassische Kirchenmusik have included Faiszt 1847–, Zumpe '93–, Sam. de Lange '95– and Band 1908–?. The Neue Singverein, founded by Stark about 1860, was led by him and then by W. Krüger till '83, followed since '92 by Seyffardt. The Liederkrans and other societies have been also notable.

The Conservatory was founded in 1857 by Lebert, Faiszt, Speidel, Stark and others and soon acquired a high reputation, especially for piano- and theory-instruction. Its directors have been Faiszt 1859–, Sam. de Lange '94— and Max Pauer 1908—. Since 1921 it has been entitled the Hochschule für Musik.

Birthplace of D. G. Treu 1695, Nic. Lupot 1758, Conrad Kocher '86 (at Ditzingen), Jul. Benedict 1804, Vassili Kühner '40, Jul. and Ad. Ruthardt '41, '49, Anna Mehlig '36, Frz. Kaim '56, Herm. Abert '71, Paul Ottenheimer '73, Ed. Möricke '77, Alf. Sittard '78, Herm. Keller '85, etc.

Histories by Schubart, 1791–93, Palm, 1881, Wehl, 1888, Sittard, 1890–91, Elben, 1894 (Liederkrantz), Bossert, 1898–1916 (in Württembergischer Vierteljahrsschr.), Holzer, 1902–05, Abert, 1905, R. Krauss, 1908, Bopp, 1910, etc.

Toronto. The second largest city in Canada, capital of the province of Ontario, in recent years noted for its varied musical activities.

The Mendelssohn Choir, founded in 1894, early attained conspicuous renown under Vogt, who in 1917 was succeeded by Fricker. The Choir has more than once made tours in the United States. A.

The Conservatory, founded in 1887 by Edward Fisher and directed by him till 1913, followed by Vogt, is one of the largest and most influential institutions in America. In 1888 Torrington established the College of Music, with which in 1918 was joined the Canadian Academy of Music (started in 1911). A.

The University has been notable among American institutions for its system of granting musical degrees on examination.

The Canadian Guild of Organists has its center here, as also the leading forms of musical business.

Birthplace of H. A. Clarke 1839.

Toulouse. Large city in southern France, having a cathedral, more or less regular opera-seasons, a conservatory, etc. Historically it is noted as the center of the region in which the Troubadours flourished in the 12–13th centuries.

At the Cathedral Leybach was organist in 1844–91.

The École de Musique, started in 1840 and affiliated with the Paris Conservatory, the first director being L. A. Piccinni, followed by Mériel (till 1897), Crocé-Spinelli and Kunc.

Birthplace of Nic. Dalayrac 1753 (at Muret), Prosper Sainton 1813, L. P. Deffès '19, Castelmarty '34, J. A. V. Capoul '39, G. B. Salvayre '47, Pierre Gailhard '48, Chas. Planchet '62, P. A. Vidal '63, P. H. Büsser '72, Jean Poueigh '76, etc.

Treves. Famous city in the Rhine Province (on the Moselle, about 75 m. above Coblenz), the seat of a medieval archbishopric of great importance and now a headquarters of Catholic ecclesiastical scholarship.

At the Cathedral Hermesdorff was organist in ?1860–85 and Pauli in '92–1904.

The Kirchenmusikschule has been directed since 1904 by Erlemann.

The Musikvereins-Orchester has lately been led by Hammacher and Sieglar.

Birthplace of P. J. Riotte 1776, Jos. Mainzer 1801, V. F. Desvignes '05, Hnr. Oberhoffer '24, Mich. Hermesdorff '38, P. J. Wagner '65 (at Kürenz), etc.

Trieste. Important city at the head of the Adriatic (about 150 m. east of Venice), formerly the chief seaport of Austria, having a cathedral, opera in Italian and Slovak, music-schools, etc. At the Cathedral Gius. Farinelli was choirmaster in 1819–36, followed by L. Ricci (till '59). At S. Maria Maggiore Fr. Sinico was choirmaster in 1843–65.

Besides opera at two of the theaters, there is a Filarmonica (orchestra), led by A. Cousin.

The Conservatorio Giuseppe Tartini, founded in 1903, has been directed by Fil. Manara, and another Conservatorio by G. Gialdini.

Birthplace of Franc. Sinico 1810, Alf. Jaëll '22, Alb. Randegger (1) '33, Gius. Sinico '36, Paolo Gallico '68, Carlo Perinello '77. Alb. Randegger (2) '80, Victor de Sabata '92, etc.

Histories of the opera by Danziger, 1876, Bottura, 1885, Caprin, 1901, and Boccardi, 1913.

Tübingen. Small university-town in Württemberg (20 m. southwest of Stuttgart).

The music-directors at the University have included Silcher 1817–, Scherzer '60–, E. Kauffmann '77–, Volbach 1907– and Karl Hasse '19–. Under these the Akademische Musikverein has been notable.

Birthplace of H. A. Köstlin 1846.

Turin. The fourth city in Italy, capital of ancient region of Piedmont (100 m. southwest of Milan), belonging alternately to France and Italy until 1814, having a cathedral, a university, important opera-seasons, a conservatory, etc.

Among the court-directors have been Somis ?1700– Q. Gasparini '63–70 and Polledro 1824–44.

At the Cathedral Ottani was choirmaster in 1779–1827, and also conductor at the Opera till about 1790. In 1868–83 Pedrotti was conductor at the Teatro Regio, besides Marinuzzi lately.

At the Istituto Musicale (now the Liceo Musicale Giuseppe Verdi), founded in 1865, the chief directors have been Pedrotti 1869–83 and Bolzoni '87–1919.

Birthplace of Fel. de' Giardini 1716, Gaet. Pugnani '31, F. A. Radicati '78, G. B. Polledro '81 (at Piovà), Gius. Concone 1810, G. I. Franchi-Verney '48, Sofia Scalchi '50, Franc. Tamagno '51, Alb. Franchetti '60, Delfino Thermignon '61, L. A. Villanis '63, Gioc. Fino '67, Teresina Tua '67, Leone Sinigaglia '68, Vanni Marcoux '79, Alf. Casella '83, etc.

Histories of the opera by Alfieri, 1761, Van der Straeten, 1880, Roberti, 1880, Milone, 1887, Sacerdote, 1892, Breggi, 1906, Gallina, 1914, Depanis, 1915, and Torri, 1919 (in Rivista Musicale).

Ulm. Noted city in eastern Württemberg, close to the border of Bavaria (50 m. southeast of Stuttgart), with a famous cathedral, operatic and concert-life, a conservatory, etc. In the 15-16th centuries it was one of the principal headquarters of the Meistersinger.

Among the elder organists at the Cathedral were Tobias Eberlin, followed by Scherer in 1671-1712 and J. C. Walther in 1751-70.

Among recent conductors at the Stadttheater have been Heger in 1908-09 and later G. Nauber.

The Orchesterverein is led by G. Hertz.

The Konservatorium was founded by Bäuerle in 1921, in addition to the older Central-Musikschule.

Birthplace of S. A. Scherer 1631, J. F. Kleinknecht 1722, J. C. Kienlen '84, J. G. Mettenleiter 1812 and Wilh. Speidel '26.

Upsala. Small city in eastern Sweden (50 m. north of Stockholm), the seat of a noted university, a cathedral, orchestral and choral societies, etc.

Among the organists at the Cathedral have been Häffner 1808-20, Nordblom '35-48, Josephson '64-80, Palm '98- and Hedenblad 1904-09.

The Philharmonic Society has been led by Josephson 1847- and Hedenblad '81-1909.

At the University the music-directors have been Häffner 1820-, Nordblom '33-, Josephson '49-, Hedenblom '81- and Alfvén 1910-. The students' chorus has a fine reputation.

Birthplace of J. E. Nordblom 1778, Ruben Liljefors 1871, etc.

Utrecht. The fourth city of Holland (25 m. southeast of Amsterdam), with a fine cathedral, a university and much concert-life.

At the Cathedral Obrecht was choirmaster in 1456-83. The recent incumbent was Wagenaar 1888-1918.

The Stedelijk-Orkest was made famous by Huttenlocher in 1894-1917.

Recent city-directors and heads of the Musiekschool have been Wagenaar 1904- and Gilse '17-22.

Birthplace of Jacob Obrecht 1430?, Jan. Van Boom 1807, Bern. Boekelman '38, G. H. Witte '43, Hub. de Blanck '56, Joh. Wagenaar '62, J. W. Mengelberg '71, and H. F. Wirth '85.

History by Riemsdijk, 1881.

Valencia. Large city on the eastern coast of Spain, having a cathedral, a university, regular opera-seasons, a conservatory, etc.

In the 16-17th centuries the Cathedral was noted for its superior a cappella music, especially under J. G. Perez 1581-, Cotes '96-1600 and Comes 1638-43. These traditions have been revived by Cabo in 1816-32 and by Guzman in '77-89.

The Conservatorio was lately conducted (till 1911) by Giner.

Birthplace of Ant. Eximeno 1729, Vic. Martin '54 and Salv. Giner 1832.

Histories by Blasco, 1896, and Ruiz de Lihory, 1903.

Venice. Famous city in northern Italy, on the Adriatic, from the 13th century till far on into the 18th one of the richest commercial centers of Europe and politically dominant not only in Italy, but extensively throughout the eastern Mediterranean. In music-history it is most noted for the extraordinary development of church-music at St. Mark's during the 16th century and for the perfecting and public establishment of the early opera in the 17th. From about 1500, also, it was a principal headquarters for the new industry of music-publishing. And after 1600 the schools attached to its large hospitals or hospices played a part only second to those at Naples in the maintenance and stimulus of systematic musical education. In modern times its eminence in ecclesiastical and operatic music has been often brilliantly sustained.

Out of the long line of distinguished musicians connected with the Cathedral of S. Marco may be named the choirmasters Fossis 1491-, Willaert 1527-, De Rore '63-, Zarlino '65-, B. Donati '90-, Croce 1603-, Martinengo '09, Monteverdi '13-, Rovetta '43-, Cavalli '68-, Monferato '76-, Legrenzi '85-, Volpe '90-, Parteno '92-, Biffi 1701-, Lotti '36-, Ant. Pollaro '40-, Saratelli '47-, Galuppi '62-, Bertoni '84-, Furlanetto '97-, Perotti 1817-, Buzzola '55-, Coccon '73-1903 (many of these serving also for varied terms as assistants before becoming chief), besides the recent trainers in the schola cantorum, such as Tebaldini in 1889-94, Perosi in '97-98 and Thermignon since 1900. The roll of principal organists includes Zucchetto 1318-, Franc. da Pesaro '37-, Dattolo '69-, Silvestro '75-, Tagliapietra '79-, Ant. de' Servi '97-, Zuane 1406-, Bernardino '19-, Stefan Murer ('Bernhard der Deutsche') '45-, De Vielmis '59-, G. de Marin 1504-, Memmo '07-, Crociccheri '16-, Annibale Padovano '62-, Merulo '66-, G. Gabrieli '86-, Savii 1612-, Grillo '19-, Fillago '23-, Mass. Neri '44-, Cavalli '65-, P. A. Ziani '69-, Rovettino '78-, Spada '90-, Lotti 1704-, Coletti '36-, Bertoni '52-, Grazioli '85-1820, Coccon 1856-73, Girardi, Ravanello '95-98. In 1490 a second organ was installed, necessitating the office of a second organist, the list of appointees including Fr. d'Ana 1490-, Arciero 1519-, Segni '30-, Baldassare da Imola '33-, De Buus '41-, Parabosco '51-, Merulo '57-, A. Gabrieli '66-, Bell' Haver '86-, Guami '88-, Da Castella '95-, Berti 1624-, Cavalli '39-, Rovettino '65-, Spada '78-, C. F. Pollaro '90-, Lotti '92-, Vinacesi 1704-, Tavelli '20-, Pescetti '62-, Bertoni '66-, Grazioli '82-, Fr. Bianchi '85-92, etc.

The first opera-house was the Teatro Cassiano (1637), was followed during the 17th century by no less than ten others. The principal modern house is La Fenice, built in 1791 and restored after a fire in 1836, which is one of the largest and most noted in Italy.

The original music-schools of the city were gradually developed in connection with the leading charitable institutions known as Ospedali (analogous to the Naples orphanages, but originally on a broader scale). The four that became noted in the 18th century as music-schools were the O. della Pietà, the O. dei Mendicanti, the O. degli Incurabili and the Ospedaletto, only the first of which continued beyond the decline of the Republic in the late 18th century. With the Pietà Gasparini, Vivaldi and Porpora were connected as teachers, with the Mendicanti Legrenzi and Bertoni, with the Incurabili Lotti, Pallavicino, Cocchi and Galuppi, and with the Ospedaletto Traetta, Sacchini and Sarti. The modern institution is the Liceo Benedetto Marcello, adopted by the municipality in 1877 and directed by Grazzini 1882–, Tirindelli '93–, Bossi '95–, Wolf-Ferrari 1902– and M. Agostini '09–. G.

Birthplace of the Scotto family from c. 1450, Andr. Gabrieli 1510?, Vinc. Bell' Haver '30, Bald. Donati '30?, J. A. de Baif '32, Giov. Feretti '40?, Giov. Gabrieli '57, Ant. Gianettini 1649, M. A. Ziani '53, Gius. Boniventi '60?, Andr. Adami '63, Ant. Lotti '67?, Apost. Zeno '68, C. A. Badia '72, Tom. Albinoni '74, Ant. Caldara '78, G. A. Ricieri '79, Ant. Pollarolo '80, Ant. Vivaldi '80?, Bened. Marcello '86, Giov. Porta '90?, Faustina Hasse 1700, Carlo Goldoni '07, Franc. Algarotti '12, Maddalena Sirmen '35?, Dom. Dragonetti '63, Catterino Cavos '76, Franc. Caffi '80, Melch. Balbi '96, Nic. Coccon 1826, Gius. Campanari '58, Oreste Ravanello '71, Giorgio Polacco '75, Ugo Ara '76, Franco da Venezia '76, Erna. Wolf-Ferrari '76, G. F. Malipiero '82, etc.

Histories of the operatic development by Arrigoni, 1840, Galvani, 1878–79, Clotaldo, 1884, Emil Vogel, 1887 (in Vierteljahrsschr.), Wiel, 1888–97, Solerti, 1902 (in Rivista Musicale), Molmenti, 1906, Van den Borren, 1914; of the Fenice in particular by Casoni, 1838, Torelli, 1869, Livosan, 1878, and Faustini, 1902; of the Teatro Malibran by Orlandini, 1913; of music at S. Marco by Caffi, 1854–55 (with monographs in 1836–62), and Von Winterfeld, 1834.

Verona. Important small city in northern Italy (midway between Milan and Venice, at the foot of the chief highway to the north through the Trentino), from 1405 a dependency of Venice. In the 16th century its cathedral had musical importance.

Among the choirmasters at the Cathedral in the 16–17th centuries were Ruffo 1554–63, Sponzone c. '85, Bacusi '94–1609, G. F. Anerio 1610–11 and S. Bernardi '15–27.

The operatic headquarters is the Teatro Filarmonico.

Birthplace of Bart. Tromboncino 1475?, Mich. Pisenti '80?, Vinc. Ruffo 1525?, M. A. Ingegneri '45?, Paolo Bellasia '55?, G. M. Asola '60?, Lud. Bellanda '70?, Ant. Bertali 1605, Gius. Torelli '60?, E. F. dall' Abaco '75, Gius. Gazzaniga 1743, Gaet. Rossi '80, Carlo

Pedrotti 1817, Franco Faceio '40, Emilio Pizzi '62, Italo Montemezzi '75, Giov. Zenotello '79, Maria Labia '85, etc.
Histories by Sala, 1879, and Gagliardi, 1907.

Versailles. Small town in the environs of Paris, made famous by becoming from the 17th century the residence of the royal family and often the seat of government (its great palace and park largely the creation of Louis XIV). As such, it was the scene for the activity of the Chapelle Royal and for manifold musical and dramatic functions connected with court-life.

Birthplace of Rod. and Aug. Kreutzer 1766, '78, L. E. and Hyac. Jadin '68, '69, F. R. and E. F. Gebauer '73, '77, N. J. Platel '77, G. A. Hue 1858, etc.

Histories by Fromageot, 1905–06.

Viborg. Small city and sea-port in eastern Finland (midway between Helsingfors and Petrograd).

Its symphony-concerts have attained some note under Järnefelt 1898–1903 and Melartin 1908–11.

Birthplace of Armas Järnefelt 1869, G. L. Schneevoigt '72 and Ernst Mielck '77.

Vienna. Famous metropolis on the Danube, the chief seat of government for the former Holy Roman Empire and the capital of the subsequent Austrian Empire. In music-history it has always been conspicuous, at first because of its position between Italy and the north and because of the interest of the Hapsburg sovereigns, but also because of a singularly intense and sustained enthusiasm of its people for all kinds of musical expression sacred and secular, operatic, orchestral and choral, and ranging from the most severe to the gayest and most diverting. In the 16–17th centuries it was notably quick to share in all progressive movements in both Italy and Germany. In the late 18th century it became the leading headquarters for the perfecting of the instrumental style later called 'classical' or 'Viennese'. And in the 19th it has held a foremost place in the opera, in every type of concert-music, in musical education and in scholarship. As in the case with all other great cities, it is only possible here to refer to a few salient items in its rich artistic history. G (several articles).

The Imperial Chapel, the most famous of its class, was first regularly organized in 1498 and has usually been strongly supported by successive emperors, not simply as a feature in the inner court-life, but as a means for public enjoyment and education. It has usually been significant for its choir, its orchestra and its organists, besides assuming the care of the opera. In 1921 all its activities were taken over by the government of the new republic. Among those who have held the post of court-director have been Arnold v. Bruck 1534–54, Vaet '64–, Fil. de Monte '68–76 [in 1576–1612 the court was transferred to Prague (q. v.)], Gius. Valentini 1637–, Bertali '49– (Cesti as 2d in '66-69), Sances '69-, J. H. Schmelzer '79-80, A. Draghi '82-1700, M. A. Ziani 1712-, Fux '15-41 (Caldara as 2d in '16-36 and Predieri from '39), Predieri '46-51, with G. Reutter (Jr.) '46-, Gassmann '72-, Bonno '74-, Salieri '88-, Eybler 1824- (Weigl as 2d in '25-46), Assmayer '46-, Randhartinger '62-, Herbeck '66- (G. Preyer as 2d in '66-76), Hellmesberger (Sr.) '77-, H. Richter '93-, Bibl '97-, Hellmesberger (Jr.) 1900-03 and latterly Karl Luze. Among the court-organists have been Valentini 1619-, Arrigoni '37, W. Ebner '37-65, with Froberger in '37, '41-45, '53-57, M. Ebner '55-80, Poglietti '61-83, Kerll '77-84, F. T. Richter '83-, Reutter (Sr.) 1700-, Reutter (Jr.) '30-46, Payer '21-33, Muffat '51-63 (2d from '17), Albrechtsberger '72-93, Henneberg 1818-, Worziček '23-, Sechter '25- (with Assmayer till '38 and Preyer in '46-53), Bibl '63-97, Bruckner '67-96 (with Rotter till '95), Dittich 1901-06 and Tölzer and Dite more recently. The title of court-composer was conferred in 1696 on C. A. Badia, in 1698 on Fux, in 1713 on F. B. Conti, in '20 on Porsile, in '31 on Reutter (Jr.), in '39 on G. C. Wagensell, in '74 on Gluck and Salieri, in '87 on Mozart, in '92 on Koželuch, in '93 on A. Teyber, etc.

At St. Stephen's, the famous cathedral, the choir-masters or organists have included W. Ebner 1634-65, Kerll '77-84, Fux 1705-, Reutter (Sr.) '15- (organist from 1686), Reutter (Jr.) '38-46, Albrechtsberger '92-, Preindl 1809-, Gänsbacher '23-, Drechsler '44-, G. Preyer '53-, Bibl '59- and Boschetti '96-1921. At the striking Votivkirche (opened in 1879) Kretschmann was choir-master in 1889-1902, followed by Glickh.

The present Operntheater, which is one of the finest in Europe, was built in 1869, succeeding to the prestige of various structures erected for the Hofoper since the 17th century. In the long line of directors and conductors may be named Gluck 1754-64, Salieri '74-92, P. Wranitzky '85-1808 (orchestra-conductor), Jos. Weigl '92-1825, G. Hellmesberger (Sr.) 1829-53 (director), Proch '40-70, O. Nicolai '41-47, Eckert '53-60 (director), H. Esser '57-69, O. Dessoff '60-75, Doppler '62-65, Herbeck '69-75 (director), H. Richter '75-1900, J. N. Fuchs '80-93, W. Jahn '81-97 (director), J. Hellmesberger (Jr.) '86-1904, Mahler '97-1907 (director), F. Löwe '98-1900, F. Schalk 1900-18, Bruno Walter 1901-12, Zemlinsky '08-09, Weingartner '08-11 (director), Gregor '11-18 (do.), Schalk '18- and R. Strauss '19- (do.), with the conductors Reichenberger '05-, Reichwein '13- and Alwin '20-, etc. At the Volksoper the conductors have included Frz. Roth 1889-, Zemlinsky 1906-08, Heger '11-, Tittel '12-15, Mader '17- and Weingartner '19-20.

The older houses where opera has flourished include the Leopoldstädter Theater, where Wenzel Müller was conductor and composer in 1786-1835; the Theater an der Wien (started in 1801), with which are associated the names of Payer 1810-, Rietotte '18- and Netzer '46-49, besides the two Ad. Müllers (father and son) 1828-1901 and Léhár 1902-; the Kärthnerthor-Theater, where have been Rietotte 1806-18, Kon. Kreutzer '22-40 (alternating with F. Lachner in '27-29 and '32-37), Reuling '30-54 and Esser '47-57; and the Josephstädter Theater, where from 1829 worked Reuling, Payer, Kreutzer, Proch and Stegmayer '48-59. In addition might be named the Karl-Theater (1847) and the Komisches Oper.

The oldest orchestra is that of the Tonkünstler-Societät (since 1862 known as the Haydn-Verein), which was formed in 1771, the earliest organization of its kind after the institution of the Concerts Spirituels in Paris. Its first conductors were Gassmann 1771- and Salieri '74-1818, and recently have included Nedbal 1906- and Konrath '13-, with Paumgartner, Wallner and Furtwängler and others.

In 1808 Van Swieten formed a Musikalische Gesellschaft, which in 1812-13 was replaced by the famous Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, organized by Sonnleithner and others under the patronage of Archduke Rudolf to sustain both choral and orchestral concerts, establish a music-school (see below) and act as a scholarly center by gathering a library and museum. Its progress as the most active musical agency in the city led to the erection of special buildings in 1830 and '70. The leaders of the Gesellschaft-Konzerte have included Mosel 1813-, Hauschka '16-40 and other members at various times, J. Hellmesberger (Sr.) '50-59 and '77-78, Herbeck '59-69 and '75-77, A. Rubinstein '71-, Brahms '72-75, Kremser '78-, H. Richter '80-82 and '84-90, Gericke '82-84, and '90-, Von Perger '95-, F. Löwe 1900-. F. Schalk '04- and Reichwein '21-. Its Orchester-Verein, started in 1860, was led by Rottenberg in 1888-91 and then by H. Grädener. The librarian and archivist from 1866 was K. F. Pohl, followed in 1897 by Mandyczewski. Its collections of books and other literary material and of instruments are extremely valuable.

The Wiener Philharmoniker was started in 1842 as an orchestral adjunct to the Hofoper (at first under the name Philharmonische Akademie) but became independent in 1860. Its conductors have been O. Nicolai 1842-, H. Esser '47-, Dessoff '60-, H. Richter '75-, Mahler '97-1901, Mottl and Muck 1903-06, Weingartner '08-, with aid at times from others. Leaders of the Konzertverein, started in 1900 by Stix, have included F. Döwe in 1904-08, followed by Spörr.

The noted Singakademie was founded in 1858 by Aug. Schmidt and Stegmayer in rivalry to the choral side of the Musikfreunde enterprise. Its conductors have been Stegmayer 1858-, Brahms '63-, Dessoff '64-, Weinwurm '65-, Heuberger '78-, Mandyczewski '80, Ad. Schmidt '82-, Weinzierl '84-, H. Grädener,

'92-, F. Löwe '96-, Lafite 1900-, Puchat '96-, Wickenhauser '07- and Bruno Walter '11-13 (with Ochs and Stavenhagen as guest-conductors). Since 1913 it has united for annual concert-series in the new Konzerthaus with the Konzertverein, the chief conductor being Löwe.

Among other choral organizations may be named the Männergesangverein (led by Kremser in 1869-99 and by Keldorfer in 1900-21), the Schubertbund, founded in 1863 (now led by Keldorfer), and the Philharmonischer Chor, founded by Schreker in 1911 (since '20 led by R. S. Hoffmann).

The Konservatorium, organized in 1817 by the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and since 1909 adopted by the government as the Akademie für Musik und darstellende Kunst, is one of the oldest and most celebrated of European institutions, especially since its reorganization in 1851. It was at first conducted by a committee whose chairmen included Kiese-wetter 1817-, Hauschka '25-, Lannoy '33-, Chimani '35-, Klemm '37-, and G. Preyer '43-47, and then, after an interval of suspension, by the directors J. Hellmesberger (Sr.) '51-, J. R. Fuchs '93-, Von Perger '99-, Bopp 1908-, F. Löwe '19- and Jos. Marx '22-. The Horák Musikschule (for piano, organ and singing), founded about 1875 by Eduard and Adolf Horák and directed by them till '92, has since been conducted by Brixel (till 1914) and Sigpl. There are innumerable other schools.

At the University the music-directors have included Jansa 1834-49, and Weinwurm '80-1911?, besides Hanslick as docent from '56 and professor in '70-98, Adler as professor from '98 and also Lach from 1920.

Birthplace of J. L. Loewe 1628, Georg Reutter (1,2) '56, 1708, Jos. Bonno 1710, Ignaz Holzbauer '11, G. C. Wagenseil '15, Leop. Hoffmann '30?, J. G. Albrechtsberger '36 (at Klosterneuburg), Karl v. Dittersdorf '39, I. J. Pleyel '57 (at Ruppertsthal), Jos. Eybler '64 (at Schwechat), Ant. Eberl '66, I. F. Mosel '72, Ignaz Schuppanzigh '76, I. X. Seyfried '76, Frz. Clement '80, Jos. Mayseder '89, Karl Czerny '91, Frz. Grillparzer '91, Frz. Schubert '97 (at Lichtenthal), Georg Hellmesberger 1800, Jos. Lanner '01, Joh. Strauss (1) '04, Henri Herz '06, Hnr. Kreissle v. Hellborn '12, A. H. Ehrlich '22, Joh. Strauss (2) '25, Ernst Pauer '26, Jos. Hellmesberger (1) '28, Joh. v. Herbeck '31, Ed. Rap-poldi '31, Rud. Bibl '32, Karoline Pruckner '32, Frz. Jauner '32, Ant. Door '33, Marie Wilt '33, Hnr. de Ahna '35, Ed. Strauss '35, Karl Navrátil (1) '36, Ang. Neumann '38, Ad. Müller '39, Minna Peschka-Leutner '39, Pauline Lucca '41, Marianne Brandt '42, Marie Krauss '42, Karl Millöcker '42, Th. Helm '43, Emerich Kastner '47, Anna Sachse-Hofmeister '50 (at Gumpoldskirchen), Jos. Staudigl '50, Joh. Schrammel '50, Ad. Wall-nöfer '51, Rich. v. Perger '54, Hugo Reinhold '54, Jos. Hellmesberger (2) '55, Felix Mottl '56, Edm. and Hnr. Schücker '60, '67, Otto Keller '61, E. N. Rezníček '61, Ferd. Hellmesberger '63, Adele Margulies '63, Luise Reuss-Belce '63, Benno Schönberger '63, Emil Jaques-Dalcroze '65, Emma Juch '65, Ferd. Löwe '65, Ernst Kunwald '68, Alf. Lorenz '68, Thila Plaichinger '68, Karl Prohazka '69, Alf. Kastner '70, Felix v. Kraus '70, Luigi v. Kunits '60, Anna v. Mildenburg '72, Alex. v. Zemlinsky '72, Walther Rabl '73, Bern. Tittel '73, Rob. Lach '74, Jul. Prüwer '74, Arn. Schönberger '74, Rich. Stöhr '74, Victor Junk '75, Fritz Kreisler '75, Oscar and Fritz Malata '76, '82, Ad. Rebner '76, Artur Bodansky '77, Johanna Müller-Hermann '78, Gottfr. Galston '79, Melanie Kurt '80, F. J. Moser '80, Ant. v. Webern '83, Otto Rippl '84, Ernst Kurth '86, Ernst Toch '87, Wilh. Grosz '94, Ernst Křenek 1900, etc.

The literature is very extensive and varied, including works by Sonnleithner, 1794-96, Reichardt, 1810, Mosel, 1818-40, Köchel, 1868, Hanslick, 1869-1900, Post, 1871, Frimmel, 1883-1922, Kalbeck, 1885-1914, Rosner, 1897, Weilen, 1899-1901, Lothar and J. Stern, 1900, Heuberger, 1901-06, Mantuani, 1904, Wallaschek, 1907-08, Gutmann, 1908, Aug. v. Böhm, 1909, Perger, 1910, and with Hirschfeld and Mandyczewski, 1912, A. Weiss, 1913, Rebiček, 1913, Helm, 1916 (in Merker), Enzinger, 1918-19, Smijers, 1919, Wellesz, 1919 (both in Stud. f. Musikwissenschaft), Przystaupinski, 1919, Specht, 1919, Kobald, 1920-21, Snerich, 1921, Orel, 1921, etc.

Vilna. City of moderate size in western Russia, now the capital of the Lithuanian Republic. Historically it has shared much in the fortunes of Poland.

Birthplace of Viktor Kashinsky 1812, César Cui '35, Leop. Godowsky '70, Max. Steinberg '88, Jascha Heifetz 1901, etc.

Warsaw. Since 1609 the capital of Poland and (with Cracow) the center of its cultural life, during the 19th century the third city in Russia and now the seat of government for the Polish Republic. Besides the music connected with its old court-life it has been notable for its opera, its orchestral and other concerts and its music-schools.

Among the older court-directors in service of the king of Poland (sometimes resident in Italy or Germany) were Leopoldita 1560-89, Marenzio c. '90, Pacelli 1603-, Scacchi '23-48, Albertini 1784-1812, etc.

At the Grand Opéra the leading conductors or directors have included Elsner 1799-, Kurpinski 1825-, Nidecki '41-52, Moniuszko '58-72, Rebiček '82-91, Młynarski '99-1903, Noskowski 1906-09 (assistant), Rezníček '07-08, Opienski '08- and Młynarski again '18-. Conductors of the Philharmonic Orchestra since 1900 have included Młynarski, K. Prohazka, Noskowski, Rezníček, Fitelberg and Melcer (since 1908). There are also symphony-concerts by the orchestra of the Opéra.

At the concerts of the Musical Society conductors have included Zarzycki 1870-, Jos. Wieniawski '75-76, Noskowski '81-92 and Domaniewski 1906-.

The Musical Institute, originally founded by Elsner in 1821 and directed by him till its closing in '30, was revived in 1861, the directors since then including A. de Kontski 1861-, Zarzycki '79-95, Domaniewski 1902-, Mlynarski '04-09, Barcewicz '11-14, Mlynarski again '18- and Melcer '22-. The Russian Musical Society has also maintained a music-school.

Birthplace of Jos. Koźłowski 1757, Fr. Chopin 1810 (at Zelazowa Wola), Mor. Karasowski '23, Apoll. de Kontski '25, Gust. Roguski '39, Isidor Lotto '40, Karl Tausig '41, Sigism. Noskowski '46, Jean and Éd. de Reszke '50, '55, Natalie Janowska '56, Tim. and Jos. Adamowski '58, '62, Alex. Lambert '62, Jos. v. Slivinski '65, Ferd. Hoesick '67, Wanda Landowska '77, Henriot Lévy '79, Nic. Mjaskowski '81, Lud. Różycki '83, Raoul Koczalski '85, etc.

History by Boguslawski, 1899, and see works on Poland under National Music in Appendix A.

Washington, D. C. Since 1800 the capital of the United States, but not conspicuous as a center of literary and artistic culture until recently. It is now one of the larger cities of the country (in 1920 the fourteenth) and rapidly becoming famous for its wealth of material and activity in many intellectual fields. Its governmental collections are particularly rich and its various departments and bureaus have drawn together a large body of investigators and experts. Although this growth has not as yet had much relation to music, except in one or two instances, there has been a notable increase in concert-life and more than one project for a national conservatory has been discussed. The Library of Congress, in its Music Division, has become one of the largest and finest collections in the world, the items in its catalogue amounting to almost a million, including over 10,000 scores of concerted instrumental or vocal works, over 20,000 opera-librettos, over 35,000 books, etc. The development of this Division was mainly due to the enterprise and scholarship of O. G. Sonneck, who was in charge in 1902-17, followed by W. R. Whittlesey and Carl Engel (since 1921). A.

The National Museum and the Bureau of Ethnology have considerable collections of instruments. In connection with the Georgetown University and other educational institutions there has been more or less attention to ecclesiastical and other branches of practical music.

The noted Marine Band is the military band connected with the United States Marine Corps. Its history goes back to the formation of the Corps in 1798, but its artistic importance dates from about 1865. It is now the chief organization of its kind in governmental service. The more recent leaders have been Henry Fries 1871-, Louis Schneider '73-, Sousa '80-, Fanciulli '92- and Santelmann '98-. A.

Birthplace of J. P. Sousa 1854, Hy. Clough Leichter '74 and Edwin Hughes '84.

Weimar. Small Thuringian city (60 m. southwest of Leipzig), the capital of the grand-duchy of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach and since about 1770 a remarkable headquarters for literary and artistic culture. Besides its court-activities, with emphasis upon all kinds of instrumental and vocal music, including opera on a large scale, in 1848-59 it was made musically memorable by the activities of Liszt and his circle.

Among the older court-musicians were Renner in 1507-17, J. H. Schein in 1615-16, Drese c. 1650, J. S. Bach in 1708-17 and J. G. Walther in 1720-48. Since 1800 the list of directors has included A. E. Müller 1810-, Aug. Riemann '18-, J. N. K. Götze '26-, Liszt '48-, Lassen '58-, Stavenhagen '95-, Gutheil '97-1900, Raabe 1907-20 and Leonhardt '20-22, besides various functions allotted to A. F. Häser in 1817-44, J. N. Hummel in '19-37 (titular director, but often absent), Chelard in '40-52, Stör in '57-63?, Müller-Hartung in '65-89, Rich. Strauss in '89-94, d'Albert in '95, Reznicek in '96 and Latzko recently. Among the court-organists have been Töpfer 1830- and Gottschalg '70-81 (or later), with Thiem since 1914. In 1910-16 Herm. Keller was city-organist. Recently the leader of the Stadtkapelle has been Meissner, and in 1904-09 Rorich conducted the Philharmonischer Verein.

The grand-ducal Orchester- und Musikschule, founded in 1872, has been directed by Müller-Hartung 1872-, Degner 1903-, Von Bauszner '08- and Hinze-Reinhold '16-.

In 1887 the Princess Wittgenstein left a bequest which in time became available for the founding of a Liszt-Museum, of which the first custodian was Carl Gille, followed by Müller-Hartung 1899-, Obrist 1900- and Raabe '10-20.

The Regier-Archiv (previously at Jena) was moved here in 1922, with Frdr. Martin as librarian.

Birthplace of Joh. Sebastiani 1622, J. F. Fasch '88, Friedemann, Emanuel and Bernhard Bach 1710, '14, '15, J. L. Krebs '13 (at Buttelstedt), T. M. and Karl Eberwein '75, '86, J. N. K. Götze '91, J. C. Lobe '97, Frdr. Kühmstedt 1809 (at Oldisleben), A. W. Gottschalg '27 (at Mechelroda), Karl Götze '36, Max Meyer '50 (at Olbersleben), K. E. Goepfert '59, Karl Scheidemantel '59, etc.

Histories by Mirus, 1887-1902 (Liszt-Museum), Burkhardt, 1891 (theater and opera under Goethe's direction in 1791-1817), Bojanowski, 1903 (in Bach's time), Raabe, 1905-09, La Mara, 1906, Bartels; 1908, Hofer, 1914, Aber, 1921, and the Festschrift at the Jubilee of the Musikschule in 1922. See also lives of Bach and of Liszt.

Weissenfels. Small Thuringian town (20 m. southwest of Leipzig), in 1657-1746 the residence of the music-loving dukes of Saxe-Weissenfels (interchanging with Halle).

Among the court-directors during this time were

J. P. Krieger 1680- and Kobelius 1725-31. It was in 1692 that Handel was brought here on a visit by his father.

History by A. Werner, 1911 (to about 1800).

Wells. Small cathedral-town in the west of England (20 m. south of Bristol).

The roll of organists at the Cathedral begins before 1500 and includes John Oker 1620-40, '60-63, the Broderips 1713-26 and '41-74, the Perkinses 1781-1860, Lavington 1860-, P. C. Buck '95- and T. H. Davis '99-. The latter is conductor of choral and orchestral societies.

Wiesbaden. Noted health-resort near the Rhine (close to Mayence, but on the right bank), the principal city of the former duchy of Hesse-Nassau, in recent times having a varied musical life, including opera, orchestral and choral concerts and many music-schools.

Among the court-directors (opera or orchestra) have been Chrn. Rummel 1815-41, Schindelmeisser '51-53, J. B. Hagen '56-64, '67-70, W. Jahn '64-81, Frz. Mannstädt '87-, Rebiček '93-, Neve 1903-, Franckenstein 1907-08, Mannstädt 1897- etc. The Städtische Kurkapelle has been led by Kéler-Béla 1863-, L. Lüstner '74-1905 and Schuricht 1912-.

Among the choral societies are the Cäcilienverein, founded in 1848, led by L. Wolff 1880-, F. Marburg '83-84 and Kogel 1908-, and the Lehrerverein, led by Spangenberg since 1888. The older Konservatorium, founded in 1870, has been directed by Freudenberg 1870-, Taubmann '86-, A. Fuchs '90-, Ed. Reuss '99-1901 and latterly A. Michaelis. From this branched off another about 1890, directed by H. Spangenberg. There are many other schools.

Birthplace of Ernst Perabo 1845, Jul. Buths '51, Louis Maas '52, Ferd. Meister '71, Edgar Wollgandt '80, Frdr. Martin '88, etc.

A Festschrift was issued at the Jubilee of the Cäcilienverein in 1898.

Winchester. Historic city in the south of England (10 m. north of Southampton), at one period the center of the early English government, long noted for its fine cathedral and for its important College.

The organists at the Cathedral begin to be recorded about 1600; they include Chr. Gibbons 1638-61, Randall '66-, Reading '75-, D. Rosingrave '82-, V. Richardson '92-, J. Bishop 1729- Jas. Kent '37-, Fussell '74-, Chard 1802-, S. S. Wesley '49-, G. B. Arnold '65- and Wm. Prendergast 1902-. Most of these (as far as Wesley) have also been organists at the College, but the recent incumbents there have been Wm. Hutt 1865- and E. T. Sweeting 1901-.

Birthplace of Jas. Kent 1700, G. W. Chard '65, H. G. Nixon '96, G. M. Garrett 1834, H. E. Wooldridge '45 and C. L. Williams '53.

Windsor. Small town on the Thames (20 m. west of London), famous as the seat of the historic Windsor Castle, the chief of the royal residences, and of St. George's Chapel where is maintained a Chapel Royal (parallel to that at Whitehall or St. James's in London).

The organists at St. George's have included Merbecke ?1541-, Rich. Farrant '64-80, Giles '85-, Wm. Child 1632-97, Ed. Webb 1756-, Aylward '88-, Sexton 1801-24, G. J. Elvey '35-, Parratt '82- and E. H. Fellowes 1922-.

At Eton College (in the village across the Thames from Windsor) the music has since the 17th century been in charge of organists or other musicians from St. George's. But since 1867 the choir at Eton has been independent, the choirmasters or precentors being Hayne 1867-, Maclean '72-, Barnby '75-, C. H. Lloyd '92- and Basil Johnson 1914-.

Worcester. Noted cathedral-city in the west of England (midway between Gloucester and Birmingham), one of the meeting-places of the Three Choirs' Festivals.

At the Cathedral records of organists occur as far back as the 15th century; among the longer or otherwise notable terms are those of Thos. Tomkins 1596-1644?, Wm. Hayes 1731-34, E. Isaac '47-, Pitt '93-, Jer. Clarke 1806-, Kenge '07-, C. E. J. Clarke '13-, Wm. Done '44-, Hugh Blair '95-, and I. A. Atkins '97-.

The conductors of the triennial Festivals have usually been the organists then in service at the Cathedral (from Hayes onward). Works here first given include Sullivan's Prodigal Son, '69, C. H. Lloyd's Hero and Leander, '84, Cowen's Ruth, '87, J. F. Bridge's Repentance of Nineveh, '90, Elgar's Light of Life, '96, Walford Davies' Temple, 1902, etc. Birthplace of Nath. Giles 1550?, John Hullah 1812, Wm. Done '15, A. J. Caldicott '42, Edward Elgar '57 (at Broadheath), etc.

Worcester, Mass. The third city in New England (45 m. west of Boston), the seat since about 1865 of annual festivals that have had national importance.

The conductors of the Festivals have been Zerrahn 1866-, Chadwick '98-, Wallace Goodrich 1902-, Mees '08- and N. P. Coffin '19-23, with many assistants, including Victor Herbert in '89-91, Kneisel in '92-1908 and Gustav Strube in 1909-15. A large number of works by American composers have here been first given, besides a long list of other choral works of importance. G. A.

Würzburg. Historic city of northwestern Bavaria (midway between Nuremberg and Frankfurt), formerly the capital of a powerful bishopric and principality (in 1806-15 a grand-duchy), having a cathedral, a university, opera-seasons, orchestral and choral activity and a conservatory of long history.

In 1802 Frdr. Witt became court-director under the prince-bishop, from '06 to the new grand-duke and in 1815-37 to the municipality.

At the Cathedral K. F. Weinberger was choir-master in 1886-1908.

Conductors at the Stadttheater have varied frequently, as of the Städt. Orchester.

The Musikschule was started in 1804 as an Akademisches Musikinstitut (based on a Collegium Musicum begun in 1797) and in 1875 was made a royal conservatory; its directors have been Fröhlich 1804–, Bratsch '59–, Th. Kirchner '73–, Kliebert '76–, Meyer-Obersleben 1907– and H. Zilcher '20–. There is also a Zentral-Singschule, directed since about 1900 by Heuler.

Birthplace of F. T. Richter 1649, G. J. Vogler 1749, J. F. X. Sterkel '50, Emma Seiler 1821, Lilli and Marie Lehmann '48, '51, Ad. Sandberger '64, J. G. Meurer '71, etc.

Histories by Dennerlein, 1853 (opera), Kliebert, 1904 (at the centenary of the Musikschule), and O. Kaul (in preparation).

York. Famous city in northern England (midway between Lincoln and Durham), the seat of an archbishopric and at several junctures a seat of government for the country, having a remarkable cathedral and considerable concert-life.

At the Cathedral or Minster organists are on record since the middle of the 16th century, among them Nares 1734–, John Camidge '56–, Matthew Camidge 1803–, John Camidge (2d) '42–, E. G. Monk '59–, John Naylor '83–, Noble '98– and E. C. Bairstow 1913–. The large organ was erected about 1840, under the second John Camidge (then deputy for his father); see description by Monk (1863).

Festivals have been held here in 1791–1803 (annually), 1823, '25, '28, and '35. G.

The Musical Society, founded about 1880 by R. S. Burton and led by him till '92, was continued under Naylor and Noble. Since 1913 Bairstow has been active in this as in many other organizations.

Birthplace of the three Camidges 1735, '64 and '90, Jos. Barnby 1838, Wm. Creser '44 and Alan Gray '55.

Zerbst. Small city in Anhalt (20 m. south-east of Magdeburg), till 1797 the capital of the principality of Anhalt-Zerbst and later a residence of the dukes of Anhalt, having considerable music centering in the court.

Among the court-musicians are to be named Fasch 1722– and J. G. Röllig '58–90 as directors under the old régime, and Preitz, from 1885–cantor at the Hofkirche and in 1897–1916 court-director. In 1894–1916 the latter was also conductor of the Oratorienverein.

Birthplace of Karl Fasch 1736 and Frz. Preitz 1856.

Histories by Waschke, 1906 (in Zerbst, Jahrbuch), and W. Werner, 1920 (in Zeitschr. f. Musikwissensch.).

Zittau. Small commercial city in eastern Saxony (close to the Bohemian line, 50 m. east of Dresden), formerly prominent as one of the league of towns in Oberlausitz (almost completely destroyed in 1757).

Among the musicians drawn here in early days were Demantius as town-cantor in 1597–1604, Hammerschmidt as organist at the Johanniskirche in 1639–75 and Joh. Krieger as organist and choirmaster at the Peter-Paulskirche in 1681–1735.

Birthplace of Melch. Franck 1573?, Frdr. and Joh. Schneider 1786, '89 (at Altwaltersdorf and Altgersdorf), Hnr. Marschner '95, E. F. Richter 1808 (at Grossschönau), Th. Hentschel '30 (at Schirgiswalde), K. A. Tottmann '37, G. A. Thomas '42 (at Reichenau), Max Fiedler '59, etc.

See article by P. Fischer in the Vierteljahrschr. 1889.

Zürich. The largest city in Switzerland and capital of the canton of Zurich, historically notable as the place of origin for the Swiss Reformation in the early 16th century and in the 19th notable for its intellectual and educational activities, having a university, regular opera-seasons, a conservatory and much concert-life. For about ten years from 1849 it was Wagner's residence during his exile from Germany.

Recent directors at the Stadttheater have been L. Kempter 1875– and Denzler 1915–.

The concert-headquarters is the Tonhalle, where the subscription-concerts have been led by Frdr. Hegar 1865– and Andreä 1906–. Among the many choral organizations are the Männerchor, led by Attenhofer 1866– and Andreä 1904–21, the Harmonie (also men's voices), led by Gust. Weber 1872–87 and Fassbaender 1911–20, the Stadt-Sängerverein, led by Hegar 1865– and Andreä 1902–, and the Lehrergesangverein, led by Schoeck ?1910– and Denzler '18–.

The Konservatorium, founded in 1876 as the Städtische Musikschule, has been directed by Frdr. Hegar 1876– (from 1897 with Attenhofer as colleague) and Andreä 1914–. The Ausbildungsklassen have been led by Robt. Freund 1875– and Möckel 1912–.

Among the music-directors at the University have been W. Baumgartner in 1859–67 and Andreä since 1913, while lectures have been given since 1908 by D. Radecke and since 1910 by Ed. Bernoulli (the latter from 1921 having the title of professor).

Here in 1812 was formed the Allgemeine Musik-Gesellschaft, which ultimately replaced the earlier Schweizerische Musik-Gesellschaft of Lucerne as the leading organization of its kind in Switzerland. It has published annual Neujahrsstücke (history by Steiner in the issues for 1912–13).

Birthplace of Ldw. Senfl 1492?, Jacob Zeugheer 1805, Rud. Ganz '74, R. F. Davico '92, etc.

Histories by Stierlin, 1855–58, H. Weber, 1874–75, Nigghi, 1886–92, A. Steiner, 1901–13, H. Klausner, 1914, Fehr, 1916–22, and Farnet, 1918 (Harmonie).

APPENDIX C

OPERAS AND ORATORIOS SINCE 1900

The following list of works is primarily a classified index to references under composers in Part II, designed to help in locating works by date and place and to illustrate vividly how extensive and cosmopolitan production in one of the larger forms has become. Similar lists might perhaps be attempted of works in other forms, but the making of them would be more difficult. In the present list operettas and cantatas are meant to be excluded, but in many cases the distinction is not clear. Sacred works are designated by an asterisk. The year and the place given refer always to the first production.

The total number here listed is nearly 1000, produced at over 150 different places. It is to be noted, however, that 500 were first given at but 17 places and nearly two-thirds at but 27 places. The following summary may be of interest:

Paris, 101; Milan, 51; London, 39; Rome, 37; Prague, 34; Vienna, 31; Dresden, 28; Berlin, 27; Turin, 20; New York, 20; Monte Carlo, 19; Munich, 18; Hamburg, 17; Karlsruhe, Pest and Moscow, each 16; Brussels, 15; Stuttgart, 14; Frankfurt, 13; Cologne, Leipzig, Petrograd and Barcelona, each 12; Strasburg, Kassel, Warsaw, Venice and Buenos Aires, each 10; etc.

1900

d'Albert; Kain (Berlin)
 " Improvisator (Berlin)
 Blockx; Tijl Uylenspiegel (Brussels)
 Bretón; Raquel (Madrid)
 Chapi; Circe (Madrid)
 Charpentier; Louise (Paris)
 Chausson; Roi Arthus (Karlsruhe)
 Coquard; Jahel (Lyons)
 Dall' Olio; Atal-Kar (Turin)
 Dibbern; Odja (Amsterdam)
 Elgar; * Dream of Gerontius (Birmingham)
 Erb, M. J.; Abendglocken (Strasbourg)
 Erlanger, C.; Juif Polonaise (Paris)
 Faure; Prométhée (Béziers)
 Fedeli; Varsovia (Rome)
 Ferretto; Zingari (Modena)
 Ferroni; Carbonaro (Milan)
 Fibich; Fall of Ancona (Prague)
 Fibich; Officier der Königin (Dresden)
 Fielitz; Stille Dorf (Hamburg)
 Galeotti; Anton (Milan)
 Grelinger; Nicolas Nickleby
 Hartmann, P.; * Petrus (Rome)
 Hummel, F.; Beichte (Berlin)
 Ippolitov-Ivanov; Asya (Moscow)
 Kempler; Sansculottes (Zurich)
 Korestchenko; Ice Palace (Moscow)
 Lange-Müller; Viking Blood (Copenhagen)
 Leonecavallo; Zaza (Milan)
 Lozzi; Vergini (Rome)
 Lucatello; Vittima (Venice)
 Massenet; * Terre Promise (Paris)
 Mendelssohn, A.; Bärenhäuter (Berlin)
 Meyer-Stolzenau; Nachtwächter (Magdeburg)
 Noskowski; Livia Quintilla (Warsaw)
 Panizza; Medio Evo Latino (Genoa)
 Perosi; * Entrada di Cristo (Milan)
 " * Strage degli Innocenti (Milan)
 Puccini; Tosca (Rome)
 Rabaud; * Job (Paris)
 Rachmaninov; Geiziger Ritter (Moscow)

Ravera; Pierrette Somnambule (Paris)
 Rimsky-Korsakov; Märchen vom Zaren Saltan (Moscow)
 Sahlender; Mummelsee (Heidelberg)
 Schjelderup; Norwegische Hochzeit (Prague)
 Simon, A.; Fischer (Moscow)
 Soffredini; Coppa d'Oro (Milan)
 Stanford; Much Ado About Nothing (London)
 Suk, V.; Lesnoi Car (Kiev, Kharkov)
 Sullivan; Rose of Persia (London)
 Thomé; Chaperon Rouge (Paris)
 Trnšek; Andrea Crini (Prague)
 Vives; Euda d'Uriach (Barcelona)
 Warren, R. H.; Phyllis (New York)
 Wolf-Ferrari; Cenerentola (Venice)
 Zelenski; Janek (Lemberg)
 Zemlinski; Es war einmal (Vienna)
 Zimmermann, B.; Wintermärchen (Erfurt)

1901

Albini; Maricon (Agram)
 Bauszern; Dürer in Venedig (Weimar)
 Blockx; Bruid der Zee (Antwerp)
 Bruneau; Ouagan (Paris)
 Buongiorno; Mädchenherz (Kassel)
 Chadwick; Judith (Worcester, Mass.)
 Coronaro, Antonio; Falco di Calabria (Vicenza)
 Cui; Feast in Time of Plague (Moscow)
 Dluski; Urwasi (Lemberg)
 Dorn, O.; Näradal (Kassel)
 Dvořák; Water-Witch, or Russalka (Prague)
 Erb, M. J.; Eifersüchtig (Leipzig)
 " Riese Schletto (Strasbourg)
 " Zaubermantel (Strasbourg)
 Flondor; Mosul Ciccarlan (Czernowitz)
 Förster, A.; Goremski Slavik (Laibach?)
 Georges; Charlotte Corday (Paris)
 German; Emerald Isle (London)
 Giner; Soñador (Valencia)
 Grammann; Auf neutralen Boden (Hamburg)
 Hûe; Roi de Paris (Paris)
 Klughardt; * Judith
 Kovalevic; On the Old Bleaching-Ground (Prague)
 Lacombe, L.; Korrigan (Paris)
 Leoni, F.; Id and Little Christiana (London)
 Leroux; Astarté (Brussels)
 Major; Lisbeth (Pest)
 " Erysika (Pest)
 Mascagni; Maschere (Rome, etc.)
 Massenet; Grisélidis (Paris)
 Mohaupt; Der Graf von Gleichen (Reichenberg)
 Neumann, F.; Brautwerbung (Linz)
 Neuville; Aveugle
 Nougès; Roy du Papagey (Bordeaux)
 Oberleithner; Ghitana (Cologne)
 Orefice; Chopin (Milan)
 Paderewski; Manru (Dresden)
 Perosi; * Mosè (Milan)
 Pitzner; Rose vom Liebesgarten (Elberfeld)
 Pierné; Fille de Tabarin (Paris)
 Saint-Saëns; Barbares (Paris)
 Schaefer, A.; Zigeuner (Petrograd)
 Smyth; Wald (Dresden)
 Strauss, R.; Feuersnot (Dresden)
 Sullivan; Esmeralda (London)
 Thuille; Gülgeline (Bremen)
 Valle-Riestra; Ollanta (Lima)
 Wagner, S.; Herzog Wildfang (Munich)
 Weis; Polnischer Jude (Prague)
 Zaytz; Primorka (Agram)
 Zenger; Eros und Psyche (Munich)

1902

Alfano; * Risurrezione (Rome, Berlin)
 Bauszern; Herbert und Hilda (Mannheim)
 Behm; Marientkind
 Berutti; Khrisé (Buenos Aires)

Blech: Das war Ich (Dresden)
 Bunning: Princess Osra (London)
 Cileà: Adriana Lecouvreur (Milan)
 Coquard: Troupe Joliceur (Paris)
 Davies, H. W.: \ The Temple* (London)
 Donaudy: Theodor Körner (Hamburg)
 Enna, A.: Ung Elskov (Copenhagen)
 Fall: Frau Denise (Berlin)
 Forster, J.: Der Tod Mon (Vienna)
 Franchetti: Germania (Milan)
 German: Merrie England (London)
 Gilson: Gens de Mer, or Seevolk (Brussels)
 Godard: Guelphes (Rouen)
 Godmark, K.: Gütz von Berlichingen (Pest)
 Hahn, R.: Carmélite (Paris)
 Hallén: Valborgsmässon (Stockholm)
 Hartmann, F.: \ Franziska* (Rome)
 Hillemacher (frères): Orsola (Paris)
 Humperdinck: Dornröschen (Frankfurt)
 Kaiser, A.: Billet de Joséphine (Paris)
 Kazatchenko: Pan Sotnik (Petrograd)
 Kirohner, H.: Stephania (Hermannstadt)
 Kistler: Arm Elsiein (Schwerin)
 Klauwell, O.: Heimliche Richter (Elberfeld)
 Koczalski: Rymond (Elberfeld)
 Koessler: Münzenfranz (Strasbourg)
 Kovafovic: Fraquita (Prague)
 Lazzari, R.: Contessa d'Égmont (Trent)
 Massenot: Jongleur de Notre Dame (Monte Carlo)
 Moör: Pompadour (Cologne)
 " Andreas Hofer (Cologne)
 Mraček: Gldserner Pantoffel (Brünn)
 Nápravnik: Francesca da Rimini (Petrograd)
 Neuville: Willis
 Orefice: Cecilia (Vicenza)
 Pedrell: Pyreniden (Barcelona)
 Ravera: Sotie de Bridoye (Paris)
 Rendano: Consuelo (Turin)
 Reznicek: Till Eulenspiegel (Berlin)
 Rimsky-Korsakov: Sernika (Petrograd)
 " Koshichei (Moscow)
 Silver: Belle au Bois Dormant (Marseilles)
 " \ Tobie* (Marseilles)
 Soffredini: Graziella (Pavia)
 Stelzner: Rübezahl (Dresden)
 Tarantini, G.: Principessa di Valderi
 Thomas, V.: Eos and Gwernil (London)
 Van der Meulen: Liva (Ghent)
 Zimmermann, B.: Maja (Elberfeld)
 Zingel: Margot (Frankfort-on-Oder)

1903

Abrányi, E.: King of the Mist (Pest) d'Albert: Tiefland (Prague)
 Auteri-Manzocchi: Severo Torelli (Bologna)
 Butruti: Aphrodite (Buenos Aires)
 Blech: Alpenkönig und Menschenfeind (Dresden)
 Blockx: Capel (Antwerp)
 Bossi: \ Pardiso Perduto*
 Bretón: Farinelli (Madrid)
 Browne: Corsicana (New York)
 Buongiorno: Michel Angelo und Rolla (Kassel)
 Chaumet: Petite Maison (Paris)
 Coleridge-Taylor: \ The Atonement* (Hereford)
 Coronaro, Gaetano: Curioso Accidente (Turin)
 Cui: Mam'zelle Fifi (Petrograd)
 Davidov, A.: Versunkene Glocke (Petrograd)
 Davis: Zaporogues (Antwerp)
 Dost: Ultranda (Plauen)
 Dupuis, A.: Jean Michel (Brussels)
 Elgar: \ The Apostles* (Birmingham)
 Fiebach: Robert und Bertram (Danzig)
 Gallignani: Quaref (Milan)
 Gast: Walpurgisnacht (in the Harz)
 Geisler: Prinzessin Ilse (Posen)
 German: Princess of Kensington (London)
 Giannetti: Don Marzio (Venice)
 Gilson: Prinzes Zonnenschijn (Antwerp)
 Giordano: Siberia (Milan)
 Granados: Folleto (Barcelona, in part)
 Grelinger: Arbre de Noël (Amsterdam)
 Grelchaninov: Dobrynya Nikitich (Moscow)
 d'Harcourt: Tasse (Monte Carlo)
 Hubay, J.: Moorsroschen (Pest)
 Hüe: Titania (Paris)
 d'Indy: Étranger (Brussels, Paris)

Jarno: Zerbrochener Krug (Hamburg)
 Kaiser, F. E.: An der Grenze (Cologne)
 Kaskel: Dusli und der Babeli (Munich)
 Klose, F.: Fischer und seine Frau (Karlsruhe)
 Kramm: Leonore (Düsseldorf)
 Kulenkampf: Annamarie
 Lambert, L.: Flamenco (Paris)
 " Marseillaise (Paris)
 Lazzari, S.: Ensercelé (Paris)
 Leroux: Reine Fiamette (Paris)
 Manén: Giovanna di Napoli (Barcelona)
 " Acté (Barcelona)
 Marinuzzi: Barberina (Palermo)
 Maurice: Weisse Flagge (Kassel)
 McAlpin: Cross and Crescent (London)
 Nielsen: Saul und David (Copenhagen)
 Palicot: Vendetta (Paris, in salon)
 Potjes: Ariane (Ghent)
 Potgiesser: Heimkehr (Cologne)
 Rauchenecker: Zlatorog (Elberfeld)
 Rebikov: Yolka (Moscow)
 Reichwein: Vasantasena (Breslau)
 Rossi, C.: Nadeya (Prague)
 Samara: Storia d'Amore (Milan)
 Scholz, B. E.: Anno 1757 (Berlin)
 Schytte: Mameluk (Vienna)
 Smareglia: Oceana (Milan)
 Somborn: Philenor (Strasbourg)
 Stelzner: Swatowits Ende (Kassel)
 Stewart, H. J.: Montezuma
 Suda: Lešdinsky Kovař (Pilsen)

1904

Bauszner: Bundschuh (Frankfurt)
 Bayer: Polizeichef (Vienna)
 Burkhardt: König Drosselbart (Cologne)
 De Lara: Réveil de Bouddha (Ghent)
 Dupont, G.: Cabrera (Milan)
 Dvořák: Armida (Prague)
 Erb, M. J.: Vogesentanne (Strasbourg)
 Erlanger, C.: Fils de l'Étoile (Paris)
 Erlanger, L.: Ritter Olaf (Prague)
 Ferrari-Trecate: Piccolo Montenaro (Pesaro)
 Filiassi: Manuel Menendez (Milan)
 Friedheim: Tanzerin (Cologne)
 Gaili, A.: David (Milan)
 Gianetti: \ Il Cristo alla Festa di Purim* (Rio di Janeiro)
 Hartmann, P.: \ Das letzte Abendmahl* (Rome)
 Höfer: Sarema (Ratisbon)
 Kirchner, H.: Viola (Hermannstadt)
 Kistler: Vogt auf Mühlstein (Düsseldorf)
 Knorr, I.: Dunja (Coblenz)
 Lehmann, Liza: Sergeant Brue (London)
 Leoncavallo: Roland von Berlin (Berlin)
 Lorenzi-Fabris: Rè s'Annoia (Trieste)
 Lozzi: Mirandola (Turin)
 Mandić: Peter Svätčič (Laibach)
 McCoy: Hamadryads
 Melcer: Marja (Warsaw)
 Neitzel: Barbarina (Wiesbaden)
 Nougues: Thamyras (Bordeaux)
 Ostrčil: Wlasta's End (Prague)
 Palicot: Rose de Provence (Paris)
 Parma: Amazons of Zarin (Agram)
 Pedrell: Celestina (Madrid)
 Perger: Stählerne Schloss (Vienna)
 Perosi: \ Stabat Mater* (Rome)
 Pons: Épreuve (Nice)
 Puccini: Madama Butterfly (Milan)
 Rabaud: Fille de Roland (Paris)
 Rimsky-Korsakov: Woiwode (Petrograd)
 Röhr: Vater Unser (Munich)
 Romani, R.: Rosana (Leghorn)
 Rousseau, S. A.: Milia (Paris)
 Saint-Saëns: Hélène (Monte Carlo)
 Schuchardt: Bergmannsbraut (Gotha)
 Sommer: Rübezahl (Brunswick)
 Spangenberg: Korsische Hochzeit (Wiesbaden)
 Statkowski: Philemis (Warsaw)
 Tarantini, L.: Manuel Garcia (Naples)
 Taubmann: \ Sängervetke* (Elberfeld)
 Trémisot: Pyrame et Thisbé (Monaco)
 Venezia: Domino Azzurro (Milan)
 Vogrich: Buddha (Weimar)
 Volborth: Zaubersaite (Karlsruhe)
 Wagenaar: Doge van Venedie (Utrecht)

Wagner, S.: Kobold (Hamburg)
Waldstein, W. V.: Tonietta (Linz)
Weis: Dorfmusikanten (Prague?)
Woikowski-Biedau: Helga (Wiesbaden)

1905

Albeniz, I.: Érémilage Fleurie
d'Albert: Flauto Solo (Prague)
Alfano: Principe Zilah (Genoa)
Blech: Aschenbrödel (Prague)
Boschetti: Brüder (Linz)
Bruneau: Enfant Roi (Paris)
Chelius: Vernarrte Prinzess (Wiesbaden)
Coerno: Zenobia (Bremen)
Coppola, R.: Fidanzata di Corinto (Turin)
Coronaro, Arrigo: Turridu (Turin)
Draeske: Fischer und Kalif (Prague)
Dupont, A. (2): Morgane (Antwerp)
Dupaix, A.: Martylle (Brussels)
Fall: Irrlicht (Mannheim)
Förster, J. B.: Jessica (Prague)
Gastaldon: Stellina (Florence)
Georges: Miarka (Paris)
Gneechi: Cassandra (Bologna)
Hartmann, P.: * Tod des Herrn (Rome)
Hirschmann: Petite Bohème, or Musette (Paris)
Humperdinck: Heirat wider Willen (Berlin)
Jacques-Dalcroze: Onkel Dazumal (Cologne)
Kaiser, A.: Schwarze Nina (Elberfeld)
Kistler: Baldurs Tod (Düsseldorf)
Krafft-Lortzing: Goldschuh (Essen)
LeBorne, F.: Girondins (Lyons)
Leoni, F.: Oracolo (London)
Leroux: Vénus et Adonis (Nîmes)
Levadé: Hérétiques (Béziers)
Machado, A.: Venere (Lisbon)
Malherbe: Amour au Camp (Le Mans)
Marty: Daria (Paris)
Mascagni: Amica (Monte Carlo)
Massenet: Chérubin (Monte Carlo)
Messager: Dragons de l'Impératrice (Paris)
Montefiori: Cecilia (Ravenna)
Montemezzi: Giovanni Gallurese (Turin)
Mugnone: Vita Bretona (Naples)
Noguera: Ines de Castro (Barcelona)
Nougues: Mort de Tintagiles (Paris)
Ohnesorg: Gauklerin (Riga)
Orefice: Mosè (Genoa)
Pachierotti: Albair (Milan)
Respighi: Rè Enzo (Bologna)
Samara: Mle. de Belle Isle (Genoa)
Soltys: Republik von Babin (Lemberg)
Stojanovitz: Tiger (Pest)
Strauss, R.: Salome (Dresden)
Suda: Bar Kochba (Pilsen)
Szabados (with Szendy): Maria (Pest)
Thomas, V.: Guenivere (London)
Van der Meulen: Dolmen (Ghent)
" " " Viesgaard (Ghent)
Wagner, S.: Bruder Lustig (Hamburg)
Webber: Fiorella (London)
Widor: Pêcheurs de St. Jean (Paris)
Wintzer: Marientkind (Halle)
Wöss: Lenzlüge (Elberfeld)
Zimmermann, B.: Sakuntala (Erfurt)

1906

Converse: Pipe of Desire (Boston)
De Lara: Sanga (Nice)
Dore: Armaillis (Paris)
Dorn, O.: Schöne Müllerin (Kassel)
Edwards, H. J.: * The Risen Lord (Exeter)
Elgar: * The Kingdom (Birmingham)
Erlanger, C.: Aphrodite (Paris)
d'Erlanger: Tess (Naples)
Ferrari, Gabriella: Tartare (Paris)
Ferretto: Idillio Tragico (Venice)
Février: Roi Aveugle (Paris)
Fino: Il Battista (Turin)
Fourdrain: Echo (Paris)
Franchetti: Figlia di Jorio (Milan)
Gorter: Süsse Gift (Cologne)
Hansmann: Nazarener (Brunswick)
" Unter der Reichsfahne (Hohentwiel)
Hubay, J.: Lavothas Liebe (Pest)
Istel: Fahrende Schüler (Karlsruhe)

Lehmann, Liza: Vicar of Wakefield (London)
Leoncavallo: Jeunesse de Figaro (in America)
Leroux: Théodora (Monte Carlo)
" William Ratcliff (Nice)
Major: Széchi Maria (Klausenburg)
Massenet: Ariane (Paris)
McLean: Liebesgeiger (Mayence)
Meyer-Stolzenau: Klein-Däumling (Hanover)
Neßvera: Mountain-Mont (Brünn)
Noguera: Valieri (Barcelona)
Nowowiejski: * Auffindung des Kreuzes
Pahissa: Presé de Lleida (Barcelona)
Pons: Laura (Pau)
Rachmaninov: Francesca da Rimini (Moscow)
Rasse: Deidamia (Brussels)
Rékay: Nagy-Idai Cigányok (Pest)
Saint-Saëns: Ancêtre (Monte Carlo)
Scheve: * Tod und Auferstehung Christi
Schillings: Moloch (Dresden)
Silver: Clos (Paris)
Smyth: Standrecht (Leipzig)
Statkowski: Maria (Warsaw)
Tommasini: Medea (Trieste)
Woikowski-Biedau: Langer Karl (Berlin)
Wolf-Ferrari: Vier Grobiane (Munich)
Zajíček: Junger Helmbrecht (Graz)

1907

Abrányi E.: Monna Vanna (Pest)
d'Albert: Tragaldabas (Hamburg)
Bittner: Rote Gret (Vienna)
Bruneau: Nais Micoulins (Monte Carlo)
" Faute de l'Abbé Mouret (Paris)
Cilèa: Gloria (Milan)
Cottrau: Lega Lombarda (Rome)
De Lara: Solea (Cologne)
Dellius: Romeo und Julia auf dem Dorfe (Berlin)
Del Valle de Paz: Oriana (Florence)
Dukas: Ariane et Barbe-Bleu (Paris)
Edwards, J.: Patriot (Boston)
Fourdrain: Légende du Point d'Argentan (Paris)
German: Tom Jones (London)
Giordano: Marcella (Milan)
Gleason: Otho Visconti (Chicago)
Goepfert: Müller von Sans Souci (Weimar)
Grelinger: Hoffnung auf Segen (The Hague)
Gründel: Schönen von Fogaras (Dresden)
Heydrich: Frieden (Mayence)
Hillemacher (frères): Circé (Paris)
Kienzl: Knecht Rupprechts Werkstatt (Graz)
Knorr, I.: Hochzeit (Prague)
LeBorne, F.: Catalans (Paris)
Leroux: Chemineau (Paris)
Lorentz: Mönch von Sendomir (Karlsruhe)
Lorenz, K. A.: * Das Licht
Lucatello: Giuliere (Lucatelfranco)
Mancinelli: Paolo e Francesca (Bologna)
Massenet: Thérèse (Monte Carlo)
Melartin: Aino (Helsingfors)
Messager: Fortunio (Paris)
Monleone: Cavalleria Rusticana (Amsterdam)
Müller v. d. Ocker: Nixe (Magdeburg)
Nielsen, A. C.: Maskeraden (Copenhagen)
Noskowski: Wyrok (Warsaw)
Orefice: Pane d'Altrui (Venice)
Othegraven: Schlafende Prinzessin (Cologne)
Palicot: Balafré (Lyons)
Perosi: * Transitus Animæ (Rome)
Prokop: Forest Dream (Prague)
Ratez: Dragon Vert (Lille)
Reichwein: Liebenden von Kandahar (Breslau)
Rimsky-Korsakov: Stadt Kitesch (Petrograd)
Scholz, B. E.: Mirandolina (Darmstadt)
Seppilli: Nave Rossa (Milan)
Setaccioli: Adrienna Lecouvreur (Rome)
Smareglia: Notte di S. Silvestro (Pola)
Sommer: Riquet mit dem Schopf (Brunswick)
Wetz: Ewiges Feuer (Düsseldorf)
Wydzga: Pan Tadeusz (Lemberg)
Zaytz: * First Sin (Agram)
Zelenski: Stara Basn (Lemberg)
Zumpe: Sawiri (Schwerin)

1908

Beer-Walbrunn: Don Quixote (Munich)
Berutti: Horrida Nox (Buenos Aires)

Blech: Versiegelt (Hamburg)
 Blockx: Baldie (Antwerp)
 Cui: Matteo Falcone (Moscow)
 Egger: Frau Holda (Vicenza)
 Ferretto: Violinata (Vicenza)
 " Fantasma (Vicenza)
 Fino: \ Noëmi e Ruth* (Bergamo)
 Freudenberg: Jahrmachtsfest (Bremen)
 Goldmark, K.: Wintermärchen (Vienna)
 Gorter: Paria (Strasbourg)
 Humperdinck: Königskinder (New York)
 Jaques-Dalcroze: Jumeaux de Bergame (Brussels)
 Knöchel: \ Sindflut*
 Knorr, I.: Durchs Fenster (Karlsruhe)
 Konta: Kaltes Herz (Prague)
 Lambert, L.: Penticosa (Paris)
 Laparra: Habanera (Paris)
 Malát: Veselé Námluvy (Prague)
 Marengo: Federico Struensee (Milan)
 Mariotte: Salomé (Lyons)
 Maurice, P.: Misé Brun (Stuttgart)
 Moór: Hochzeitsglocken (Kassel)
 Oberleithner: Abb Mouret (Magdeburg)
 Olsen: Leila (Christiania)
 Ostrčil: Kunala's Eyes (Prague)
 Pacchierotti: Eidelberga Mia (Genoa)
 Panizza: Aurora (Buenos Aires)
 Pedrollo: \ Terra Promessa* (Cremona)
 Rabaud: Premier Glaive (Béziers)
 Reiter: Totentanz (Dessau)
 Samara: Rhea (Florence)
 Schilling-Ziemssen: Sonnwendglut (Kolmar)
 Schjelderup: Frühlingsnacht (Dresden)
 Thermignon: \ S. Marco* (Venice)
 Thomas, V.: Enid (London)
 Vidal, P. A.: Ramses (Paris)
 Vogl, A.: Maja (Stuttgart)
 Wagner, S.: Sternengebot (Hamburg)
 Weweler: Grober Märker (Detmold)
 Zandonai: Grillo del Focolare (Turin)
 Zingel: Liebeszauber (Stralsund)

1909

d'Albert: Izeyl (Hamburg)
 Alfano: Principe Zilah (Genoa)
 Bittner: Markt der Liebe (Vienna)
 Brandts-Buys: Veilchenfest (Berlin)
 Braunfels: Prinzessin Brambilla (Stuttgart)
 Bronsart: Sühne (Dessau)
 Chapi: Margarita in Tornera (Madrid)
 Erlanger, C.: Bacchus Triumphant (Bordeaux)
 Ferrari, Gabriella: Cobzar (Monte Carlo)
 Février: Monna Vanna (Paris)
 Fourdrain: Glaneuse (Lyons)
 Franckenstein: Fortunatus (Pest)
 Georges: Myrrha (Paris)
 German: Moon-Fairies (London)
 Hadley: Safie (Mayence)
 Hildebrand, C.: Verheissung (Rostock)
 Hirschmann: Hernani (Paris)
 Holbrooke: Pierrot und Pierrette (London)
 Kastalsky: \ Furnace of Nabucho* (Moscow)
 Koczalski: Sühne (Mulhouse)
 Künneke: Robins Ende (Mannheim)
 Machado, A.: Borghesina (Lisbon)
 Manén: Packeltanz (Frankfurt)
 Massenot: Bacchus (Paris)
 McLean: Maitre Seiler (London)
 Mendelssohn, A.: Minneburg (Mannheim)
 Montemezzi: Hellera (Turin)
 Mracek: Traum (Berlin)
 Naylor, E. W.: Angelus (London)
 Noskowski: Battle at the Boundary-Wall (Warsaw)
 Nougues: Quo Vadis? (Nice)
 " Chiquito (Paris)
 Parma: Temple of Apollo (Agram)
 Pons: Mourette (Marseilles)
 Reuss, A.: Herzog Philipps Brautfahrt (Graz)
 Romani, R.: Zulma (Lghorn)
 Rozycki: Boleslaus der Kühne (Lemberg)
 Sabin: St. Patrick of Tara
 Salvayre: Solange (Paris)
 Schytte, L. T.: Student von Salamanka (Vienna)
 Séverac: Cœur du Moulin (Paris)
 Soltys: Maria (Lemberg)
 Strauss, R.: Salome (Dresden)

Strauss: Elektra (Dresden)
 Tincl: Katharina (Brussels)
 Waltershausen: Else Klapperzehen (Dresden)
 Wendland: Kluges Felleisen (Magdeburg)
 Wolf-Ferrari: Susannens Geheimnis (Munich)
 Wolff, M.: Heisses Eisen (Frankfurt)
 Zichy: Rakoczi (Pest)
 Zingel: Persepolis (Rostock)

1910

Berutti: Eroi (Buenos Aires)
 Bienstock: Zuleima (Karlsruhe)
 Bittner: Musikant (Vienna)
 Bloch, E.: Macbeth (Paris)
 Bréville: Eros Vainqueur (Brussels)
 Clarus: Wunschpeter (Brunswick)
 Coronaro, Gellio: Bertoldo (Milan)
 Cowen: \ The Veil* (Cardiff)
 Dost: Versunkenes Dorf (Plauen)
 Dupont, G.: Glu (Cannes)
 Dupuis, A.: Fidélaine (Liège)
 Fino: Festa del Grano (Turin)
 Florida: Paoletta (Cincinnati)
 Galeotti: Dorise (Brussels)
 Gialdini: Bufera (Pola)
 Gianetti: Lezione d'Amore (Bueno Aires?)
 Giordano: Mese Mariano (Palermo)
 Hûe: Miracle (Paris)
 Kaiser, A.: Stella Maris (Düsseldorf)
 Kaskel: Gefangener der Zarin (Dresden)
 " Nachtigall (Stuttgart)
 Kazanji: Miranda (Petrograd)
 Leoncavallo: Maia (Rome)
 " Malbruk (Rome)
 Lozzi: Bianca Cappello (Warsaw)
 Massenot: Don Quichotte (Monte Carlo)
 McCoy: Cave-Man
 Mikorey: König von Samarkand (Dessau)
 Monleone: Alba Eroica (Genoa)
 Neumann, F.: Liebeleit (Frankfurt)
 Nevin, A. F.: Poia (Berlin)
 Nougues: Auberge Rouge (Nice)
 Onofri: Biancafiore (Venice)
 Oosterzee: Gelöbnis (Weimar)
 Pahissa: Canigó (Barcelona)
 Palmgren: Daniel Hjort (Abo)
 Perosi: \ In Patris Memoriam* (Rome)
 Pierne: On ne Badine pas avec l'Amour (Paris)
 Prokop: Question (Prague)
 Puccini: Fanciulla del West (New York)
 Rauchenecker: Florentiner (Strasbourg)
 Respighi: Semirama (Bologna)
 Rimsky-Korsakov: Cog d'Or (Moscow)
 Santoliquido: Favola di Helga (Milan)
 Tarantini, L.: Marion de Lorme (Trani)
 Tønning: Leif Erikson (Seattle)
 Volbach: Kunst zu lieben (Düsseldorf)
 Wagner, S.: Banadietrich (Karlsruhe)
 Wöss: Flaviennes Abenteuer (Breslau)
 Zanella: Aura (Pesaro)
 Zelenski: Balandina (Lemberg)
 Zemlinsky: Kleider machen Leute (Vienna)
 Zich: Malérsky Nápád (Prague)
 Zöllner, H.: Frühhof (Antwerp)
 Zumpe: Gespens von Horodin (Hamburg)

1911

Arregni: Yolande (Madrid)
 Bartók: Ritter Blaubarts Berg
 Bittner: Bergsee (Vienna)
 Clarus: Hans Däumling (Brunswick)
 Converse, F. S.: Sacrifice (Boston)
 Cui: Captain's Daughter (Petrograd)
 Erlanger, C.: Aube Rouge (Rouen)
 Filiassi: Fuor di Neve (Milan)
 Franckenstein: Rahab (Hamburg)
 Gianetti: \ Nazareno* (Buenos Aires)
 Hansen: Frauenlist (Sondershausen)
 Herbert: Natoma (New York)
 Herman, R. L.: Sundari (Kassel)
 Hirschmann: Petits Étoiles (Paris)
 Ippolitov-Ivanov: Verrat (Moscow)
 Kienzl: Kuhreigen (Vienna)
 Laparra: Jota (Paris)
 Magnard: Bérénice (Paris)

Mascagni: Isabeau (Buenos Aires)
 Nougès: Vendetta (Marseilles)
 Pons: Voile de Bonheur (Paris)
 Ravel: Heure Espagnole (Paris)
 Rékay: Frater Georg (Pest)
 Saint-Saëns: Déjanire (Monaco/Paris)
 Strauss, R.: Rosenkavalier (Dresden)
 Tarantini, G.: Marianna (Bari)
 Terrasse: Transatlantiques (Paris)
 Thermignon: * Annunziata (Venice)
 Wendland: Vergessene Ich (Berlin)
 Wolf-Ferrari: Schmuck der Madonna (Munich)
 Zandonai: Conchita (Milan)
 Zaytz: Vater Unser
 Zepler: Monsieur Bonaparte (Leipzig)

1912

Abrányi: Paolo and Francesca (Pest) d'Albert: Verschenkte Frau (Vienna)
 " Liebesketten (Vienna)
 Bourgault-Ducoudray: Myrdin (Nantes)
 Burkhardt: Moselgretchen (Schwerin)
 Busoni: Brautwahl (Hamburg)
 Camussi: Du Barry (Milan)
 Caro: Hero und Leander (Breslau)
 Clarus: Zwerg Nase (Brunswick)
 Damosch, W.: Dove of Peace (Philadelphia)
 De Lara: Nalla (Paris)
 " Trois Masques (Marseilles)
 Dohnányi: Tante Simona (Dresden)
 Draeseke: * Christus (Berlin)
 Dubois, L.: Edénie (Antwerp)
 Dupont, G.: Farce du Cuvier (Brussels)
 Eeden: Rhena (Brussels)
 Enna, A.: Nattergalen (Copenhagen)
 Erb, M. J.: Prinzessin Flunkelri (Strasbourg)
 Erlanger, C.: Sorcière (Paris)
 d'Erlanger: Noël (Paris)
 Fourdrain: Vercingétorix (Nice)
 Gretchaninov: Sœur Béatrice (Moscow)
 Holbrooke: Children of Don (London)
 Huber, H.: Simplicius (Basel)
 Könnemann: Madonna mit dem Mantel (Ostrau)
 Künnecke: Circe (Munich)
 Lazzari: Lépreuse (Paris)
 Leoncavallo: Reginella delle Rose (Rome, Naples)
 " Zingari (London)
 Leroux: Carillonneur (Paris)
 Marsick, A.: Vendetta Corsa (Rome)
 Massenet: Roma (Paris)
 Mayer, J. A.: Magdalenenbrunnen (Augsburg)
 Meyer-Helmund: Heines Traumbilder (Berlin)
 " Taglioni (Berlin)
 Müller v. d. Ocker: Lurley (Magdeburg)
 Nougès: Aigle (Rouen)
 Oberleithner: Aphrodite (Vienna)
 Onofri: Assiuolo (Rome)
 Ofesice: Radda (Milan)
 Parelli: Dispettosi Amanti (Philadelphia)
 Parker, H. W.: Mona (New York)
 Perosi: * Dies Iste (Rome)
 Potjes: Lorenzo Murano (Antwerp)
 Radoux, C.: Oudelette (Brussels)
 Reiter, J.: Ich aber preise die Liebe (Dessau)
 Repart: Pays (Nancy)
 Sachs, M. E.: * Kains Schuld und Sühne (Munich)
 Schreker: Ferner Klang (Frankfurt)
 Seppilli: Cingallegra (Milan)
 Sommer: Waldschratt (Brunswick)
 Strauss, R.: Ariadne auf Naxos (Stuttgart)
 Ulrich: Cicada (London)
 Waghalter: Teufelsweg (Berlin)
 Waltershausen: Oberst Chabert (Frankfurt)
 Wendland: Schneider von Malta (Leipzig)
 Zandonai: Melenis (Milan)
 Zichy: Rodosto (Pest)
 Zöllner, H.: Zigeuner (Stuttgart)

1913

Alfano: Ombra di Don Giovanni
 Bittner: Abenteuer (Vienna)
 Brands-Buys: Glockenspiel (Dresden)
 Braunfels: Ülenspiegel (Stuttgart)
 Bretón: Taboré (Madrid)
 Carini: Baronessa

Charpentier: Julien (Paris)
 Cottreau: Cordelia (Padua)
 Damrosch, W.: Cyranos de Bergerac (New York)
 Draeseke: Merlin (Gotha)
 Dupont, G. (2): Alcéa
 Dupuis, A.: Chateau de Bretèche (Nice)
 Enna, A.: Gloria Arsena (Copenhagen)
 Falla: Vida Breve (Nice)
 Fauré: Pénélope (Paris)
 Ferrari, E.: Avaro (Milan)
 Fourdrain: Madame Roland (Rouen)
 " Contes de Perrault (Paris)
 Gailhard, A.: Sortilège (Paris)
 Gasco: Leggenda delle Sette Torri (Rome)
 Gastaldon: Reuccio di Caprilana (Turin)
 Gräner: Narrengericht (Vienna)
 Grelinger: Goldhansel (Mulhouse)
 Herber: Madeleine (New York)
 Hirschmann: Petite Nanon (Ghent)
 Hösel: Wieland der Schmied (Charlottenburg)
 Huber, H.: * Weissagung und Erfüllung
 Kaiser, A.: Theodor Körner (Kassel)
 Klenau: Sulamith (Munich)
 Künnecke: Cœur-As (Dresden)
 Lorentz: Beiden Autmaten (Karlsruhe)
 Lozzi: Elisir di Vita (Bologna)
 Major: Mila (Presburg)
 Mariotte: Vieux Roi (Lyons)
 Mascagni: Parisina (Milan)
 Massenet: Panurge (Paris)
 Maurice, P.: Lanval (Weimar)
 Mojsisovics: Tantchen Rosmarin (Brünn)
 Monleone: Arabesca (Rome)
 Montanari: Birichino di Parigi (Milan)
 Montemezzi: Amore dei Tre Rê (Milan)
 Müller v. d. Ocker: Jung Joseph (Magdeburg)
 Nešvera: * Job (Prague)
 Ollone: Retour (Angers)
 Pachierotti: Santo (Turin)
 Pahissa: Gala Placidia (Barcelona)
 Pons: Françoise (Lyons)
 Pratella: Lilia (Lugo)
 Reuchsel: Moisson Sanglante (Brussels)
 Saint-Saëns: * Terre Promise (Gloucester)
 Schattmann: Teufels Pergament (Weimar)
 Schreker: Spielwerk und Prinzessin (Vienna)
 Silver: Myriane (Nice)
 Tommasini: Uguale Fortuna (Rome)
 Tovey: Bride of Dionysus [published]
 Trémisot: Aureole (Trieste)
 Weigmann: Klarinettenmacher (Hamburg)
 Woikowski-Biedau: Nothemd (Dessau)
 Wolf-Ferrari: Liehaber als Arzt (Dresden)
 Wolff, M.: Heiliger (Hamburg)

1914

Andreä, Ratcliff, (Duisburg)
 Beer-Walbrunn: Ungeheuer (Karlsruhe)
 Behm: Geldbäns
 Bucci: Märken (Bergamo)
 Buceardo: Sogno d'Alma (Bueno Aires)
 Drake: Blind Girl of Castel-Cuillé (Chicago)
 Franchetti: Notte di Leggenda (Florence)
 Gluth: Horand und Hilde (Munich)
 Gräner: Don Juans letztes Abenteuer (Leipzig)
 Hervey: Ihona (London)
 Heydrich: Zufall (Halle)
 Holbrooke: Dylan (London)
 Istel: Des Tribunals Gebot (Mayence)
 Keussler: Gefängnisse (Prague)
 Korten: Blondin von Namur (Bremen)
 LeBorne, F.: Cléopâtre (Rouen)
 Leroux: Fille de Figaro (Paris)
 Mackenzie: Cricket on the Hearth (London)
 Malipiero: Canossa (Rome)
 Massenet: Cléopâtre (Monte Carlo)
 Messager: Béatrice (Monte Carlo)
 Mracek: Insel Abelé (Breslau)
 Nougès: Éclaircie (Paris)
 Pedrollo: Juana (Vicenza)
 Ponchielli: Mori di Venezia (Monte Carlo)
 Samara: Guerra in tempo di Guerra (Athens)
 Schmidt, Franz: Notre Dame (Vienna)
 Scholze: Hanna (Eger)
 Siegel, R.: Herr Dandolo (Essen)
 Sinding: Heiliger Berg (Dessau)

Smareglia: Abisso (Milan)
 Soffredini: Leone (Cesena)
 Spörr: Abt von Fiecht (Nuremberg)
 Stravinsky: Rossignol (Paris)
 Ulrich: Tsing-Tau (London)
 Waghalter: Jugend (Berlin)
 Weingartner: Kain und Abel (Darmstadt)
 Weis: Sturm auf die Mühle (Vienna)
 Weweler: * Sinfut (Detmold)
 Zajček: Ferdinand und Louise (Stuttgart)
 Zandonai: Francesca da Rimini (Turin)

1915

Bath: Young England (London)
 Carse: Fritiof (London)
 Fino: Parej del '69 (Turin)
 Giordano: Madame Sans-Gêne (New York)
 Jenkins, D.: * Moses
 Lehmann, Liza: Everyman (London)
 Mackenzie: * Tempation
 Mariotti: Tragedia Fiorentina (Rome)
 Nielsen, L.: Isabella (Copenhagen)
 Novák: Zimkovsky Rádek (Prague)
 Parker, H. W.: Fairyland (Los Angeles)
 " * Moven and the Grail
 Rodrigo: Becqueriana (Madrid)
 Romani: Pedra (Rome)
 Schillings: Mona Lisa (Stuttgart)
 Sigwart: Lieder des Euripides (Stuttgart)
 Waltershausen: Richardis (Karlsruhe)

1916

d'Albert: Toten Augen (Dresden)
 Benatzky: Schmiedin von Kent (Dresden)
 Bienstock: Sandro der Narr (Stuttgart)
 Brandts-Buys, J.: Drei Schneider von Schönaue (Dresden)
 Buchhalter: Lover's Knot (Chicago)
 Coates, A.: Sardanapalus (Petrograd)
 Dupuis, A.: Passion (Monte Carlo)
 Fino: Campana a Gloria (Turin)
 Granados: Goyescas (New York)
 Holst: Savitri (London)
 Huber, H.: Schöne Bellinda (Bern)
 Kaskel: Schmiedin von Kent (Dresden)
 Kienzel: Testament (Vienna)
 Korngold: Violanta (Munich)
 " Ring des Polykrates (Munich)
 Leoncavallo: Prestami tua Moglie (Montecatini)
 Leroux: Cadeaux de Noël (Paris)
 Monleone: Suona la Ritrata (Milan)
 Neitzel: Richter von Kaschau (Darmstadt)
 Novák: Karlstein (Prague)
 Perosi: * Giorni di Tribolazione (Milan)
 Prokoviev: Player (Petrograd)
 Rottenberg: Geschwister (Frankfurt)
 Schoeck: Erwin u. Ermine (Zurich)
 Stanford: Critic (London)
 Taubmann: Porzia (Frankfurt)
 Vollerthun: Veada (Kassel)
 Wagenaar: Cid (Utrecht)
 Weingartner: Dame Kobold (Darmstadt)

1917

Bucceri: Ondine (Naples)
 DeKoven: Canterbury Pilgrims (New York)
 Erlanger: Barbier de Deauville
 Hadley: Azora (Chicago)
 Hummel, F.: Gefilde der Seligen (Altenburg)
 d'Indy: * Mystère de St. Christophe (Paris)
 Ippolitov-Ivanov: Ole from Nordland (Moscow)
 Kaun: Sappho (Gera)
 Kessler: * Jesus von Nazareth (Prague)
 Liuzzi: Augellin bel Verde (Rome)
 Mascagni: Lodoletta (Rome)
 Oberleithner: Fiserner Heiland (Vienna)
 Pfizner: Palestrina (Munich)
 Puccini: Rondine (Monte Carlo)
 Randegger, A. I.: Maria di Brevat
 Reiter, J.: Tell (Vienna)
 Reznicek: Eros u. Psyche (Breslau)
 Röhr: Frauentlist (Leipzig)
 Róczycki: Eros and Psyche (Warsaw)
 Sabata: Macigno (Milan)

Sekles: Schachrazade (Mannheim)
 Smyth: Boatswain's Mate (London)
 Spangenburg: Sah ein Knab' ein Röslein steh'n (Wiesbaden)

1918

Busoni: Arlecchino (Zurich)
 Cadman: Shanewis (New York)
 Förster, J. B.: Ueberwinder (Prague)
 Gianetti: Cuore e Battute (Rome)
 Gräner: Theophano (Munich)
 Hadley: Garden of Allah (New York)
 " Bianca (New York)
 Höfer: Dornröschen (Nuremberg)
 Huber, H.: Frutta di Mare (Basel)
 Ivanov-Boretzki: Witch (Warsaw)
 Klenau: Kjartan und Gudrun (Mannheim)
 Klose: Sonne-Geist (Basel)
 Koch, F. E.: Hügelmühle (Berlin)
 Lazzari: Sautéviot (Chicago)
 Leroux: 1814 (Monte Carlo)
 Marinuzzi: Jacquerie (Buenos Aires)
 Montemezzi: Nave (Milan)
 Nevin, A. F.: Daughter of the Forest (Chicago)
 Puccini: Tabarro (New York)
 " Suor Angelica (New York)
 " Gianni Schicchi (New York)
 Schreker: Gezeichneten (Frankfurt)
 Wagner, S.: Schwartzschwanenreich (Karlsruhe)

1919

Boerresen: Königliche Gast (Copenhagen)
 Breil: Legend (New York)
 Cords: Sonnwendnacht (Nuremberg)
 Delius: Fennimore und Gerda (Frankfurt)
 Dost: Feuerprobe (Plauen)
 Février: Ghismonda (Chicago)
 Förster, J. B.: Unbesiegt (Prague)
 Hahn, R.: Nausicaa (Monte Carlo)
 Hildebrand: Firlefanz (Freiburg)
 Hugo: Temple-Dancer (New York)
 Istel: Verbolene Liebe (Gera)
 Koenecke: Magdalena (Charlottenburg)
 Levadé: Rotisserie de la Reine Pedouque (Paris)
 Mackenzie: St. John's Eve (London)
 Neumann, F.: Herbststurm (Berlin)
 Novák: Burgkoblod (Prague)
 Oberleithner: Cecilia (Hamburg)
 Othegraven: * Marieneleber (Cologne)
 Pahissa: Morisca (Barcelona)
 Pierné: Cydalise (Paris)
 Pratella: Sina di Vargoun (Bologna)
 Rangström: Kronbrat (Stuttgart)
 Santaliquido: Ignota und Ferhuda (Tunis)
 Schjelderup: Brautraub (Christiania)
 Schoeck: Ranudo de Colibrados (Zurich)
 Strauss, R.: Frau ohne Schatten (Vienna)
 Trémisot: Épave (Lyons)
 Waghalter: Jugend (Berlin)
 Waltershausen: Rauensteiner Hochzeit (Karlsruhe)
 Weissleder: Freimannskind (Leipzig)
 Wallek-Walewski: Dola (Cracow)
 Zandonai: Via della Finestra (Milan)

1920

Alaleone: Mirra (Rome)
 Anders, E.: Tod und Leben (Hanover)
 Bastide: Médée (Strasbourg)
 Bath: Bubbole (Milan)
 Bauszern: Satyros
 Braunfels: Vögel (Munich)
 Bruneau: Roi Candaule (Paris)
 Camessi: Fuschi di S. Giovanni (Milan)
 Chelius: Magda-Maria (Dessau)
 DeKoven: Rip van Winkle (Chicago)
 Davico: Dogaressa (Monte Carlo)
 Gianetti: Pinocchio e Pierrot (Rome)
 Gräner: Schirm und Getraude (Dresden)
 Hadley: Cleopatra's Night (New York)
 Hubay, J.: Anna Karenina (Dresden)
 Istel: Endlich allein (Schwerin)
 " Wenn Frauen träumen (Berlin)
 Kaun: Fremde (Dresden)
 Korngold: Tote Stadt (Hamburg)

Launis: Kullervo (Helsingfors)
 Lhotka: More (Agram)
 Noelte: François Villon (Karlsruhe)
 Oberleithner: Heidentor (Vienna)
 Pedrollo: Veglia (Milan)
 Pratella: Aviatore (Lugo)
 Schreker: Schatzgräber (Frankfort)
 Schuster: Jungbrunnen (Leipzig)
 Stöhr: Verlorener Sohn (Vienna)
 Szendrei: Türkisenblauer Garten (Leipzig)
 Weingartner: Meister Andrea (Vienna)
 " Terakoya (Vienna)

1921

d'Albert: Scirocco (Darmstadt)
 Alfano: Leggenda di Sacuntala (Bologna)
 Beilschmidt: Schlauer Amor (Leipzig)
 Bittner: Kohlheimerin (Vienna)
 Boeresen: Kaddara (Copenhagen)
 Bruneau: Jardin du Paradis (Paris)
 Chlubna: Catulls Rache (Brünn)
 Delmas, M.: Camille (Paris)
 Donaudy: Ramuncho (Milan)
 Dupont, G.: Antar (Paris)
 Erlanger, C.: Forfaiture (Paris)
 Ettinger: Judith (Nuremberg)
 Franchetti (with Giordano): Giove a Pompei (Rome)
 Gallico: * Apocalypse
 Galignani: In Alto (Trieste)
 Guerrini: Nemici (Bologna)
 Hindemith: Mörder and Nusch-Nuschi (Stuttgart)
 Hüe: Dans l'Ombre de la Cathedral (Paris)
 José Antonio: * Tres Milagros de S. Cecilia (Paris)
 Marteau: Meister Schwalbe (Plauen)
 Mascagni: Piccolo Marat (Rome)
 Monleone: Mistero (Venice)
 Mracek: Ikar (Dresden)
 Phillips, M. F.: Rebel Maid (London)
 Prokoviev: Prince of Orange (Chicago)
 Rudnick: * Johannes der Täufer
 Vittadini: Anima Allegra (Rome)
 Wellesz: Prinzessin Gurnara (Hanover, Frankfort)
 Wendland: Peter Sukoff (Basel)
 Wolff, Max: Frau Berthes Vespergang (Nuremberg)
 Wurm, Marie: Mitschuldigen (Leipzig)

1922

Abrányi: Ave Maria (Pest)
 Bachelet: Quand la Cloche Sonnera (Paris)
 Bittner: Bergees (Leipzig)

Blanik: Ewiges Leben (Kiel)
 Busser: Noces Corinthiennes (Paris)
 Campbell, Colin: Thais and Talmata (London)
 Chiodi: Figlia di Kordak (Brescia)
 Costa, Mario: Scugnizza (Turin)
 Donaudy: Fiamminga (Naples)
 Ehrenberg: Anneliese (Düsseldorf)
 Ferrari-Trecate: Pierozzo (Alessandria)
 Franchetti: Glauco (Naples)
 Gianetti: Lea (Milan)
 Gläser, P.: Kirchlein im See (Altenburg)
 Gobler: Prinz Nachtwächler (Altenburg)
 Hindemith: Sancta Susanna (Frankfort)
 Janáček: Káta Kabanová (Brünn)
 Konta: Jugunda (Prague)
 Kustener: Casanova (Karlsruhe)
 Lattuada: Tempesta (Milan)
 Lorentz: Liebesmacht (Karlsruhe)
 Lualdi: Figlia del Rè (Turin)
 Manuel: Isabella et Pantalon (Paris)
 Mauke: Thamar (Stuttgart)
 Molitor: * Marias Heimgang (Sigmaringen)
 Mucci: Susetta (Ancona)
 Neumann, F.: Beatrice Caraccio (Brünn)
 d'Ollone: Uns et Autres (Paris)
 Palliassa: Marielena (Barcelona)
 Renda: Mandragola (Turin)
 Rózycki: Beatrice Cenci
 Schoeck: Venus (Zurich)
 Szymanowski: Hagith (Warsaw)
 Waghalter: Später Gast (Berlin)
 Zandonai: Giuletta e Romeo (Rome)
 Zich: Vina (Prague)

1923

d'Albert: Marieken von Nymwegen (Munich)
 Bianchini: Principe e Nuredha (Venice)
 Büsser: Noces Corinthiennes (Paris)
 Bohm: Glockengiesser von Breslau (Nuremberg)
 Cras: Polyphème (Paris)
 de Falla: Retable de Maeso Pedro (Seville)
 Holst: Perfect Fool (London)
 Michetti: Grazia (Rome)
 Mule: Monacella alla Fontana (Trieste)
 Pizzetti: Debora e Jael (Milan)
 Respighi: Belfagor (Milan)
 Riccitelli: Compagnacci (Rome)
 Rousseau, S. A.: Marcel (Paris)
 Schmidt, Frank: Fredigundis (Berlin)
 Straup: Torichte Jungfrau (Berlin)

Since the publication of this volume in 1924 the following death-dates have been noted :

ABERT, HERMANN . . . . .	1927, at Stuttgart.	GRÜNFELD, ALFRED . . . . .	1924, at Vienna.
ALLEN, NATHAN H. . . . .	1925, at Hartford, Conn.	HACKH, OTTO C. . . . .	1917, at Brooklyn.
ARIENZO, NICOLA D' . . . . .	1915, at Naples.	HADDOCK, EDGAR A. . . . .	1926.
AUDSLEY, GEORGE A. . . . .	1925, at Bloomfield, N. J.	HAUK, MINNIE . . . . .	1929, at Lucerne.
BALLING, MICHAEL . . . . .	1925, at Darmstadt.	HEGAR, FRIEDRICH . . . . .	1927, at Zurich.
BALTZELL, WINTON J. . . . .	1928, at New York.	HERBERT, VICTOR . . . . .	1924, at New York.
BARY, ALFRED E. VON . . . . .	1926.	HOCHBERG, COUNT VON . . . . .	1926, at Salzbrunn.
BECK, JOHANN H. . . . .	1924, at Cleveland.	HOLLMANN, JOSEPH . . . . .	1926, at Paris.
BEER-WALBRÜNN, ANTON . . . . .	1929, at Prague.	HOOD, EUSEBIUS, G. . . . .	1929, at Concord, N. H.
BENNEWITZ, ANTON . . . . .	1926.	HORNER, RALPH J. . . . .	1926, at Winnipeg.
BERNOULLI, EDUARD . . . . .	1927, at Zurich.	HULL, A. EAGLEFIELD . . . . .	1928, at Huddersfield.
BIRD, ARTHUR . . . . .	1923, at Berlin.	HUMISTON, WILLIAM H. . . . .	1923, at New York.
BLARAMBERG, PAUL . . . . .	1907.	JAELL-TRAUTMANN, MARIE . . . . .	1925, at Paris.
BORWICK, LEONARD . . . . .	1925, at Le Mans.	JORDAN, JULES . . . . .	1927, at Providence.
BOSSI, M. ENRICO . . . . .	1925, at sea.	JUNCK, BENEDETTO . . . . .	1905.
BREIL, JOSEPH C. . . . .	1926, at Los Angeles.	KASHKIN, NIKOLAI . . . . .	1910?
BREMA, MARIA . . . . .	1925, at Manchester.	KASTALSKY, ALEXANDER D. . . . .	1926.
BRÉTON, TOMÁS . . . . .	1923, at Madrid.	KIDSON, FRANK . . . . .	1926, at Leeds.
BRIDGE, J. FREDERICK . . . . .	1924, at London.	KILBURN, NICHOLAS . . . . .	1923, at Bishop Auck- land.
BRIDGE, JOSEPH C. . . . .	1929, at Chester.	KNEISEL, FRANZ . . . . .	1926, at New York.
BROUNOFF, PLATON G. . . . .	1924.	KOCH, FRIEDRICH E. . . . .	1927.
BURRIAN, KARL . . . . .	1924, at Prague.	KOESSLER, HANS . . . . .	1926, at Prague.
BUSI, LEONIDA . . . . .	1901, at Bologna.	KREHL, STEPHAN . . . . .	1924.
BUSONI, FERRUCCIO B. . . . .	1924, at Berlin.	KRETZSCHMAR, HERMANN . . . . .	1924, at Berlin.
CAPOUL, JOSEPH A. V. . . . .	1924, at Toulouse.	KRONOLD, HANS . . . . .	1922, at New York.
CATOIRE, GEORGE L. . . . .	1926.	LACOMBE, PAUL . . . . .	1927, at Carcassone.
CHAMBERLAIN, HOUSTON S. . . . .	1926, at Bayreuth.	LANGE-MÜLLER, PETER E. . . . .	1926.
CHARLIER, MARCEL . . . . .	1921, at Paris.	LEHMANN, LILLI . . . . .	1929, at Berlin.
CLARKE, HUGH A. . . . .	1927, at Philadelphia.	LIAPUNOV, SERGE V. . . . .	1924, at Paris.
CLASS, FRANKLIN M. . . . .	1926.	LIPSIS, MARIE . . . . .	1927, at Leipzig.
DANNREUTHER, GUSTAV . . . . .	1923, at New York.	LLOYD, EDWARD . . . . .	1927, at Worthing.
DELABORDE, ÉLIE M. . . . .	1913, at Paris.	MACHADO, AUGUSTO . . . . .	1924, at Lisbon.
DERESZKÉ, JEAN . . . . .	1925, at Nice.	MACPHERSON, CHARLES [b. 1870] . . . . .	1927, at London.
DESTRANGES, LOUIS ROUILLÉ- . . . . .	1915, at Nantes.	MAHILLON, VICTOR . . . . .	1924, at St. Jean.
DITSON, CHARLES H. . . . .	1929, at New York.	MALÂT, JAN . . . . .	1915, at Prague.
DUBOIS, THÉODORE . . . . .	1924, at Paris.	MARÉCHAL, C. HENRI . . . . .	1924, at Paris.
DUFAU, JENNY . . . . .	1924, at Pau.	MARSICK, MARTIN . . . . .	1924.
DUNHAM, HENRY M., . . . . .	1929, at Brookline, Mass.	MARZO, EDUARDO . . . . .	1929, at New York.
EDEN, JEAN B. VAN DEN . . . . .	1917, at Mons.	MASINI, ANGELO . . . . .	1926, at Forli.
ELLCOTT, ROSALIND F. . . . .	1924, at London.	MCCOY, WILLIAM J. . . . .	1926, at Oakland, Cal.
ENGEL, JULIUS D. . . . .	1927, at Potsdam.	MESSAGER, ANDRÉ . . . . .	1929, at Paris.
EULENBURG, ERNST . . . . .	1926, at Leipzig.	MOLLENHAUER, EMIL . . . . .	1927, at Paris.
FAELTEN, CARL . . . . .	1925, at Readfield, Me.	MORSE, CHARLES H. . . . .	1927, at Boston.
FAURÉ, GABRIEL U. . . . .	1924, at Paris.	MOSER, ANDREAS . . . . .	1925.
FERRATA, GIUSEPPE . . . . .	1928.	MOSZKOWSKI, MORITZ . . . . .	1925, at Paris.
FIELITZ, ALEXANDER VON . . . . .	1925, at Chicago.	NAU, MARIA . . . . .	1891, near Paris.
FINCK, HENRY T. . . . .	1925, at Rumford, Me.	NEUMANN, FREDRICH . . . . .	1929, at Prague.
FLOOD, W. H. GRATTAN . . . . .	1928.	NIECKS, FREDERICK . . . . .	1924, at Edinburgh.
FOERSTER, ADOLPH M. . . . .	1927, at Pittsburgh.	O'MARA, JOSEPH . . . . .	1927, at Dublin.
FORD, ERNEST A. C. . . . .	1919.	OCHS, SIEGFRIED . . . . .	1929, at Berlin.
FREUND, JOHN C. . . . .	1924, at Mt. Vernon, N. Y.	ORGENT, AGLAJA . . . . .	1926, at Vienna.
FRICKENHAUS, FANNY . . . . .	1913, at Cheltenham.	PACHE, JOSEPH . . . . .	1926, at Baltimore.
FUCHS, ROBERT . . . . .	1927, at Vienna.	PALADILHE, ÉMILE . . . . .	1926, at Paris.
GAILHARD, PIERRE . . . . .	1918, at Paris.	PAPINI, GUIDO . . . . .	1912, at London.
GALLIGNANI, GIUSEPPE . . . . .	1923.	PARRATT, WALTER . . . . .	1924, at Windsor.
GARCIA, GUSTAVE . . . . .	1925, at London.	PATTON, WILLARD . . . . .	1924, at Minneapolis.
GÉDALGE, ANDRÉ . . . . .	1926.	PERRY, EDWARD B. . . . .	1924, at Camden, Me.
GERICKE, WILHELM . . . . .	1925, at Vienna.	PEZZE, ALESSANDRO . . . . .	1914.
GIBSON, GEORGE A. . . . .	1924, at Mentone.	PIERRE, CONSTANT . . . . .	1918, at Paris.
GIGOUT, EUGÈNE . . . . .	1925, at Paris.	PINELLI, ETTORE . . . . .	1915, at Rome.
GILBERT, HENRY F. B. . . . .	1928.	POTHIER, JOSEPH . . . . .	1923, in Belgium.
GODFREY, CHARLES [b. 1839] . . . . .	1919.	PRESSER, THEODORE . . . . .	1925, at Philadelphia.
GOOVAERTS, ALPHONSE . . . . .	1922, at Brussels.	PROHAZKA, KARL . . . . .	1927, at Vienna.
		PUCCINI, GIACOMO . . . . .	1924, at Brussels.
		RANDOLPH, HAROLD . . . . .	1927, at Baltimore.

RAPPOLDI, LAURA KEHRER	1925, at Dresden.	STEVENSON, FREDERICK	1925.
REINACH, THÉODORE	1928.	STOECKEL, CARL	1925, at Norfolk, Conn.
RITTER, HERMANN	1926, at Würzburg.	STUART, LESLIE	1923, at Richmond.
ROGEL, JOSÉ	1901, at Cartagena.	SUCHER, ROSA	1927, at Berlin.
ROTHWELL, WALTER H.	1927, at Los Angeles.	SUTER, HERMANN	1926, at Basel.
RÔZE, MARIE	1926, near Paris.	SVEČENSKI, LOUIS	1926, at New York.
RUSSELL, LOUIS A.	1926, at Newark.	TAUDOU, ANTOINE	1925, at Paris.
RYBNER, CORNELIUS	1929, at New York City.	TOLBECQUE, AUGUSTE	1919, at Niort.
SACCHETTI, LIBERIO	1913?	VALLERIA, ALWINA	1925, at Nice.
SAENGER, OSCAR	1929, at Washington, D. C.	VOGL, THERESA	1921, at Munich.
SASLAVSKY, ALEXANDER	1924, at San Francisco.	WAKEFIELD, AUGUSTA M.	1910, at Grange.
SATIE, ERIC	1925, at Paris.	WEAD, CHARLES K.	1925.
SAVAGE, HENRY W. [b. 1859]	1927, at Boston.	WESSELY, HANS	1926, at Innsbruck.
SCHARWENKA, F. XAVER	1924, at Berlin.	WEISSMANN, ADOLF	1929, at Saida, Syria.
SCHAVE, EDWARD B.	1924, at Longmont, Cal.	WEST, JOHN E.	1929, at London.
SCHIEVER, ERNST	1915, at Hanover.	WILD, HARRISON M.	1929, at Chicago.
SCHMIDT, LEOPOLD	1927, at Berlin.	WILLIAMS, ANNA	1924, at London.
SHARP, CECIL J.	1924, at London.	WILSON, MATILDA E.	1918.
SHARPE, HERBERT F.	1925, at London.	WIRTH, EMANUEL	1923, at Berlin.
SILOTTI, ALEXANDER	1919.	WOOD, CHARLES	1926, at Cambridge.
SMITH, WILSON G.	1929, at Cleveland.	WORMSER, ANDRÉ A. T.	1926.
SOKOLOV, NIKOLAI (1)	1922.	WOTTON, WILLIAM B.	1912, at Deal.
SONNECK, OSCAR G.	1928, at New York.	ZECKWER, CAMILLE	1924, at Southampton, N. Y.
SPIERING, THEODORE	1925, at Munich.	ZECKWER, RICHARD	1922, at Philadelphia.
SQUIRE, W. BARCLAY	1927, at London.	ZEISLER, FANNIE B.	1927, at Chicago.
STANFORD, CHARLES V.	1924, at London.	ZICHY, GÉZA	1924, at Pest.
STEINWAY, FREDERICK T.	1927, at New York.	ZIMMERMANN, AGNES	1925, at London.
STENHAMMAR, WILHELM	1927, at Stockholm.	ZWEERS, BERNARD	1924.
STERNBERG, CONSTANTIN	1924, at Philadelphia.

STATISTICAL SUMMARY

PART I contains nearly 1450 articles regarding topics and terms (exclusive of cross-references), including about 200 of a general character, 350 on forms and structure, 400 on instruments and their parts, about 125 on church-music as a specialty, etc. Certain comprehensive articles, like those on Dances, Notation, Terms of Performance and the like, increase the total of terms defined to more than 2000. The bibliography in APPENDIX A affords a key to an incalculable list of books, probably several thousand.

PART II contains articles regarding almost 7500 persons who have been active since the year 1700, mostly composers, conductors, organizers, teachers, theorists and critics, but with a large selection from the countless host of players and singers as well. These may be roughly classified by region or country of birth as follows:

EUROPE: Southern Division —Italy, especially Piedmont, Lombardy, Venetia and Emilia in the north, Tuscany and the Papal States in the center, Naples and Sicily in the south	510
Southwestern Division —France, 800, Belgium, 215, Spain and Portugal, 125	1140
Southeastern Division —Bohemia, 270, Austria (with Moravia, Styria, Tyrol), 420, Hungary, Croatia, etc., 165	855
Eastern Division —Galicia and Poland, 145, Russia, 265	410
North-Central Division —Silesia and Posen, 160, Pomerania and Prussia, 380, Brunswick, Hanover, Mecklenburg, the Free Cities, etc., 260	800
South-Central Division —Saxony, Thuringia, etc., 640, Bavaria, 245	885
West-Central Division —Switzerland, 100, Württemberg, Baden and Alsace, 230, Hesse, 150, the Rhine Province and Westphalia, 205	685
Northern Division —Finland, 25, Sweden and Norway, 135, Denmark, 110, Holland, 130	400
Western Division —England, 720, Wales, 20, Scotland, 45, Ireland, 55, with some colonies	855
AMERICA—Canada, 20,* The United States, 535,* Central and South America, 20	575
Unknown	45
TOTAL	about 7460

Of these about two-thirds were born since the year 1820 (including about 1350 as late as since 1870) and of them more than one-third (almost 3000) are supposed to be now living.

In addition, APPENDIX B gives lists and brief characterizations of about 1000 persons who worked prior to the year 1700. This makes the total of biographies nearly 8500.

PART III contains longer or shorter articles about some 235 places, often with mention of several musical enterprises under each, besides an indication of the birth-places of hundreds of musicians, old and new, and a hint as to scores of books about local history. APPENDIX C adds the titles and the dates of first presentation of towards 1000 operas and oratorios produced since the year 1900.

* These figures cover only those born in the United States or Canada; they would amount to at least 1000 if those who have become Americans by adoption or residence were included here (rather than under the countries of their birth).

WITHDRAWN

